Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We apprehend it is ſuch a Requeſt as has never been made: If they have any Objections to any Part of the Proceedings, or any Exceptions to take, they are at Liberty to take them, and to ſtate their Objections, that the Court, if neceſſary, may refer to the Record to ſee whether they are juſt or no; but to come and deſire the Proceſs to be laid before the Court for the Information of the Priſoner and his Counſel, it never hath been done: They are entitled now to offer any Thing, if they can, in Arreſt of Judgment.

Mr. Att. Gen. If what they deſire ſhould be granted, it would be a Precedent which might be of very ill Conſequence, and I apprehend what they deſire, is directly contrary to Law; there are no Authorities that the Priſoner ſhould either have Copies of the Proceſs, or that the Proceſs ſhould be read to him, only to enable him to find a Fault. I believe no Inſtance can be given whatſoever, that it was ever allowed in a Caſe of this Nature, if it be done now, it will be a Precedent for the future.

The Act of Parliament went as far as was thought proper. Copies of the Indictment and Copies of the Names of the Jury, are directed to be delivered to the Priſoner; but as to any of the Proceſs, the Act gives no Direction, and therefore as what they deſire is neither founded on Law, nor Precedent, we hope it ſhall not be granted.

Mr. Soll. Gen. My Lord, Mr. Hungerford has been pleaſed, in the Courſe of this Caſe, frequently to put us in mind, as he does now, that what he has inſiſted on, was in favour of Life. That is a moving Argument, but it proves nothing, ſave that the Priſoner ought to have all the Indulgence which the Law and the ſettled Forms of Proceeding do allow; but I apprehend it is a Reaſon for no more. What is aſked, is of more Conſequence than appears in this particular Caſe; and whatſoever your Lordſhip doth now, will be made a Precedent for the future.

My Lord, before the Act of Parliament, which allows the Priſoner to have a Copy of his Indictment, and of the Pannel of the Jury, it is moſt certain, he was not entitled to have ſuch Copies. Before that Law was made, he was informed of nothing but by having the Indictment read to him in Court upon his Arraignment, and that not barely to give him an Opportunity of taking Exceptions to it, but from the Neceſſity of the thing, becauſe it was the Charge to which he was to anſwer. Then comes the Act of Parliament, the 7th Year of King William, and allows the Priſoner a Copy of his Indictment, and of the Pannel of his Jury. But the Legiſlature, when they had theſe Matters under their Conſideration, and ſeem to have intended to give at leaſt all the Indulgence, conſiſtent with Reaſon, to Priſoners in Caſes of High-Treaſon, even at that time they went no further, and did not think fit to direct that to be done, which is now deſired on the behalf of this Gentleman. Therefore this Motion of Mr. Hungerford's muſt be underſtood to be made at Common Law; but I muſt beg leave to rely upon it, until ſome Precedent is produced on the other Side, that there is no Inſtance whatſoever, either before or ſince the Act of Parliament, wherein any Record of the Proceedings hath been read to the Priſoner beſides the Indictment. This is a Conſideration merely of Practice and Regularity; and in a Point of that kind, where there is no Precedent, I hope your Lordſhip will not make one.

Mr. Serj. Cheſhire. My Lord, the Carriage and Behaviour of the King's Council towards the Priſoner, hath been ſo fair and candid, that it deſerves Thanks from him, rather than Complaint; and I believe this Temper will hold on to the laſt: But my Lord, we have no Authority to give up the Right of the Crown, or to fix that on the Crown to grant, which the Priſoner hath no Right to demand.

My Lord, it muſt be admitted, that this is a Demand made at Common Law, and if it be a Demand of Right, I don't know but it may go to every thing in an equal Degree; that he hath the ſame Right to demand a ſight of the Commiſſion; Certiorari, &c. I don't know but he hath the ſame Right to enquire into every Step that is upon Record in this Caſe. The Officers concerned, I dare ſay, have done their Duty. There is nothing of Law, but what comes in upon the Statute of King William; that he hath had the Benefit of to the full extent of it; he hath had a Copy of the Pannel of the Jury; he hath had a Copy of the Indictment, and in ſuch time as was proper for him to make due uſe of it; and this they aſk now, we apprehend is only to lengthen out time, and to introduce that which may be greatly inconvenient. We have very little Reaſon of apprehending that it can be of any Profit to him; but for Example ſake, and as he hath no Right to it, we cannot come into a Conſent to it.

Therefore we ſubmit it to your Lordſhip's Conſideration, from the Inconvenience that may enſue from the Precedent, whether the Priſoner hath any Right to make this Demand.

Mr. Hungerford. I acknowledge that before the 7th of King William, the Priſoner was not entitled to have a Copy of his Indictment, and therefore I ſo far concur with the Gentlemen of the other Side, that we are not intitled to a Copy of the Record of the Venire Facias. But what I humbly pray now, is, what I apprehend we were entitled to before the Act of Parliament for regulating Trials in Caſes of High-Treaſon. The Inſtances are ſeveral, where in the Courſe of a Trial for High-Treaſon, before that Act which gave the Priſoner ſeveral new Advantages, the Priſoner hath deſired his Indictment to be read, and the Court never denied it; to have any other Part of the Record to be read, ſeems to be as reaſonable as the Indictment. The Objection had been ſtronger, if we had deſired for the Priſoner at the Bar, the Copy of the Venire; there we ſhould have been juſtly told that we had been entitled to nothing but what the Act of Parliament had directed, viz. the Copy of the Indictment. We pray a Copy of nothing, but only pray that a ſmall Part of the Record that makes up the whole Record of this Gentleman's Conviction, may be read. And this, with Submiſſion, we hope we are entitled to have for the ſame Reaſon as the Indictment was read before the Act. Coll. Sidney deſired, that his Indictment ſhould be read, and it was ſo. And can any Reaſon be aſſigned, why the Venire, which is but a Part of the Record, ſhould not be read as well as the Indictment? no one Part of the Record of Conviction is more ſacred than the other; and why therefore ſhould not one Part be read as well as the other?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Can you ſhew any Caſe where the Indictment was read, upon the Prayer of the Priſoner, after Conviction, and before ſome Exception taken?

L. C. Juſt. We would be far from refuſing any Indulgence to the Priſoner that by Law we are warranted to grant him; what you aſk now, you muſt own is without any Precedent whatſoever. You know, that before the Act of Parliament you were not entitled to, nor could demand a Copy of the Indictment: It is very true what you ſay before the Act of Parliament; when it hath been deſired by the Priſoner the Indictment hath been read, and that Method of proceeding having been allowed, gave him a Right to demand it; but you cannot produce any one Inſtance that ever he demanded this that now you offer; that ever he demanded the Venire ſhould be produced and read to him.

Conſider how ſtrict the Law was in Caſes of High-Treaſon; ſee the Act of Rights: The Courſe of the Court is the Law; this which you now deſire was never ſo much as aſk'd for, nor did this Court ever grant it; and if ſo, how can the Court be warranted to grant that which was never granted, nor was ever desired to be granted? The Reason of it is, that every Body was satisfy'd by Law it could not be granted.

You have instanced in Cases of great Persons, Colonel Sidney, Lord Russel, and others that have been attainted of High-Treason, who could not want Advice to desire any thing that was proper, or that they had a Right to demand. Neither they nor any of the greatest Quality that have had the Misfortune of being try'd for an Offence of this Nature, ever demanded it; which is an Admission that they were not entitled to it; and if the Course of the Court be so, we must not establish a new Course; we can't see what the Consequences may be.

Mr. Just. Eyre. The Case of reading the Indictment to a Prisoner is certainly very different, and can be no Authority to warrant the reading of the Venire; for the Indictment is the Charge to which the Prisoner is obliged to plead, and he must know his Charge before he can give it an Answer: Besides, the Merit and Justice of the Case depend entirely upon the Indictment, which must be read, in order to understand the true State of the Question, and to see the Fact to which the Witnesses are to be examin'd. 'Tis therefore absolutely necessary, that the Indictment should be read; but none of these Reasons will serve for reading the Venire, which is only to summon the Jury, and bring them to the Bar; and therefore as it was never done, nor ever asked before, I can by no means think it fit for us to allow it now.

Mr. Just. Powys. I think it is a perfect Novelty what you demand, and not only so, but in its Consequences very dangerous: For, properly speaking, the common Usage to move in Arrest of Judgment, hath been out of the Indictment; but to run back to those things, which if you had a Right to demand, it had been proper to have done it before; and since you have many times known that nothing but the Indictment hath been read, since the Judges were never mov'd, nor any thing of this kind done, and nothing in the World hath been demanded like it; if it should be granted at this time, when Men are to receive Judgment, and Exceptions are to be taken to the Indictment, if they should run back to all the Proceedings, it would be a thing of strange Consequence. But besides that, it is a thing you have no Example for, it hath been never done; and it hath been observed, that nothing but the Copy of the Indictment hath been read before this Act of Parliament of King William. Now there are two things given by this Act of Parliament of King William; the Prisoner is to have the Copy of his Indictment five Days, the Copy of the Pannel of the Jury two Days before his Trial, and these were proposed as Advantages which the Common Law did not admit: Shall we come to unravel all the Matters preceding? it would be a Matter of strange Consequence, and what we can't do or warrant by Law: If you have any thing to move out of the Indictment, we are ready to hear it.

Mr. Just. Fortescue Aland. This is perfectly new, or else in Favour of Life I should be ready to grant it: The true Reason of having the Indictment read is, that the Prisoner may know what his Charge is, in order to make his Defence at his Trial; but that Reason holds not in this Case, which is after Conviction, and what is ask'd now is not relative to his Charge, but concerns the Acts of the Court only. The Court will assist in Matters of Law, when they appear, but will never assist the Prisoner with Facts, in order to make Points of Law; and therefore it has been denied the Prisoner to take Minutes even of the Indictment, and for the same Reason Counsel has ever been denied, in all capital Cases, before the late Act of Parliament, unless a disputable Point of Law did arise and appear.

You move this Matter as a Motion purely at Common Law; and as such it will extend to all Indictments of Murder, and other capital Cases, which may be of very evil Consequence. It would be very strange to have all the Proceedings upon Indictments read to the Prisoner; and there is as much Reason to call for all as for the Venire facias: I take it clearly there never was a Case, where the Acts and Proceedings of the Court have been called for to be read to the Prisoner, and for no other Purpose but to make an Error: It is a thing that is entirely new, the Consequences may be very fatal, and therefore I think it is an unreasonable Motion, and ought not to be granted.

Mr. Hungerford. I assure your Lordship I did not do it out of an Affectation of Novelty, neither shall I persist in urging it further, since the Court hath given their Opinion; but I thought the Reason of the thing, in reading the Indictment, before the Act of Parliament was with me; but since it is your Lordship's Opinion that it is otherwise, I desire your Lordship to give me leave to go on.

Prisoner. I beg leave to say but a short Word in respect to this Objection that hath been made by Mr. Hungerford. If I take the thing right, it is, that the Venire may be read, to see if it is properly issued, and I hope thus far it shall be granted, to shew a Reason why this Venire is returned on one Day, and the Jury appear on another; and if it doth appear that there is an Error in the Proceedings on the Foot of the Venire, I humbly hope I shall have the Benefit of it. The Objection, I take it, must be this; the Venire, I take it, is returnable the 19th of the Month of November, I was not try'd till the 21st; therefore, what I humbly offer is, whether or no, after the Return of the Writ, this is a good convening of the Jury together to try me on a Writ, when there was no such Writ in being, more especially when the Proceedings against me are by Original, where the Returns in this Court are the same as in the Common Pleas; so I shall leave it to my Counsel to say the rest, and humbly hope, that I shall have leave to look into the Venire, and if it come out so, I hope it is erroneous, and that Judgment shall be arrested.

Mr. Hungerford. The Gentleman hath given Utterance to some of my Thoughts; and not by comparing of Notes, for I have not seen his Face, nor heard from him since I saw him here at the Bar at his Trial.

That which occurs to me on this Occasion, but I can but guess at some Part of the Fact, is, I take it, that the Venire bears Teste the last Day of October, and is returned the 19th of November; there are stated Return Days of the Law, and,

and, my Lord, if a Man appears in a Court of Juſtice one Day, and he is not by the Courſe of proceeding indulged with a further Day of appearing, there is a Diſcontinuance of the Proceſs, and the Man is out of Court. The different Days the Law takes notice of for this Purpoſe are, the Eſſoign Day, the Day of Exceptions, the Day of Appearance, the quarto die poſt; I take the quarto die poſt to be an Indulgence which a Court of Juſtice gives to a Suitor to appear at a further Day, when he ought to have appeared at a former Day; and this is the Practice in real Actions in the Court of Common Pleas. As to the Exception Day, the Uſe of that is, that a Man that is ſummon'd may object to the Summons, as not being a fit and regular Summons to draw him in Contempt.

But, my Lord, in Caſes of Juries, who are not Suitors in Court, I take the Law and the Practice to be, that they are oblig'd to attend upon the Proceſs of the Court: I take it, they muſt do Duty on the Return of the Venire, which, in this Caſe, is on Monday the 19th of November, and did not appear till Wedneſday the 21ſt; ſo that if they were to appear on Monday the 19th of November, and did not appear then, there muſt appear ſome Act of the Court, by which they are indulg'd to a further Day: And I put it upon Mr. Harcourt to ſhew, whether there is any Indulgence of the Court entered upon Record for the continuing of the Jury till Wedneſday following; and if there is not, there is then a Diſcontinuance of their being in this Court, and conſequently the Proceedings are irregular, and the Trial a Miſ-trial: I ſhall quote ſome Authorities which juſtify this Obſervation; when a Man by a Proceſs of Court appears on the Day of the Return of that Proceſs, unleſs there be a Continuance of that Proceſs, that ulterior dies datus eſt to the Party, or a ſubſequent Proceſs iſſues that Day, the Law deems that Chaſm in the Proceedings to be a Diſcontinuance, and that the Party is out of Court. It was ſo reſolved in Yelverton, 204; and 2d Coke, 284. It is the Caſe of Bradley and Banks; and reported in both Books, but moſt fully in Yelverton. There is an Authority which weighs with me ſomething more, and ſeems to be a Caſe in Point; it is the Caſe of Peplow and Rowley, 2d of Croke, 357. and there the Caſe is on a Writ of Error brought upon Proceedings in the Court of Shrewsbury, where the Uſage was, to hold Plea in ſome real Actions, and there was an Entry that the Parties did not appear on a preceding Day, but made Default: And the Entry was habuit diem per default' given to the Party by the Court, ſecundum conſuetudinem villæ prædictæ. This came before this Court by a Writ of Error, and it was adjudg'd, that both the Entry and the Cuſtom were naught. The Reaſon aſſign'd why the Entry was ſo, is, for that the Party having made Default, was out of Court, and the Court could upon that Proceſs give him no new Day to appear. And the Reaſon why the Cuſtom itſelf is naught, is, for that there can be no Cuſtom to help that (which the Book calls) a Diſcontinuance at Common Law; for if the Man be out of Court, he can't be brought in there again by the ſame Writ.

My Lord, if that be the Caſe then, that the Jury were to appear on the 19th, and there is no Entry to continue them till Wedneſday the 21ſt; then by the Authority of theſe Caſes they had no Call nor Right to appear, but were out of Court, the Trial was no legal Trial, and conſequently no Trial at all.

I am told, that the Practice of all Trials at Bar is, that the Jury do appear here on the Return of the Venire, and immediately proceed to do Buſineſs; why ſhould it not be ſo too in a criminal Caſe, as this is? I think the Reaſon in both Caſes is the ſame: I humbly hope therefore, my Lord, that if the Fact be as I have repreſented, that there is no Entry to continue over the Attendance of the Jury from Monday to Wedneſday, there is a Blemiſh in this Proceeding; and you can't proceed to Judgment againſt the Priſoner at the Bar.

Mr. Ketelbey. If your Lordſhip will favour me——

L. C. Juſt. You ſhall be fully heard; but becauſe Mr. Hungerford hath appeal'd to Mr. Harcourt, I ſhall aſk Mr. Harcourt this Queſtion about the Matter of the Venire.

Mr. Harcourt. I ſhall be very tender in this Matter, where the Life of the Priſoner is at Stake, as Mr. Hungerford has obſerv'd, and will not ſay any thing but what I am ſure is the Courſe of the Court. If a Venire be returnable the firſt general Return of the Term, the Appearance-Day of the Jury is the quarto die poſt, which is the firſt Day of the Term. If the Court be not pleaſed to try the Priſoner then, they may adjourn the Jury over to any Day before the next Return in the Term; but no Entry is ever made on Record of ſuch Adjournment, and the Proceedings are always enter'd on Record to be at the Return of the Writ. In all other Returns in the Term, there is the ſame Courſe obſerv'd: The Jury is never oblig'd to appear before the quarto die poſt; nor can the Priſoner be try'd ſooner. What makes this clear is, to conſider the Proceedings on Diſtringas, where the Priſoner is not try'd on the Venire: In ſuch Caſes, the Diſtringas is never teſted on the Return-Day, but the quarto die poſt; which, if what is inſiſted on by the Priſoner's Counſel is Law, would make a Diſcontinuance, and that has always been held otherwiſe; for till there has been a Default of the Jury's appearing on the Venire, no Diſtringas can iſſue, and no Default can be objected to the Jury for not appearing till the quarto die poſt; nor are they amerciable ſooner for not appearing. This Matter was ſettled, on great Deliberation, by my Lord Chief Juſtice Holt; and I am confident, has been ever ſince ſo practis'd.

Mr. Ketelbey. My Lord, it was my Misfortune not to get into Court ſooner; ſo that I did not hear the firſt Application Mr. Hungerford made to your Lordſhip on Behalf of the Priſoner, nor ſhall I preſume to break in upon what your Lordſhip has already determin'd; but whether or not we are entitl'd to ſee the Venire, or hear that Part of the Record read. I hope we ſhall be able to make out, that there has been a Miſ-trial in this Caſe. The Venire, it is agreed on all Hands, was returnable octabis Martini, which was Monday the 19th of November. That the Priſoner was not tried till the 21ſt, is moſt certain. The general Return was octabis Martini, and he was not tried till two Days after; and notwithſtanding what Mr. Harcourt hath ſaid, I muſt beg Leave humbly to inſiſt, that there hath been a Miſ-trial, and Judgment ought to be arreſted; and for that I have as ſtrong an Authority as any that can be cited in this Court, 'tis the Trial of Rookwood; and for the greater certainty, I have brought the Book along with me, and have it in my Hand; where it is agreed, by the Court, and all the King's Counſel, that the Trial muſt be on the Day of the Return of the Venire, or elſe that it would be Error: And my Lord Chief Juſtice Holt declared, the Iſſue could not be tried after the Day of the Return: This Matter came before the Court upon an Exception taken by Sir Bartholomew Shower.

Mr. Juſt. Eyre. That was on a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, which was quite different; there is no quarto die poſt there, no Day of Appearance, but the Day of the Return of the Writ.

L. C. Juſt. It muſt be ſo, becauſe there is no ſuch thing as a quarto die poſt in Commiſſions of Oyer and Terminer.

Mr. Ketelbey. I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether there is any quarto die poſt in a Venire?

L. C. Juſt. It is always ſo.

Mr. Juſt. Eyre. You know we had the Conſideration of this when we appointed the Trial.

Mr. Ketelbey. I beg leave to offer one Word, that in caſe of a Venire, there is no quarto die poſt, becauſe there is no Eſſoign, no Exception-Day for the Jury. The Authority in firſt Roll's Abridgment, 822. Placit. 4 & 6. is expreſs, that in a Venire facias or a Scire facias, there is no Eſſoign: And where there is no Eſſoign, there can be no Day of Exception, becauſe the Exception depends on the Eſſoign-Day, and conſequently the Day of the Return, and of the Appearance muſt be the ſame. The Caſe of Eſſoign, Exception, Return, and Appearance-Days, concerns only original Writs, and the Plaintiffs and Defendants therein; there if the Defendant appears the quarto die poſt, his Appearance ſhall be accepted as good, and no further Proceſs made againſt him. But who ever heard that a Jury were Eſſoigned? There are ſeveral other Authorities for this. Dalton, 415. 2d Inſtit. 125 & 33 H. VI. 5. b. that no Eſſoign lies upon a Venire facias; and the Eſſoign was quaſhed.

L. C. Juſt. This you now offer will ſet aſide all the Proceedings either on the Plea Side, or the Crown Side.

Mr. Ketelbey. There is a Caſe reported in the Year-Book, Michs. 33 Henry VI. fol. 35, 36. and abridged in Brook, Title Niſi prius, Pl. 32. It was diſputed by the Judges of the Bench, and at firſt there was a Difference of Opinion among them; but at laſt it was unanimouſly reſolved, That the Niſi prius was not well taken. I will ſtate the Caſe as it appears in the Year-Book and the Abridgment. There was a Writ of Niſi prius made with a certain Return, and the Juſtices tried the Iſſue upon a Day meſne during the Interval between the quarto die poſt, and the Return of the Writ. This was objected to, and ſaid to be a Miſ-trial; and afterwards the Judges agreed in their Opinion, that it was a Miſ-trial, becauſe it was not upon the Return-Day of the Writ of Niſi prius; and if not upon that Day, the Trial ought not to have been at all. And I don't apprehend any Difference between that Caſe and this, but only that was at Niſi prius, and this a Trial in Bank. There is no Continuance lies on a Venire facias; and if ſo, I ſhall ſubmit it, whether there is any Day of Appearance.

Mr. Juſt. Eyre. Sure there is a Day of Appearance on the Venire facias; the Proceedings in this Caſe are like thoſe upon an Original. The ſame Day which is the Day of Appearance for the Party upon an Original, is the Day of Appearance for the Jury upon a Venire.

Mr. Ketelbey. I believe it will be hard for Mr. Harcourt to ſhew where there is any Eſſoign on a Venire facias.

L. C. Juſt. We have heard already what Mr. Harcourt hath ſaid. I deſire Mr. Simmonds may inform you how it is on the Civil Side.

Mr. Simmonds. Our Proceſs where the Suit is commenced by Bill, is return'd on a Day certain in Court; that doth not reſpect this Caſe.

L. C. Juſt. How is it when it is by Original?

Mr. Simmonds. Where it is by Original, it is always returnable as the Proceſs is in the Common Pleas; and the Day of the Appearance of the Jury, I take to be the quarto die poſt.

Mr. Harcourt. If this was to be a Diſcontinuance, what will become of all the Records where the Proceedings are at general Returns, and which are tried on the Diſtringas, which always bears teſte the quarto die poſt after the Return of the Venire? Every one of theſe Records, which are many every Term, would be diſcontinued.

L. C. Juſt. You can't but be ſenſible that there is nothing in this Exception.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. There is no Foundation for it in Practice.

L. C. Juſt. You need not labour it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The Sheriff, or the Jury, are not amerciable, tho' they did not appear on the Day of the Return, if the Jury do appear upon the quarto die poſt; that ſhews it——

Mr. Att. Gen. If this Objection prevails, it will overturn all the ſettled Courſe of Trials at Bar.

Priſoner. One thing I would humbly offer to your Lordſhip. I have not had my Books by me, but only what occurs to my Memory, I cannot be ſo exact as I ought to be. This Overt-Act in Eſſex of Treaſon found by the Jury to be ſo, I humbly apprehend, and I offer it to your Lordſhip's Judgment, in Law is no Overt-Act at all. All the Reaſon I ſhall humbly offer to your Lordſhip, that tho' it hath been ſaid, that there was a conſulting and agreeing in order to levy War, yet it doth not appear that War to be levyed was ſuch a War as in the Law is adjudged to be Treaſon. My Lord, this differs from the levying War it ſelf. An Intention and Conſultation, or a Conſpiracy barely to levy War, unleſs War be levy'd, it is no Treaſon. If it be a Conſultation to levy War againſt the King's Perſon, to impriſon the King, to dethrone and murder him, it ever hath been adjudg'd to be Treaſon. If it be only a Conſulting to levy War, as if to agree to break open Meeting-Houſes, to throw down Houſes, was the ſame as doing of it. There muſt be a War that is levy'd, or elſe it is no Treaſon. Not only that, but I beg leave to ſay one Word more. In my Caſe, all the Evidence given in reſpect of this Overt-Act in Eſſex, there is no Foundation for it; and if there is no Overt-Act in Eſſex, no Overt-Act elſewhere can affect me. It ſtands on the Evidence only of Mr. Lynch: He talks of a Declaration. Who read it? The only two things are a Diſcourſe between us, and a Declaration which I gave him to read. If that, as I humbly ſubmit it, be an Act of Treaſon, it is carrying the matter further than it hath been in thoſe few Caſes I beg leave to mention that juſt occur to my Memory. If I ſtate them wrong, I ſhall be ſorry. The Caſe of College, the Oxford Joyner. It was aſked the Court, Do you take my Words diſtinct from my Actions? No, ſays the Court, we do not do ſo. You declared you would go down to Oxford, and aſſaſſinate the King's Perſon. In order to that, you went down with Piſtols before you. That at that time was declared to be an Overt-Act; the going down to Oxford in that manner; and the Court ſeemed to rely upon it, as the Overt-Act of the Treaſon, and not the talking here, or conſpiring that he would aſſaſſinate the King, but the going down in a hoſtile manner. So likewiſe in the Caſe of my Lord Preſton; there the Queſtion was, whether thoſe Letters that were found with him in the Ship; whether that was an Overt-Act of Treaſon. The Judges ſeem'd to be of Opinion, that the taking thoſe Letters with him as he was going to France, and there to conſult the ſtirring up an Inſurrection here, and to invite the French King to invade us, was an Overt-Act of Treaſon. But there is a ſtronger Caſe, the Caſe of my Lord Ruſſel. He was indicted, as I am, for compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King. The Overt-Act laid in the Indictment to manifeſt that Intention, was, that he, with the reſt of the Conſpirators, conſulted to ſeize upon the King's Guards: In purſuance to that Diſcourſe and Conſpiracy which they had had, it appeared Sir Thomas Armſtrong was ſent to take a View of the Guards in order to carry on the Deſign. Notwithſtanding there was a purſuing of their Deſign of ſeizing the King's Guards, in ſending Sir Tho. Armſtrong to view them, yet the Caſe was thought ſo very hard in reſpect to my Lord Ruſſell, that his Attainder was reverſed by an Act of Parliament. Therefore I only argue, with great Submiſſion, that in my Caſe, where nothing is done but accidentally calling in at the Green Man, ſtaying a little while there, and, as hath been ſworn, here was nothing but a mere Diſcourſe, and then I gave him a Declaration to read. If I did ſo, it was only Words. As to the ſecond, it was nothing but publiſhing a Libel. And ſhall this be a Foundation to deprive me of my Life and Eſtate, to the utter Ruin of myſelf and Family? It is an unprecedented thing, hath it ever been? Therefore I hope your Lordſhip, before you give any Judgment in this matter, will take it into your Conſideration, whether any thing done in Eſſex doth amount to an Overt-Act of Treaſon.

Mr. Hungerford. My Lord, I humbly hope, as it is my Duty to do what Service I can to my Client, and as it is in Caſe of Life, that I ſhall have your Lordſhip's Indulgence for a few Words. My Lord, he hath juſtly obſerved——

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lord, I would not interrupt Mr. Layer, becauſe it may be ſuppoſed he is not ſo well acquainted with the Method of Proceeding. But I hope I may take the Liberty to interrupt his Counſel, who know by very great Experience the Method of Proceedings, that they are not now to inſiſt on the Nature of the Evidence, whether the Evidence that hath been given is ſufficient to maintain the Indictment; that is not the Buſineſs of this Day. If they have any thing to offer, any Objections to make in arreſt of Judgment, that is the Buſineſs of the Day: But to arraign the Proceedings upon the Trial, as it is ſaid that the Evidence given did not amount to a Conſultation, or to prove any Overt-Act of the Treaſon alledg'd I don't apprehend it to be proper at this Time: I did not interrupt the Priſoner himſelf; but I hope his Counſel, who know the Method of Proceeding better, in Caſes of High-Treaſon, ſhall not be permitted to go on in that manner.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Gentlemen that are Counſel for the Priſoner know very well, that the Evidence given on the Trial is not now before your Lordſhip; the ſingle Queſtion that can now be made is, whether the Indictment is good, and the Facts charged and found by the Jury, are well laid, and do amount to ſufficient Overt-Acts of the High-Treaſon, of which the Priſoner ſtands indicted. Mr. Layer hath been giving an Account of the Witneſſes, and making Obſervations on the things which they ſwore; he was borne with: But the Gentlemen that are his Counſel, ſeem to be opening in the ſame Manner, but as to them, we muſt inſiſt upon it, that they ſhould be confin'd to what is proper, and apply themſelves to move in Arreſt of Judgment, if they can find any thing upon the Face of the Record of which they can take Advantage. But I think they are not entitled to go on with Obſervations upon the Evidence, in the Manner they were beginning.

Mr. Hungerford. I aſſure your Lordſhip I did not deſign it, I did not intend to recapitulate any part of the Evidence, or to obſerve upon it. And therefore there was no Occaſion for the Caution. I thank your Lordſhip for the Indulgence you give me, and I will conform my ſelf to the Rules the King's Counſel preſcribe, to obſerve upon nothing but the Record.

My Lord, the Indictment is in this Manner; the Species of the Treaſon laid to the Charge of the Priſoner, is the compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King. The firſt Overt-Act of that Treaſon, is, that he did meet, conſult, conſpire and agree to raiſe a Rebellion, and a Guerram in the Kingdom, which is no Overt-Act of compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King.

I know how the Authorities have been; but in the Caſe of Life, your Lordſhip will give me leave to obſerve, that by the Statute of 25 Edw. III. compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King——

L. C. Juſt. Mr. Hungerford, we would hear you in any thing that is proper, but conſider, if you are not offering a matter in Arreſt of Judgment that hath been determined againſt you a hundred times. Hath it not been conſtantly allowed as an Overt-Act of Treaſon, in compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King, if the Parties did meet, conſult, and agree to levy War? Hath it not been conſtantly agreed, and doth it not ſtand allowed to be ſo? Now to perſuade us at this Time to overthrow thoſe Reſolutions taken by our Predeceſſors, is ſuch a thing as is not right. Do you think we will give a Judgment contrary to what our learned Predeceſſors have given in Caſes of the greateſt Moment? If I thought it was of any Effect, I ſhould not grutch ſpending time to hear you, but you muſt agree, it hath been over-ruled a hundred times.

Mr. Just. Eyre. It hath been settled a great many times, particularly in the Case of Dorrel, Gordon, and Kerr, in which it was argued over and over again, and the Court was of Opinion that the consulting and agreeing to levy War, was an Overt-Act of Treason in compassing and imagining the Death of the King, and gave Judgment accordingly.

Mr. Just. Fortescue Aland. Mr. Kettelbey was Counsel for the Prisoners in that Case, which was in this Court in the 1st Year of this King, when this Objection was made; and very well knows, that the Court, upon that Occasion, said, that they ought not to have suffered this matter to be made a Question, for that it was arraigning the Judgments of very many learned Judges.

Mr. Just. Powys. No one thing relating to Treason is more settled; and in that Case as hath been mentioned, it was agreed, and it was the Judgment of all the Judges that tried that Cause.

Mr. Hungerford. My Lord, I humbly hope ——

Mr. Just. Eyre. It must not be admitted, we must not suffer so plain a Point to be disputed; it is not only mispending of time, but shaking what has been established by every Trial in which any thing of this kind has been mentioned, from the Case of the Regicides to this Day.

Mr. Just. Powys. In the Cases of the Regicides, these Matters are printed in Keyling.

Ld. Ch. Just. And in all the Trials ever since, there is scarce one Case hath happened, where the Case hath been for compassing and imagining the Death of the King, but that it hath been laid for an Overt-Act, that the Party charged. did consult and agree to levy War to bring his wicked Intentions to Effect.

Mr. Hungerford. There is no Doubt, but that the Regicides were the worst and most notorious Criminals that were ever brought before a Court of Justice; and yet there is one Circumstance of those Trials, quoted in the very Book which Mr. Justice Powys mentions, which was never practised before, and I am sure never was since; that is, the Judges who were to try the Criminals, and the King's Counsel who were to prosecute them, met and consulted together to form and fix the Accusation.

But if it is your Lordship's Pleasure, I shall speak no further to that Matter.

Ld. Ch. Just. You have the Opinion of the Court, and I dare say it is your own Opinion; and as the Resolutions are so positive, it is not for us to make Indictments at this Day.

Mr. Hungerford. I shall not press it any further. There is another thing arises upon another Overt-Act laid in the Indictment, that is, Publicavit quoddam Scriptum, &c. I apprehend the Substance of the quoddam Scriptum ought to be mentioned in the Indictment.

Ld. Ch. Just. It is mentioned in Effect, that it was to excite People to a Rebellion and an Insurrection.

Mr. Hungerford. Your Lordship will observe that the criminal Words in the Scriptum, are not mentioned in the Indictment; and by the Rule given by all the Judges of England in Dr. Sacheverell's Case, in all Accusations, whether by Information or Indictment, the Words supposed to be criminal ought to be inserted; and since that is not done in this Case, the Overt-Act is not well laid, and the Judgment ought to be arrested.

Ld. Ch. Just. You know, Mr. Hungerford, if but one Overt-Act is well laid and prov'd, it is sufficient.

I don't know, I was sorry you forc'd me to remember what I would willingly have forgot. I remember, on that Occasion, you was pleased to compare it to a Ballad, which is an Expression that ought not to be us'd. Is that a Thing, when a Prisoner is on Trial for his Life, and a Matter of an Insurrection is intended against the King, to be treated in so ludicrous a manner? It is laid as an Overt-Act of Treason, and what is an Overt-Act of Treason, if a Man's publishing a traiterous Libel, and exciting Persons to a Rebellion and Insurrection against the King is not? This is undoubtedly so: And when we are upon this Consideration, to compare it to a Ballad, and say he might as well publish a Ballad, and lay it as an Overt-Act of Treason in the Indictment; it is an Expression that ought not to be us'd, and I was very sorry you did use it.

Mr. Hungerford. I am sure I did not say he might as well publish a Ballad, and make it Treason; I have a greater Duty, and a more tender Regard to his sacred Majesty, and the Quiet of his Kingdom and People, than to express myself so. What I then obsery'd, as near as I can recollect, was, that there were but few Minutes to transact the Business at the Green Man; that what was done, could not amount to the publishing of a Declaration, when there was nothing done but a Man's reading to himself: I knew the whole Accusation did turn upon that Transaction at the Green Man; and in Service to my Client, I thought it my Business to make it appear as inconsiderable as I could; and if in this I have offended your Lordship, or the Court, I am heartily sorry for it, and beg their Pardon.

Mr. Ketelbey. If your Lordship please to favour me with a few Words.

I shall be very tender of offering to your Lordship any thing on this Indictment, which hath been over-ruled in any of the Cases where I have been before concerned; whether conspiring to levy War, unless War be actually levy'd is an Overt-Act of High-Treason, was mentioned on the Trial of Dorrel, Gordon, and Kerr, and I then took that among other Exceptions in Arrest of Judgment, which were not allowed; but the Statute of 13 Eliz. cap. 1. was at that time mentioned; and I have some other Matters to offer on that Head, if it is now open to me.

Ld. Ch. Just. Consider a little how you treat the Court; the Objection hath been solemnly taken in this Court, argued and adjudged by this Court, and now you come to arraign that Judgment that was then given.

Mr. Ketelbey. I shall go off from that, and say no more upon it, since your Lordship is of Opinion that it is a Point settled. But, my Lord, I must beg Leave to take notice of what Mr. Attorney has observed relating to the five Overt-Acts laid in the Indictment, and submit it to your Lordship; for I don't know that it was ever determined otherwise, but that if one of the Overt-Acts appears to be bad, Judgment must be arrested.

Ld. Ch. Just. Alas! quite the contrary: I believe you will find in Rookwood's Trial, which you have in your Hand, there it is said, if one Overt-Act held, the Indictment is good.

Mr. Ketelbey. If I am not miſtaken, in Sir John Friend's Caſe it was not ſo: We can't take upon us to ſay that all the Overt-Acts are wrong. Is it not like an Action in a Civil Caſe, where there are ſeveral Counts in the Declaration? If there be one wrong, that will ſtay Judgment for the whole.

Ld. Ch. Juſ. Becauſe it is an entire Declaration; and the Jury, inſtead of giving Damages on one Count, may have given it on the Count they ought not.

Mr. Juſ. Eyre. But if one Count be ſufficient, the Plaintiff ſhall certainly have Judgment upon Demurrer.

Mr. Ketelbey. What I had to offer was, that if one Overt-Act is bad, the Indictment is bad; but if it be otherways, and if there be any one Overt-Act well laid, that that ſhall make the Indictment good; and your Lordſhip will maintain that Indictment: I have nothing elſe to offer.

Mr. Att. Gen. Say what you have a Mind to ſay.

Mr. Ketelbey. I did not know but I was right in what I was going to ſay; and I think it a Point too material to be eaſily given up.

Ld. Ch. Juſ. You allow one of the Overt-Acts is well laid; conſider if there is no Overt-Act but that one; muſt there not be Judgment againſt the Priſoner? Suppoſe one Overt-Act that is not good, muſt that take off the Force of that which is good?

Mr. Ketelbey. I ſubmit it, whether this is a Parallel Caſe in a Declaration for Work and Labour done, if there be but one Count, and that well laid, the Plaintiff ſhall recover: But if in a ſecond Count, he comes and ſays in Court, that he had done ſuch Work and Labour; that the Defendant promiſed to pay him ſuch a Sum, if either theſe Counts are naught, it may be mov'd in Arreſt of Judgment.

Mr. Juſ. Eyre. If the Damages are taken generally, otherwiſe not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. You find in Rookwood's Caſe, it is there held, if the Jury found him guilty of any one Overt-Act, that it would maintain the Indictment: But what is your Objection?

Ld. Ch. Juſ. We will hear any thing that you think material to offer.

Mr. Ketelbey. I would not have offer'd it, if I did not think it material; and for my part, I cannot find any ſuch thing in Rookwood's Trial, or any where elſe, (I beg Pardon if I have overlook'd it) that one good Overt-Act ſhould maintain the whole Indictment; I admit three or four of them to be good, as they are laid in this Indictment; the only Objection I have, is, to the Uncertainty of that which relates to the publiſhing of a malicious, ſcandalous, ſeditious, and traiterous Writing, continen' & purportan' exhortation' incitament' & præmiorum promiſſion' ad ſuadendum & excitand' ſubditos Domini Regis ad arma & guerram contra Dominum Regem, &c. My Lord, the Rule that my Lord Chief Juſtice Coke lays down in his firſt Inſtitutes, f. 303. a. is, That in Indictments, a Certainty to a common Intent is not ſufficient, no more than in Counts, Replications, or other Pleadings of the Plaintiff. Now whether this, as it is laid, hath the Certainty which that Rule requires, your Lordſhip will determine. In all capital Caſes, eſpecially in High-Treaſon, the Indictments muſt be drawn with the utmoſt Accuracy and Certainty. The Words here are, that he publicavit quoddam malitioſum, ſeditioſum, & proditorium ſcriptum: And then ſets forth only the Subſtance of the Libel in general. Is there not the ſame Reaſon that the Words ſhould have been ſet forth in this Indictment, as in an Indictment for a Libel, that ſo the Court might judge, upon the Face of the Indictment, whether they did import Excitement and Exhortation, levare Guerram. I muſt own, in two or three late Caſes, the Words have not been ſet forth.

Ld. Ch. Juſ. Remember Francia's Caſe.

Mr. Ketelbey. I am going to mention Francia's, and hope I ſhall be able to account for that, as well as the others: In Francia's Caſe the Indictment was, that he wrote ſeveral Letters, notifying his Intention to levy War, and requiring Aid from Abroad, without particularizing the Words of thoſe Letters, or the Subſtance of them. The Queſtion was not upon an Arreſt of Judgment; but it came on in the Courſe of the Trial, whether ſuch Evidence ſhould be allow'd. It was inſiſted upon, that there was a Letter mention'd, and the Subſtance of that Letter ought to have been ſet forth in the Indictment; or elſe the Letter itſelf ought not to be read, much leſs a Copy of it enter'd in the Priſoner's Copy-book, as Evidence againſt him: And I muſt beg Leave to rely on the ſolemn Reſolution of all your Lordſhips in Dr. Sacheverell's Caſe, that the very Words ſhould be expreſly ſet forth in all Indictments whatſoever. In Francia's Caſe, there was no Motion in Arreſt of Judgment; for there was no Verdict againſt him: Therefore, whether that Precedent will ſtand in our Way, ſo as to ſtop us in our preſent Objection, your Lordſhip will determine: And in the Caſe of Colonel Sidney, the very Words are ſet forth, the Title of the Book, and the Part charg'd to be Treaſon. In Keylinge 22. in Twine's Caſe, he was indicted for compaſſing the Death of the King; and his Overt-Act was, the publiſhing a Book call'd, A Treatiſe of the Execution of Juſtice; and the Title of that Book, and the very treaſonable Part objected againſt the Priſoner were ſet forth at large. In Coleman's Indictment, two Letters were mention'd, which were declar'd to be his Hand: There was no Counſel, nor Motion made in Arreſt of Judgment. I don't remember any Caſe where they are laid ſo general, as in this Indictment, except Francia's and Coleman's. I ſhall only beg Leave to add, that where there is a Libel, a Book, or Letters, charg'd as the Overt-Act of that which is ſuppos'd to be Treaſon, and upon which the Offence is grounded, they ought to be ſo far ſet forth, that a Perſon may have an Opportunity to clear himſelf of the Accuſation: I don't know any Precedent to the contrary, but that of Francia's Caſe, where there was not any Opportunity of debating it, he being acquitted on his Trial; and the Caſe of Coleman, which was before any Counſel was allow'd.

Trial 64.

Ld. Ch. Juſ. The Objection was taken then in Francia's Caſe as properly, as if it had been taken in Arreſt of Judgment; for the Act of Parliament ſays, that no evidence ſhall be admitted or given of any Overt-Act, that is not expreſly laid in the Indictment, againſt any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever. You took the Objection, and ſaid, that this Overt-Act of Treaſon is not expreſly laid in the Indictment; and therefore it ought not to be given in Evidence: You know, that that was over-rul'd over-rul'd at the time of making the Objection, and that the Opinion of the Court was againſt you. As to what you ſay, that the Words muſt be ſet forth, it is perfectly wrong; a Man may ſet forth the Subſtance of the Words, without ſhewing the Words themſelves: That is the Way that is proper to be taken, and when it is otherwiſe, it is not ſo as it ought to be done.

Mr. Juſ. Eyre. It was indeed the Opinion of the Judges who were preſent at Dr. Sacheverel's Trial, that the particular Words ſuppoſed to be criminal ought to be expreſly ſpecified in every Indictment or Information for any Miſdemeanour by writing or ſpeaking; and ſince it is urg'd as an Authority to conclude our Judgments, I can't forbear ſaying, that it was a great Surprize to Weſtminſter-Hall, and particularly to thoſe who attended this Court, to hear that any ſuch Opinion had been given; for it had never been laid down in any of our Books as the Rule of Law or Practice, that the particular Words ſuppoſed to be criminal, ought to be ſpecified in the Indictment or Information; and we had learn'd from my Lord Chief Juſtice Holt, that a Libel might be deſcribed either by the Senſe and Subſtance, or by the particular Words, and that an Indictment or Information in either of theſe Forms would be good. If you look into the Books of Entries you will find ſeveral Inſtances where Slanders and Perjuries are charged in Latin, as falſe and ſcandalous Aſſertions, and not in the Words as ſpoken. And in Staley's * Caſe who was indicted for treaſonable Words upon the Stat. 13 Car. II. it was charged in the Indictment, that he ſpeaking of the King, had traitorouſly declared, quod ipſe prædictus Staley ipſum Dominum Regem interficeret; and the Fact was, that Staley in Converſation had ſpoke words to this effect in French, which were proved by two Witneſſes; and this Evidence was thought ſufficient to convict him of High-Treaſon; and yet the particular Words ſuppoſed and adjudged to be criminal, were not ſpecified in the Indictment; and there was an Information for Perjury †, in which all the great Counſel of England were concerned on one Side or other, which was tried at Bar in my Lord Chief Juſtice Holt's Time, and the Offence was charged in the ſame Manner; for the Subſtance of what the Defendant had ſworn was ſet forth in Latin, and the Evidence which he gave in Engliſh being proved to be falſe, he was convicted of the Perjury without any Objection; and yet the particular Engliſh Words in which he gave his Evidence were not expreſly ſpecified in the Information; and I don't find that the ſpecifying of the particular Words was ever ſaid or ſuggeſted to be neceſſary, till this ſudden Opinion was given; and therefore as I never thought it right, I can't hear it urg'd as an Authority, without offering my Reaſons to the contrary, and acknowledging that I have been long in a great Miſtake, if there be any one Reſolution in the Books to ſupport it.

Trial 181.

Mr. Juſt. Powys. In the Caſe of Francia it was inſiſted on in order to ſtop the Trial; the main of the Objection was, that they ought not to produce Evidence of the Letters, becauſe thoſe Letters were not expreſly ſet forth in the Indictment, and that very Objection was made in order to ſtop the Trial. What was ſaid there in Caſes of Libels is intended when ſet forth in hæc verba, and not in Latin, the more common Way: But it is another thing where it is an Overt-Act of the Imagination of a Man's Heart in Treaſon, it is ſufficient to ſet forth the Subſtance of them; therefore it was ſo fully ſettled in Francia's Caſe, that I thought it would be never mentioned again; the Point was argued, the Objections were made and over-rul'd, and it was the very Point on which the Trial proceeded.

Mr. At. Gen. In my Lord Preſton's Caſe there were ſeveral Notes, Memorandums and Writings, that were the very Overt-Acts of the Treaſon, yet they were not particularly ſet forth in the Indictment.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. There it was alledg'd, that the Lord Preſton prepared and compoſed ſeveral Writings, ſeveral traiterous Notes and Memorandums, for the giving Inſtruction and Information for the French King how to invade England. I deſire to put Mr. Ketelbey this Caſe: Suppoſe any one had proclaimed the Pretender at Charing-Croſs, or elſewhere, and had read his Declaration, exciting the People to revolt and to come in to him, and promiſing them Rewards; and then the Declaration had been carried off, or ſo diſpoſed of that it could not be recovered and produced in Evidence; I would be glad to know, whether that Perſon might not be indicted for Treaſon, without ſetting forth the particular Words which he read out of ſuch Declaration; or whether he ſhould eſcape Puniſhment for want of being able to ſet out the particular Words?

Mr. Ketelbey. The reading of the Paper in that Caſe would be ſufficient.

Ld. Ch. Juſ. Have you done, or have you any thing further to offer for the Priſoner?

Cl. of the Cr. Chriſtopher Layer, hold up your Hand. You have been Indicted of High-Treaſon, &c.

Priſ. I have nothing more to ſay now, becauſe my Counſel have given it up. But after your Lordſhip hath paſſed Sentence upon me, I hope and deſire, for the Sake of other People more than myſelf, thoſe that I have had very great Dealings and Correſpondence with, particularly my Lord Londonderry, and ſeveral others, that I would do Juſtice to; that your Lordſhip would give me a reaſonable Time to make up their Accounts; and when that is done, I hope your Lordſhip will give me ſtill a further Time to make up that great Account which I have in another Place; When this is done, if his Majeſty doth not think fit graciouſly to continue me in this World, I will dare to die like a Gentleman and a Chriſtian, not doubting but that I ſhall meet with a double Portion of Mercy and Juſtice in the next World, tho 'tis denied me in this.

Ld. Ch. Juſ. Chriſtopher Layer, You have been Indicted, and after a long Examination and fair Trial, have been convicted of High-Treaſon, in compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King.

You have had all the Indulgence and Advantage that the Law would allow you. You have had Counſel aſſigned you of your own chuſing, to adviſe you preparatory to your Trial, and to aſſiſt you in Making your Defenſe at your Trial.

* Mich. 30 Car. II. B. R. Trial 74.

† Dom. Rex. v. Griepe. Trin. 8 Will.

Theſe Counſel have been permitted to ſay whatever they thought proper for your Service; and I heartily wiſh that I could ſay that they had not exceeded, that they had not taken a greater Liberty than they ought to have done: But however that was, the Court thought fit to permit it in them, that they might not be diſcouraged in offering any thing that was proper for your Defenſe; we did not cenſure it then, on this Conſideration.

The Jury that have found you guilty, are ſuch, as may be juſtly ſaid, you yourſelf approved of; for, tho the Law gives you a Liberty of challenging five and thirty, you challenged but four and thirty; ſo you allowed the reſt to be an indifferent Jury, to paſs between the King and you as to your Life and Death.

The Evidence on which you have been convicted, is the cleareſt and plaineſt that ever I heard: Your perſonal Conferences with the Pretender at Rome; your conſtant Correſpondence with him and his Agents afterwards; the Scheme you had formed for the Executing this Treaſon; your Confeſſion of the greateſt part of it before the Lords of the Council; and at laſt your Flight when in the hands of Juſtice, out of a Window two pair of Stairs, and the Endeavours you uſed when retaken to corrupt and prevail with thoſe that took you, by Rewards, to let you go off; theſe are Matters ſo very clear and plain, and did concur ſo exactly with the Evidence of the Witneſſes, that it did not reſt on their Credit; the only Queſtion was, whether the Jury did believe what you yourſelf had declared on your Examination before the Lords of the Council, and by the Scheme that was found in your Cuſtody.

This being the Nature of the Evidence, I muſt, according to what is uſual, put you in mind of the horrid Wickedneſs you have been found guilty of.

The firſt Matter projected to be done, was to ſeize the Tower of London, to ſet a Guard at the Exchange and other Places; to ſeize the Bank, and take from thence what Money you had occaſion for; by which the whole City of London, and in conſequence the whole Nation, would inevitably have been involved in Blood and Confuſion: This was to have been the firſt Fruits of this projected Scheme.

The next Step to be taken by this execrable Scheme, was to ſeize the ſacred Perſon of the King: a King, who during the whole Courſe of his Reign hath been the moſt religious Obſerver of our Laws, the moſt careful Preſerver and Protector of all our Civil and Religious Rights, and the moſt merciful Prince that ever ſat on the Throne of theſe Kingdoms; yet this, this moſt excellent Prince, was to be ſeized and made a Sacrifice to Popery and arbitrary Power.

The next Step to be taken, was to ſeize the Prince; and when that was done, no body can doubt but the young Prince and Princeſſes muſt and ſhould have followed the Fate of their Father: So that the Project muſt and would have ended in the Deſtruction of all the Royal Family on this Side the Water; and when that was done, 'twas thought 'twould be an eaſy Matter to ſet the Pretender on the Throne.

This being done, the King and the Royal Family deſtroy'd, and the Pretender advanced to the Throne, what the Conſequence of that muſt and would have been, is obvious to every body; it muſt have ended in the entire Deſtruction and Diſſolution of our moſt happy Eſtabliſhment and Conſtitution; the happieſt, I think, that ever any People enjoyed: it muſt have ended in the Deſtruction of our Laws, our Liberties, our Religion, and the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſhed; and we muſt have become from the moſt happy, the moſt miſerable People on Earth.

Theſe horrid and execrable Deſigns are ſo very heinous in themſelves, that they hardly will admit of any Circumſtance of Aggravation: But I muſt ſay, I can't avoid ſaying, that there are Circumſtances with reſpect to you, that make them more heinous, if poſſible. You were bred up to the Law, and you muſt be ſuppoſed to know the Excellency of our happy Conſtitution and Government, and the Laws which you profeſſed; which makes your Crime much the greater.

Another Matter, which is a great Aggravation of your Offence, is, that you were, or at leaſt profeſſed yourſelf, a Proteſtant, and a Member of the Church of England, whilſt you engaged yourſelf in Meaſures which muſt inevitably have deſtroyed that Church which you profeſs yourſelf a Member of.

Theſe are the Treaſons which you are convicted of; and being ſo, the Law adjudges you not fit to live; and the Judgment of the Law is, and it is conſidered by the Court, that

You, Chriſtopher Layer, be led to the Place from whence you came, and from thence you are to be drawn to the Place of Execution, and there you are to be hanged by the Neck, but not till you are dead, but you are to be cut down alive, and your Bowels to be taken out, and burnt before your Face; your Head is to be ſever'd from your Body, and your Body to be divided into four Quarters; and that your Head and Quarters be diſpoſed of where His Majeſty ſhall think fit.

Then the Priſoner was carried back to the Tower of London; but on Wedneſday November 28. the Attorney and Sollicitor General moved for a Rule for his Execution, and that the Court would appoint a Time and Place for that Purpoſe; and ſaid, that the chief Deſign of executing ſuch Criminals was to be an Example to others not to offend in the like Manner, and to deter them from committing Treaſon, and therefore they moved that the Execution might be in Middleſex, tho the Fact was done in Eſſex, and ſaid, that there were many Precedents for executing Criminals in ſuch Places as this Court ſhould think proper.

Thereupon the Court asked the Clerk of the Crown if he knew any ſuch Precedents, who replied, that one Fitzpatrick *, who was an Aſſociate with the Lord Audley, was executed in Middleſex for a Fact committed in Wiltſhire, and two other late Precedents of the ſame Nature.

So a Rule was made to the Lieutenant of the Tower, to deliver the Priſoner to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex; and another Rule to the ſaid Sheriffs to execute him on Monday December the 12th, at Tyburn.

* See Trials Vol. 1. N°. 32. p. 374.

Then

Then the King's Counſel moved the Court to alter the Rule made the Day before, for Mr. Morgan, the Clergyman, to attend the Priſoner, for that he was taken into Cuſtody upon Suſpicion of Treaſon; and had given Bond to appear in Court this Day.

The Court anſwered, That any Clergyman ſhould be admitted to the Priſoner, who was a Perſon of known Honeſty, Integrity, and Learning, but not ſuch who might harden him in his Iniquity in his laſt Moments; ſo two more Clergymen were joined in the Rule, and the other two ſtruck out.

Afterwards, and on that very Day before he was to be executed, he had a Reprieve, and there being ſome Opinions, that he could not be executed by Virtue of any Warrant ſigned by the King; but that a new Rule muſt be made in the Court of King's-Bench for his Execution, he was accordingly brought to the Bar in Hilary-Term following, and a Rule was made for his Execution on the 27th of March; but before that Time he procured another Reprieve, and afterwards another Rule was made to execute him on the 17th Day of May following, which was done accordingly. He made a ſhort Speech to the Aſſiſtants, wherein he avow'd the Principles for which he ſuffer'd, recommending the Intereſt of the Pretender; and deliver'd a Paper to the Under-Sheriff, and alſo another to a Friend of his. His Head was afterwards carried to Newgate, and was the next Day, fixt upon Temple-Bar; but his Quarters were deliver'd to his Friends; who took care to get them decently interr'd. The Paper abovemention'd was incloſed in a Cover, ſuperſcribed,

To Mr. Walter Price, Under-Sheriff, at his Houſe in Caſtle-Yard, in Holbourn; And was as followeth, viz.

Mr. SHERIFF,

I Having previouſly reſolved to imploy all the Time allow'd me at the Place of Execution, in Devotion, and making my Peace with GOD, thro' the All-Sufficient Merits and Mediation of my Gracious Saviour, I have, inſtead of any Speech I could make to the Spectators, on this Unfortunate Occaſion, committed my laſt Thoughts of all Worldly Affairs to Writing *, while I had ſome Intervals of Time for ſo doing; and have ſent two Authentick Duplicates thereof, with my Hand ſubſcribed to the Bottom of each Sheet, to two truſty Friends, to teſtify thereby to the World, in due Time, and as Occaſion offers, the True Principles of both my Religion and Loyalty, as well as the unparallell'd Hardſhips and Injuſtice I have lately met with; for which I pray God forgive the Authors thereof.

And to the End, that none of my Friends, who had Acceſs to me ſince I was ſentenced to die, may be liable to come into any Trouble upon the Score of publiſhing my ſaid Writings, I ſent the Draughts thereof ſeal'd up, together with Draughts of two ſeveral Letters directed to certain Perſons in the Adminiſtration, to One of my Friends abovemention'd, deſiring him to copy them all over fair, and return them to me: And then I ſubſcrib'd them, and return'd them to my Friends, without letting the Bearers, Firſt or Laſt, know any thing of the Contents.

So, taking Leave of this vain World, God in Mercy, Receive my Soul! Amen.

CXCI. Proceedings in Parliament againſt John Plunket, George Kelly alias Johnſon, and Dr. Francis Atterbury, Biſhop of Rocheſter, upon Bills of Pains and Penalties, for a Treaſonable Conſpiracy, May 1723. 9 Geo. I.

THE abovenamed Perſons having been taken into Cuſtody by Order of the Government, for a treaſonable Conſpiracy, it was thought proper to lay the Letters, Papers, and Examinations relating thereto, before the Parliament; whereupon the Houſe of Commons appointed a Committee, Jan. 15. conſiſting of the following Perſons:

The Right Honourable Spencer Compton Eſq; Speaker.
Robert Walpole Eſq; Chancellor of the Exchequer.
Sir Joſeph Jekyll, Maſter of the Rolls.
Paul Methuen Eſq; Comptroller of his Majeſty's Houſhold.
William Pulteney Eſq;
John Smith Eſq;
Richard Hampden Eſq;
Lieutenant General Wills.
Sir Robert Sutton.

The Committee choſe William Pulteney Eſq; their Chairman, and made their Report to the Houſe, March 1. which was as follows.

THE Committee appointed to examine Chriſtopher Layer and others, in relation to the Conſpiracy mentioned in His Majeſty's Speech, to be carrying on againſt his Perſon and Government, having peruſed the ſeveral Papers and Examinations referred to them, and having gone through the Examination of thoſe Perſons, have agreed on the following Report.

In ſuch various and ſo long Examinations, and in ſo extenſive an Inquiry, your Committee are in hopes that they need not be ſtrictly ty'd to the Method and Order in which they were appointed, but may for the Eaſe of the Houſe range the ſeveral Matters occurring to them, as near as they can, in the Order of Time in which they were tranſacted, or as they beſt ſerve by their mutual Connexion to illuſtrate each other, without adding any Obſervations of their own, but ſuch as naturally ariſe from comparing the ſeveral Papers and Examinations together, and ſuch as are neceſſary to help the Houſe, the more eaſily to perceive the Contradictions and Inconſiſtencies of the Confeſſions made by the Priſoners, as well as the Confirmations and Coincidence of the Facts inquir'd into.

The Committee obſerve in general, that a Deſign has long been carrying on by Perſons of Figure and Diſtinction at home, in Conjunction with Traitors abroad, for placing the Pretender on the Throne of theſe Kingdoms. That various Methods have been attempted, and various Times fixed for putting this Deſign in execution. That the firſt Intention was to have procured a regular Body of foreign Forces to invade theſe Kingdoms at the Time of the late Elections; but that the Conſpirators being diſappointed in this Expectation, next reſolved to make an Attempt at the Time that it was generally believed His Majeſty intended to go to Hannover, by the Help of ſuch Officers and Soldiers as could paſs into England unobſerved from abroad, under the Command of the late Duke of Ormond, who was to have landed in the River with a great quantity of Arms, provided in Spain for that purpoſe; at which Time the Tower was likewiſe to have been ſeized, and the City of London to have been made a Place of Arms: But this Deſign being alſo diſappointed, by the Diſcoveries made in England, and his Majeſty's putting off his Journey; by the Incampment of his Forces at home, as well as the ſending for thoſe from Ireland; and by the readineſs of his Majeſty's good Allies the States-General to aſſiſt him in caſe of need; by the Orders given in Spain, that the late Duke of Ormond ſhould not be ſuffer'd to embark, and the like Orders iſſu'd in France, that he ſhould not be ſuffer'd to paſs through that Kingdom; the Conſpirators found themſelves under a Neceſſity of deferring their Enterprize till the breaking up of the Camp: during which Interval, they were labouring by their Agents and Emiſſaries to corrupt and ſeduce the Officers and Soldiers of His Majeſty's Army, and depended ſo much on this Defection, as to entertain hopes of placing the Pretender on the Throne, though they ſhould obtain no Aſſiſtance from abroad, which nevertheleſs they ſtill continu'd to ſollicit for.

The Truth and Reality of theſe wicked Deſigns, your Committee are of Opinion will appear confirmed to the Houſe by concurrent and unqueſtionable Advices from almoſt all Parts of Europe, ſent by Perſons who appear to have had no Communication with each other; which Advices have again been verify'd and ſupported by ſeveral Diſcoveries made at home, by the Informations and Confeſſions of ſome of the Perſons concerned, as well as by a long and regular Series of Correſpondence, which the Conſpirators have furniſhed the Government with againſt themſelves, and the ſeveral Branches of which appear to the Committee connected with one another, and all concurring in one continued Deſign of ſubverting our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, and involving theſe Kingdoms in Blood and Confuſion.

The ſeveral Examinations, Letters, and other Papers, are all contained in an [1] Appendix to this Report; and as they are all ſeverally numbred, ſo the ſeveral Paragraphs which are quoted from them have References to thoſe Numbers, that they may the eaſier be turned to upon occaſion, and be ſupported by the Authorities from whence they are taken.

That the firſt Deſign was to have been executed during the Elections, and to have been ſupported by foreign Forces, is collected from the following Circumſtances.

Philip Neynoe Clerk (who was drowned in attempting to make his Eſcape from the Meſſengers) declared upon his [2] Examination before ſome of the Lords of the Council, 'That he had been 'imployed by George Kelly, and one Watſon, 'whom he took to be the late Earl Mariſhal, and 'who was in England laſt Spring, to draw up 'three ſeveral Memorials to the Regent of France, 'to ſollicit him to ſend Forces to the Aſſiſtance 'of the Conſpirators. That the laſt of theſe Memorials was drawn up in December 1721, and 'contained a Demand of Five thouſand Men, to 'be ſent over by the Regent to invade theſe 'Kingdoms.'

This is confirmed by unqueſtionable [3] Advices from France, the 19th of April laſt, in which it is expreſly affirmed, 'That repeated Application 'had been made to the Regent for ſome time 'paſt, to furniſh only a Body of Three thouſand 'Men, by the help of which the Conſpirators 'made no doubt but to be able to place the Pre'tender on the Throne.'

Layer at his [4] Examination before a Committee of Lords of the Council, confeſs'd, 'That being 'in Diſcourſe with Lord Orrery, ſoon after his 'firſt acquaintance with him, (which was before 'the Incampment) Lord Orrery ſaid, Nothing 'could relieve the Nation, but a Reſtoration; 'and that he would be glad if he could contri'bute to bring it about: That it muſt be done by 'foreign Forces, and could be done no other 'way. That he often aſk'd Lord Orrery what 'Methods they had taken to procure them? 'That Lord Orrery ſaid, they had Friends abroad 'that had made Application to the Regent for Aſſiſ'tance to bring about a Revolution; but he does 'not know whom his Lordſhip meant; General 'Dillon might be his Correſpondent, for ought he 'knew: That Lord Orrery likewiſe told him, the 'Regent might be brought to wink at any thing, 'but was ſo perfidious that he was not to be 'truſted; and that the French had made a Tool 'of the Pretender.'

Layer repeated the ſame in part at two other [5] Examinations before his Trial, and has ſince confirmed to your Committee, upon his [6] Examination at the Tower, 'That Lord Orrery declar'ed himſelf conſtantly of Opinion, that nothing 'could be done to any purpoſe in the Pretender's 'favour, without foreign Forces.'

About the latter end of April, a [7] Letter was intercepted here, coming from Spain, incloſing the [8] Copy of one from O—— to L——, which will be ſhewn in the Sequel of this Report, to have been from the late Duke of Ormond; in which Ormond ſays, 'Pray tell Mrs. Chaumont, that 'ſince the Parliament is dead and gone, I think 'it is a good Time to make an Effort, when the 'Elector is gone to Hannover.' It will appear from the Sequel of this Report, that by Mrs. Chaumont is probably meant the Pretender.

On the 23d of April another [9] Letter was intercepted, ſign'd 1387, and directed to Mr. Jackſon, which your Committee have good Reaſon to believe was from the Biſhop of Rocheſter to the Pretender, as will be ſhewn in the following Part of this Report. In this Letter he ſays, 'Notwith'ſtanding this Opportunity is elapſed, I agree with 'you another may offer before the End of the 'Year, though not perhaps every way ſo favour'able.' This Letter was writ on the 20th of April, when moſt of the Elections were over, and conſequently that Opportunity was elapſed.

That an Inſurrection was thought of at the Time of the Elections, is farther confirmed from the following Particulars; Layer [10] confeſs'd before the Lords, 'That Green the Gunſmith being in com'pany with Lord North after Dinner, and talking 'of Five thouſand Arms, and Seven thouſand 'Arms that were ready, ſaid, When the Weſt'minſter Mob were up, if they had had Arms! 'Upon which Lord North interrupted him, and 'ſaid, Don't talk, you are a Citizen, you know 'there are no Arms; but that the Man inſiſted 'there were Five thouſand Arms ready in the 'City.

Neynoe [11] declar'd 'that Tho. Carte, Clerk, 'made two Expeditions in the Spring (during the 'Elections) one into Cornwall, and another into 'the Counties of Warwick, Nottingham, Derby 'and Stafford; and that upon Neynoe's blaming 'the riotous Conduct at the Coventry Election, 'Carte replied, Hang the Election, you never 'ſaw Fellows of ſuch Mettle, ſo well trained, ſo 'fit for buſineſs.'

Among Mr. Dennys Kelly's Papers was ſeized an exact [12] Liſt of the Quarters of all his Majeſty's Forces in Great Britain, about the Time that they were drawn out of moſt of the great Towns and Boroughs, on account of the Elections.

From all theſe Circumſtances the Committee ſee reaſon to conclude, that the firſt Deſign was to have been executed with the Aſſiſtance of foreign Forces, at the Time of the Elections; that the Pretender, the late Duke of Ormond, Lord Orrery, and the Biſhop of Rocheſter were of this Opinion; that Memorials were drawn up here, to be preſented to the Regent for this Purpoſe; and that thoſe Memorials were actually preſented, or at at leaſt Application made to the Regent in conſequence of them, by Directions from Perſons in England; and that ſuch Diſpoſitions had been made for this Enterpriſe at that time, as broke out into Riots at ſome of the Elections: which muſt be allowed to have been no unfavourable Juncture for ſuch an Attempt, conſidering the Diſcontents occaſioned by the late South-Sea Scheme, which the Conſpirators have all along flatter'd themſelves they ſhould be able to improve into a Spirit of Rebellion; and the Liberties uſually taken at ſuch a Seaſon, when all the Freeholders of England are neceſſarily and legally aſſembled together, and when the whole Nation is too apt to be in a ferment, even in the quieteſt Times.

This Deſign failing, on account (as 'tis reaſonable to believe) of the Conſpirators not being able to obtain the Forces they sollicited from abroad, and of their being themselves divided in Opinion as to the Time and Manner of Execution, their next Endeavour was to attempt an Insurrection at the Time when they supposed His Majesty would be going to Hannover.

Of the Reality of this Design your Committee have found such evident and concurrent Testimonies, that they think stronger could not reasonably be expected, in an Affair where it was so much the Interest of the Conspirators to act with the utmost Caution and Secrecy.

It has already been observed, that the late Duke of Ormond [13] thought the Time of the King's going for Germany a favourable Opportunity for making an Effort, and that the Person who signs 1378, [14] says, 'Notwithstanding this 'Opportunity is elapsed, I agree with you an- 'other may offer before the End of the Year, 'tho not perhaps every way so favourable.'

Layer confess'd to the Lords at [15] two several Examinations previous to his Trial, and has since [16] confirmed to your Committee, 'That he made 'Application to Lord Orrery to stand Godfather 'to his Child for the Pretender, intending that 'this Mark of Kindness from the Pretender 'should serve as a Credential to Lord Orrery to 'induce him to converse freely with him, in re- 'lation to the Pretender's Affairs: that their Ac- 'quaintance having begun in this manner, [17] 'Lord Orrery sent to him to inquire into the 'Pretender's Character and Qualifications, and 'asked him several times whether he had any Re- 'commendation from the Pretender to any Per- 'son; that upon his answering No, his Lord- 'ship told him, that he seem'd to be an honest 'Man, and People of his Integrity should be 'always welcome to him, whether they had any 'Credentials or no; that he, Layer, then gave 'his Lordship an Account of what had passed 'between the Pretender and him during his Stay 'at Rome, and asked his Lordship what Hopes 'there were? To which his Lordship answered, 'that there were Hopes, for all the Nation were 'generally for the Pretender, except such as 'had Places, or Money due to them from the 'Government. That Lord Orrery farther told 'him, that Lord North, Sir Harry Goring, Lord 'Strafford and others were going to do a rash 'Thing in favour of the Pretender, which he, 'Lord Orrery, was sorry for, because it would 'prove abortive, and hinder its succeeding an- 'other Time: That Layer asked him, who was 'to have the Command, and Lord Orrery told 'him, he believ'd Lord North and Grey was to 'have the Command, and that the said Lord had 'a Commission from the Pretender; that the 'Lord Orrery called this Design rash, because 'not duly concerted, nor supported by foreign 'Forces, without which, he said, he thought 'they must be more than Madmen to hope to 'do any thing to effect, for the Pretender's Ser- 'vice. That he, Layer, the next time he saw 'Lord North and Grey, which was before the 'Encampment of the Troops, acquainted him 'with what Lord Orrery had said about the 'Rashness of the Design; that Lord North and 'Grey replied, Lord Orrery was a timorous Fel- 'low, and was always making Difficulties, and 'Schemes out of his own Brain; that he knew 'nothing, nor should know; but that it was his, 'Lord North's, Opinion, the Pretender might be 'restored by the People of England, without the 'Assistance of any foreign Force. That he, 'Layer, talked to Lord North and Grey of his 'Lordship's being General; but Lord North 'said, he was not popular enough, that the Duke 'of Ormond would be fit for it, and if they had 'him here, his Lordship believed most of the 'Soldiers would join him: That he, Layer, con- 'tinuing to press Lord North and Grey on this 'head, by telling him that he was fitter for a 'General, and was popular, the said Lord an- 'swered No, the Duke of Ormond was the Man, 'he was the Soldiers Darling. That he, Layer, 'often talked of this Affair to the Lord North, 'being induced so to do, by the Impatience he 'observed in him, and in Lord Orrery, that 'something should be done.'

Matthew Plunket, Serjeant of Invalids, has [18] deposed upon Oath, 'that Layer told him (in 'July last) that the late Duke of Ormond would 'come in a single Ship with some Officers, and 'that it had been done long ago, if the French 'Ambassador had not been told of it, who told 'it again to the King.'

[1] It appears to your Committee from several Depositions on Oath, as well as from Informations and written Intelligence, that in consequence of this Design of bringing over the late Duke of Ormond, Captain Charles Halstead, a Lancashire Man (who was concerned in the Insurrection intended at Oxford in the Year 1715) set sail from the River for Bilboa, about the 12th Day of March 17$\frac{1}{2}$, on board the Ship Phineas of Bristol, William Arnold Master, with a Provision of Arms and Power on board, which one of the Sailors on his [2] Examination declared, 'He apprehends to 'have been greater than was necessary for an or- 'dinary trading Voyage. [3] That the said Ship 'was hired at one Hundred Pounds Freight per 'Month, two Hundred being paid in Advance '(as Halstead himself owned) and had no Goods 'nor any Passenger on board, except the said 'Halstead, who went by the Name of Nowell, 'and was known to the Master and Sailors by 'that Name only, during the Voyage to Spain. '[4] That the said Ship was clear'd at the Custom- 'house in Ballast for Lisbon; but that when they 'came into the Bay of Biscay, the Master, who 'had Orders to follow Nowell's Directions, [5] gave 'private Instructions to the Pilot to steer to 'Bilboa; that they arrived there on the 25th of 'March, O. S. and that Halstead went on Shore, 'and lay that Night at Mr. Brown's an Irish 'Merchant, and the next Day went forward to- 'wards Madrid, being furnished with Horses by 'the said Brown, on which Journey he was absent 'about a Fortnight; that during his Absence, a '[6] Report was current all over the Town of 'Bilboa, and particularly among the Convents, 'that the said Ship was come to fetch over the 'Duke of Ormond.' And Thomas Carter, one of the Sailors of the said Ship, who was employ'd by Halstead to wait on him as a Servant, has [7] deposed upon Oath, 'That three Days after 'the said Nowell's Return, the Deponent heard 'him propose to the above-named Captain Ar- 'nold, to carry the late Duke of Ormond and 'Four other Passengers to England; which the

'ſaid Captain Arnold refuſing to do, the ſaid 'Nowell inſiſted, ſaying, the Ship was his ſo long 'as he paid the Hire of her, and the Wages and 'Victualling, and they had high Words upon it. 'Carter farther depoſed, that Halſtead received a 'Letter directed to Colonel Nowell Butler, which 'was the Name the ſaid Nowell went by, when 'he was in Spain. That, when the Ship was re-'leaſed, they plied off and on about four Hours 'off St. Andero, expecting ſome Body to come 'off in a Boat; but no body coming, and Night 'drawing on, they made the beſt of their way 'to England, and arrived in the Downs the be-'ginning of July laſt.' Alliſon, who came over to England a Paſſenger in the ſaid Ship, has [8] depoſed upon Oath, 'that he left Madrid on the '4th of June, N. S. and that ſome time before 'he came away, the late Duke of Ormond, who 'had reſided a conſiderable time at Madrid, had 'ſent away his Horſes and Equipage from thence, 'and put his Servants on Board-wages, and that 'it was reported he was to go to Ventoſilla. That 'he, Alliſon, upon his coming to Bilboa, found 'the Ship Phineas bound for England, but ſtopt; 'that he agreed to take his Paſſage on board her, 'and going to the Corregidor of Bilboa for a Paſs, 'he found there Mr. Brown a Merchant, and one 'who went by the Name of Nowell; that Brown 'asking the Corregidor why the Ship was ſtopt, 'he ſaid, it was not the Ship, but Nowell's Per-'ſon, that was detained, by Orders from Madrid; 'that he, Alliſon, heard a Report at Bilboa, 'that the late Duke of Ormond was on the Coaſt 'in Diſguiſe, and that Nowell had been at Madrid, 'and come back again in Fifteen Days; the 'Expedition of which Journey, and the Ship's 'coming in Ballaſt, had raiſed a Suſpicion in 'Bilboa, that Nowell came over to the late Duke 'of Ormond, on account of the Conſpiracy. The 'Sailors [9] obſerved, that during Nowell's Stay at 'Bilboa, Brigadier Campbell (a Perſon concerned 'in the Preſton Rebellion) was frequently on 'board with him, but did not care to own his 'Name.' The ſame Particulars are confirmed by [10] Letters from Sir Anthony Weſcomb, who was ſent to Spain to gain Intelligence, with ſeveral other [11] Circumſtances relating to Ships, Arms and Recruits, provided for the Pretender's Service in Spain.

During theſe Tranſactions, [12] Colonel Stanhope, his Majeſty's Ambaſſador at Madrid, who does not appear to have known any thing of this Ship's being come to Bilboa, having receiv'd Intelligence from other Hands, that the Duke of Ormond was preparing to ſet out for England with ſome Iriſh Officers, in order to put himſelf at the Head of the Rebels, obtain'd Orders from the Court of Madrid, to hinder the late Duke of Ormond's Embarkation, as will appear more fully in the remaining part of this Report.

In conſequence of theſe Orders, the King of Spain's Officers [13] came on board the Ship, and laid an Embargo upon her for about a Fortnight, till Halſtead finding himſelf diſappointed of his Deſign, agreed that Part of a Cargo of Wool and Iron ſhould be put on board the ſaid Ship by Brown and Slinger; and then returned to [14] England with one Maxwell, whom the Sailors underſtood to be a Relation of the late Lord Marr's, and two other Paſſengers, and arriv'd in the River about the 7th or 8th of July.

About the Beginning of May a [15] Letter was intercepted here, coming from Spain, directed to Monſ. Dumville Procureur, and encloſed under Cover to one Wilmore at Mr. Stokoe's Bookſeller near Charing-Croſs. Who is meant by the Name of Dumville, the Committee have not been able to diſcover.

In this Letter was enclos'd the [16] Copy of a Letter, which the Committee have Reaſon to believe was from the late Duke of Ormond to ſome Perſon abroad, the initial Letter of whoſe Name is diſcovered by the Decypherers to be L.

The Letter to Dumville, as well as the Copy of the late Duke of Ormond's Letter, was writ partly in Cypher; and among the Words out of Cypher ſeveral fictitious Names were made uſe of, which the Committee obſerve is the Caſe alſo in ſeveral others of the intercepted Letters referr'd to them.

It was reaſonable to expect, that in managing Correſpondences of ſo hazardous a Nature, all ſort of Art and Induſtry ſhould be uſed, and all the Help of Cyphers and Jargon called in, to diſguiſe the real Deſigns, and to conceal the true Names of the Perſons concerned, in order to their avoiding the Danger of legal Conviction: but your Committee likewiſe obſerve, that ſeveral of theſe Diſguiſes are ſo groſs and obvious, that they only ſerve to betray themſelves; others of them are explained by the Skill of different Decypherers, agreeing in the ſame Explication; which Explication is again confirmed by Facts unknown to thoſe Perſons at the time of the Decyphering. Others are explained by Cyphers and Liſts of fictitious Names, ſeized on the Conſpirators themſelves, as well as by comparing the ſeveral Parts of their Correſpondence together; and others again by direct Informations upon Oath. And, as the Degrees of Evidence, in a Search of this Nature, muſt be various, the Committee have taken all the Care they can, to diſtinguiſh what appears to them fully proved, from what is ſupported by ſtrong and probable Conjectures only.

In this [17] Letter to Dumville, dated the 27th of April 1722, (N. S.) mention is made of its being publickly known in Spain, by Letters from Bilboa and other Parts, 'that a Ship came to 'Bilboa, with an Expreſs to Ormond, in order to 'bring Ormond to England; that the ſaid Ex-'preſs went to the Place where Ormond was; 'that this had made ſo much Noiſe, that it 'was neceſſary to ſend to England with all poſ-'ſible Diſpatch, that a Ship's coming with Bal-'laſt only gave Occaſion to thoſe Reports, and 'that in order to ſtifle them it was neceſſary to 'put in the Ship Goods for England; that this 'would be a conſiderable Expence to Tom, who 'hopes that Friends will conſider it, and ſend 'him if poſſible a greater Supply than the five 'Thouſand Pounds that he wrote for in his of the '6th and 20th of April; that the Bills muſt be 'ſent directly to B——, and may be bought at 'the Exchange of London.'

The Committee are of Opinion, that by B. is meant Brown the Iriſh Merchant at Bilboa, becauſe the [18] Cargo was put on Board by the ſaid

Brown and Slinger; and it appears by subsequent [19] Letters that this Brown had twelve Thousand Arms in his Custody, for the Service of the late Duke of Ormond. It is also proved [20] by the Sailors, that Halstead was frequently in Company with this Brown and his Nephews, and lay sometimes at his House.

Who is meant by Tom in the said Letter, the Committee will not take upon them to determine; but they believe it will appear probable to the House, from the Connexion and other Circumstances, that it must mean the late Duke of Ormond.

The Person that writes this [21] Letter to Dumville, adds, 'That since Mrs. Chaumont cannot 'meet Ormond at any Place on the Road, it is 'absolutely necessary that Ormond should have as 'good a Preparation of Arms as can be had 'there, and in order to make it, he will want 'more Money from Friends.'

The same Person says, that he had that Day received a Letter, importing, 'That M—— 'could get more Arms if he had more Money.' The Committee are of Opinion, that by M—— is meant Morgan, who is mentioned in several [22] Letters from Spain, as Intendant of the Pretender's Ships at Cadiz, and active in procuring Officers and Arms; which Letters are confirmed by the Seizure of the Ship Revolution at Genoa, of which it appears by Captain Scot's [23] Letter from Genoa, that Morgan had the chief Care, going by the Name of Walton; which is again confirmed by a [24] Letter from Sir Anthony Wescomb at Bilboa.

The Person that [25] writes to Dumville, farther adds, 'That Ormond hopes Onslow and Hawley 'will send a Part of the Money they have raised 'directly to Ormond; for Ormond, upon the Hopes 'of it, has sent Credit to M——; he desires 'Dumville to mind this, and not to lose a Mo-'ment.'

Who are meant by Onslow and Hawley, the Committee cannot determine; but they are inclined to believe, that they are the same Persons, who in another [26] Letter, enclosed to Wilmore soon after, and writ in the same Cypher, are found by the Decypherers to have the initial Letters of their Names G—— and N——; in which Conjecture they are the more confirmed, by a [27] Cypher seized on John Plunket, in which the real Names beginning with G. are constantly designed by fictitious ones beginning with H. the Letter immediately following in the Alphabet, and the real Names of the Letter N. by others beginning with O.

In the [28] Letter to Dumville above-mentioned, was enclosed the [29] Copy of a Letter from the late Duke of Ormond to L. which was sent to Dumville as being in part an Answer to one received from him; who is meant by L, the Committee cannot determine.

In this Letter, the late Duke of Ormond mentions his having received an Account from D—— (General Dillon probably) that he had procured ten Thousand Arms, and advises the joyning Stocks with D——, since they cannot have too many Arms; and says he can only depend on two Thousand Arms from M—— (Morgan probably) but that he could have had more Arms, if he had had more Money.

The Committee observe, That this Account of ten Thousand Arms procured by D——, and of Two thousand by M——, agrees exactly with an [1] Account sent soon after from Mr. Stanhope at Madrid, and [2] confirmed by Sir Anthony Wescomb, that Twelve thousand Arms were lodged in the Hands of Brown at Bilboa, for the Pretender's Service; and that Morgan was ordered to the Bay of Biscay, in order to transport the said Arms to England.

The Committee take Notice likewise, that the very same Number of Arms is mentioned in a [3] Letter, writ, as they have good Reason to believe, by George Kelly, to General Dillon's Secretary; and the Arms are there spoken of, as provided by Mansfield's Relations, which Name George Kelly [4] explained to Neynoe to mean the late Duke of Ormond.

The Circumstance of Kelly's mentioning these Arms to Dillon's Secretary, makes it probable that by D. in Ormond's Letter, is meant the said Dillon, who, as your Committee are informed, is an Irish Roman Catholick, and quitted Ireland on the Capitulation of Limerick, and is at present a Lieutenant-General in the French Service, and has the Command of one of the Irish Regiments in France; and he appears to your Committee, from several Parts of the intercepted Correspondence, to have the chief Management of the Pretender's Affairs, and to be the principal Agent and Director of carrying on this Conspiracy.

Ormond in his [5] Letter to L—— afterwards says, 'That since the Parliament is dead and 'gone, he thinks it will be a good Time to 'make an Effort when the Elector is gone to 'Hannover; and adds, I hope you have agreed 'with D—— the Time of going for England, and 'when that is fixed between Mrs. Chaumont and 'D——, you will let Ormond know the Place 'of landing in England. I desire an Express 'may be sent to me, with particular Accounts 'of what is agreed on.' This, the Committee take Notice, agrees with Mr. Stanhope's [6] Intelligence, that Ormond was going for England, and likewise with [7] Intelligence sent from Rome, that the Pretender was to embark, as soon as two Officers, Relations of the late Duke of Ormond, should arrive at Porto Longone; which Circumstance makes it not improbable, that by Mrs. Chaumont may be meant the Pretender.

In the same [8] Letter to L——, Ormond says, 'I have ordered H——'s Ship, that I depended 'on, to return to England; it was not proper to 'make use of it, for Reasons not necessary to 'trouble you with. There was no Message sent 'by him, because of the Uncertainty of the 'Time of his getting to England.'

This Passage, the Committee are of Opinion, evidently relates to Halstead's Ship. Upon mentioning his sending back this Ship, he immediately adds, 'I have ordered M——'s Ship to 'come to A——;' which agrees exactly with Mr. Stanhope's [9] Account, that Morgan's Ships were ordered to the Bay of Biscay, to transport to England the Arms above-mentioned, together with Ormond, and what Officers could be got; and it appears by ſubſequent [9] Letters from Sir Anthony Wolcomb at Bilboa, that the ſaid Ships, under the Command of Morgan, did put in at Santo Andero, which the Committee underſtand to be the Place meant by A——, to which Ormond ſays he had ordered M——'s Ship to come. The ſaid Ships having put in at Andero, and ſtaid there fifteen Days, is again confirmed by a [10] Letter from Genoa, writ by Captain Gardiner, who commanded the Ship Revolution lately taken.

Soon after this Letter to Dumville, [11] another was intercepted here coming from Spain, directed A Monſieur Dodſworth, not ſigned, encloſed under Cover to Wilmore as the former, and writ in the ſame Cypher; the moſt material Paragraph of which is thus explained by the Decypherers.

'I muſt again entreat you to uſe your utmoſt 'Endeavours, to get the five Thouſand Pounds 'from Friends returned to O—— directly; the 'Hopes given by G—— to expect a great Sum, 'and by N——, that he had raiſed twenty Thou'ſand Pounds, induced O—— to ſupply M——, 'and to make other neceſſary Proviſions. If 'that Money be not returned, it will fall heavy 'upon O——, and he will be diſabled from an'ſwering the Expectation of Friends, therefore 'ought to be your firſt and greateſt Concern. 'All other Actions are Trifles in Compariſon of 'it; for the Hopes of Succeſs depend princi'pally on O——. I mentioned this in former 'Letters, and Friends are deſired to return 'more than five Thouſand Pounds, if poſſible. 'If they do, more Arms and Ammunition, and 'Officers can be had here; and the End of rai'ſing Money by Friends, is, to procure Arms, 'Ammunition and Officers.'

To whom theſe Letters were writ does not appear; but the Committee obſerve that they are writ in the ſame Cypher with three [1] Letters, which they have Grounds to believe were from the Biſhop of Rocheſter. They obſerve likewiſe that the ſame Cypher is ſometimes made uſe of by [2] George Kelly.

Mr. Stokoe the Bookſeller being examined about Wilmore, under whoſe Cover theſe Letters to Dumville and Dodſworth came encloſed, could give no other [3] Account of him, but that he was one who once writ a Letter in his Shop, and deſired him by a Letter, dated Epſom the firſt of March, 1722, to take in ſuch French Letters as ſhould come directed to him; and by another Letter, dated Harwich the 14th of May, deſired him to take in no more; that he Stokoe, did receive two Letters from abroad ſo directed, which were fetched away, and paid for by Perſons to him unknown.

That the late Duke of Ormond was expected to head an Inſurrection in England, is farther confirmed by the following Particulars.

Neynoe upon his Examination before a Committee of Lords of the Council, [4] declared, 'That the firſt Deſign in the Spring was to have 'been executed in London, by ſeizing the Tower, 'and that the late Duke of Ormond was then to 'have landed in the River; but upon Diſcovery 'of the Plot, and the King's not going beyond 'Sea, it was put off for ſome Time; that the 'Biſhop of Rocheſter, Lord Orrery, Lord North, 'and Sir Harry Goring, were the principal Lead'ers and Directors of the whole Deſign; and 'that Watſon (whom he took to be the late Earl 'Mariſhal) had told him, Lord North and Grey 'was thought of for the Command.'

On the 29th of April, O. S. [5] Intelligence came from France, 'That the Week before the late 'Duke of Ormond had made Application to the 'Regent by a Perſon of great Diſtinction, for 'Leave to paſs through France, under a Pretence 'of going into Italy, but that the Regent had 'abſolutely refuſed him, and at the ſame Time 'had diſpatch'd the neceſſary Orders to the Fron'tiers of Spain, to hinder him from paſſing either 'openly or in Diſguiſe.'

On the 2d of May, O. S. Sir Luke Schaub ſent [6] Advice, 'That one Leſley had been looking 'out for Lodgings at Paris for the late Duke of [7] Ormond; and [7] on the 9th, that Alderman 'Barber carried with him Bills of Exchange for 'fifty Thouſand Pounds Sterling for the Pre'tender; and that the ſame Sum was ſent to 'Ormond by another Hand, to enable him to 'make the neceſſary Preparations in Spain and 'Italy.' The Committee obſerve, that this agrees, as to the Diviſion of the Money, with a Paſſage in another [8] Letter from Dillon's Secretary to George Kelly, dated the ſecond of May (N. S.) which will be farther explained in its proper Place.

On the 23d of May, O. S. Sir Luke Schaub ſent [9] Advice, 'That the late Duke of Ormond was to 'ſet out from Madrid about the 20th of that 'Month, with his Family, without its being 'known whither he was going; that it was be'liev'd he would give out that he was going to 'ſettle at a certain Diſtance from Madrid, from 'whence he might ſteal away afterwards unob'ſerved.'

On the 28th of May, O. S. Mr. Stanhope [10] writes Word from Madrid, 'That having had Intelli'gence to be rely'd on, that the late Duke of 'Ormond intended ſpeedily to paſs into England, 'with a great Number of Iriſh Officers at that 'time in the Service of his Catholick Majeſty, in 'order to put himſelf at the Head of the Rebels 'there, and for that purpoſe was to ſet out from 'Madrid the next Day, under Pretence of going 'for the reſt of the Summer to Ventoſilla, a 'Houſe of the Duke of Medina Celi, half-way 'between Madrid and Bilboa, but in reality to 'be thereby readier to paſs to that Port, and 'with leſs Suſpicion to embark from thence for 'England, whenever Matters ſhould be ripe for 'his ſo doing; he made Application to his Ca'tholick Majeſty by the Marquiſs de Grimaldo, 'for Orders to be ſent to all the Ports of Spain, 'to prevent the ſaid late Duke's embarking with 'the Officers above-mentioned, and received a 'Letter from the Marquiſs de Grimaldo, (a [11] 'Copy of which is annexed to this Report) ac'quainting him, that the King of Spain had di'rected ſuch Orders to be iſſued, and was ready 'on all Occaſions, more particularly on this, 'which regarded the Quiet and Tranquillity of 'his Britannick Majeſty's Kingdoms, to contri'bute all in his Power towards his Majeſty's Sa'tisfaction.'

Andrew Pancier, formerly Captain Lieutenant of Lord Cobham's Dragoons, has [1] depoſed upon Oath, 'That being grown intimately acquainted 'with Skeene (now in Cuſtody) a Perſon related 'to Marr, and engaged in the Rebellions of Preſ- 'ton and Glenſheild, Skeene began to acquaint him, 'about June laſt, that there was a Deſign carry- 'ing on in England for placing the Pretender on 'the Throne, of which he at different times told 'him the following Particulars: That ſix or eight 'Battalions of Iriſh Foot, double Officer'd, were 'to have come over from Spain, which were 'quarter'd upon the Coaſt of Galicia for that pur- 'poſe; that the nine Spaniſh Men of War which 'have joined the Dutch, and four more to have 'been fitted out at Barcelona, and three at Ali- 'cant, (as he beſt remembered) being in all ſix- 'teen Spaniſh Men of War, were to have been 'imployed in this Service. That theſe Troops 'were to have landed either in Cornwal, or near 'Briſtol: That there were Forty thouſand Stand 'of Arms in Great Britain, part in Scotland, other 'part in London, other part in Briſtol, and other 'part in Cornwal. That there were Seven or 'eight hundred Men, with Officers among them, 'in London, ſubſiſted, and in readineſs for ſuch an 'Occaſion. That a Sum of Two hundred thou- 'ſand Pounds had been raiſed by Contribution 'for carrying on this Deſign, and put into the 'Management of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, who 'with the Lord North and Grey were the leading 'Men among them; and that Lord Strafford 'and Lord Kinoule knew the Thing. That the 'Managers of this Affair in Spain, were the late 'Duke of Ormond and the late Earl Mariſhal; 'and thoſe in France the late Lord Marr, and 'Lieutenant General Dillon. That the Court of 'Spain was in their Intereſt, but as to the Re- 'gent and Cardinal Du Bois, they could not tell 'what to make of them: That this Deſign was 'to have been executed ſome time ago, but was 'then diſappointed by the Regent: That the late 'Duke of Ormond, and the late Earl Mariſhal, 'were to have come with the Troops before men- 'tioned from Spain, and the Pretender about the 'ſame time was to have left Rome privately, and 'to have lain conceal'd ſomewhere near, from 'whence he would have come over when there 'had been a fair Proſpect of Succeſs. That as to 'any Oppoſition they could expect, we had but 'Fourteen thouſand Men in all, of which Three 'thouſand were neceſſary to guard London, Three 'thouſand more for Scotland, and Two thouſand 'for the Gariſons; ſo that the Remainder would ne- 'ver dare to attack thoſe who came from Spain: 'and in the Confuſion, their (meaning the Preten- 'der's) Friends would have been able to have got 'together, and made a Head. That in the Conduct 'of this Affair there paſſed little in writing, and on- 'ly the four Lords before mentioned, viz. the Biſhop 'of Rocheſter and Lord North and Grey principally, 'and Lord Strafford and Lord Kinoule, were con- 'cerned in the Management of it here. That the 'Buſineſs was to have been done before the Dutch 'Troops could come to our Aſſiſtance.'

The Committee have laid theſe ſeveral Particulars together, though of different Dates, that the Houſe may ſee at one view, the Reaſon there is to believe, that the late Duke of Ormond was to have landed in England with Officers and Arms, about the Time that it was generally ſuppoſed his Majeſty intended to go to Hannover. The reaſon of Ormond's not coming, is ſufficiently explained by the Orders iſſued at Madrid and in France, by the King's not going abroad, and by the Diſcoveries, and Diſpoſition of the Forces made in England. And notice is taken, in [2] Letters to one of his Majeſty's Secretaries of State from Rome, that a Perſon of great Diſtinction at that Place, had declared it as his Opinion, that the grand Project formed in the Conclave for placing the Pretender on the Throne of Britain, was going to be put in execution; but that the ſame Perſon afterwards aſſigned four Reaſons for its having miſcarried; which were, the Want of Money, the ſuſpected Faith of the Regent, the Want of Skill in thoſe who were to conduct it, and the Puſillanimity of the Pretender, who to avoid hazarding his own Perſon, propoſed to ſend his Child: which laſt Particular is again mentioned in another [3] Letter from Rome.

The Committee now return to ſhew what other Evidences they have before them, of a Deſign laid for beginning an Inſurrection in London, at the Time when it was ſuppoſed the King intended to go to Hannover.

About the latter end of April, his Majeſty received [4] Intelligence from abroad, upon which he can intirely depend, 'That a Deſign was laid for 'bringing in the Pretender, which was thought 'to be ſo well concerted, and conducted by Per- 'ſons of ſuch Experience, that if the Secret was 'but kept, as was propos'd, the Succeſs was look- 'ed upon as infallible; and that it was to be put 'in Execution about the end of April, or begin- 'ning of May.' The original Letter containing this Intelligence, has been communicated to your Committee, and an [5] Extract of it is annexed to this Report.

On the 29th of April, the ſame [6] Intelligence was repeated, with theſe farther Particulars, 'That 'the Conſpirators did no longer think it neceſſary 'to inſiſt on foreign Aſſiſtance, flattering them- 'ſelves that great part of the King's own Forces 'would declare in their favour. That they now 'contented themſelves with deſiring the Regent 'ſhould obſerve a Neutrality between his Majeſty 'and the Pretender; and that Lord Lanſdowne 'was to preſent, or cauſe to be preſented, a Me- 'morial to the Regent to this effect, that Day or 'the next. That the Deſign was probably to be 'executed in London; that the beginning of May 'was the Time fixed on; and that the Pretender 'was ſpeedily to ſet out for England.

Your Committee do not find that the abovementioned Memorial was preſented to the Regent; but in [7] Letters from Plunket to Dillon they find the ſame repeated in theſe Words; 'If the Re- 'gent ſtands neuter, we will ſoon bring the Law- 'Suit to bear:' Which Layer [8] explained to be the Pretender's Cauſe.

On the 24th of April O. S. Mr. Davenant, His Majeſty's Miniſter in Italy, ſent an Expreſs from Rome, with [9] Advice, 'that the Pretender's Ad- 'herents were making Preparations in Cadiz, and 'other Ports of Spain, for an Attempt on Eng- 'land; that the Pretender was ſpeedily to embark 'at Portolongone, and was retired from Rome for 'that Purpoſe:' And [1] it appears, that the ſame Advice was ſoon after confirmed to his Majeſty, by a foreign Miniſter reſiding in England, who received the Intelligence from a Perſon of great Diſtinction abroad, and communicated it to his Majeſty.

On the 9th of May, Mr. Craufurd, His Majeſty's Reſident at Paris, [2] writes word, 'that the 'Jacobites in France expected ſoon an Inſurrection 'in England, which was to be begun by the 'Heads of their Party here ſoon after His Ma'jeſty's ſetting out for Hannover, and was to be 'ſupported by Iriſh Officers and Soldiers, who 'lay ready at Cadiz, beſides ſuch as ſhould be 'able to paſs over into England from France by 'ſtealth:' and in his [3] Letter of the 26th of May O.S. he adds, 'that the Grounds of this Ex'pectation were, Aſſurances given from England, 'that the Conſpirators would immediately make 'themſelves Maſters of the Tower, and City of 'London.'

This Intelligence agrees with a [4] Paper delivered to the Secretaries of State in July laſt, by one of the Lords of his Majeſty's Council, who, as they have [5] certified, aſſured them that a Perſon, whom he had good reaſon to believe to be deeply concerned in the Conſpiracy, came to him in the Month of July, and brought him a Paper, which he affirmed he had copied by ſtealth out of the Scrutore of a noble Lord, whom he refuſed to name; and that the ſaid Perſon writ out a fair Copy of the Paper in his preſence, which contains Minutes of Reſolutions taken at a Conſultation, and is in the following Words.

'R. That the Arms be dug up immediately, 'and diſperſed in ſmall Parcels. Begin in South'wark, Whitechapel, Wapping, Holborn and Smith'field. March into City. Poſſeſs the Gates. 'Againſt the Horſe, Barricades in the narrow 'Streets, eſpecially at both Ends of Fleet-bridge, 'Shoe-lane, Fetter-lane and Chancery-lane. Poſſeſs 'St. Clement's Churchyard by a Party from Hol'born. A ſtrong Barricade in the narrow Part of 'that Street. Line the two firſt Stories. Bricks, 'Stones, &c. may be uſeful in the upper Rooms, 'and may be thrown by Women and others un'fit to bear Arms. Lighters with Ammunition 'under Coals, lie at Blackfryars, and Milford-lane. 'No Dependance or Aſſiſtance from Weſtminſter 'and thoſe Parts, except ſome few by Water, the 'Communication being cut off. Meſſage to the 'Lord Mayor by three Lords. Proclamation 'made to oblige all who ſhall not come in, to 'bring in their Muſkets, and Militia Arms. De'claration ready printed, to be diſperſed among 'the People. Twenty three Officers of the 'Guards to be depended on: a great many 'others well affected, eſpecially the common 'Centinels. Day reſolv'd on April the 30th. 'R. That forty determin'd Perſons be immedi'ately pitch'd upon, armed with Swords and 'Piſtols, to execute all Orders; and that for the 'Subſiſtence of the ſaid forty Gentlemen, Money 'be advanced out of the Fund, at the Rate of ſe'ven Shillings per Diem for Man and Horſe. 'Commander in Chief Lord N. Time ſeven in 'the Morning.'

Dis: C. W. M.

The Committee make no doubt but the Houſe will readily obſerve, that this Scheme, drawn up in April, and delivered as aforeſaid to one of the Lords of the Council in July laſt, has a near Affinity with [6] that of Layer, and appears to be the Groundwork of it, tho Layer [7] denies his having ever ſeen any ſuch Paper of Reſolutions, or having received any Inſtructions relating to his Scheme, except from Wilſon a Surgeon, Murphey a Phyſician, and White a Serjeant.

The Committee likewiſe obſerve from this and Layer's Scheme, as well as from a [8] Letter of Sample's (of which notice will be taken in its Place) that the involving the City of London in Blood and Confuſion, appears to have been univerſally underſtood and agreed on among all the Conſpirators, as the firſt Step to be taken, and the Foundation of their future Hopes.

By another [9] Paper delivered in July laſt by the ſame Perſon, it appears, that when the Stroke was ſtruck in London, there were to be Inſurrections in ſeveral Counties of England; and that the Numbers of Gentlemen and private Men, to be depended on both in London and the Country, were computed and ſet down: and the Committee obſerve, that the extending the Inſurrection to the Country, after London was ſeized, makes likewiſe a Part of [10] Layer's Scheme, and [11] Sample's Letter.

The Committee farther take notice that in theſe Schemes, as well as in [12] Pancier's Depoſition, mention is made of great quantities of Arms conceal'd for the Uſe of the Conſpirators; and Layer having confeſs'd at his [13] Examination before the Lords, that he ſuppoſed there were Arms provided, and that Green the Gunſmith being in company with Lord North, had mentioned Five thouſand Arms, and Seven thouſand Arms, and inſiſted, in contradiction to Lord North who bid him hold his Tongue, that there were Five thouſand Arms ready in the City; the Committee examined him particularly on this Head, but could draw nothing more from him, than [14] that Green had told Captain Bonyn at Lord North's, that he could help him to Five or Seven thouſand Arms at an Hour's warning. And tho your Committee is fully ſatisfied that no Care has been wanting elſewhere to diſcover theſe Arms, and to defeat the Conſpiracy in ſo eſſential a Circumſtance; yet they cannot but think it a melancholy Conſideration, that through the determined Obſtinacy of the Conſpirators, theſe Endeavours have hitherto proved unſucceſsful.

The Committee obſerve farther, that in the [15] Paper of Reſolutions, Mention is made of a Fund of Money provided, and of a great Number of determined Perſons ſubſiſted in London for the Purpoſes of the Conſpiracy, for the Execution of which a Day was likewiſe fixed on and appointed, and the Commander in chief known. All which ſeveral Particulars correſpond exactly with the [16] Intelligence received at the ſame Time from abroad, with [17] Pancier's Depoſition, with what Layer [18] own'd Lord Orrery had told him, that he believed Lord North and Grey had a Commiſſion for commanding in chief; and with what Neynoe [19] was told by Watſon, that Lord North and Grey was thought of for the Command; as likewiſe with what [20] was told Matthew Plunket by Layer and John Plunket, that Lord North and Grey and others were ready to head an Inſurrection.

Your Committee having thus laid before you the general Evidence, which convinces them that a Deſign was formed by Perſons of Diſtinction, to invade theſe Kingdoms with a foreign Force; that being diſappointed in this Expectation, they ſtill perſiſted to make an Attempt, with ſuch Officers and Soldiers as could be procured privately from abroad; that the late Duke of Ormond was to have landed for this Purpoſe, and to have been followed by the Pretender; that Arms and Money were provided, and Men ſubſiſted for this Service; that the Inſurrection was to have been begun in London, and thence to have been extended over the whole Kingdom: They will now proceed more particularly to explain the ſeveral Parts, which the Leaders and inferior Agents appear to have taken in conducting this Deſign, as far as the ſame can be collected from the intercepted Correſpondence, and other Papers referred to them, and from the Examinations of the Perſons concerned; by which it will farther appear to the Houſe, that the Deſign was conſtantly proſecuted in all Parts, without any other Relaxation or Intermiſſion, than what the Neceſſity of their Affairs, and the Diſcoveries made, obliged them to, in order to lay their Meaſures deeper, and to make the Succeſs of them more certain: and that the Enterprize, which was firſt calculated for the Spring, was to have been afterwards put in Execution at the breaking up of the Camp, with the Help of Officers and Soldiers from abroad, if they could be obtained; if not, on the Strength of ſuch as they hoped to be able to corrupt and ſeduce, among his Majeſty's own Forces.

The Leaders, in order (as 'tis natural to believe) to ſave themſelves from the Danger of legal Conviction, choſe to manage their Correſpondences by the Intervention of Perſons of a meaner Rank and Figure, and of deſperate Fortunes; who, they hoped, might eſcape the Obſervation of the Government, being no otherwiſe conſiderable, than as the Truſt repoſed in them made them ſo.

The Committee think proper to take notice, that of theſe inferior Agents, Layer appears to have been principally intruſted by Lord North and Grey and Lord Orrery; and that Plunket, who travelled with Layer to Rome, and whoſe treaſonable Practices and Correſpondences are cloſely connected with thoſe of Layer, writes of himſelf as tranſacting part of his Treaſons with Lord Orrery's Clerk, and ſends frequent Accounts to the Pretender's Agents abroad, of Matters relating to the ſaid Lord.

George Kelly, a Nonjuring Clergyman at preſent (tho in the late Queen's Time, the Committee is informed, he took the Oaths to the Government, and likewiſe the Abjuration) appears to have been the Perſon principally entruſted by the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and to have been imployed in writing for him, and conveying Letters to him, until the time that he, Kelly, was firſt taken into Cuſtody; after which it appears to the Committee, that Thomas Carte, another Nonjuring Clergyman, was entruſted and imployed by the Biſhop in the ſame manner. And the Committee obſerve, that George Kelly's Correſpondence has a cloſe Connexion with that of Dennis Kelly; and likewiſe that he appears to have been privy to Plunket's and Neynoe's Tranſactions.

The Perſon imployed by the Duke of Norfolk, in conveying Letters between him and George Jernegan, an Agent of the Pretender's in Flanders, they find to be Mrs. Spelman, alias Tallop, who has likewiſe owned her conveying Letters in the ſame manner between Mr. Harvey of Comb, and one Moor of Brownlooe-ſtreet, and the ſaid Jernegan. The Committee obſerve, that John Sample acted under the Direction of Mr. Sempill (commonly called Lord Sempill) and his Son at Paris, and that he wrote Letters to the late Duke of Ormond and the Pretender; but whom he tranſacted Matters with in England, your Committee do not find, by his Examination, he would declare.

The Committee farther obſerve, that this treaſonable Correſpondence extended itſelf into Scotland; that William Ereskine remitted Money to France for the Service of the Pretender's Friends, and had a Letter under the late Lord Marr's Hand found upon him, when he was taken into Cuſtody. That Mr. Cockran, now in Cuſtody, and others of that Country yet unknown, were concerned in the ſame treaſonable Correſpondence, carried on under the ſame fictitious Names and Expreſſions, that are made uſe of by ſeveral of the Correſpondents in England; and that the ſame Cant was likewiſe made uſe of, for the ſame Purpoſes, by Perſons in Ireland. That all theſe ſeveral Negotiations and Correſpondences concurred in one common Deſign, of ſtirring up an Inſurrection in theſe Kingdoms, and placing the Pretender on the Throne.

The Committee have thought it proper to lay before the Houſe ſuch Particulars as occur to them relating to each of theſe Negotiations, and to begin with thoſe of Layer and Plunket, as being cloſely connected with one another, and ſet on foot earlier than it yet appears the others were; and as being likewiſe what the Houſe thought fit firſt to refer to the Examination of the Committee: and by comparing the Subſtance of the Papers, and Examinations of theſe two Perſons together, the Houſe will be enabled, at one view, to form a true Judgment of the Sincerity of their Confeſſions.

Before the Committee examin'd Mr. Layer, they acquainted him that the ſeveral Queſtions they intended to propound to him were reduced into Writing, and that to avoid all Miſtakes, his Anſwers ſhould be ſo likewiſe, and before they were reported to the Houſe he ſhould have the Peruſal of them. Accordingly he did review his firſt Confeſſion to the Committee, and made ſeveral Additions and Alterations, which will be taken notice of in their proper Places.

Mr. Layer has own'd partly to a Committee of Lords of the Council before his Trial, and partly to your Committee (as will appear by reference had to his [r] ſeveral Examinations, annex'd to this Report) 'That being bred up under an Uncle 'who was a Nonjuror in Norfolk, he early im-'bib'd thoſe Principles; that having a private Af-'fair to tranſact at Venice, this and a natural In-'clination and Curioſity, which he had always had 'to ſee the Pretender, carried him on to Rome; 'that he ſet out from England on the firſt of April '1721, in company with John Plunket, now in

'Cuſtody, who went ſometimes by the Name of 'Rogers, whoſe Expenſes he bore on account of 'his being uſeful to him, as ſpeaking ſeveral Lan-'guages. That he believes from the time of his 'firſt acquainting Plunket with his intended Journey '(which was ſome Months before their ſetting out) 'the ſaid Plunket, in order to magnify his Servi-'ces to the Pretender and his Adherents, might 'write to General Dillon, and others of them, that 'he was going to Rome with a Friend, and that 'his and his Friend's Journey would be of great 'conſequence to the Pretender's Affairs.' But this Particular he did not own till the Review of his Examination, when he found the Committee were appriſed that notice had been ſent to Rome of his Journey; for he inſiſted at firſt that his Journey to Rome was purely accidental, and not concerted with the Pretender or any of his Agents.

He farther owned, 'That in their Way to Italy, 'they paſſed through Antwerp, and that Plunket 'there received a Letter from General Dillon, 'which he ſhewed to Layer, directing them whom 'to apply to on their Arrival at Rome, to intro-'duce them to the Pretender.' And on his reviewing his Examination, when he found your Committee were in poſſeſſion of that Letter, he owned, 'That Francis Kennedy was the Perſon 'they were directed by Dillon to apply to.' A Letter [1] to that effect being found among Plunket's Papers, ſigned Dixwell, and the ſame being ſhewn by your Committee to Layer, he declared, 'That 'to the beſt of his Memory and Belief, it was the 'very Letter which was ſhewn to him by Plunket 'at Antwerp, and affirmed by Plunket to be from 'General Dillon: that he, Layer, believes Dillon 'goes by the Names both of Dixwell and Digby; 'and that by the Name of Joſeph, in the ſaid Let-'ter, is to be underſtood the Pretender.

'That he and Plunket arrived at Rome the lat-'ter end of May 1721; and that after he had 'been a Day at Rome, he ſent to Francis Kennedy, 'Secretary to the Pretender, to let him know he 'ſhould be glad to ſee him, and to renew acquain-'tance with him.'

Being aſked when and where he firſt became acquainted with Francis Kennedy, he ſaid, 'That 'Kennedy has a Brother, Secretary to the late 'Duke of Ormond, with which Brother he had 'ſome acquaintance; and he thinks he has former-'ly been in Francis Kennedy's Company at Lon-'don along with the other Brother; but as to 'this Particular he cannot be poſitive.' This is what he ſaid relating to Kennedy at his firſt Examination; and your Committee obſerved by his Behaviour, that he was under Difficulties how to account for his applying to Kennedy, not having owned at that time he had any Directions ſo to do, and being willing to have your Committee believe, that his Journey was not known of at Rome: but after Plunket's Examination, being uncertain what Plunket might have confeſs'd, he thought it proper to be more open upon this Head, though contradicting in ſome meaſure his own former Confeſſion. He farther ſaid, 'That upon his ſend-'ing to Francis Kennedy, as above, the ſaid Ken-'nedy came to his Lodgings, which at the ſame time 'he ſaid he was ſurprized at, it being in the face 'of all the Engliſh Gentlemen; but that Kennedy 'told him, he needed not be uneaſy at his coming 'to his Lodgings openly, ſince he frequented the 'Company of all the Engliſh Gentlemen that came 'to Rome, without diſtinction. That at the firſt 'Viſit he deſired Kennedy to introduce him to the 'Pretender, which he promiſed to do. That 'Kennedy came to him again the next Night, and 'promiſed to introduce him to the Pretender pri-'vately in an Evening, ſo that no body ſhould 'be able to prove his having been there.'

And when he reviewed his Examination, being aſked by your Committee, whether he knew of any Letter to Plunket, on their firſt coming to Rome? and being aſked it in ſuch a manner as let him underſtand that they knew from whom it came, and by whom it was writ; then, and not till then, he owned, 'That he believed Kennedy 'delivered to Plunket a Letter under the Preten-'der's own Hand, when Kennedy and Plunket were 'alone together; for the next Morning, as he, 'Layer, was in Bed, in a Room next adjoining to 'that where Plunket lodged, Plunket came to his 'Bedſide, and told him with ſeeming ſatisfaction, 'that he had got a Letter under the King's '(meaning the Pretender's) own Hand; but that 'Kennedy never ſaid one word of this Letter to 'him, Layer. That Plunket ſhewed him, Layer, 'the ſaid Letter, the whole of which he believes 'to have been writ in the ſame Hand in which 'the blank Receipts taken amongſt his Papers at 'Mrs. Maſon's are ſigned, which he believes to 'be the Pretender's own Hand. That the Sub-'ſtance of the Letter was, that the Bearer, Fran-'cis Kennedy, would introduce Plunket to the Pre-'tender. He ſaid he could not be poſitive, whe-'ther it was ſaid in that Letter, that Kennedy 'would introduce Plunket only, or whether he 'himſelf was mentioned likewiſe to be introduced 'by Kennedy. That Plunket told him he ſaw the 'Pretender the Night before Layer was introdu-'ced to him.'

This Original Letter has ſince been delivered to your Committee, with the [2] Depoſitions relating to it; by which it appears, that Plunket delivered it with other Papers to one Mary Fagban about Michaelmas laſt, which was near the Time of Layer's being taken up; it is dated Thurſday Morn. ſigned James R. and directed to Mr. Plunket, and is in the following Words:

'This is only to direct you not to mention any 'thing of Buſineſs to any body till I have ſeen 'you. I have not much leiſure to-night, expect-'ing Viſits; but however I ſhall be glad to ſee 'you alone, and agree with you the moſt private 'Way and Manner for your Companion and me 'to meet. The Bearer Fr. Kennedy will bring 'you very privately to my Houſe to-night about 'eight a-Clock.

James R.

For Mr. Plunket.

Your Committee obſerve from this Letter, as well as from other Papers before them, what a degree of Truſt and Confidence Plunket was admitted to, (notwithſtanding he would endeavour by his preſent Appearance to make it ſeem incredible) and perceive likewiſe by this Letter, that his and Layer's Journey to Rome had been repreſented to the Pretender as an Affair of ſome Importance.

Layer

Layer farther said, 'That Kennedy, in his second 'Visit, appointed him to meet him and Colonel 'Haye in the Square before the Pretender's House 'at Ten the next Night; that he met them there, 'and that they conducted him up a Pair of Back-'Stairs to the Pretender.'

Before the Committee proceed to give an Account of the Conversation which Mr. Layer says he had with the Pretender, they think it proper to observe, that among Plunket's Papers were found two foul Draughts of Letters, which are sworn to be Plunket's Hand-writing, which give some light to the Occasion of his and Layer's Journey to Rome. The first is without Date or Direction, but appears evidently by the Matter to have been writ to the same Person, and about the same Time as the second, which is dated the 22d of March, 1721. (about ten Days before his and Layer's setting out) and directed To Mr. Jackson, which Name is found in a [1] Cypher taken among Plunket's Papers, and sworn likewise to be his Hand-writing, to denote the Pretender.

In the [2] first of these foul Draughts are these Words: 'There is one that sets out from Norfolk 'in a few Days to let you know they' (that is the Tanners, which he [3] explained to Layer to mean the Tories) 'will stand by you on occasion: he 'only stays for me, and offers to bear my Expen-'ses, so that I shall wait on you, and have the 'Satisfaction to tell you by word of Mouth what 'will be acceptable. He carries The List with 'him, no doubt on't you may have many such 'now.'

In the [4] Letter to Jackson of the 22d of March are these Words: 'The Gentleman I mentioned 'to you formerly, is come out of the Country, 'with Instructions to wait on you, and tender 'you their Service. He offers to bear my Ex-'penses.'

From these Passages compared with the [5] Letter received by Plunket from Dillon at Antwerp, in which Dillon says, 'I have sent Joseph Advice of 'your Journey, in which I wish you and your 'Companion, tho unknown, all Happiness:' and then directs him to apply to Kennedy at Joseph's House for Introduction; and compared likewise with the Pretender's [6] Letter to Plunket, in which he directs him not to mention any thing of Business to any body, till he had seen him alone, in order to agree with him the most private Way and Manner for meeting his Companion. It appears to your Committee to be most evident, that Layer did not undertake so long and expensive a Journey on uncertain Prospects of private Business, or out of mere Curiosity, but that his Journey was concerted with the Pretender's Friends at home, and notified to the Pretender and his Agents abroad; and that he carried over with him Tenders of Service to the Pretender from Persons in England, as likewise a List of Names, which was of such Importance, and so well understood and expected at Rome, as to be mentioned by Plunket in one of his Letters to the Pretender, without any other Description than barely that of The List.

The Committee thought this Observation the more necessary to be premised, because Layer did of himself own to them his giving to the Pretender a List of Names, and the Pretender's asking him at a second Interview, what he had to say in relation to his List; but yet endeavoured to explain that Affair in such a manner, as your Committee apprehend to be no ways consistent with Plunket's foul Draughts abovementioned; nor with the Expectations that seem to have been raised in the Pretender and his Agents, from Layer's and Plunket's Journey.

Layer told your Committee, 'That on his be-'ing introduced to the Pretender by Kennedy and 'Haye, as abovementioned, the Pretender ask'd 'him the Occasion of his coming, and whether he 'had any Credentials from People in England? 'that he answered, Nothing but Curiosity and a 'Desire of paying my Duty to your Majesty has 'brought me hither. That the Pretender asked 'him, what Lords he was acquainted with? To 'which he answered, None but such as he was 'concerned with in the way of his Profession. 'That the Pretender again expressed himself sur-'prised at his having no Credentials nor Recom-'mendations from any Person in England; and 'said, This Journey must have been very expen-'sive to you, I believe it cannot cost you less 'than Five hundred Pounds. To which he an-'swered, That a private Affair, which brought 'him to Venice, would have defrayed the Expense, 'if it had succeeded; but that being disappointed 'in that, his Inclination drew him on to Rome, to 'pay his Duty to the Pretender, which he had 'long had in his Thought, so took this opportu-'nity of doing it. That one Plunket, who was 'now in Rome with him, had often told him that 'he need not fear being introduced, or to that ef-'fect. That the Pretender said, He believed that 'Plunket was a very honest Man, and as proper a 'Person as Layer could have had for a Compa-'nion.'

The Committee observe, that what is here said concerning the Pretender's good Opinion of Plunket, and Plunket's having given Assurances to Layer of his being introduced, was not mentioned by Layer, till after Plunket had been examined.

Layer farther said, that the Pretender again repeated his Surprise at his having no Recommendation from any Person in England; but said, I am informed by Francis Kennedy, who knows you, that you have a good Character, and for that Reason you are welcome without any Credentials. Yet your Committee observe, that Dr. Blackerby Fairfax (an intimate Acquaintance of Layer's) has [7] deposed upon Oath, 'That Layer, since his re-'turn from Rome, told him, that while he was in 'private Audience with the Pretender, a Scotch 'Colonel broke in upon them, upon which the 'Pretender took him into another Room; and 'that he, Layer, did there deliver his Credentials 'to the Pretender.'

Layer told the Committee, 'That the Preten-'der, after the Discourse abovementioned, asked 'him what County he was of, and what Gentle-'men he knew: That he answer'd he was of Nor-'folk, and knew all the Tory Gentlemen of that 'Country. That the Pretender asked him if he 'could recollect their Names, and put them 'down in Writing: To which he answer'd, He 'could easily do that, having brought with him 'Memorandums of their Names. That accord-'ingly he drew up a fair List of the Tory Gen-'tlemen of Norfolk, and gave the said List to the 'Pretender at a second Interview, thinking it 'would be agreeable to him. That the Pretender

'then asked him, whether he would ſee the 'Queen (meaning his Spouſe) and promiſed ſhe 'ſhould admit him to kiſs her Hand.

'That about three Weeks or a Month after, 'Francis Kennedy and Colonel Haye appointed 'him to meet them at the ſame Place and Time 'as before, and introduced him to the Pretender 'and his Spouſe. That the Pretender then called 'him to him, and asked him, Whether he had 'any Thing to ſay in relation to his Liſt? that he 'anſwered, He forgot ſomething which he had to 'communicate to his Majeſty; that the Preten-'der ſaid, His Wife would go out of the Room 'preſently, and ſoon after ſpoke to her in Italian, 'to withdraw, as he believes. That the Preten-'der then asked him, What he had to ſay? to 'which he replied, I have nothing ſo material to 'offer as ought to have procured me this great 'Honour and Indulgence; but if there be any 'Service on Earth I can do, I am moſt ready; 'That the Pretender ſaid, What can you do? have 'you any Acquaintance? To which he replied, 'that all the Perſons mentioned in his Liſt were 'entirely devoted to the Pretender's Intereſt, and 'all the Gentlemen in England the ſame, except 'thoſe in Places of Profit and Truſt, and that all 'Parties were united in his Intereſt. That the 'Pretender then asked him, what the Gentlemen 'were whoſe Names were on his Liſt? to which 'he anſwer'd, they were all Tories, and that he 'had not put down any of the Roman Catholicks 'of Norfolk, of whom there were ſeveral, Men 'of Eſtates. That the Pretender ſaid, he belie-'ved the People of England were generally well 'inclined to his Cauſe, and pretty well convinced 'of their Error; and then ſpoke of the Diſcon-'tents occaſion'd by the South-Sea Scheme.'

The Committee obſerve, that in the Cypher, which Layer received from Sir William Ellis, the Names of ſeveral Norfolk Gentlemen are inſerted, who, they think it probable, made a Part of the Liſt delivered by Layer to the Pretender; but at the ſame time they think it a Juſtice due to thoſe Gentlemen, to obſerve, that Layer has owned to the Committee, that, in order to magnify the Number of the Pretender's Friends, he did in ſeveral of the Liſts found among his Papers, inſert the Names of Perſons, as well affected to the Pretender's Service, without having the leaſt Authority from them for ſo doing: and his falſe Aſſertion to the Pretender, that all the Gentlemen in England, except thoſe in Places of Profit and Truſt, were entirely devoted to his Intereſt, ſhews, that he made no Diſtinction between the Innocent and the Guilty.

He next acquainted the Committee, 'That 'after the Diſcourſe before-mentioned with the 'Pretender in relation to the Liſt, the Pretender 'commended his Zeal, and told him, he might 'depend on any Service he could do him. That 'he, Layer, then deſired ſome Token, by which 'he might obtain Credit among the Pretender's 'Friends of the Nobility in England, and ob-'tained that of the Pretender and his Spouſe's 'anſwering for his Child;' which the Committee avoid repeating, the Account he gave them, a-greeing with that printed in his Trial. He ſaid, 'That upon his deſiring a Letter to the Dutcheſs 'of Ormond, for her repreſenting the Pretender's 'Spouſe, Colonel Haye told him, no Letter 'could be ſent by him, but that care would be 'taken the Dutcheſs ſhould ſtand. That he like-wiſe gave him a Meſſage to the Dutcheſs, to 'this effect, that the Duke of Ormond was well, 'and gone to Madrid, by which; he told him, ſhe 'would underſtand the Buſineſs he came about.

'That he returned to England about the End 'of Auguſt or Beginning of September 1721, and 'waited on the Dutcheſs with his Requeſt, add-'ing, that he hoped ſhe was not altogether a 'Stranger to that Affair; to which ſhe returned 'him no particular Anſwer, but promiſed to ſtand 'Godmother, as he deſir'd.

'That he then made Application to Lord Or-'rery to ſtand with her, by Thompſon, whom he 'took to be her Chaplain, and by Swortfegger, 'Lord Orrery's Secretary, who underſtood that 'Lord Orrery was deſired to repreſent the Pre-'tender. That the ſaid Lord ſent to the Dutcheſs 'to know whether ſhe ſtood, who anſwered that 'ſhe did; yet Lord Orrery refuſed; but upon 'farther Acquaintance, and hearing that Lord 'North and Grey had conſented to ſtand, he ſent 'for Layer, and made Excuſes to him for this 'Refuſal. That he made uſe of this Credential 'to Lord Orrery, to induce him to converſe free-'ly with him in relation to the Pretender's Af-'fairs, having heard that the ſaid Lord was in the 'Pretender's Intereſt.

'That upon his being refuſed by Lord Orrery, 'he made his Application to Lord North and 'Grey, as mention'd in his Trial, who ſtood; 'knowing, as he believes, that he ſtood for the 'Pretender. That this Tranſaction was the Begin-'ning of his Intimacy with Lord North and Grey.

'That the firſt Converſation he had with Lord 'North, relating to the Pretender's Affairs, was 'ſoon after the Chriſtening; that he then asked 'Lord North, whether nothing could be under-'taken in the Pretender's Favour, his Lordſhip 'being a military Man. That his Lordſhip re-'plied, he believed the Pretender had Friends 'enow, if they did but underſtand one another; 'that the Army in general, and moſt of the 'Half-pay Officers were well inclined to the Pre-'tender.

'That in July laſt he, Layer, going down to 'Norfolk on the Circuit, called on Lord North at 'Epping, and again at his Return; that he then 'asked the ſaid Lord again, whether nothing 'could be done in favour of the Pretender? 'That Lord North ſaid, How can any thing be 'done, while ſo great a Body of Forces is en-'camped under the very Walls of London, be-'ſides the Encampments in other Parts of the 'Kingdom? That Layer told him, he found 'moſt of the Gentlemen in Norfolk that were 'Tories before, Jacobites now; that Lord North 'and Grey ſaid, it was the ſame in other Coun-'ties, but that nothing could be done till the 'Camp ſhould break up. That upon Layer's 'preſſing him to know whether any Scheme was 'formed, Lord North ſaid, What does your 'Friend Lord Orrery think of things? that he 'anſwered, Lord Orrery was of Opinion, no-'thing could be done without a Foreign Force; 'that Lord North and Grey reply'd, I cannot be 'of his Opinion, I believe the People of Eng-'land may do it of themſelves.

'That Layer viſiting him during the Vacation, 'and ſtaying two or three Days at his Houſe, 'continued to preſs him about forming a Scheme; 'that Lord North reply'd, We Soldiers do not 'trouble ourſelves much about Schemes, Be you

'quiet

'quiet something will be done.' And at his [1] Examination before the Lords, he owned, 'Lord 'North and Grey said, If there be a Rising, you 'shall not want Men, or Money, or Arms.'

Layer farther gave your Committee an Account of his becoming acquainted with Lynch, and of his carrying him to Lord North and Grey, upon Lynch's telling him that he had something to propose to the Lord, that might be of great Service to the Pretender's Cause. But in giving an Account of what passed between Lynch and him at the Green-man, your Committee observed, that Layer took great Pains to shew, that he did not communicate any Papers to Lynch till after Dinner, and that he then only shewed him Memorandums, transcribed out of the Prince of Orange's Declaration, tho Lynch has [2] deposed upon Oath, that mention was made in that Paper of Lord Cadogan's being seized, and remaining in the Custody of the Conspirators.

He owned to your Committee his having carried Lynch to Lord Cadogan's, but said, 'He 'went thither only in relation to the Purchase of 'Estate; that while they were waiting there in 'a Room next the Garden, Lynch viewed the 'Garden and House, and said, I can easily seize 'you this General: but he deny'd their having 'had any previous Discourse to this Purpose, and 'said the Proposal arose from Lynch, and that 'he, Layer, was mad enough to make it part of 'his Scheme.'

He said, 'That when Lynch and he came to 'Lord North and Grey's, his Lordship asked him 'who Lynch was; that he said, he was an honest 'Gentleman, recommended by a particular 'Friend. That his Lordship said, I wonder you 'would bring him, you know I am not easy nor 'free before Strangers. That however, Lord 'North and Grey entertained Lynch civilly, and 'after Supper inquired of him, whether he was 'in the Army, to which Lynch answered, that 'he was bred up to Merchandize, but had been 'with the Pretender in Scotland, and had the 'Command of a Ship under the King of Spain 'in the Descent on Scotland, and enlarged much 'on his Loyalty and Zeal for the Pretender; but 'that Lord North waved the Discourse.

'That not long after, Lynch came down again 'to Lord North and Grey's to Epping, while 'Layer was there a shooting, and was civilly re-'ceiv'd by his Lordship; and that after he was 'gone, Layer making Apologies for Lynch's in-'truding, Lord North and Grey said, Lynch was 'a good honest Fellow, and had entertain'd them 'with several merry Stories.'

The Committee observed, That Layer in relating what passed while Lynch was at Lord North's, took so much pains to shew that Lord North and Grey could have no private Discourse with Lynch, that he left no room for the said Lord North's having had any private Discourse with him, Layer; which yet is inconsistent with his [3] Examination taken before the Lords, as well as with his Confession to your Committee; in another Part of which he owns, that while Lynch was at Lord North's, he, Layer, shewed Lord North some part of his Scheme or Heads relating to a Declaration, as he was walking with him in the Garden, and that they had some Discourse upon it.

They observe likewise, That what he owned to the Committee in relation to his introducing Lynch to Lord North and Grey, falls very short of what he confessed to the Lords of the Council on the same Subject, previously to his Trial. For he [4] then said, 'That Lynch having told him he 'would seize Lord Cadogan, he carried Lynch to 'Lord North and Grey's, and recommended him 'as a proper Person for such an Attempt. That 'he had before-hand proposed to Lord North 'and Grey the carrying Lynch to him, that his 'Lordship made a Difficulty of seeing him; but 'that he, Layer, insisted on Lynch's being an 'honest Man, fit to be employ'd in an Insurrec-'tion for the Pretender, saying Lynch would do 'any thing his Lordship would have him, if 'there should be a Rising: That he was fit to be 'sent with a Party to seize any particular Person, 'and that Lynch was impatient to see his Lord-'ship, Layer having told him, that his Lordship 'was at the Head of those Designs.'

Layer farther acquainted your Committee, 'That during his Stay at Lord North and Grey's 'at Epping, in the Vacation, he again pressed his 'Lordship to bring Matters to some Issue in fa-'vour of the Pretender, saying, if something be 'not done speedily, we shall all be taken up; 'that his Lordship reply'd, Is not the Camp 'there still? if you can find some Expedient it 'would be well, it is more than I can do. That 'Layer said it was his Opinion something might 'be done even during the Encampment; and in 'order to discover whether Lord North and Grey 'and Lord Orrery had any Scheme of their own, 'he drew up a Scheme himself, and having so 'done, lodged it with Mrs. Mason, the Day be-'fore he was taken up. That he intended to 'have communicated this Scheme to Lord North 'and Grey and Lord Orrery; that he had some 'Discourse with George Wilson, Dr. Murphey AND 'OTHERS on the Subject of it, before it was 'drawn up.' Being asked, who those OTHERS were, he said, 'He could recollect no one else 'but one who called himself Serjeant White, 'whom he saw in company with Dr. Murphey at 'a Tavern, and inquired of him, how far some 'Parts of his Scheme were practicable.'

Being asked whether he had shewn this Scheme to any Body? he said, 'He did shew the Heads of 'it to Lord North and Grey, as he was walking 'with him in the Garden, and that his Lordship 'said, all was impracticable during the Encamp-'ment: but that he never shewed his Scheme to 'any Body? after it was drawn up in the Form in 'which it was left with Mrs. Mason.' Which last part of his Answer, the Committee observe, may be evasive; since by his own Account, as soon as he had drawn it up in that Form, he lodged it with Mrs. Mason, and the Day after was taken into Custody.

The Committee farther take Notice, That the Accounts he gave when he was questioned before the Lords, whether he had shewn this Scheme to any Body, are inconsistent and contradictory.

For in some Parts of that [5] Examination, he says, 'Lord North and Grey would not hear of 'any thing till the Camp was broke up; That 'the said Lord would not see his Scheme; That 'the said Lord said, he might keep his Heads 'and his Schemes to himself, for there was no-

[1] B. II. [2] B. I. [3] B. II. [4] B. II. [5] B. II.

'thing to be done; That the ſaid Lord ſaid 'there was Time enough for forming a Scheme;' and yet in another Part of the ſame Examination, he ſays, 'Lord North did not diſlike a Scheme in 'general, but diſapproved his Scheme.'

Your Committee beg leave to make the following Obſervations on theſe Paſſages, with a Deſign to ſhew the Inſincerity and Inconſiſtency of Layer's Confeſſions, and without preſuming to draw from them any other Concluſions.

Firſt, That if what Layer ſaid, was true, Lord North muſt have peruſed and examined Layer's Scheme, ſince a Man that did not diſlike a Scheme in general, could not be ſaid to diſapprove any particular Scheme, unleſs he had firſt conſidered and examined it.

The Committee obſerve farther, that the Scheme itſelf does not appear drawn up by a Man of Layer's Profeſſion, aſſiſted only, as he would inſinuate, by Murphey a Doctor of Phyſick, Wilſon a Surgeon, and White a Serjeant; and they cannot but think it very extraordinary, that his Scheme drawn up in Auguſt or September, ſhould have ſo great an Affinity with the 'Paper of Reſolutions, for the digging up the Arms, &c. mentioned above, which was drawn up the April before; and yet that Layer ſhould have had no ſight of that Paper, nor have received any Inſtructions or Aſſiſtance from any Perſons, who were privy to thoſe Reſolutions, which he has declared to the Committee he had not. And the Committee are farther confirmed, that the Scheme was not drawn up by himſelf, from a Particularity contained in a [7] Depoſition of Dr. Blackerby Fairfax, who has ſworn, that being for four or five Years paſt employed in reading Civil Law and French to the ſaid Layer, he recollects that Layer once asked him the meaning of the French Motto, ſince prefixed to his Scheme in theſe Words, Au défaut de la Force il faut employer la Ruſe; and that upon Fairfax's explaining it to him, Layer ſaid, it had been explained to him in the ſame manner by others. Neither does the Scheme appear drawn up at a Venture, or merely with a View of engaging the Pretender's Friends in the Execution of this, or ſome other Scheme of their own, as Layer would inſinuate, but ſeveral Paſſages in it, compared with his other Papers, make it probable, that the Officers, Serjeants, Soldiers and Arms mentioned in the Scheme, were firſt engaged and prepared, and then the ſaid Scheme drawn up, for employing in the beſt manner poſſible ſuch a Force as had been ſo prepared.

This appears by comparing theſe Words in the third Paragraph of his [8] Scheme ('And as there 'is eight Serjeants, viz. Three of the firſt Regi-'ment of Foot-Guards, Three of the ſecond, 'and Two of the third, all ready at an Hour's 'warning to obey Orders)' with two of his Papers taken with his Scheme at Mrs. Maſon's, viz. [9] That which contains a Liſt of Thirteen Serjeants of the Guards, and another [10] Paper of Layer's Handwriting, which contains Eleven of theſe Thirteen Serjeants Names, and Eight of thoſe Eleven Serjeants have Marks ſet againſt their Names: ſo that it may be concluded from thence, that Layer had been able to engage but Eight of the ſaid Thirteen Serjeants, and therefore in his Scheme he mentions no more than Eight Serjeants.

The Truth of this Obſervation farther appears, by comparing Layer's ſaid [11] Examination of the 1ſt of October, with the fourth Paragraph of his Scheme; for in that Examination he ſays that George Wilſon had aſſured him, that two hundred of the Soldiers in the Camp had been ſpoken to and were ready: and therefore Layer, in the ſaid Fourth Paragraph of his Scheme, mentions only two hundred Soldiers to be ready, and gives every one of his eight Serjeants the Command of Five and Twenty of the ſaid Two Hundred Men. From whence it may be concluded, that the Officer that was to ſeize the Tower, and the Arms for executing the Scheme, were alſo in a Readineſs.

It is farther remarkable, that Layer intended, as he owned to your Committee, to communicate this Scheme in its preſent Form, to Lord North and Grey and Lord Orrery; and yet ſeveral principal Parts of it are not explained as things new, but referred to as Matters already known and underſtood by the Perſons that were to ſee it, which could only be by previous Conſultations on that Subject; for Inſtance,

In the Firſt Paragraph it is ſaid, 'Let the Ge-'neral and only one Officer of Note in the Camp agree 'upon a Day for Execution;' which muſt have appeared a moſt abſurd Beginning to any Body that had not had ſome previous Diſcourſe or Notice, of ſeveral Officers in the Camp engaged in the Deſign. And the ſame Obſervation will hold, with reſpect to the Paragraphs where Arms are mentioned as provided; which ſhews, at leaſt, that Layer believed thoſe Perſons that were to ſee his Scheme, had heard of Arms that were provided.

In the Third Paragraph, George Wilſon is named in ſuch a manner, as makes it probable he was already known to thoſe who were to have a Sight of this Scheme; and the Committee obſerve that Layer [12] confeſſed to the Lords that he had told Lord North and Grey, that Wilſon was a Fellow who had ſerved in the Army, had a general Acquaintance, and was fit to be employed if his Lordſhip would make uſe of him; to which the ſaid Lord replied, that when he had Occaſion he would employ him.

In the Thirteenth Paragraph of the Scheme it is ſaid, 'Let the General order four of the Half-'pay Captains,' without any farther Deſcription; which ſhews that Layer thought thoſe to whom his Scheme was to be communicated, knew already of Half-pay Officers that were engaged, agreeably to what Lord North and Grey had [13] told him, that moſt of the Half-pay Officers were well inclined.

In the Nineteenth Paragraph, he allots part of the Execution of the Deſign to the Duke's Bargemen, without any other Addition: which is a manner of Expreſſion no one would have uſed in a Paper to be ſhewn to Perſons, who were entire Strangers to the Affair.

Layer being in the Courſe of his Examination deſired by the Committee, to explain, by what Services or Merit on his Part, the Shyneſs, which he would have it believed, the Pretender expreſſed towards him at his firſt coming to Rome, and the little Acquaintance he then had with Perſons of Diſtinction at home in the Pretender's Intereſt, came ſoon after to be changed into ſo great a degree of Confidence both at Rome and here, that he ſhould be truſted with negotiating Blank Receipts, under the Pretender's own Hand, for unlimited Sums; he told the Committee, that during his Stay at Rome, he contracted a Friendſhip with Sir William Ellis, who is a Servant of the Pretender's, and that at his leaving Rome he ſettled a Correſpondence by Cypher with the ſaid Ellis, and acquainted him from time to time how the Pretender's Affairs went on here: but the Committee obſerve, that this general Anſwer does by no means account for the Terms of Thankfulneſs and Reſpect, with which * Ellis writes to him from the Pretender, nor lay a ſufficient Foundation for his being admitted to ſo particular a Truſt. He ſaid that in the Courſe of his Correſpondence, he writ to Ellis that he had got acquainted with Burford and Symms (by the firſt of which Names he meant Lord Orrery, and by the latter Lord North and Grey) and that if he had but Blank Receipts, under the King's (meaning the Pretender's) own Hand, he believed he could raiſe a conſiderable Sum of Money upon them, and put the Pretender's Affairs in a great Forwardneſs, by engaging a conſiderable Part of the King's Army in the Pretender's Intereſt, with the Money ſo raiſed. That he did not name any particular Sum to Ellis, but hoped himſelf to have raiſed twenty Thouſand Pounds by this Method. He ſaid he received from Ellis only the ten Receipts taken among his Papers at Mrs. Maſon's, that he received them at different times by the Poſt, and that the firſt of them came to his Hands the latter End of July laſt. He ſaid farther, he intended to have tried to put off theſe Receipts among the Norfolk Gentlemen named in the Liſt which he gave to the Pretender, but that he never had ſpoke to any of them on this Subject, nor received any Aſſurance from them.

Being asked by the Committee whether he had ſhewn theſe Receipts to any other Perſons, or had had any Diſcourſe with any Body about raiſing Money this way? he ſaid, he believed he had mentioned to Lord North and Grey and Lord Orrery, his having ſuch Receipts in his Poſſeſſion; and that the ſaid Lords told him, they believed they would be of little Uſe, for that People would ſcarce venture to keep ſuch Receipts by them, or to have them in their Cuſtody, or Words to that effect.

The Committee take Notice, That when he was examined before the Lords, he prevaricated in relation to the Cypher received from Sir William Ellis, which he ſaid was an old Cypher, in uſe before the Preſton Rebellion. But being ſhewn the Names of ſeveral Perſons in that [1] Cypher, with the addition of their Employments, which they did not enjoy at the time of that Rebellion, nor ſome of them till very lately, he ſaid that he applied to Plunket for ſuch Names as were not in the old Cypher; tho the Committee obſerve, that the whole Cypher is in the ſame Hand with the Letters he owned he received from Ellis, and that the Perſons deſigned by late Employments are not added or interlined, but placed in their Alphabetical Order in the Body of the Cypher. Being asked by the Committee, whether he had ſeen or knew of any other Cyphers, he anſwered in the Negative; yet they obſerve that in the [2] Letter from Sir William Ellis dated the 1ſt of October, he is deſired to make uſe of a Pattern of Lace of Mrs. Kinders, (which Name he owned to the Lords to mean Mrs. Hughes, Nurſe to the Pretender's Child) Sir William Ellis having loſt or miſlaid his own. Now the Word Pattern in Ellis's Cypher denotes Cut-Paper, which ſhews that Layer was privy to another Cypher of that kind, in uſe among the Pretender's Agents.

He likewiſe denied his knowing any fictitious Names made uſe of by the Pretender or his Agents for carrying on their Correſpondences, except thoſe mentioned in his Examinations before the Lords; yet afterwards, upon being asked by the Committee, who was meant by Joſeph in Dillon's [3] Letter to Plunket, he confeſſed, that he knew Joſeph was one of the Names made uſe of to denote the Pretender.

The Committee farther obſerve, that the Accounts he has given, do by no means clear up ſeveral Paſſages in Sir William Ellis's Letters, particularly one in the [4] Letter of the 30th of Jan. in which Ellis ſays, 'That Layer having read over 'ſeveral times the Paper he ſhewed him, and 'having a good Memory, Ellis does not think it 'neceſſary to ſend a Copy of it.'

Layer being queſtioned by the Committee about the Liſts of Names taken at Mrs. Maſon's, ſays he employed George Wilſon and Dr. Murphey to enquire into the Characters of Officers and Soldiers, and that he received moſt of the Liſts from Wilſon, who told him, he believed if the late Duke of Ormond were to come over, and Lord Cadogan were ſhot, the Soldiers mentioned in thoſe Liſts, would readily joyn Ormond in favour of the Pretender.

That Wilſon made moſt of the Marks againſt the Names, to explain what Men might or might not be confided in; from which Circumſtance your Committee obſerve, that there were Perſons in thoſe Liſts whom the Pretender's Friends could not confide in. He told the Committee, that Roath or Roach in the [5] Liſt N° 15, againſt whoſe Name is ſet 1000, is one whom he does not know; but that Murphey told him the ſaid Roath or Roach, was a Perſon of great Intereſt in Staffordſhire, and able to raiſe a thouſand Men. That the [6] Paper N° 11. at the bottom of which is writ Enquire of North and Grey, was a Memorandum for enquiring of the ſaid Lord whether he knew Cornet Redding in the Service abroad.

Being ſhewn the two Liſts endorſed [7] Briquett's Liſt, and [8] Lord Yarmouth's Liſt, he ſays Briquett is an eminent Tobacconiſt in the City; that the ſaid two Liſts only contain Names of a Jury for a Relation's Cauſe, but that he intended to ſhew thoſe two Liſts to Lord Orrery and Lord North and Grey, as containing an account of Men to be raiſed for the Pretender's Service, in order to magnify to thoſe Lords the Number of the Pretender's Friends.

Being asked by the Committee what was the Occaſion of his taking away his Papers from Mrs. Maſon's, when he went down to Epping, and what Papers he at that time took out? he ſaid, he only took out a Paper containing a Tranſcript of the Prince of Orange's Declaration, and ſome other Memorandum Papers. He farther added, that he was to have gone to Lord North and Grey's to Dinner the Day that he was taken up, and that he ſent his Servant to the ſaid Lord's, to let him know he was arreſted for High-Treaſon, that his Lordſhip might not be ſurpriſed at his not coming, and likewiſe that his Lordſhip might provide for his own Security: and before the [9] Lords he ſaid, That he thought it reaſonable to ſend this Notice to Lord North and Grey, apprehending that the Government would ſeize the ſaid Lord immediately, on Account of what had paſſed between his Lordſhip and him.

It appears to your Committee, that Lord North and Grey did, in purſuance of this Meſſage from Layer, endeavour to provide for his own Security, by making his Eſcape. Layer ſent that Meſſage to Lord North and Grey on Tueſday the 18th of September, the Day that he was taken into Cuſtody; and Hugh Floyd, his Lordſhip's Servant, who attended him to Portſmouth, [10] has declared, that Lord North and Grey came to Town from Epping on Wedneſday the 19th of September (which was the Day after his receiving this Meſſage from Layer.) That his Lordſhip did not go to his own Houſe, but to the King's Arms Tavern in Paul's Church-yard, and there diſmiſſed him, Floyd, with Orders to meet him at four in the Morning on the Friday following, over-againſt St. James's Church in Piccadilly. That his Lordſhip came at the Time and Place appointed, in a hired Coach and Six, without Servants, and ordered the Coachman to drive on to Kenſington, and then to Brentford, and ſo on from Town to Town, and bid him, Hugh Floyd, have nothing to ſay to any Body, nor take any Notice that he was travelling with his Lordſhip; ſo that in the whole Journey to Portſmouth, he remembred no Town but Kenſington, Brentford and Egham. That the ſecond Morning his Lordſhip proceeded on his Journey, with hired Saddle-Horſes, without Boots, with a Guide, and ſeveral other minute Circumſtances, which may be ſeen in the [11] Examination of Hugh Floyd, and [12] others, in relation to his Lordſhip's Journey to the Iſle of Wight, and to the manner of his endeavouring to eſcape from thence; which ſerve to ſhew the Precipitancy of his Lordſhip's Flight, and of what Importance he thought it to take Advantage as ſoon as poſſible of the Notice given him by Layer.

Layer being aſked by the Committee from whom he received the [13] Names found in his own Hand-writing among his Papers, viz.

Tories. —— Tanners.

ſaid, the Names of ſome Perſons, whom he had Occaſion to mention in his Letters to Sir William Ellis, not being inſerted in the Cypher he had from Ellis, he applied to Plunket now in Cuſtody, to know by what Names he ſhould denote thoſe Perſons, and that Plunket gave him the ſix fictitious Names above-mentioned; which Names the Committee find frequently repeated in Plunket's Letters and Papers. Being asked if Plunket ever explained to him who were meant by Burford's Club (an Expreſſion which is often uſed by Plunket in his Letters to Dillon, as will be obſerved in its Place) he ſaid, that Plunket had told him, it was an Appellation made uſe of by the Pretender and his Agents, to denote a Club of Tory Lords and others, of which Club Lord Orrery was Chairman. That Plunket had named to him ſeveral Perſons of Diſtinction, as Members of that Club, whoſe Names Layer repeated to the Committee, as contained in his [14] Examination, annexed to this Report. But the Committee think it a Juſtice due to ſeveral of the Perſons named by Layer, to obſerve, that the Matters aſſerted of Burford's Club in Plunket's Letters, ſeem utterly inconſiſtent with the known Characters of ſome of thoſe Perſons.

Layer being aſked by the Committee, whether he ever was employed by Plunket to tranſact Buſineſs with this or any other Club, in Plunket's Abſence (which appears to the Committee to be aſſerted in [15] one of Plunket's Letters) he abſolutely deny'd it; but admitted that he went often to viſit Lord Orrery, and had frequent Converſations with him relating to the Pretender's Affairs, and the neceſſity of foreign Aſſiſtance. And that Mr. Swortfegger, Lord Orrery's Secretary, came to him once and told him, that Lord Orrery had left a Note in Writing, that if Layer came to Town, he ſhould come down to Lord Orrery's in the Country, which Invitation he underſtood to be with an Intention of their diſcourſing more at leiſure about the Pretender's Affairs, having never had any Buſineſs with Lord Orrery in the way of his Profeſſion, nor any other private Buſineſs, that could give Occaſion to ſuch a Meſſage; but that he did not go down at that Time.

The Committee obſerve, that a [16] Paper of Memorandums was taken in the Book-Caſe of Swortfegger, Secretary to Lord Orrery, which he declared to the Lords on his Examination, to be Lord Orrery's own writing, in which the Meſſage to Layer is contained, and Swortfegger [17] owned, that he delivered this Meſſage to Layer, and that he had ſometimes ſeen Layer at his Lordſhip's Houſe.

Layer being ſhewn by the Committee a [18] Letter taken among his Papers, ſigned J. Plunket, and dated the 8th of November, 1720, owned that he received that Letter in Norfolk from Plunket now in Cuſtody; that it relates to the Pretender's Affairs; that by Plunket's Friend in the ſaid Letter is meant, as he believes, Dillon, and by his Law-ſuit, the Pretender's Cauſe; in which Senſe the Committee find the Word Law-ſuit frequently made uſe of in others of the intercepted Letters. Layer farther owned, that Plunket gave his Wife a Letter of Recommendation to General Dillon, when ſhe went to Paris, which Letter was ſigned Rogers.

Being aſked by the Committee, whether Plunket had any Conferences with the Pretender or his Agents, during their Stay at Rome, or had owned to him his being employed by the Pretender in England, he ſaid that Plunket had two private Conferences with the Pretender, and converſed often with Francis Kennedy, Secretary to the Pretender, and with others of his Agents at Rome. That Plunket has frequently owned to him, that he was employed in the Pretender's Affairs, but never explained to him by which of the Pretender's Agents particularly; and that he, Layer, never opened himſelf to Plunket in relation to the Pretender's Affairs, after their Return from Rome.

Yet the Committee obſerve, that Plunket in his [19] Letters to Dillon, ſpeaks frequently of himself as privy to Layer's treasonable Transactions, and grounds his [20] Recommendation of Mrs. Layer, on his Knowledge of her Husband's Merit and Industry in the Service of the Pretender.

They likewise observe, that Layer owns he received the Names of Digby, Burford, &c. from Plunket since his Return from Rome, which they think plainly implies, that Plunket and he were privy to each other's treasonable Correspondence.

The several Particulars above-mentioned contain the Substance of what Layer confessed on his Examinations before the Lords, and before your Committee. And after this long Account given by him, in which there appear so many and such convincing Proofs of the Conspiracy in general, your Committee think it proper to observe, that though he affected a great Openness and Frankness, when such Questions were put to him as tended only to a general Discovery, to accuse himself, or such as he knew were escaped and fled out of the Kingdom, yet when such Questions were put to him, as he apprehended might affect or discover any others of the Conspirators, he always gave Answers with great Shiness and Reserve; and this Care to say as little as possible that might affect others in a criminal Way, joined with a Desire to seem candid and ingenuous, often produced the Inconsistencies and Contradictions, upon which the Committee have thought it their Duty to make the foregoing Observations.

Your Committee will now proceed to lay before you what they have been able to collect from the Papers and Examinations of John Plunket, whose treasonable Practices and Correspondences, as has been observed before, appear to be so closely connected with those of Layer, that they give great Light and Confirmation to each other.

The Committee observe, from a careful Perusal of the Letters and Cyphers seized at Plunket's Lodgings, that he not only of late, but for many Years past, has been employed in carrying on several treasonable Correspondences with Persons of high Rank and Distinction abroad; that a very great Share of Confidence has been placed in him by the Pretender, and several of the most considerable Agents for him, and that he has been a principal Actor in the late horrid Conspiracy, and too much, as they have Reason to believe, concerned in the blackest Part of it. And tho the Evidence against him, in several Particulars, is most full and undeniable, yet his Behaviour on his Examination was so hardened and obstinate, and attended with such bare-faced Prevarications and Falshoods, that the Committee are very much confirmed in the Opinion of his Guilt, from the Pains he took to deny with solemn Imprecations the most evident Truths.

Layer [21] confessed to the Lords, that Plunket recommended Wilson to him as a Man of Integrity; that Plunket went by the Name of Rogers in Italy and since, and [22] signed the Letter which he gave Mrs. Layer for General Dillon, by the Name of Rogers. But the Committee observe, that Layer let them remain in the Error of believing that Plunket's Christian Name was James, till the Question was put to him, on his second Examination, in such a Manner, that he found the Committee was already apprized of his true Name, which he then owned to be John. He farther owned, as has been observed above, that Plunket received a Letter under the Pretender's own Hand at Rome, was twice in private Conference with the Pretender, conversed with Kennedy and other Agents of the Pretender, had assured him, Layer, of a good Reception at Rome, was kindly spoken of by the Pretender, had owned to Layer his being employed in the Pretender's Service, and his corresponding with Dillon, writ to Layer in Norfolk, in relation to the Pretender's Affairs, and gave Layer fictitious Names for Dillon, Lord Orrery, the Regent, &c. and among the rest, the Name of Rogers, to denote him, Plunket; which fictitious Names the Committee find all of them frequently used in Plunket's Papers.

It appears farther to the Committee from [23] Depositions upon Oath of Matthew Plunket, that John Plunket came to him in July last from Layer, to desire him to meet Layer at the Italian Coffee-house in Russel-Court, and named to him the same Persons, as ready to head an Insurrection, who were at some other time named to the said Matthew Plunket by Layer on the same Occasion.

That he [24] farther ask'd Matthew Plunket, whether he was well acquainted in the Army among the Soldiers? to which he replied, he knew many of them that had been with him in Spain and at Preston. That John Plunket then told him, he came from Mr. Layer, and under the Arch going into Drury-Lane, desired him to pick out as many Serjeants as he knew in the Guards to recommend them to Mr. Layer. That the next time he saw Matthew Plunket, which was in two or three Days, he invited him to his Chambers, and there told him Mr. Layer was a very good Man, and the only one he could depend on to do him Service: That the Design on which he, Matthew Plunket, was to introduce the Soldiers to Layer's Acquaintance, was to serve the Pretender by disciplining the Mob, who were to rise in his Favour. And that all the Transactions of John Plunket, with him Matthew Plunket, were, to engage him in Person, and by his Acquaintance among the Soldiers, to serve the Pretender: That John Plunket meeting him afterwards in Covent-Garden, asked him what he had done, to which he replied, he went on very well, and John Plunket bid him go and tell Mr. Layer.

Matthew Plunket farther deposes, that John Plunket told him, the Business (meaning the Invasion and Rebellion) had been done before, but that the French Ambassador wrote to the Regent, and the Regent wrote it to King George (or words to that effect) and it was upon that account the Army was sent to Camp.

Dr. Blackerby Fairfax has [1] deposed upon Oath, that being in Company with Plunket and one Jefferyes, Jefferyes among other Discourse said, Plunket give the Doctor a Commission, adding, Plunket has Commissions, which Fairfax understood to mean Commissions from the Pretender; but that Plunket answered, the Doctor does not wear a Sword.

The Committee observe, that among Plunket's Papers was found a large [2] Cypher of Names with fictitious Names over-against them, [3] sworn to be all in Plunket's own Hand-writing, which Cypher tallies with, and explains an original [4] Letter of the 23d of July 1722, directed to Mr. Digby at Paris, and signed J. Rogers, which was stopt at the Poſt-Office, and is likewiſe [5] ſworn to be Plunket's Hand-writing. And ſeveral other Letters directed to Digby, and ſigned J. Rogers, having likewiſe been opened and copied at the Poſt-Office, and then ſent forwards, the Clerks who were employed in copying them have ſworn, that, to the beſt of their Memory and Belief, the Originals of the ſaid Letters were all writ in the ſame Hand with that of the 23d of July, which was ſtopped, and is ſworn to be Plunket's Hand-writing; and the ſaid Copies of Letters, treat of the ſame Matters as the other, and contain the ſame fictitious Names which are found in the Cypher ſworn to be in Plunket's Hand-writing.

The Committee are informed, that it was thought proper to ſtop but one of the original Letters from Plunket, and to ſuffer the others to go on, becauſe it was judged that one was ſufficient to diſcover the Writer, and that the permitting the Correſpondence to be continued, might help the Government to farther Lights in this Affair.

The Committee likewiſe obſerve, that there was found among his Papers an [6] original Letter ſigned Digby, dated the 20th of May 1722, which is ſworn by the Clerks of the Poſt-Office to be the ſame which they opened and took a Copy of, and which was directed to Mr. James Rogers, at Mr. Arthur's Banker in London, tho the Direction is ſince torn off. From this Direction your Committee obſerve, that his Chriſtian Name was diſguiſed as well as his Surname. The Receipt of this Letter is acknowledged in the [7] Copy of one to Digby ſigned J. Rogers, and dated the 21ſt of May O. S. 1722.

The Committee obſerve, that the original Letter ſigned Digby, is in the ſame Hand with [8] another ſigned Dixwell, found alſo among Plunket's Papers, and owned by Layer to be the very Letter ſhewn him by Plunket at Antwerp, as from General Dillon; that the Letter ſigned Digby is alſo in the ſame Hand with [9] another Letter ſigned A. D. and directed to Robert Dillon Eſq; which, as your Committee are informed, was taken on one Blunt a Popiſh Prieſt coming over from France, and owned by Blunt to be from General Dillon to his Nephew. And the Committee farther obſerve, that theſe three Letters ſigned Digby, Dixwell and A. D. are in the ſame Hand with [10] another ſigned C. Howell, found alſo among Plunket's Papers, which Name of Howell is explained in Plunket's [11] Cypher to mean Glaſgow, whom the Committee ſee Reaſon to believe to be Chriſtopher Glaſcock, an Iriſh Officer in Dillon's Regiment, who appears to be employ'd by Dillon in writing the treaſonable Letters ſigned by Dillon himſelf, as well as in writing others of the ſame Kind, ſigned by fictitious Names belonging to him Glaſcock.

The Committee obſerve, that in the [12] Copy of the Letter, ſigned J. Rogers directed to Digby, and dated the 5th of July 1722, the Perſon who writ that Letter, ſays, that his Fellow-Traveller's Wife parted hence the Day before for Paris, and that he gave her a Letter to him, Digby: which agrees with Layer's [13] Confeſſion that Plunket did give Mrs. Layer a Letter of Recommendation to Dillon, ſigned Rogers, and that he received from Plunket the Name of Digby to denote General Dillon, which Name was alſo [14] confirmed to Layer by Lord Orrery to mean Dillon. But that Dillon went by the Name of Digby is put paſt all doubt, by a Diſcovery made by Mr. Crafurd, his Majeſty's Reſident at Paris, who being ordered to diſcover the Perſon meant by that Name, made uſe of the following Contrivance, mentioned thus in his own [15] Letter.

'I have juſt now found out, who Mr. Digby is. 'I folded up a Paper in the Form of a Letter, and 'ſealed it, and directed it to Mr. Digby at Paris, 'then wrapt it up in a Piece of waſte Paper 'with a Memorandum in it, to be informed at 'Mr. Waters's Banker in Chriſtine Street, in what 'Part of Paris Mr. Digby lived; I gave it thus 'made up to a ſharp young Fellow who ſpeaks 'both French and Engliſh, and ordered him to go 'booted and a little dirted to Mr. Waters's, to 'open before him the ſham Letter and read his 'Memorandum, and to ſhew him the Direction 'of the Letter, and to deſire him at the ſame time 'to ſend ſomebody with him, to conduct him to 'the Place where it was to be delivered; that as 'ſoon as he ſhould come to the Door, where he 'was to deliver it, he ſhould pretend to have 'left a Packet at Home, and making as if he 'would go back to fetch that Packet, he ſhould 'ſlip away from the Perſon who ſhewed him thi-'ther. The thing ſucceeded better than I expected, 'for Waters was not at home, and my Man acted 'his part ſo well, that Waters's chief Book-keeper, 'without giving himſelf the trouble of going, 'wrote the Direction for him upon my Sham 'Letter, in the manner your Excellency will ſee 'in the encloſed. The Book-keeper was very de-'ſirous to have the Letter in order to deliver it 'himſelf, but my Man inſiſted to deliver it with 'his own Hand, and anſwered boldly to ſome 'Queſtions which the Book-keeper asked him, 'pretending he was to return the next Day for 'England.' The Direction writ by Mr. Waters's Book-keeper under the Name of Digby was, A Monſieur Dillon, Rue Colombier a l'Hotel d'Holande; which, as your Committee are informed, is the ordinary Reſidence of Lieutenant-General Dillon.

Upon this Diſcovery [16] Notice was ſent from France, by Dillon and his Agents, to his Correſpondents in England, to forbid them making uſe any more of that fictitious Name, as ſhall be more fully taken Notice of hereafter in this Report.

Notwithſtanding all this Evidence of Plunket's correſponding with Dillon, when he was examined, [17] he denied his knowing General Dillon, or his having ever exchanged a Letter with Dillon, or his Secretary in his Life; he denied the Letter to Digby of the 23d of July, ſtopped at the Poſt-Office, and the Cypher found at his Lodgings to be his own Hand-writing; he denied the Receipt of the Letters from Howell, Dixwell and Digby found among his Papers; but owned he had once received a Letter from one Farelly a Popiſh Prieſt, formerly Governor to the Duke of Berwick's Children, ſigned by the Name of Digby, and relating to Stocks of Nicholas Wogan's and others. The Committee obſerve, that in this prevaricating Anſwer he was labouring to account for the Meaning of the Word Stocks, which is mention'd in the Letter from Digby, but will be shewn in the Sequel of this Report, to be meant in a very different Sense from its natural Import, and to mean the Conspiracy only; and in Plunket's own [18] Cypher the fictitious Word Brokers, is explained Agents. Upon pressing him farther to see if he would own the Correspondence with Dillon, and acknowledge the Letters the Committee had such full Evidence were his, they found that in order to avoid the owning it, he run himself into such an evident Absurdity and Inconsistency, as appears to them a strong Argument of his Guilt.

[19] He affirm'd the Cypher (which is sworn to be his own Hand-writing) to belong to one Hugh Thomas, formerly of the Herald's Office, who had lodged in the same House with himself; that he had heard this Hugh Thomas own in Company with Neynoe, that he corresponded with Dillon; that Hugh Thomas went by the Name of Rogers, and that he, Plunket, found this Cypher and several Letters directed to Rogers, among Hugh Thomas's old Books and Papers. Being asked whether Hugh Thomas ever signed Plunket, he said, not to his Knowledge; and then he endeavoured to impose on the Committee, by telling them his own true Name was Plucknett. Being asked what was become of this Thomas, he said, he had been dead a Year and a half, and that he, Plunket, could not keep him alive. But the Committee observe, that the Original Letter to Digby, signed J. Rogers, is dated the 23d of July last, and yet is in the same Hand with that Cypher, which he pretends to be the Writing of a Man, who has been dead a Year and a half. They observe likewise, that the Letter from Digby directed to Rogers is dated the 20th of May 1722, and that most of the Letters directed to Rogers (which Plunket pretends were writ to Hugh Thomas) had the Name of Rogers blotted out, and that of John Plunket writ over it; and yet he owns, he never knew, that Thomas went by the Name of Plunket: besides which it is notorious, that Plunket himself went by the Name of Rogers in Italy, and Layer has [20] owned not only that Plunket went by that Name, but that he signed Mrs. Layer's Letter of Recommendation to Dillon, by the Name of Rogers, and also gave him, Layer, the Name of Rogers to denote himself, at the same time that he gave him the Name of Digby for General Dillon.

Your Committee are of Opinion, that these Circumstances laid together leave no room to doubt but that Plunket writ and received the Letter abovementioned; the Contents of which will be explained in their Place.

Plunket being shewn a [21] Letter without Direction, signed N. Wogan, enclosing a [22] Cypher, which is called in the Letter the Duke of Berwick's Key, he said, this Letter and Cypher likewise belong'd to Hugh Thomas, who, he said, corresponded with the Duke of Berwick about getting Subscriptions to a Book; which matter, the Committee observe, neither needed any Cypher, nor could well be treated of by the help of that. They likewise take Notice, that Plunket owned the receiving a Letter from Digby in relation to the said Wogan's Stocks, and that Wogan is inserted in Plunket's own [23] Cypher by the Name of Xoland, which Circumstances make it probable he did correspond with Wogan.

There is one farther Particular relating to this Cypher, which the Committee think it proper to remark to the House, which is, that Plunket while he was in Custody, desired a certain Book might be brought to him from his Lodgings, but the Messenger's Wife, searching the Book before she delivered it, has [24] deposed upon Oath, that she found in it this Letter from N. Wogan. And as the Committee are informed, that most of his other Cyphers and Papers were found hid in the Leaves of his Books, they think it probable, that he singled out this Book, in hopes of recovering and destroying the Cypher that serves to explain his Letters; the Contents of which the Committee will now proceed to lay before the House, and to avoid Repetition of Names, where-ever they can, will make use of the real Names found in his Cypher, instead of the fictitious ones, by which they are expressed in his Letters annexed to this Report.

Among his Papers was found the [25] foul Draught of a Letter, dated March the 22d 1721, and directed to Mr. Jackson, which in his own [26] Cypher is explained the Pretender. In this foul Draught (which is sworn to be his Hand-writing) are the following Passages.

'I look, Sir, on your Law-Suit to be in such 'a forwardness, that a speedy and happy Replica-'tion must inevitably ensue; the Waggs, as well 'as the Tanners (which Names he explained to 'Layer to denote the Whigs and Tories) seem 'convinc'd that nothing less can redress their Ru-'in: Nay the latter is apprehensive the former 'will compliment you with it on your own 'Terms, in order to engross your Favour for the 'future. The Precepts my Friend and I gave in 'lately, have contributed much to this Emula-'tion: We have more to give in; and if they im-'prove them as they have the former, you will 'have a good Game on't.' The Words Replication and Precepts are not found in his Cypher, but the Sense of the former may easily be guessed at.

He afterwards adds; 'The Gentleman I men-'tioned to you formerly, is come out of the 'Country, with Instructions to wait on you, and 'tender you their Service; he offers to bear my 'Expenses if I go with him: as I take it that my 'going will be of more use than my staying now, 'I believe I shall accept of his Offer.' In another foul Draught of the same Letter, he says (as has been before observed) 'There is one sets out 'from Norfolk in a few Days, to let you know 'the Tanners will stand by you on occasion, and 'offers to bear my Expenses; so that I shall wait 'on you, and have the Satisfaction to tell you by 'word of Mouth what will be acceptable. He 'carries the List with him.' And in [1] Heads or Minutes of the same Letter, he says, 'Wag and 'Tanner will equally concur.—My Friend will 'wait on you to tender their Service—Our Mes-'sage will pin the Basket——You may have daily 'Messages of this kind; you will be courted, 'tis 'the English way——.'

The Committee think it unnecessary to repeat here, how inconsistent these Accounts of Layer's Journey, are with [2] those given by Layer himself; and how ſtrongly they contradict Plunket's bold [4] Aſſeveration, that he knew nothing of Layer's intending to go to Rome, before they ſet out.

'Another foul Draught of a Letter was found among Plunket's Papers, and is ſworn to be his Handwriting; the Matter of which appears to your Committee very remarkable. It is not dated nor directed, but appears plainly to have been writ the beginning of the laſt Year, and in it are the following Paſſages. 'I had four of Count 'Bothmar's Letters ſince my laſt to you; Mr. Burford had them all; his Clerk gave me to un-'derſtand they were ſent to Mr. Joſ—— This 'made me not to trouble you. This only to wiſh 'you a happy new Year. I hope it will bring the 'Law-Suit to bear, afore 'twill end; if they 'would have Courage and Integrity, they may 'walk K. George out afore Lady-day next—' (and in another Part he ſays, afore May come) 'He is 'weary of them, and thinks no more of ſtaying 'among them.' It appears from this Paper, that Plunket had conveyed Copies of ſome Letters of Count Bothmar's to Lord Orrery; that Lord Orrery's Clerk had given him to underſtand, thoſe Letters were ſent to the Pretender (from whence it may be concluded, that either Lord Orrery or his Clerk had a direct Correſpondence with the Pretender) and that Plunket was privy to ſome Deſign for walking K. George out (as he calls it) which Deſign required Courage and Integrity, and was to have been executed either before Lady-day, which was during the Elections, or by the beginning of May, which was the ſecond Period fixed (as has been obſerved) for beginning the Inſurrection. Simon Swortfegger, Secretary to Lord Orrery, owned upon his [5] Examination before the Lords, that he was acquainted with Plunket, and had been in company with him and Layer at Mr. Aaron Thompſon's Chambers. And Plunket [7] owned to the Committee his being acquainted with Swortfegger, and his having been in company with him and Layer, at Layer's Houſe; but denied his knowing any thing of the foul Draughts of the Letters abovementioned.

Plunket in his [8] Letter to Digby of the 21ſt of May, ſays, 'I hope in a little time Mr. Joſeph '(which Layer owned to be the Pretender) will 'be the Miniſtry's only Refuge. Burford (whom 'Layer declared likewiſe to be Orrery) and his 'Club ſeem to think ſo: They will have a Finger 'in the Pye if they can; I know they can come 'in for a good Share in it, if they can have a lit-'tle Concert and Regulation; there are thoſe 'that will undertake to do the Job in twelve 'Hours time. A little time will ſhew whether 'they will give fitting Encouragement; if two 'or three is taken off, no matter how, King 'George will go off by hook or by crook, and of 'courſe the Lowty will be for Joſeph: This has 'been communicated to your Friends.'

What is meant by the Lowty, does not appear by his Cypher; but by the Senſe, and the alphabetical Order of the Cypher, it is not improbable but it may mean the Miniſtry.

Whether the Job that was ready to be undertaken on fitting Encouragement, and to be performed in twelve Hours time, relates to the raſh Enterpriſe for ſurprizing the City of London, which has been already taken notice of, or to the wicked and execrable Deſign for ſeizing and deſtroying his Majeſty's Sacred Perſon, of which mention is expreſly made in [9] two ſubſequent Letters of Plunket's, is left to the Conſideration of the Houſe.

But the Committee, from comparing the Memorandum at the End of the [10] Paper of Reſolutions, in the following Characters Diſ. C. W. M. with the two or three that are mentioned in this Letter to be taken off, and likewiſe with Wilſon's Intimation to Layer, that if Lord Cadogan were but ſhot, the Soldiers would declare for Ormond; and alſo with Layer's Negotiation about ſeizing Lord Cadogan, and with the Paragraph in his Scheme for ſeizing ſome great Perſons at their Houſes, ſee reaſon to believe, that by the firſt of thoſe Characters is meant Diſpatch Lord Cadogan; and by the others, two other Officers of diſtinction.

In the ſame [11] Letter of the 21ſt of May, Plunket takes notice, 'That Johnſon, an Acquain-'tance, was taken up the Day before, but had 'burnt his Papers, and ſeemed to be eaſy in the 'Matter; and adds, I believe they will get no-'thing by him.'

Plunket being aſked by the Committee, whether he was acquainted with George Kelly, alias Johnſon, ſaid he knew him by Sight and Coffee-houſe acquaintance only; that he did not remember his having ever received a Letter from him; and Kelly gave the ſame [12] Account in relation to Plunket: yet a [13] Letter from Kelly was found among Plunket's Papers; and John Malone, who waited on Kelly at his Lodgings, has named Plunket in his [14] Depoſition, as one who often viſited Kelly there. And the Committee are ſatisfied, that they were privy to each other's treaſonable Correſpondence, by ſome Paſſages in the [15] Letters to and from Kelly, in which mention is made of Plunket by the Name of Rogers, as will be ſhewn in its proper Place. Plunket concludes his Letter of the 21ſt of May with theſe Words: 'The 'Motive of my Journey is over at preſent, my 'Pocket feels it, the Man muſt be fed with Mo-'ney now and then; the labouring Oar will, I be-'lieve, be laid on me.'

As he denied the writing theſe Letters, the Committee could not draw from him any Explication of this Paragraph; but comparing it with the other Part of his Letter, where it is ſaid, that a little Time will ſhew whether Burford (Lord Orrery) and the Club, would give fitting Encouragement for undertaking the Job; they think it appears probable, that ſome part in this Job is the labouring Oar referred to, for which he expected to be fed with Money.

His next [16] Letter to Digby is of the 31ſt of May, in which he ſays, 'He finds the Regent 'had a hand in keeping K. George from going 'abroad, ſo that the Miniſtry will carry on their 'Game ſafely and leiſurely without any Oppoſi-'tion whatever from the Club, or any of the 'Pretender's Friends.' He adds, 'Let them be 'ever ſo ſanguine, they can do nothing as long as 'the Regent ſtands by the Miniſtry: But ſhould 'Ormond come, with half a dozen Regiments on-'ly, he would carry his Point, and make K. 'George run for it.' This Paſſage confirms what hath been ſet forth above, that the late Duke of Ormond's coming over made a Part of the Original Scheme, and agrees with the [17] Accounts received from Spain, of Iriſh Soldiers provided there for the Pretender's Service.

Plunket

Plunket then adds, 'If Burford (Lord Orrery) 'and the Club have a mind to have K. George 'delivered up to them he ſhall; there are thoſe 'that will undertake it, and offer to do whatever 'required.' And in his [18] Letter of the 4th of July he ſays, '——I can aſſure you, Deſpair has 'made ſome to take a Reſolution to lay violent Hands on 'K. George; but there is a Stop put to them at 'preſent: It is not the Pretender's Intereſt, but 'you can't do ſo always; an ill Precedent is dan-'gerous.'

The black and villainous Deſign expreſſed by theſe two Paragraphs, needs no Explication from your Committee, who are ſenſible the Houſe cannot have heard them read, without the utmoſt Horror and Indignation.

He ſpeaks of himſelf in theſe Letters as knowing the Men, who had taken a Reſolution to lay violent Hands on the ſacred Perſon of his Majeſty; and was himſelf ſo far engaged in this execrable Deſign, as to ſay in one of his Letters, If the Club deſire it, His Majeſty ſhall be delivered up into their Hands: and in another Letter diſſuades it, not out of any Conſcience or Remorſe for the Crime, but merely for fear the ſame Barbarity ſhould be retaliated on the Pretender: Yet this Man ſtill continues ſo hardned and obſtinate, as to renew his Guilt by refuſing to make the leaſt Diſcovery of his Accomplices, or to give this only Reparation and Atonement he is capable of, to a Country which he has been labouring to involve in the greateſt Calamities.

He afterwards [19] ſays, 'That tho there ſhould 'be a Riſing in moſt Parts, if the Mob is beat 'in one Place, the reſt will go home and be 'quiet for ſeven Years more.'

His next [20] Letter is of the 21ſt of June: In this he ſays, 'That Burford and the Club think 'themſelves ſlighted by the Regent and Miniſtry 'of France; and conceive, that the Regent joins 'with King George to be revenged on them. That 'he may have room to repent it early or late; 'for ſhould the Parliament be broke, and a new 'one called, he might find himſelf more emba-'raſſed than he is aware of.' He adds, 'If the 'Regent ſtands neuter, and they will ſoon bring 'the Law-Suit to bear; ſo far I am ſatisfied of 'it, that Four or five hundred Men, and as many 'Arms, with 1500 l. will complete the Matters 'in a little Time, and give a good Account of 'King George and the Miniſtry. The Army want 'only an Opportunity to do their Duty. This 'Scheme, if duly and diſcreetly managed, will 'give them an Opportunity to do it. Were we 'ſure the Regent would not interpoſe, we would 'take it in hand forthwith.'

The Committee make no doubt but the Houſe has prevented them, in obſerving how exactly this Letter agrees with the [21] Accounts ſent ſome time before from France; that the Conſpirators reckoned on great Part of the King's own Forces; and only deſired the Regent that he would keep himſelf neuter between the Pretender and his Majeſty. And this Letter appears to have been writ at the Time, when Layer, Wilſon, Murphey and Plunket were labouring to corrupt the Officers and Soldiers of the Army.

Plunket adds in the ſame Letter, 'If the Re-'gent and Court of Spain will but ply King George 'with large Demands, and bring the Czar down 'to Hannover, the Pretender will have a Carte 'Blanche from the Miniſtry and King George, as 'alſo from all the reſt of his Friends and Foes: 'This I take to be the beſt and ſafeſt way, both 'for the Pretender and his Wellwiſhers.'

This Expreſſion of the Pretender's getting a Carte Blanche from the King and Miniſtry, is repeated ſeveral times in Plunket's Letters; and however extravagant and ill-founded ſuch Suggeſtions were, yet the Committee cannot but obſerve, that his Repreſentations appear to have met with ſuch a Spirit of Credulity and Deluſion in the Pretender and his Agents, that not long after he was vain enough to entertain Hopes of capitulating with his Majeſty for the Crown, by that traitorous and inſolent Declaration, againſt which both Houſes have ſo lately expreſſed their juſt Reſentment and Abhorrence.

Plunket's next [22] Letters are of the 4th and 5th of July, 1722; in which he has the Vanity to tell Dillon, 'That he had been deſired, by ſome lead-'ing Members of the then Parliament, to ac-'quaint the Regent's Agent here, that it was 'now in the Power of the Regent and Spain, to 'ſend away King George, and to ſend home Mr. Joſ. with a bonne grace, and much to their Ad-'vantage; that it was only to inſiſt on the Stipu-'lation King George had made with them, and 'they would have a fair Pretence to do it.'

It appears by other Paſſages, that this ſuppoſed Stipulation relates to the Ceſſion of Gibraltar.

He afterwards gives an Account, 'That he 'did, both on the 4th and 5th of July, wait on 'the Regent's Agent with this Meſſage; and 'ſays, That as that Agent was acquainted with 'ſome of the Members of Parliament who im-'ployed him, he gave ſome Attention to him: 'But the Objections which the Regent's Agent 'made, appear to have been, That the Pretender 'had not the Name of a Man of great Parts or 'Reſolution: That he had hitherto no great Opi-'nion of Burford and the Club; and that ſuch a 'Procedure on the Part of the Regent, would 'be a Violation of the bonne Foy. To which laſt 'Plunket replied, That it would be no Breach 'of their bonne Foy to be grateful to thoſe who 'were their Deliverers formerly.' However, Plunket ſays, 'He convinced the Agent, that it was 'now in the Regent's Power to make the Mi-'niſtry and King George give the Pretender a 'Carte Blanche; and by ſo doing, to make the 'Emperor vomit up what he has now in Flan-'ders, without ſtriking a Stroke. That the Com-'mon People, the Country Party, and all the 'Engliſh Gentlemen might be brought to join 'with the Regent in proper Meaſures to do it; or, 'that if the Regent would but ſtand neuter, they 'would ſoon bring the Pretender's Law-Suit to 'bear independent on any whatever.' He adds, 'That he is ſatisfied the Agent would write theſe 'Sentiments to his Court; and that it is Dillon's 'Buſineſs to let the Regent ſee he has the ſame 'Sentiments from other People here.'

Plunket being examined by the Committee, in relation to this Letter, [23] owned, he had frequent Acceſs to one of the French Miniſters on private Affairs: and that Layer knowing him to be acquainted with him, aſked him, Whether he could not find out, by the Help of that Miniſter, whether the Regent might not be brought into Tory

Meaſures? And Stephen Lynch has [24] depoſed, That Layer told him, Application had been made, either by himſelf, or ſome other Perſon, to one of the French Agents here, to the Effect mentioned in Plunket's Letter. However, Plunket denied his having ever ſpoke to that Miniſter in relation to State-Affairs, or his having writ any ſuch Account to France.

The Committee, from comparing this Relation of theſe two Converſations with what he ſays in other Letters, of bringing the Czar down to Hanover, in order to oblige his Majeſty to withdraw from England; obſerve, that the Conſpirators were ſo intent on compaſſing their wicked Deſigns by any Means, that having failed in there Applications for foreign Aſſiſtance, they were now labouring to make France and Spain inſiſt on the Reſtitution of Gibraltar, to throw Flanders into the Hands of France, and to bring the Czar into Germany, in hopes to involve all Europe into Confuſion, and thereby to pave the Way for bringing in the Pretender.

In the ſame [25] Letters he tells Dillon, 'Now is 'the Time for the Regent and Miniſtry of France 'to ſerve you: If they do not, I can aſſure them, 'they may have room to repent it: for the Pre- 'tender's Friends will find Means to get into the 'Saddle, in ſpite of the Miniſtry and King George.'

He adds, 'That the Army, will not ſtand by 'the King and Miniſtry, againſt the great Bent of 'the Engliſh Gentlemen, the common People, and 'the Country Party; who are ſo incens'd againſt 'the Court, that the leaſt Accident would ſurely 'overturn what they have been doing theſe ſeven 'Years paſt.'

He then ſays, 'That his Fellow-Traveller is, 'and has been very active ſince his coming from 'his Travels, and is more ſerviceable than thoſe 'who move in a higher Sphere: That he is ſpur- 'ring on the Club daily, and has made many of 'them more active in the Law-Suit, than they 'otherwiſe would have been. That his Wife 'parted the Day before for Paris; and that he 'gave her a Letter for Dillon; his Fellow-Tra- 'veller thinking himſelf intitled to it, or any 'other Civilities Dillon could ſhew her, during 'her ſtay there.' He adds, 'Your Friends con- 'tinue their Preparation, and reſolve to hold 'themſelves in readineſs on Occaſion.'

The Committee take notice, that theſe Letters were writ juſt about the time that Layer went down to Norfolk. And they think the ſanguine manner in which Plunket writes, is in part accounted for by what Lord North and Grey [26] told Layer, That the Encampment had ſpoiled the Project: but we ſhall have them again. And by his Lordſhip's ſaying, [27] Be you quiet, ſomething will be done: If [28] there be a Riſing, you ſhall not want Men, or Money, or Arms. And that theſe Letters and Paſſages make it highly probable, that the Subſtance of Layer's Scheme had not been only ſeen, but approved of.

Notwithſtanding the Account which Plunket gives in this and other Letters, of Layer's Proceedings, yet Layer denied that he had ever opened himſelf to Plunket, in relation to the Pretender's Affairs, after their return from Rome; and Plunket affirmed, that he only knew Layer by Coffee-houſe Acquaintance, and never converſed with him but in the Streets publickly.

Plunket's next [29] Letter is of the 23d of July, the Original of which being ſtopped, and being ſworn to be his own Handwriting, the Committee think it proper to lay the whole before the Houſe, with the Explanation of the fictitious Names taken out of the Cypher, which is ſworn to be his own Hand alſo.

July 23d, 1722.

'BY the time this comes to hand, King 'George's Agent will arrive there: I'm glad 'on't, becauſe I hope all the Negotiations and 'Proceedings of the Miniſtry and King George, 'will be laid before the Parliament, which will be 'a Means to ſend him to Hannover. Though he 'thinks to bring the Country Party to approve of 'whatever he will propoſe to the Parliament; he 'will hardly even bring the Court Party to do it. 'He thinks to diſculpe himſelf at the Expenſe of 'the Dead. This I told ſome of the Parliament- 'Men; they ſay 'twont do for Love or Money. 'Certain Perſons are forming Projects that will 'diſtreſs the Court of Spain, in caſe of War be- 'tween Spain and the Emperor. Count Bothmar 'comes into it by King George's Connivance; 'tis 'now in Embrio: When it comes to Perfection, 'I ſhall be Maſter on't. I gave a Hint on't 'to the Regent's Agent; he was not a little ſur- 'prized at it. They muſt not linger much lon- 'ger; if they do, the Emperor and King George 'will find Means to diſtreſs the Court of Spain 'and the Miniſtry in France; they muſt haſten 'the Peace to prevent it.

'My Companion, who has been in the Coun- 'try this three Weeks paſt, came to Town yeſter- 'day: He ſeems to be ſure of his Game, viz. 'that Mr. Joſeph's Friends will run down the 'Miniſtry and King George, in a little time, and 'bring the Law-Suit to bear on their own Bot- 'tom, and independent of the Regent, or any bo- 'dy elſe. I am reſolved to know nothing of their 'Proceedings; I am for having every thing laid 'before the Parliament firſt, and then every body 'will ſee we want the Pretender more than he 'wants us. Both Friend and Foe will join in 'any Enterprize that will be made in his favour: 'Neither will they ever dare upbraid him, if, on 'any Occaſion, he ſhould look aſquint on 'em 'hereafter. I hinted often, the only way to ſpirit 'em up, was to convince 'em the Law-Suit 'would be brought to bear without them; and 'that by the Regent, and King George. The 'Conſtruction they put upon this, that the former 'was ſubtle enough to make uſe of the Folly of 'the latter, to play the Game to his own Advan- 'tage at our Coſt, and that he will govern Mr. 'Joſeph, when here, as he does now King George. 'This, or ſome ſuch Imagination, gave them an 'uncommon Reſolution; and I believe they will 'ſtruggle hard for a Start in the Race of Honour. 'Tis in the Regent's Power to make King George, 'the Miniſtry and the Club, to give Mr. Joſeph 'a Carte Blanche: 'Tis incumbent on you to con- 'vince him of it. I am ſure his Agent here is 'already; for I gave him this Morning demon- 'ſtrative Proof, that King George deſigns to ſup- 'port the Emperor againſt the French King and 'his Conſ. and that without being ſeen in it.

'I

'I would be glad to know how the Duke of 'Berwick does, and if he continues there this 'Summer. I have little to do in Town, ſo I de- 'ſign to go to the Country for three Weeks. 'The Town is dull and empty.

'We hear the Czar is in Motion, I wiſh it 'may be towards Hannover, for King George 'would ſoon move from his Country Seat here.

'I believe Mr. Joſeph will laugh, when he'll 'hear of the Stratagem I made uſe of, to bring 'his Friends to ſo good Temper of Duty. I 'hope they will to keep to it, which is the Wiſh of,

SIR,

Your humble, obedient Servant,

JO. ROGERS.

In his * Letter of the 16th of Auguſt, he ſays, 'The Pretender's Law-Buſineſs continues in the 'ſame Plight. My Companion goes on, as he 'thinks, very ſucceſsfully, and is confident he 'will bring the Buſineſs to bear in a little Time.

This Letter was writ nine Days before Layer went down to Lord North and Grey's with Lynch.

Plunket ſays in the ſame Letter, 'That the 'Pretender muſt promiſe the Regent and Mini- 'ſtry of France fair, and that he will be a faſt 'Friend, when in his Power, and muſt ſeem to 'rely more on them, than any here; that this is 'the only Game he has to play at this Time.'

In his next † Letter of the 23d of Auguſt, he ſays, 'That his Friend came out of the Country 'a few Days ago, and told him, that his Clients 'ſeem now to deſpair of bringing the Law-Buſi- 'neſs to bear this next Term, except the Regent 'were made a Party; that he, Plunket, told him, 'in caſe the Regent were applied to in a proper 'Manner, he might be prevailed on to come 'into proper Meaſures, at leaſt indirectly, and 'that without Breach of the bonne Foy he owes 'King George, or the Miniſtry.' He adds, 'that 'they (his Friend's Clients) are for any thing but 'under their Hands; and that if they ſhould ap- 'ply to Dillon, or the Regent (as his Companion 'had told him they ſoon would) they might ſafe- 'ly offer at leaſt to come into their Meaſures, to 'ſtop their Mouths hereafter: And he thinks, 'with Submiſſion, 'tis pity to hinder them from 'plunging themſelves, as they did before.' He adds, 'That it is in the Power of the Regent 'and Miniſtry of France, to make the enſuing 'Parliament give the Pretender his own Terms; 'and that as the French King is ſoon to be of 'Age, he may do every thing with a good Grace 'and bonne Foy; and ſettle the Pretender ſo, 'that it will always be in his Power to ſerve 'him, and the Court of Spain.'

Plunket, who aſſumes to himſelf ſo conſiderable a Part in theſe Tranſactions, being aſked by the Committee, to give ſome Account of his Life and Education, [1] ſaid, that he was born at Dublin, and bred up, when a Boy, at the Jeſuits College at Vienna; that he is a Roman Catholick, but not in any Orders. And tho he endeavoured (as has been obſerved above) by his Dreſs, Appearance, and Behaviour, to repreſent himſelf to the Committee as very inconſiderable, and no ways equal to the Part he was taxed with, yet a great Number of [2] Letters from Perſons of the firſt Quality abroad, were found among his Papers, in which the Committee obſerve he is treated with great Intimacy and Confidence. And in a [3] Letter from the Lady Middleton, of an old Date, Mention is made of her being to introduce him to the late King James's Queen in France; to whom, as he owned to the Committee, he had been introduced. And that the Truſt and Confidence repoſed in him, ſtill ſubſiſts undiminiſhed, appears to the Committee, not only by his own [4] confeſſing, that he did walk and converſe with the Pretender publickly in his Garden at Rome, but from Layer's Account, that he had two private Conferences with the Pretender; and above all, from the [5] Letter under the Pretender's own Hand, which he ſhewed to Layer at Rome, and which has been communicated to the Committee, as before-mentioned, in which the Pretender treats him with ſuch Diſtinction, as to charge him not to mention any Thing of Buſineſs to any Body, till he himſelf had ſeen him alone; than which, the Committee think a ſtronger and more convincing Proof of Truſt could not well have been given. It appears alſo by [6] foul Draughts of Letters taken among his Papers, that he writ directly to the Pretender himſelf.

Mention being made in Plunket's Letters, of Johnſon, alias George Kelly, and ſome Extracts of Letters to and from the ſaid Kelly having been referred to the Committee among Layer's and Plunket's Papers, by which it appeared to them, that Kelly's treaſonable Correſpondence had a Connexion with the others, and particularly, that he was privy to ſome of Plunket's Tranſactions; your Committee thought that their having a general View of all the Papers relating to the Conſpiracy, might help to illuſtrate and explain the ſeveral Parts of it, in the ſame manner as Layer's and Plunket's Papers mutually confirm and give Light to each other.

For this Reaſon they moved the Houſe to have thoſe Papers laid before them, and to empower them to take ſuch farther Examinations, as might be neceſſary to lead them on in tracing out the Source of the Treaſons enquired into.

Having accordingly peruſed thoſe Papers, and examined ſome of the Perſons principally concerned in them, they now proceed to lay before you the Reſult of that Enquiry.

It appears to them, that George Kelly, Clerk, has been of late Years conſtantly employed in carrying on ſeveral treaſonable Correſpondences and Negotiations between the Pretender's Agents abroad, and Perſons of great Diſtinction at home, tending to the bringing in the Pretender with an armed Force, and to the overturning the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment in Church and State.

And here your Committee find themſelves obliged to mention the Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, as principally aiding, directing and employing the ſaid Kelly, in the Proſecution of his treaſonable Deſigns.

As Kelly's Correſpondences ſeem to derive their Weight and Significancy chiefly from his being employed by the Biſhop of Rocheſter, your Committee will firſt lay before you the ſeveral Reaſons that induce them to believe he was ſo employed, and the Part which it appears to them the Biſhop has had in this Conſpiracy.

* C. 64. † C. 65. [1] C. 73. [2] C. 1.—36. [3] C. 34. [4] C. 73.
[5] C. 69. [6] B. 23, C. 41.

It apppears to your Committee, from ſeveral Informations of Philip Neynoe, Clerk, formerly mentioned, 'That George Kelly, alias Johnſon, 'frequently told him, that the Biſhop of Rochester held Correſpondences with the Pretender and his Agents: That he, Kelly, was 'employed by the Biſhop, in writing for him, 'and carrying on the ſaid Correſpondences; that 'Kelly told him, the Pretender relied more on 'Advices from the Biſhop, than from any other 'Perſon; that he had ſeveral times left Kelly at 'the Biſhop's Door, when Kelly went into the 'Biſhop's Houſe, and ſtaid there an Hour or 'two, and upon coming back to him, Kelly made 'Apologies for ſtaying ſo long, and told him, 'he had been writing the Biſhop's Letters, which 'he always apprehended to be the Foreign Cor'reſpondence of the Biſhop with the Pretender's 'Agents; and that Kelly told him, the Biſhop 'never ſuffered him to take a Bit of Paper of the 'Biſhop's Hand-writing out of the Room.

'That he knows Letters were directed to Kelly, 'by the Name of Moſes Hancock and Hatfield; 'and that he has ſeen at Burton's Coffee-houſe, a 'Letter to Kelly from Howell, (whom he takes 'to be Agent or Secretary to Dillon, and em'ployed by Dillon in the ſame manner as Kelly 'was by the Biſhop of Rochester) in which Letter 'there were Compliments to the Biſhop, by the 'Name of Naunton, which Name Kelley explained 'to him to mean the Biſhop. That Kelly has 'told him, the Biſhop of Rochester went ſome'times by the Name of Jones, that he had like'wiſe heard the Biſhop went ſometimes by the 'Name of Illington, which laſt he was told by 'Mr. Carte, to the beſt of his Memory. That 'in the Letter which Kelly ſhewed him at Bur'ton's Coffee-houſe, mention was made of Manſ'field, which Kelly explained to him, to mean the 'late Duke of Ormond. That he has ſeen ſeveral 'Cyphers in Kelly's Hands, one in Figures, ano'ther of fictitious Names, in which laſt, Carpen'ters ſtood for Scotch Soldiers; Sadlers and Sophi'ſters, for Iriſh Soldiers, and the like; that he 'has ſeen Kelly make uſe of theſe Cyphers, and 'that Kelly with great Freedom owned, that 'theſe Cyphers were for carrying on the Corre'ſpondence with the Pretender's Agents. That 'he had likewiſe ſeen Cyphers in Carte's Hands, 'who was alſo employed in writing Diſpatches 'to the Pretender's Agents abroad. That he, 'Neynoe, had been employed to draw up three 'ſeveral Memorials to the Regent of France, to 'ſollicit him to ſend Forces to the Aſſiſtance of 'the Conſpirators, the laſt of which was in De'cember, 1721, and contained a Demand of five 'Thouſand Men to be ſent to invade theſe King'doms; that the Heads of theſe Memorials were 'given him by Kelly, and one who went by the 'Name of Watſon, whom he took to be the late 'Earl Marſhal.

'That in March laſt, Kelly brought him the 'Heads of a Letter, to be drawn up with a De'ſign of its being intercepted by the Government, 'in order to amuſe them into a falſe Security. 'That he drew up the ſaid Letter in a Paper 'writ Column-ways; that this Paper was brought 'back to him, corrected by the Biſhop of Ro'cheſter, as he believed.'

Your Committee are informed this Letter was not intercepted, but that a Copy of it was ſent, about that Time, to one of the Secretaries of State, from an unknown Hand.

Neynoe farther declared, 'That the Biſhop of 'Rochester, Lord Orrery, Lord North, and Sir 'Harry Goring, were the principal Leaders and 'Directors of the Conſpiracy, which was firſt to 'have been executed in the Spring of the Year '1722, by ſeizing the Tower, upon which the 'late Duke of Ormond was to have landed in the 'River; that upon the Diſcovery of the Plot, 'and the King's not going abroad, it was put 'off for ſome Time, but that it was afterwards 'reſumed to be attempted in the Weſt.' Neynoe farther added, 'That Kelly aſſured him, the Biſhop 'got Notice of his being to be taken up, ſome 'Days before it happened; and that this No'tice was given the Biſhop by one of the Lords 'of the Council.' But he afterwards confeſſed, (as your Committee are informed) that in this, and other Examinations, he had endeavoured all he could, to create Diffidence and Suſpicions among his Majeſty's Servants.

Theſe Informations of Neynoe are contained, great Part of them, in a Paper [8] writ with his own Hand, and delivered by him to a Committee of Lords of the Council. The other Part is extracted out of [9] Papers which he dictated at his ſeveral Examinations; which Papers were read to him Paragraph by Paragraph, and agreed to by him before the Lords.

That Neynoe was intimately acquainted with Kelly, viſited him often, and ſometimes lay at his Lodgings, and thereby had a better Opportunity of being informed by him, appears from the [10] Depoſitions of Stevenſon and his Wife, Margaret [11] Kilburne, Landlady to Kelly, and John [12] Malone, Servant to Mrs. Barnes, who waited on Kelly at his Lodgings.

That the Biſhop of Rochester was acquainted with Kelly, invited him to dine with him, ſent his Servants to enquire after his Health, and wrote to him, appears from [13] Stevenſon's and Kilburn's Depoſitions, as alſo in Part from [14] Mrs. Levett's.

But what gives the greateſt Weight to the ſeveral Particulars contained in Neynoe's Informations, is, that they are corroborated and ſupported in every material Circumſtance, by ſeveral concurrent Proofs, as will appear from the Sequel of this Report.

Pancier has [15] depoſed upon Oath, that Skeene, among other Particulars of the Conſpiracy, told him, that the Biſhop of Rochester, in Conjunction with the Lord North and Grey, had the principal Direction of the Conſpiracy; and that two Hundred Thouſand Pounds had been raiſed, and put into the Management of the Biſhop of Rochester, which was called the Military Cheſt, and was to be kept together till the Project was put in Execution.

Your Committee are informed, that when the Biſhop was taken into Cuſtody, vaſt Numbers of Letters and Papers were found in his Houſe, bearing Date before the Year 1712; but from that Time downwards, few of any Conſequence, except theſe which follow.

[16] One was from the Dutcheſs of Ormond, dated January 14, 1721. in which are theſe Words:

'I reſolved to ſend what I received: For tho 'it had not happened to belong to the Perſon I 'addreſſed it to, I was ſure it could not be put 'into better Hands.'

This

This Paſſage makes it highly probable, that the Biſhop uſed to receive Letters from abroad, directed by fictitious Names. Which is ſtill further confirmed by the following Circumſtances:

In the [17] Cypher which Layer owned he received from Sir William Ellis, the Biſhop of Rocheſter is deſigned by the Name of Juſtus.

Neynoe [18] declared, that in the Letter which Kelly ſhewed him from Dillon's Secretary, there were Compliments to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, by the Name of Naunton.

Among the Biſhop's Letters was found one directed to Mr. Dubois, not ſigned with any Name, nor dated from any Place. It was in the following Words:

SIR,

'FOrgive my Silence. You eaſily conceive 'the Difficulties I am under in that Regard. 'I write this only to aſſure you of my ſincereſt 'and unalterable Reſpect; and refer you to the 'worthy Bearer for News, and for every Thing, 'which otherwiſe I ſhould have found ſome Way 'or other of writing to you myſelf. I have heard 'nothing from you ſince the Letter I had about 'two Months ago by Mr. Johnſon, to which I 'immediately in his Hand returned my Anſwer. 'A Rumour has reached me of your having writ-'ten hither ſince; but I can find no Body that 'owns he has ſeen your Letters.

I am always, SIR,

Dec. 16. Your truly Obedient, and moſt Humble Servant.

Your Committee obſerve, That Johnſon is the Name by which Kelly conſtantly went, as appears to them from ſeveral Affidavits: And that he was at Paris the 16th of December, 1721. N. S. and ſet out in two or three Days after for England, as appears from the [19] Pocket-Book taken upon him: And the Letter to Dubois ſeems to intimate ſuch a Correſpondence as made it unſafe to write openly, and without Diſguiſe.

Among the Biſhop's Papers was found another [21] Letter, dated Rouen, Jan. 15th, 1722. without any Name; and the Superſcription torn off: Which Letter is mentioned to be ſent by an honeſt Gentleman; and the Writer of it deſires to know how he may direct; and deſires to be directed to by the Name of Wiſhart, at Mr. Arbuthnot's at Rouen, which is probably a fictitious Direction, no Name being ſubſcribed to the Letter. He likewiſe mentions a former Letter ſent under Cover to their common Friend Sir Red. Who Sir Red. is, does not appear to your Committee; but they find one Sir Red. Everard inſerted in Plunket's [22] Cypher, and deſigned by the fictitious Name of Fly.

Among the Biſhop's Papers were likewiſe found two [23] Letters from Captain Charles Halſtead of Greenwich; the Perſon who, as has been mentioned above, was ſent to Bilboa, to tranſport the late Duke of Ormond to England.

Some Letters having been intercepted, which there is good Reaſon to believe were from the Biſhop of Rocheſter; and [24] one of theſe Letters being ſigned T. Jones, and another [25] T. Illington, your Committee will now lay before the Houſe the Evidence they have found of the Biſhop's being deſigned by thoſe two Names, collected from Circumſtances, which being in themſelves ſeemingly minute, and of little Conſequence, were for this Reaſon more frankly confeſſed by thoſe, who were obſtinate in concealing ſtronger Proofs; and yet at the ſame Time lead directly to the Diſcovery of the Perſon meant by thoſe Names.

Mrs. Barnes being examined before a Committee of Lords of the Council, obſtinately refuſed to make the leaſt Diſcovery relating to George Kelly; but when ſhe came to be aſked what ſhe knew about a Dog, ſent over to Kelly from France; not ſuſpecting this could lead to any Diſcovery, ſhe readily [26] owned, That a ſpotted little Dog, called Harlequin, which was brought from France, and had a Leg broken, was left with her by Mr. Kelly, to be cured: That the ſaid Dog was not for her, but for the Biſhop of Rocheſter; and that Kelly promiſed to get the Dog of the Biſhop of Rocheſter for her, in caſe it did not recover of its Lameneſs. This Declaration ſhe made and ſigned in the Preſence of the Committee of Council: And Kelly himſelf made no Difficulty [27] to own the receiving ſuch a Dog from France.

But it appears to your Committee, by Letters intercepted between Kelly and his Correſpondents in France, (the Proofs of which will be ſet forth in the Sequel of this Report,) That a Dog ſo named and hurt, was ſent over to Kelly from France, to be delivered as a Preſent to the Perſon denoted by the Names of Jones and Illington.

For in his [28] Letter to Howell (who is explained in Plunket's Cypher to mean Glaſgow, and has been obſerved above to be Dillon's Secretary) he mentions his having received the Preſent, and the Accident of a Leg being broken in the Voyage; and adds, 'I will inform Mr. Jones ſoon of it, to whom I know any Thing from that Quarter will be very acceptable.' In the ſame Paragraph he ſays, 'Mrs. Jones died laſt Week; and when the Days of Mourning are over, he will, I hope, be fit for Buſineſs.' This Letter was writ on Monday the 30th of April; and the Biſhop's Lady [29] died the Week before, on Thurſday the 26th of April.

Kelly in his [1] Letter to Muſgrave, (which Name will be hereafter ſhewn to ſignify the late Lord Marr) dated the 7th of May, ſays 'Mrs. 'Illington is in great Tribulation for poor Harle-'quin, who is in a bad Way, having ſlipp'd his 'Leg again, before it was thoroughly well: 'However, his Obligations to the Lady are as 'great as if he had come ſafe, which he deſires 'you to let her know.'

The Words He and His being relative to Mrs. Illington, ſhew it is a Man that is ſpoken of: The Biſhop's Lady was dead at the Time this Letter was writ. And this Diſguiſe of putting Mrs. for Mr. is frequently made uſe of in the intercepted Letters, and is confirmed by a parallel Inſtance immediately following.

May the 9th, Dillon's Secretary [2] writes to Kelly, and ſays, 'Mrs. Chivers, (which will be 'ſhewn to be General Dillon) prays you will 'condole in his Name on the Death of Mrs. 'Illington.'

[17] B.Y. 1. [18] E. 10. [19] E. 6. 12. 13. 14. [20] E. 17. [21] D. 7. [22] C. 51. [23] D. 8. 9.
[24] D. 10. [25] D. 11. [26] E. 4. [27] E. 1. [28] E. 35. [29] D. 47. 48. [1] E. 42. [2] E. 43.

It appears by theſe Paſſages, that the Dog was for Mr. Jones, alias Illington: And upon Kelly's writing word that Mrs. Jones was dead, the Correſpondents condole on the Death of Mrs. Illington; which ſhews Jones and Illington to be the ſame, and both to be made uſe of to denote the Biſhop.

On the 11th of May, Motfield (who is the ſame with Muſgrave, that is, the late Lord Marr) ſends a [1] Letter to Mr. Illington, encloſed under Cover to Kelly; in which, after acknowledging the Receipt of Illington's Letter of the 20th of April, he adds 'I did not expect ſo ſoon after to 'have heard of a Loſs you have had ſince; for 'which I condole with you, and nothing which 'concerns you ſo near can fail touching me, as 'in Friendſhip it ought. It is tho, becoming us, 'as it is our Duty, to ſubmit with Reſignation 'to what the Juſt and Great God thinks fit to 'order for us in this vain and tranſitory World; 'but you know ſuch things ſo much better than 'I, that will not trouble you with ſaying any 'more upon it.'

This laſt Paragraph ſeems to point out the Character and Function of the Perſon to whom the Letter was writ.

Motfield adds, 'I would fain hope that your 'own Diſtemper will ſoon give you eaſe;' which agrees with the Circumſtance of the Biſhop's being ill of the Gout, at the time of his Wife's Death.

This Particularity, as alſo ſeveral others, which will be taken notice of, as to the Biſhop's being in Town or in the Country, at the reſpective times mentioned in the intercepted Letters, have been carefully inquired into; and it appears by a [4] Paper annexed to the Report, that theſe ſeveral Circumſtances do exactly agree with what is mentioned in the Letters.

Kelly [5] writing to Muſgrave (the late Lord Marr) the 7th of May, ſays, Mrs. Jones is come to Town: the ſame Day writing to Chivers (Dillon) he ſays Mr. Illington is now in Town; which again confirms Jones and Illington to be the ſame, and agrees with the Inquiry made at that time.

On the 10th of May, Kelly [6] writes to Dellon's Secretary, Illington is gone into the Country, and ſent me word he would be in Town on Tueſday Night, when he has deſired to ſee me at a particular Hour, by which I conclude it may be about Buſineſs. And on Monday the 14th of May, (the Day before, it is ſaid, Illington was come to Town) [7] writing to the ſame Perſon, he ſays, Jones is ſtill in the Country, but has ſent me word he will be in Town to-morrow.

Theſe ſeveral Circumſtances, join'd to Neynoe's Declaration, that Kelly had told him, the Biſhop went ſometimes by the Name of Jones, and that Carte had told him, the Biſhop went by the Name of Illington, ſhew, that wherever Jones and Illington are named in Kelly's Correſpondence, the Biſhop of Rocheſter is to be underſtood by thoſe Names.

Your Committee therefore will next proceed to lay before you the part which Jones or Illington appear to have borne in the treaſonable Correſpondence.

It appears by Kelly's [8] Pocket-Book, that Kelly ſet out for Paris on the 22d of February 172$\frac{4}{5}$, and return'd to London about the 8th of April following. It appears by [9] Mrs. Levett's and [10] John Malone's Depoſition, that he came to Mrs. Barnes's on Wedneſday the 11th of April, at eight in the Morning, extremely fatigued, and went immediately to bed. Mrs. Levett has depoſed upon Oath, 'That Mrs. Barnes told her he was then 'juſt arrived from France, and brought over 'Letters with him: That ſeveral of the Diſaffected had been at her Houſe to inquire after 'him before his Arrival, and expreſs'd the utmoſt 'Concern for fear he ſhould be taken.' And [11] Neynoe declar'd, 'That he ſaw a great Bundle 'of Letters, which Kelly brought over from 'France.' Mrs. Barnes farther told Mrs. Levett, 'That the Day after, (viz. Thurſday the 12th of 'April) the Biſhop of Rocheſter ſent his own Coach 'to fetch him, and that Kelly was abſent in the 'Country till Saturday the 14th.' Two [12] Depoſitions, annexed to this Report, ſhew, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter came to Town on Wedneſday the 11th, and went to Bromley on Thurſday the 12th of April.

It appears by a [13] Letter writ to Kelly from France by the late Lord Marr, and intercepted, that on Monday the 16th of April (which was the firſt Poſt-day to France, after the Biſhop had ſent for Kelly) Kelly had writ to Marr an Account of his Negotiations with Illington, and of Illington's Willingneſs to be reconciled to one, deſign'd by the Name of Hacket. Who Hacket is, does not appear to your Committee, but he is deſcribed in ſeveral of the Letters as a Perſon in ill Health, retired in the Country, and one in whom the Pretender's Agents at Paris place their greateſt Hopes and Confidence next to Illington. This Reconciliation with Hacket, Illington was deſirous might be kept ſecret for ſome time, that it might not be known they acted in concert.

It appears by another [14] Letter to Kelly from Dillon's Secretary at Paris, that Illington had writ a myſterious Letter thither, and that Kelly had writ a ſubſequent one in Explanation of it, which had been ſhewn to Dillon.

The firſt [15] Letter that was intercepted from Kelly himſelf, was dated the 22d of April, ſigned James Johnſon (the Name he always went by, and often ſigned by) and directed to Gordon junior, Banker at Boulogne, at whoſe Houſe it is probable he had been entertained in his laſt Return from Paris; which Gordon is mentioned in a [16] Letter from Mr. Craufurd, as being formerly the Pretender's Banker, and as one employ'd in hiring a Veſſel to tranſport ſome of the Chiefs of the Conſpiracy to England. In this Letter to Gordon, Kelly recommends to his Care a Packet encloſed.

This Packet was directed to Mr. Chivers (which will be prov'd to be Dillon) and conſiſted of three Letters, one to Chivers himſelf, ſign'd T. Jones, another to Muſgrave (which will be prov'd to be Marr) ſign'd T. Illington, a third to Mr. Jackſon (which will be prov'd to be the Pretender) ſign'd 1378, which Number is found by the Decypherers, to denote the proper Name of a Perſon beginning with the Letter R, in the Cypher made uſe of in theſe three Letters, the Order of which, as your Committee is inform'd, is alphabetical. All the three Letters were dated the 20th of April, and appear by the Matter to be from the ſame Perſon, which prove 1378 to be the ſame with Jones and Illington. The Letters to Muſ- grave and Jackson were enclosed in that to Chivers.

The Person who dictated these Letters, speaks of himself as being in ill Health, in great Pain, under some sad and melancholy Circumstances, which made him uncapable of doing any thing regularly at that time, but which he expected would soon blow over; which agrees with the Bishop's [17] Circumstances at that time, whose Wife was extremely ill, and died six days after, and he himself, as has been observ'd before, was at that time afflicted with the Gout.

The Letter to Chivers is a great part of it out of Cypher, and with the Decyphering is in the following Words.

'I Ought to acknowledge in form the several 'Papers I have successively receiv'd from you, 'if I were capable at present of doing any thing 'regularly; but indeed I am not, as Hatfield 'well knows, and why I am not. Some time 'must pass before I am any way capable of Bu'siness; in the mean time you are in the right to 'press the Gentlemen concerned by all manner 'of ways you can think of, to furnish, what by 'being hitherto not supply'd, has render'd the 'thing impracticable. They were desirous of 'having that Matter intirely in their own Ma'nagement, and I not unwilling that they should 'have it, being always diffident of Success on 'my part upon Interpositions of that kind; and 'therefore it gave me no concern to be so freely 'excused from any Share (as I was for a great 'while) in that trouble. At last indeed, when 'the point was found upon trial to be more dif'ficult than they expected, I was press'd to under'take the Matter; but so late, that I did not 'think it reasonable for me then to interpose, 'nor can I yet undertake any thing of that kind, 'it being what (since some former Mismanage'ment wherein I was deeply concerned) I have 'constantly declined, hoping that I might not be 'altogether unuseful to the Service, if I went on 'to promote it in my own, that is, in another 'way. I still hope so, and that a little time '(which must be employ'd in doing nothing but 'soliciting Supplies) will give me room for en'tring into Measures that may be somewhat more 'significant than those formerly taken; this I 'shall endeavour, being at present perfectly tired 'by the distracting Measures which have been 'taken from several Quarters, by Persons no 'ways equal to the Work, and at the same time 'not agreeing among themselves. This is all I 'can say at present, but that I am, with the same 'entire Respect and Fidelity I ever was,

S I R, Your most, &c.

T. Jones.

'I have communicated the Copies of Mr. Man'field's and Jacob's Letters, which besides the '[18] G..... :....., (whereof they had a 'Copy) were the only ones of those transmitted, 'that I was directed, or indeed thought proper so 'to do. Tho I have for some time thought, 'that nothing of Importance should be trusted to 'the Post, and am resolved myself not to send 'that way; yet the Death of Lord Sunderland 'makes such a Caution more indispensibly neces'sary; for you may depend upon't, that those 'in Power here will now enter into Measures of 'more Severity and Strictness, and employ all 'their Diligence, as well as Power, on such Oc'casions.'

That Chivers, to whom this Letter was directed, means General Dillon, is evident from the following Circumstances.

On the 13th of May, Cane [19] writing to Kelly, owns the Receipt of these Letters from the Bishop, but over-against the Name of Cane in Plunket's [20] Cypher, is writ Dillon, and Kelly [21] answering this very Letter of Cane's, directs to Chivers. Besides which, it appears from innumerable Passages, that Cane and Chivers mean the same with Digby and Dixwell, which have been shewn at large to denote General Dillon.

The Bishop's Letter to Musgrave (who will be prov'd to be the late Lord Marr) is as follows:

To Mr. Musgrave.

S I R, April the 20th 1722.

'I Received from Mr. Hatfield (after a long In'termission of such Favours) a Letter which 'was very welcome to me: I have also consider'd 'carefully what he had to offer to me in particu'lar, and intirely agree with what is proposed; 'but my present sad Circumstances (of which he 'has already inform'd you) will not suffer me to 'be active soon, or even set forward the Affairs 'entrusted with me in so speedy a manner as I 'could wish. The best is, that as I cannot act 'openly, so neither is there, I think, any imme'diate Need of it, some time being requisite to'wards ripening Matters, in order to fix the '[22] C..... :.....'d, which, if hastily 'begun, may be attended with Suspicions and 'other Inconveniencys; but you may depend up'on it that the [22] :..... :.....s committed 'to my care, shall be forwarded in due time to 'the Persons concerned, as also all such other '[22] :.....s as I judge, and at the time I judge, 'they will best promote the Service. What is 'to be wish'd for, is, that the Person whom I 'am to act with, would come to Town, and his 'doing so may be facilitated better from your 'side, than by any thing that can be done here; 'by that time he comes, I hope I shall be able 'to take my part with him. I add no more now, 'being very unfit to say even thus much, but 'that I am with entire Respect and Confidence,

S I R, &c.

T. Illington.

That Musgrave (to whom this Letter was directed) means Marr, is thus proved.

Dillon's Secretary [23] writes to Kelly that Mr. Lane (over-against which Name in [24] Plunket's Cypher is writ Lord Marr) was much pleased with his first Letter, which, as has been observed before, was writ on the 16th of April.

Soon after a Person [25] writes to Kelly, acknowledging the Receipt of this Letter of the 16th of April, and expressing his Satisfaction at Illington's Willingness to be reconciled with Hacket; his Letter is sign'd 918, which Number is found by the Decypherers to denote the proper Name of a Perſon beginning with the Letter M, and Kelly [16] anſwering this Letter directs to Muſgrave.

Beſides which, Muſgrave is found to be a Perſon, whoſe Penſion is ſaid to be ſtopt in England, at the very time that a [17] Penſion granted to the late Lord Marr was ſtopt, and is ſpoken of in other [18] Letters as one ſuſpected of betraying them, with ſuch Circumſtances as fix the Perſon meant to be the late Lord Marr.

The Biſhop's Letter to Jackſon (who will be proved to mean the Pretender) is as follows:

To Mr. Jackſon, under the Cover of
M. Gordon le fils, Banquier à Boulogne ſur Mer.

SIR, April the 20th, 1722.

'I AM ſorry to find by yours, which Hatfield brought, that you know our Circumſtances 'on this ſide ſo well, becauſe that Knowledge 'does not, I apprehend, give you any advantage-'ous Opinion of us; however, let that be as it 'will, 'tis not fit you ſhould be deceiv'd, and re-'ly on more than will be made good to you: 'if you gueſs'd at my right Mind, I dare ſay, it 'was agreeable to your own, and that you could 'not but ſee thro' the forwardneſs of all thoſe un-'ſupported pretending People. Notwithſtanding 'this Opportunity is elapſed, I agree with you, 'another may offer before the end of the Year, 'tho not perhaps every way ſo favourable: how-'ever it became me to ſpeak ſtrongly on that 'head, eſpecially at the time when the [19]: ..... 'was drawn, which was long before it was tranſ-'mitted, for it was kept back a great while, in 'hopes that Deeds might have accompany'd 'Words, and ſent at laſt rather to juſtify the 'Writer in reſpect to that part he had under-'taken, than to puſh on any Deſign in ſo un-'provided a Condition. I find I was not miſtaken 'and am glad I was not ſo, tho every Word of 'that [19]: ..... paſſed the View and Appro-'bation of the Perſons concern'd, but they were 'to be and ſhall always be by me treated ten-'derly; tho nothing ſhall engage me to enter 'deep with them for the future. I had taken this 'Reſolution before Hatfield's Return, and am plea-'ſed to find that you concur with me in Opinion. 'As ſoon as God reſtores me to my Health, and 'ſome other melancholy Circumſtances are blown 'over, which will be as ſoon as there is any oc-'caſion for me, I will not be idle: in the mean 'time give me leave to withdraw myſelf ſeem-'ingly from any Engagement of this kind; I 'ſhall return to it, I doubt not, with more Abi-'lity to promote the Work: not that I will 'decline any proper Occaſions that may offer 'themſelves to converſe freely with the Men and 'in the manner I have been uſed to do, for it is 'fit upon all Accounts I ſhould do ſo; but by 'little and little that Confidence will cool, and 'make room I hope for ſomewhat of a more 'ſolid and important Nature. I dictate this in 'great Pain, and for that Reaſon, and becauſe I 'am not at preſent in any readineſs to go fur-'ther, ſhall add only my faithful Aſſurances of 'an entire and unalterable Reſpect for you.

R.

That Jackſon (to whom this Letter is directed) means the Pretender, appears from [20] Plunket's Cypher, in which, over-againſt the Name of Jackſon, is writ, The King; tho two Names had gone before in that Cypher, over-againſt which is writ, King George.

Beſides which, [21] Plunket's Letter mentioning his and Layer's Journey to Rome, is directed to Mr. Jackſon; and Jackſon appears from other Letters to be the ſame with Malcom, to whom Application is made in a [22] Letter from Edinburgh, for a Patent for Knight Baronet, and for Orders to raiſe one or two Battalions.

The Cypher made uſe of in theſe three Letters is the very ſame that is made uſe of in two Letters intercepted from the late Duke of Ormond's Agents in Spain, of which Notice has been already taken. And the ſame Cypher is alſo uſed in Letters from George Kelly, and to Dennis Kelly. And among the Papers of the latter was found a [23] Piece of a Cypher in George Kelly's Hand-writing, which your Committee are inform'd is a Supplement to the Cypher made uſe of in Jones and Illington's Letters.

The Clerks of the Poſt-Office, who opened and copied theſe Letters, having been ſhewn ſeveral Papers ſworn to be George Kelly's Hand-writing, have [24] depoſed upon Oath, that the Letter to Gordon junior, ſign'd James Jhonſon, as well as the three Letters enclos'd in it, directed to Chivers, Muſgrave and Jackſon, were all, to the beſt of their Knowledge and Belief, writ in the ſame Hand with thoſe Papers; which join'd to [25] Neynoe's Information, that Kelly had told him, he was employ'd in writing Letters for the Biſhop to the Pretender's Agents abroad; that the Biſhop never let him carry a Bit of his Hand-writing out of the Room; and that Kelly made uſe both of a numerical Cypher, and a Cypher of fictitious Names, for managing this treaſonable Correſpondence; appears to be a ſtrong Confirmation that theſe three Letters were dictated to Kelly by the Biſhop, and that the Biſhop is the Perſon denoted by the Names of Jones and Illington, and by the Cypher 1378.

In what manner theſe Letters were convey'd to Paris, will be obſerved in that part of the Report which relates to Kelly. The Correſpondents at Paris [26] own the Receipt of the Packet from their Couſin Jones; and on the 7th of May, Kelly [27] writes Dillon word, that Illington is glad to hear his Letters came ſafe, and wiſhes his next be more to Dillon's Satisfaction.

Your Committee having thus laid before you the Grounds they have to be convinced, that theſe three Letters were ſent from the Biſhop of Rocheſter to General Dillon, the late Lord Marr, and the Pretender; they think it their Duty to make ſome Obſervations on the Contents of them.

They obſerve from his Letter to Dillon, that he has contracted a great Intimacy and Familiarity with a profeſs'd Roman Catholick, who appear'd openly in Arms againſt the late King William in Ireland, and being obliged to leave that Country ſo long ago as the Capitulation of Limerick, has ever ſince adher'd to the ſame Cauſe in foreign Parts, and is at preſent more active and induſtrious than any other of the Pretender's Agents in exciting a Rebellion in theſe Kingdoms. He is at this time a Lieutenant-General, and has the Command of one of the Iriſh Regiments in the French Service.

Your Committee obſerve, That as the different Profeſſions of theſe two Perſons could lay no ſort of Foundation for any Intimacy or Intercourſe between them, ſo the long Abſence of General Dillon makes it highly probable, that their Acquaintance could not be commenced before his leaving theſe Kingdoms; and that it can only have proceeded from their being long united and confederated in the common Support of the ſame wicked Cauſe.

Yet their Intimacy is ſuch, that the Biſhop acknowledges the Receipt of ſeveral Papers from Dillon, together with Directions of communicating them, which the Biſhop owns he obey'd as far as he judg'd it proper for the Service. Some of theſe Papers appear to have been from the late Duke of Ormond, who is attainted; and others probably from the Pretender, whom he has ſo often abjured.

He adviſes Dillon to preſs the ſolliciting Supplies; and owns he has been deſired to undertake that Province himſelf, but that he had hitherto declin'd it; not from ſuch Reſtraints as ſhould naturally have ariſen in the Mind of one of his Character and Function, but meerly on account of ſome former ill Succeſs and Miſmanagement, in which he owns he had been deeply concern'd.

He afterwards adviſes Dillon to uſe the ſame Caution which he himſelf intended, of not truſting any thing of Importance to the Poſt, endeavouring to act within the Shelter and Safeguard of the Laws for ſubverting our happy Conſtitution.

This great Caution, which (as Neynoe ſaid Kelly told him) the Biſhop uſed, made him ſo extremely careful, as not to let even the Man he truſted moſt, have one Line of his own Hand-writing; and ſhews that he was wonderfully ſollicitous, not to avoid the Guilt of Treaſon, but only to eſcape the Puniſhment due to it, by ſaving himſelf from the danger of legal Conviction.

Another of his Letters is to the late Lord Marr, who ſo lately appear'd in Arms againſt his Majeſty, and has ſince had a Poſt of the greateſt Confidence and Truſt near the Pretender.

In this Letter he owns the Receipt of one from Marr by Kelly, together with verbal Inſtructions; which, to cut off all Excuſe of Surprize or Inadvertency, he ſays he carefully conſider'd, and yet entirely agreed to.

He then mentions his preſent ſad Circumſtances, but comforts himſelf, that as they will not permit him ſoon to act openly; ſo neither is there, he thinks, any immediate occaſion for it, ſome time being neceſſary towards ripening Matters. So that when a proper Opportunity ſhould have offer'd, the Mask was to have been thrown off, and he was then openly to have avowed the Cauſe, which he has hitherto ſupported only in Diſguiſe.

The other Letter of the Biſhop's is to the Pretender himſelf, in defiance of that Law which makes the holding any Correſpondence with him, or his Agents, High-Treaſon. In this Letter he owns the Receipt of one from the Pretender; and to ſhew how well he deſerv'd that Confidence, he himſelf, who beſt knows the Thoughts of his own Heart, declares, that if the Pretender gueſs'd at his right Mind, he dares ſay it is agreeable to the Pretender's own.

He then encourages the Pretender to hope for a ſecond Opportunity, tho not every way ſo favourable as the firſt, which was elapſed.

This favourable Opportunity appears to have been that of the Elections; and your Committee cannot but obſerve, that the two moſt riotous Elections of any throughout the Kingdom, were that of Weſtminſter, a Place under the immediate Influence of the Biſhop of Rocheſter; and that of Coventry, which appears by this Report to have been animated by Carte, an Agent of the Biſhop's, and one employ'd by him in managing his treaſonable Correſpondence.

He afterwards takes to himſelf the Merit of ſome Writing, which he had drawn up and tranſmitted to the Pretender, after it had firſt paſſed the View and Approbation of the Perſons concern'd: tho he ſays it had been kept back a great while, in hopes that Deeds might have accompanied Words. Which again ſhews his treaſonable Intentions to have been the Reſult of mature Deliberation; and that tho he had hitherto dealt in Words, yet other Acts of Treaſon were what he hoped for, and was aiming at.

As ſoon as God ſhould reſtore him to his Health, he promiſes to abuſe it towards the Proſecution of his Treaſons, and in the mean time deſires leave to withdraw himſelf ſeemingly from any Engagements of that kind, that he might return with greater Zeal and Activity to deſtroy this Church and State, by placing a Popiſh Pretender on the Throne, in violation of the moſt ſacred Oaths ſo frequently taken by him.

Your Committee will now proceed to ſhew what farther Part the Biſhop appears to have had in the treaſonable Correſpondence and Negotiations carried on with the Pretender's Agents in France.

On the 11th of May, Motfield anſwers Illington's [38] Letter ſent to Muſgrave (Marr) the 20th of April. This was incloſ'd in a Letter to Kelly. The Subſtance of the Anſwer is to condole with Illington on his Loſs, and to expreſs great Satisfaction on finding him in the ſame Sentiments with Marr, in relation to their old Friend and Acquaintance (Hacket) and in another [39] Letter, to Kelly, he lets Illington know how agreeable this Reconciliation would be to Farmer, and how much to Farmer's Intereſt.

Your Committee ſee Reaſon to believe from Paſſages in ſeveral of the Letters, that Farmer means the Pretender.

It has been obſerved above, one of the Periods of Time, fixed by the Conſpirators for putting their Deſign in execution, was the beginning of May 1722.

On the 1ſt of May, Dillon's Secretary [40] writes to Kelly, 'that Mr. Jones cannot take a better 'time to have himſelf fitted with an eaſy Saddle, 'there being a number of Sadlers idle in France 'at preſent, who in caſe of Wars would be ſo 'very buſy there would be no coming at them.' This is explain'd by what [41] Neynoe ſaid, that in Kelly's Cypher Sadlers ſtood for Iriſh Soldiers, tho he did not know any Letters had been intercepted where that Term was made uſe of, and in [42] Plunket's Cypher Saddles ſtand for Regiments, and Girt for one hundred Men.

On

On the 2d of May, Dillon himſelf [43] acknowledges the Receipt of his Couſin Jones's Letters of the 20th of April, and 'expreſſes much Concern 'for that Lady's ill State of Health, being much 'afraid his own ſmall Concerns can hardly be ſet-'tled to Satisfaction, till ſhe is able to ſollicit in 'his Favour.'

On the 7th of May, Kelly [44] writes to Muſgrave (Marr) 'that he had communicated his Letter to 'Mr. Jones; and that Mr. Jones deſir'd a Letter 'from Muſgrave or Farmer (the Pretender) to 'Hacket, to bring him to Town, without which 'it would be impracticable for them to do Buſi-'neſs together. That Jones finds Armſtrong and 'Company very loth to be any way concern'd, 'having no Opinion of the preſent Hands; how-'ever that it is ſtill neceſſary to make the moſt of 'them.'

Who is meant by Armſtrong and Company does not appear to the Committee.

On the 9th of May, Dillon's Secretary [45] writes to Kelly, 'That if this Poſt had not brought an 'Addition of three to the ſix formerly come from 'Repney, it is eaſy for Mrs. Jones to ſee what is 'ſtill wanting for the Purchaſe ſhe intends to 'make.' Who is meant by Repney is not certain, but in the following Part of this Report there will appear Grounds of a probable Conjecture.

This Paſſage relates to a Bill of Exchange (of ſix thouſand Pounds probably) ſent over to Calais, and thence to Waters the Pretender's Banker at Paris, on the 16th of April; the Receipt of which is acknowledged in ſeveral Letters both to [46] George Kelly and [47] Dennis Kelly. This Paragraph, which ſays, 'That if three more are not come, 'beſides the ſix from Repney, it is eaſy for Mrs. 'Jones to ſee what is ſtill wanting for the Pur-'chaſe ſhe intends to make;' ſhews plainly, that Jones was at leaſt privy to that Remittance: which agrees with what Pancier [48] has depoſed upon Oath, that he was told by Skeene, among other Particulars relating to the Conſpiracy, that a large Contribution had been raiſed and put under the Management of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, which was called their military Cheſt.

On the 10th of May (three Days after the Encampment) [49] Kelly writes to Dillon's Secretary, 'That it was reported the King had abſolutely 'refus'd to put off his Journey, and intended to 'ſet out early next Month; and that if they could 'then compaſs Barrels enough, the ſooner the 'Wine comes, he believes, the better. He adds, 'that Jones promiſes to be a good Cuſtomer, 'and that he hopes Hacket and Jones will give 'them the finiſhing Stroke.' The time of Year in which this Letter was writ, and the abſurd Suppoſition of its being more difficult to find Barrels than Wine, ſhew ſufficiently that theſe Words are not to be taken in their literal Senſe.

Your Committee are inform'd, that Wine was explain'd by Neynoe to mean Invaſion, tho he had never been told that any ſuch Word had been made uſe of in theſe Letters, nor had been ask'd any Queſtion about it; and in [50] Plunkett's Cypher, Barrels is explain'd Army, and Vines, one thouſand Men.

On the 19th of May, Dillon's Secretary [51] writes to Kelly, 'That he is aſſured by good 'Hands, Hacket and Jones are the beſt able to 'adjuſt his particular Concerns; that he does not 'queſtion their good Diſpoſitions, and that doing 'it timely will be a double Merit.'

On the 19th of May Kelly was taken into Cuſtody, about the 7th of June he was admitted to Bail, and on the 11th he [52] writes an Account of his Examination to one Gerrard, whom your Committee believe to be Sir John D'Obryan, whom Kelly [53] owned to be employ'd by Dillon in writing for him. In this Letter Kelly ſays, 'He 'was chiefly queſtioned about a little Dog he got 'from France, and about five or ſix cant Names, 'which were Illington, Jones, Cane, Howell, 'Quitwell and Hacket; and that whoever Illing-'ton is, he was the Perſon chiefly ſtruck at.'

On the 18th of June [54] he writes to Dillon, 'That it is abſolutely neceſſary to make no more 'uſe of their preſent Account-Book, ſince thoſe 'that have got part, may by the ſame Method 'have got the whole; and that it will be highly 'improper for him to meddle with Buſineſs, at 'leaſt for ſome time.'

From this time forward your Committee obſerve, that the Names of Jones and Illington are no more heard of in the intercepted Correſpondence; neither does Kelly ſo frequently write Letters of great Buſineſs, but in his ſtead Thomas Carte, Clerk, takes up the Management of the Biſhop's Correſpondence.

The Letters from Carte are ſigned, and thoſe to him directed by the Name of George Williams; and Mrs. Harbin, to whoſe Houſe they were directed, having been examined before ſome Lords of the Council, [55] has depoſed on Oath, that Carte deſired her to take in Letters ſo directed, and that ſhe delivered one ſo directed into his own Hands.

And in the [56] Cypher taken among Dennis Kelly's Papers in George Kelly's Hand-writing, Mr. Carte is deſigned by the fictitious Names of Thomas and Trotter, who appear, by comparing ſeveral Paſſages in the Letters, to mean the ſame Perſon with George Williams.

From the time of George Kelly's being firſt taken up, the Biſhop of Rocheſter is denoted by the Names of Rig and Weſton, as will appear from the following Circumſtances.

On the 30th of Auguſt, Kelly [57] writes to Dillon a long Letter, which contains the Particulars of the Biſhop's being taken into Cuſtody, examined and committed. On the 14th of September Dillon's Secretary [58] writes to Kelly, 'That his Letter on 'the 30th of Auguſt came ſafe, and that the Par-'ticulars he gave of Mr. Rig's Caſe were very ac-'ceptable to Dillon, whoſe Concern for a true and 'worthy Friend and Relation cannot be doubted, 'and a longing deſire to know her entirely clear 'of her Diſtemper.' In the ſame Letter he deſires to know what is become of Carte.

That Rig denotes the Biſhop is farther confirmed by theſe Particulars: Kelly in his firſt [59] Letter after his Enlargement, writes word to Gerrard; 'All I can do now, will be only to deliver to 'your Couſin Rig any Goods that you can ſend by 'private Hands: he is determined not to receive 'them any other way, and indeed I cannot ſay 'he is in the wrong. How far this late Affair 'may affect him, I cannot tell.'

Now

Now since it appears that Kelly was formerly imployed in conveying Letters to and from the Bishop (which are often called Goods in the intercepted Correspondence) since the Bishop himself had desired in his Letter to Dillon, that no more Letters of Consequence might be trusted to the Post; and since Kelly's Examination about the Dog could affect no one but the Bishop, it may justly be concluded that Rig and the Bishop are the same.

That Weston is the Bishop, will appear from the following Circumstances.

On the 7th of June, Dillon's Secretary [60] writes to Carte, and acknowledges the Receipt of a Letter from him of the 28th of May (which was soon after Kelly's being taken up) and after expressing great Satisfaction, 'That the late Rumours 'of a Plot had not occasioned a total Interruption 'of Commerce, nor obliged any of their Correspon-'dents to go aside;' he adds, 'That Dillon de-'sires to be most kindly remember'd to his good 'Friend Mr. Weston, for whom he was in the 'greatest Concern, on account of a Story that 'his Clerk had been laid up for Debt; but that he 'hopes Carte's next Letter will put him at full 'Ease in this Matter.'

This plainly has reference to Kelly's being taken up; and his relation of Clerkship to the Bishop, has been fully explain'd by what goes before.

On the 14th of June, Carte [61] writes to Dillon's Secretary, and endeavours to put him at full Ease in relation to Mr. Weston, by telling him, 'That 'Mr. Weston is in the Country, that he saw him 'two Days ago; that he is perfectly well, and as 'easy in all his Affairs as any Man alive, and very 'much Dillon's humble Servant.' It appears by Depositions [62] annexed to this Report, that the Bishop was in the Country at that Time.

On the 14th of July, Dillon [63] writes to Weston, under Cover to Carte; and desires he will admit one Skinner (sent over from France express) to receive his Commands.

On the 26th of July, Kelly [64] writes word that Rig and Skin had been lately together; and that before they met, Rig sent to him to know how Skin stood with Dillon and his Partners.

On the same Day, Stanley (who appears by the Matter of his Letter to be the same with Skinner) writes [65] to Dillon, 'That he had been with 'the Correspondent, to whom the Letter of Cre-'dit was sent, and had partly engaged him in his 'Arrack Affair.' On the 30th of July, Carte writes [66] word, he had the Honour of introducing Stanley to Mr. Weston, and mentions the Arrack Affair, of which notice will be taken in its Place.

From these Passages it appears, that Weston (the Name made use of by Carte) means the same with Rig (made use of by Kelly) which last was shewn before to mean the Bishop of Rochester.

Rig therefore, and Weston being made use of to denote the Bishop; it remains to be considered what Part Rig or Weston appear to bear in the Sequel of the intercepted Correspondence.

It appears by the [67] Letter from Dillon's Secretary of the 7th of June, that they apprehended in general on Kelly's being taken up, that some of their Correspondents would be obliged to go aside; but that their greatest Pain was for Mr. Weston, whose Intimacy with Kelly was such, that Kelly is stiled his Clerk, which is no improper Name for one that kept the Cyphers, which are stiled thro'-out the intercepted Letters, Books of Accompts; and in Layer's Cypher are call'd Rentals. If Kelly had had no Secrets to reveal, the Pain for Mr. Weston, and the Fear of other Correspondents going aside, would not have been so considerable.

On the 14th of June, [68] Carte sets them at ease in relation to Weston, who was, he says, as easy in his Affairs as any Man alive: Which might be the Case, Kelly having burnt his Papers, being bailed out, and at Liberty to assure his Friends, that the Lords could get nothing out of him at his Examination, where he strenuously denied his having ever heard of the Names of Jones or Illington.

On the 11th of June, Kelly [69] sends his Friends at Paris an Account of his late Misfortune; and after complaining of their Neglect, in not bailing him out sooner, and intimating that such Usage might have provoked a passionate Man to betray their Secrets; he says, your old Friend Rig, indeed, offered all that could be expected from the poor Man. This Passage proves pretty plainly, that Rig was one of those whose Secrets it was in Kelly's power to have betrayed; and who therefore thought himself principally concerned to keep Kelly in good Temper, by all possible offers of Assistance.

Kelly in his next [70] Letter of the 18th of June, says, 'The Occasion of my Misfortune I will lay 'at no body's Door in particular; tho your old 'Friend Rig seems to believe, it has rather pro-'ceeded from some pretended Friend than any 'real Enemy: And as his Conjecture lies on this 'side, you may easily guess the Point it tends to.' This Passage shews, that the Discoveries made, were known by Rig to be well founded; since no one could be led to suspect, that an Information entirely false should proceed from some Friend entirely in the Secret: besides, it shews Rig had Friends, in whose power it was to betray him; and that those Friends were known to the Correspondents in France, since Kelly says, they are able to guess who it is that Rig suspects on this side. This is a farther Intimation, that Rig had Friends on the other side of the Water, in whose power it was equally to have betrayed the Secret.

Kelly then tells Dillon, 'That it is absolutely 'necessary to make no more use of their present 'Accompt-Book; since they that have got part, 'may by the same Method have got the whole.' This is a direct Confession, that the Names of Jones and Illington, and others on which Kelly was questioned, were really a Part of the Cypher in use between him and his Correspondents in France: And as Kelly writ Word that Illington was the Person principally struck at, and knew very well by Mrs. Barnes's Confession about the Dog, who Illington was understood to be; it amounts to a Confession, that that Exposition of the Name of Illington was true.

He then adds, 'All that lies in my Power 'now, will be to deliver to your Cousin Rig any 'Goods you can send by private Hands; he be-'ing determined not to receive them any other 'way.' So that by private Hands Rig was still willing to receive them.

However

However Kelly ſays, 'If your Buſineſs can be 'conveyed any other way to him, you cannot do 'me a greater Favour: For to tell you the Truth, 'it is againſt my Opinion and Inclination to have 'any farther Dealing that way.' This ſhews what Dealing Kelly had hitherto had; and at the ſame time explains how Carte comes to be employed in managing the Biſhop's Correſpondence for the future.

Kelly adds, 'That he does not know how far 'this late Affair may affect Rig.' This ſhews that he knew Rig was engaged in ſome criminal Correſpondence; ſince the receiving a Dog from France, or being called by a fictitious Name, could not otherwiſe have affected him.

On the 16th of July, Carte writes a long [71] Letter about ſome MSS. and Weſton's Opinion of them, as alſo that of Finch. What is meant by Manuſcripts, does not appear; neither is it certain who Finch is, but he is [72] ſpoke of as being in high Repute with Weſton.

On the 1ſt of Auguſt, Dillon [73] writes to Carte, 'That he cannot apply to a more ſufficient Judge 'than Weſton about his Concern with Mr. Finch:' And he often repeats, 'That he makes a moſt 'particular Caſe of Mr. Weſton's Judgment; and 'that he relies entirely on Weſton's Friendſhip and 'Advice;' and other Expreſſions of the like nature.

On the 14th of July, Dillon writes a [74] Letter to Weſton (the Biſhop) encloſed to Carte, in the following Words.

To Mrs. Weſton, incloſed to Mr. George Williams, at Mrs. Harbin's over-againſt Somerſet-Houſe.

Dear Madam, Saturday 25 July 1722.

'I Cannot on any reaſonable Grounds complain 'of your Silence, tho long it appears, becauſe 'I am informed of the Situation your Health, 'and the Concerns of your Family are in, by 'Bankrupts and Law-Suits. Permit me, however, 'to fulfil a part of my Duty in preſenting you my 'beſt Reſpects, and unalterable Attachment to 'you and yours. I wiſh this may find you ſo far 'recovered from paſt Miſchances, as that you 'may be once more in a Humour of affording 'me a comfortable Line. I have all the Stock I 'bought lying by, and I intend it ſhall remain ſo, 'until you adviſe me of the proper Time to diſ-'poſe of it: being fully convinced, that in the 'ſlippery Age we live in, I cannot confide to any 'better than you. I hear many ſay, that our 'Stocks will infallibly riſe again to a good height, 'by Mr. Walpole's wiſe and able Management; 'from whence I ſhould hope not to be ſo much 'a Loſer in reſerving mine. Still my Lights at 'this diſtance can be but very imperfect: there-'fore, Dear Madam, I will earneſtly pray your 'Direction, when you find leiſure to grant me 'this Favour, as alſo of forgiving this Trouble, 'for which I offer amends in any manner I can be 'of ſervice to you. The few Acquaintances of 'yours I converſe with in theſe Parts, are well; 'and rely, as I do, on your friendly Advice in a 'moſt particular manner, about their Concerns in 'the Funds. They deſire you will be pleaſed to 'admit Mr. Skinner to receive your Commands, 'who is directed to call upon you, and explain 'ſome Particulars too tedious for a Letter. He 'ſeems to be very ready at Buſineſs, and will 'obey your Orders punctually. I am, with the 'greateſt Eſteem and Sincerity,

Dear Madam,

Your moſt Humble, and moſt

Obedient Servant,

Digby.

On the 16th of July, Dennis Kelly [75] writes word to France, that Skinner arrived in Town the Night before; that he had been to wait on him, longing much to know how the Fall of Stocks affected his Friends.

On the 26th of July, Kelly [76] writes to Dillon's Secretary, 'That Rig and Skin had been lately 'together; and that before they met, Rig had 'ſent to him, to know if Skin ſtood well with 'Dillon and Partners.' He adds, 'That Rig ſtill 'ſeems to promiſe his Aſſiſtance, if he can get 'the better of his Suſpicions: and that Rig went 'into the Country, the day after Skin and he had 'been together.' It appears by [77] a Depoſition annexed to this Report, that the Biſhop came to Town on the 19th, and return'd to Bromley on the 21ſt of July.

On the ſame Day that Kelly writ, Stanley (who is the ſame with Skinner) writes [78] to Dillon, 'I 'have been with your Correſpondent to whom the 'Letter of Credit was ſent, who has partly an-'ſwered my Demands, and promiſes to comply in 'all Points with your Directions.' He then adds, 'I muſt now give you an Account of what Pro-'duct may be hoped for from the Publick Funds.'

Then follows a Paragraph, ſome few Letters of which are in Cypher, but as your Committee is informed, in ſuch an eaſy and obvious one, that any one that reads it, may with the leaſt Attention decypher it. In this Paragraph, inſtead of ſaying a Word about the Funds, he acquaints Dillon, 'That they are certainly betrayed by ſome 'one entirely in the Secret, who has given ſuch 'Light into all their Affairs, that the moſt mi-'nute Circumſtances are perfectly found out; that 'therefore he muſt caution him, as he is requeſt-'ed, to be very careful who he converſes with, 'even at Paris, without excepting any one.'

This Paragraph explains ſufficiently what is meant by Stocks and Funds; and it is remarkable, that in Plunket's Cypher, Brokers is explained Agents. The owning themſelves diſcovered by ſome one entirely in the Secret, proves there was a Secret, and that the Diſcoveries of the Government were well founded.

He then adds, 'I have partly prevailed with 'the Correſpondent (Weſton) to undertake what 'he had firmly reſolved againſt, which is the pro-'curing Arrack, which cannot fail ſucceeding by that 'Channel.' And on the 30th of July, Carte writes to Dillon in the following Words:

'I had the Honour of introducing Mr. Stanley 'to Mr. Weſt, who received him in the beſt man-'ner, and aſſured him of his Readineſs to ſerve 'him in what he could. Mr. St. was much pleaſ-'ed with him, but did not engage him to ſollicit 'in his Arrack Affair, which yet is of the great-'eſt conſequence to him, and Mr. W. is moſt 'capable of ſerving him in, becauſe in the Eſteem 'of all the Commiſſioners in whoſe Power it is 'to relieve him in the Caſe. And as Mr. W.

'would do it effectually, if engaged in it, ſo Mr. 'Stanley deſires me to beg the Favour of you, to 'requeſt the Favour of Mr. W. in a Letter from 'you to Mr. Stanley, which he is ſure would for-'tify the good Inclinations Mr. W. has already 'to ſerve him, and effectually engage him in 'the thing.'

The Original of this [79] Letter being ſtopped, is, as your Committee are informed, in Carte's own Hand-writing.

What is meant by theſe myſterious Paſſages about Arrack, muſt be left to the Conjecture of the Houſe.

If this be compared with the Biſhop's [80] Letter to Dillon, and with [81] Pancier's Depoſition, it is not improbable, that by Arrack may be meant Contributions of Money.

But whatever is meant by it, the Committee obſerve, that it was a Point of the greateſt Importance to the Conſpirators, ſince it was thought neceſſary to be laboured by a Perſon ſent from France on purpoſe; and the Biſhop's Reluctancy to come into it, argues it to have been ſomething very dangerous, and beyond the ordinary Lengths of his Compliance.

And they obſerve, that the principal Direction of the Conſpiracy under all the Diſguiſes of Stock, Manuſcripts and Arrack, is ſubmitted to the Biſhop's Judgment, on which, it is often ſaid, they do entirely rely.

Your Committee having thus laid before you the principal Matters in the intercepted Correſpondence, that relate to the Biſhop of Rocheſter more immediately, will now proceed to ſtate to you what they find in the ſame Correſpondence, relating to George Kelly; who, as has been ſhewn before, acted ſo much under the Direction and Influence of the Biſhop, that it cannot be ſuppoſed he would take any Step of Conſequence in an Affair of this Nature, without the Biſhop's being at leaſt made privy to it.

The Committee forbear repeating what was mentioned before about the Heads of Memorials to the Regent brought by Kelly to Neynoe; but they find ſome farther Particulars [82] in Neynoe's Papers, relating to Kelly alone.

'That Kelly had owned to him his having been 'formerly at Avignon while the Pretender was 'there; that at his Return from France laſt 'Winter, he brought over ſeveral Papers and 'Letters, and among the reſt, one in French, 'in the Hand-writing of Dillon's Secretary, inti-'tuled, Reaſons humbly offered to Cardinal Du 'Bois, proving that the eſtabliſhing the Houſe of 'Stuart on the Throne of England, preferably to 'that of Hannover, is the real Intereſt of the 'Crown of France, or to that Effect. That this 'Piece was brought to Neynoe to be tranſlated, 'which being written by a Papiſt, and turning 'much on the Advantage that would accrue to 'Popery, Neynoe adviſed againſt publiſhing it.

'That Kelly told him at other Times, that one 'Hundred Thouſand Pounds, nay, fifty Thou-'ſand Pounds would be ſufficient for bringing in 'the Pretender; and that he would warrant that 'Sum would be found.

'That whenever there happen'd to be a Stand 'made for the Pretender, great Numbers of Vo-'luntiers from France would appear for him: Which agrees with the Accounts ſent from thence, and with the [83] Letter from Dillon's Secretary about ſecuring Sadlers, which Kelly explained to Neynoe to mean Iriſh Soldiers.

Neynoe farther ſaid, 'That Kelly propoſed to 'him to go over to France, and to ſettle in Lord 'Lanſdown's Family, where he ſaid he might be 'of Service, and promiſed to make his Recep-'tion eaſy.' And your Committee obſerve, that the very Time when Neynoe was taken going to France, Kelly [84] writ to Dillon's Secretary, 'That he would ſoon ſee a young Fellow, whom 'he had mentioned to him ſome Time before, 'and that he might rely on his Honeſty.'

Neynoe farther declared, 'That Bingley his Fel-'low-Traveller (now in Cuſtody) lodging in the 'ſame Houſe with Kelly, when Kelly was firſt 'taken up, burnt a Bundle of Writings he had 'that Day received from Kelly.'

John Malone (formerly Servant to Mrs. Barnes) who waited on Kelly at his Lodgings, [85] has depoſed, that this Neynoe, John Plunket now in Cuſtody, Carte and Dennis Kelly, often viſited George Kelly.

As George Kelly is frequently deſigned by a great Variety of fictitious Names in the intercepted Correſpondence, the Committee think it proper firſt to apprize the Houſe, what Reaſon there is to aſſert, that thoſe Names do really belong to Kelly, and then to ſhew the Nature and Import of the Correſpondence carried on under thoſe Names.

It appears to your Committee, that ſince the Beginning of April 1722. (the Time of Kelly's laſt Return from France) a great Number of Letters going to France, were by Order of the Government opened, and Copies of them taken; and that ſeveral of thoſe Letters, tho ſign'd by different Names, were [86] obſerved by the Clerks who copied them, to be all in the ſame Hand-writing; and [87] one of the Originals having been ſtopped for a Specimen of the Hand, and having been ſhewn to John Malone, he has [88] depoſed upon Oath, that he had often ſeen George Kelly write, and that he believes it to be his Hand. [89] Three other Papers ſeized at Mrs. Barnes's, having been ſhewn to Malone, he has ſworn them ſeverally to be Kelly's Writing; and the ſame three Papers having been ſhewn to the Clerks of the Poſt-Office, they have ſworn, That to the beſt of their Knowledge and Belief, as well the original Letters ſtopped, as the others ſent forwards, which were ſigned, ſome of them Johnſon, others Hatfield, J. J. G. H., and Wilkins, were all in the ſame Hand with thoſe three Papers ſo atteſted.

This general Proof fixes ſeveral of the Names to belong to Kelly; and it is remarkable that if any one of the Names above-mentioned be allowed to belong to Kelly, all the reſt by which he ſigns, or is directed to, may, by the Series of his Correſpondence, be ſhewn to belong to the ſame Perſon.

But your Committee farther obſerve, that almoſt every individual Name he makes uſe of, is attended with ſome particular Proof, which determines it to belong to him; of which Notice will be taken as the Names are mentioned.

It has been obſerv'd already, that he came from France about the Nineteenth of December, N. S. 1721. and that a [90] Letter was found among the Biſhop's Papers, dated the ſixteenth of December, in which mention is made of a Letter received by Johnſon, and an Anſwer returned ſome time before in Johnſon's Hand.

Neynoe [91] declared, that the laſt Memorial to the Regent, which Kelly employed him to draw up, was in December 1721, and that it contained a Demand of five Thouſand Men for the Aſſiſtance of the Conſpirators. In February following, [92] Kelly went again to France, and towards the End of April, the Government received unqueſtionable [93] Accounts, that repeated Application had been made to the Regent for ſuch a Body of Forces.

The Biſhop in his [94] Letters (writ ſoon after Kelly's Return from France) acknowledges the Receipt of a Letter, and verbal Inſtructions from Marr, by Hatfield, and of a Letter by the Pretender from the ſame Hand, and mentions Hatfield as knowing his preſent Unfitneſs for Buſineſs.

But the Letters ſigned Hatfield, which were copied at the Poſt-Office, are [95] ſworn to have been in the ſame Hand with other Papers which are ſworn to be Kelly's Hand-writing. And it appears by a [96] Letter from Marr to Hatfield, that he was the Perſon to whom the Dog was ſent for Illington; which ſhews Hatfield to be Kelly, and confirms Neynoe's Information, that Kelly received Letters directed by the Name of Hatfield: And it appears that he not only brought over Letters from France, agreeably to what was told [97] Mrs. Levett by Mrs. Barnes, and confirmed by Neynoe; but that he was truſted with a Letter to the Biſhop from Jackſon, the Name made uſe of for the Pretender in [98] Plunket's Cypher; which Cypher it is evident Kelly was no Stranger to, ſince he makes uſe of ſeveral other [99] Names found in that Cypher, to denote the very ſame Perſons that are there expreſſed and defined by thoſe Names.

On the twenty firſt of April, Dillon's [1] Secretary writes to Joſhua Vernon (which will be ſhewn to be another of Kelly's Names) congratulating his ſafe Return, and tells him, 'That his firſt Letter 'was very pleaſing to Mr. Lane (which is ex-'plained Lord Marr in Plunket's Cypher) who 'waited with much Impatience for thoſe of Mon-'day, hoping to receive a more particular Ac-'count of his Bills, which he daily becomes more 'preſſed for; the Proſpect of a good Vintage 'increaſing by late Showers which had dropped 'there, and raiſed the Spirit of the Labourers. 'He adds, that it ſeems more plain, that on Ad-'vances of ready Money, good Bargains may be 'propoſed.'

He afterwards tells him, 'That Dillon adviſes, 'the Money, which Kelly mentioned in Clynton's 'Hands, ſhould be equally divided between 'Medley and the Pretender.' Who Clynton is does not appear to the Committee; but they ſee Reaſon to believe, from Paſſages in other Letters, that Medley means the late Duke of Ormond.

He then tells Kelly, 'That Farmer and Family 'are well, and that Mrs. Hughes became ſo very 'uneaſy ſhe was diſmiſſed, and is on return.'

This Paſſage ſhews, that Farmer means the Pretender, it being well known that Mrs. Hughes was Nurſe to the Pretender's Child, and was on her Return to England about this Time.

From this Letter your Committee obſerve, that Kelly was employed by Marr and Dillon, in ſoliciting Supplies for the Service of the Conſpirators; and that he had acquainted them of a Sum of Money lodged in the Hands of one, whom they call Clynton, which they adviſed ſhould be equally divided between the Pretender and Ormond. Whether Kelly was conſiderable enough to have this Advice ſent him for his own Government and Direction, or was only to be the Channel for conveying it to ſome other Perſon of greater Diſtinction, is left to the Conſideration of the Houſe.

On the twenty third of April (as has been obſerved above) Kelly ſent the Biſhop's Pacquet of Letters under Cover to Gordon at Boulogne, with [2] Orders to him to deliver it to a tall black Man, who would ſoon call on him for it.

This Perſon is in other Letters called Crow, and appears to your Committee by ſeveral concurrent Proofs, to be James Talbot, an Iriſh Papiſt, concerned in the Preſton Rebellion, and now in the Spaniſh Service.

Kelly in his [3] Examination before the Committee, owned his being intimately acquainted with this Talbot, and his having ſeen him the Morning he left England; and a [4] Letter ſigned J. Talbot, was ſeized among Mrs. Barnes's Papers, in the ſame Hand with a [5] Letter ſent from France to Kelly, ſigned J. T. which is an Anſwer to [6] one writ by Kelly to Crow.

On the twenty ninth of April [7] Gordon acknowledges the Receipt of a Pacquet (already proved to be the Biſhop's) and ſays he delivered it to the Gentleman as he was directed, who ſet out for Paris on the thirtieth of April. On the firſt of May, Dillon's Secretary [8] writes to Kelly, 'Your 'Friend Crow is arrived ſafe, and delivered the 'three Books you gave him, as directed.'

On the ſecond of May, Dillon himſelf [9] writes to James Baker (which will be ſhewn to be another of Kelly's Names) and ſays, 'I ſaw your 'Acquaintance Crow two Days ago, who deli-'vered me a Preſent from my Couſin Jones.'

And on the ſame Day James Talbot [10] writes to Kelly, 'That Mr. Gordon gave him the Pacquet at 'Boulogne, which he delivered ſafe on Monday 'laſt, as directed. He adds, the Perſon received 'me very obligingly, and was much more open 'to me than I expected. Then, and ſince, he 'let me know he does not deſpair of doing his Bu-'ſineſs.'

On the ſeventh of May, Kelly [11] writes to Dillon, 'That Illington was glad to hear he had received 'his Letters by Crow, and wiſhed his next might 'be more to Dillon's Satisfaction.'

From theſe Paſſages it appears at one View, that the Biſhop's Letters were ſent by Kelly to Boulogne, by the Poſt; and thence conveyed to Dillon at Paris, by Talbot, Kelly's intimate Friend.

On the twenty fourth of April, Dillon's Secretary [12] writes to Kelly a long Account of one Xoland (Nicholas Wogan) who was to command one of the Ships that was to be hired of ſome Swediſh Merchants at Cadiz.

[8] E. 38. [9] E. 26. [10] E. 40. [11] E. 41. a. [12] E. 31.

This

This agrees with Mr. Craufurd's [13] Letter of the twenty fifth of July, N. S. 1722. in which he ſays that Nicholas Wogan was to have the Command of one of the Ships under Morgan, one of which having been lately taken at Genoa, the Commander (as your Committee are informed) has writ [14] over hither, that ſhe was hired of ſome Swediſh Merchants at Cadiz, with ſeveral other Circumſtances, which agree entirely with this Letter to Kelly, and ſhew for what Uſe thoſe Swediſh Ships were hired.

In the ſame Letter Dillon's Secretary takes notice 'How kindly Freeman (the Pretender) had 'ſpoken of Kelly in his laſt.'

On the 30th of April, Kelly [15] anſwers this Letter, but calls Nicholas Wogan by the Name of Moore, and ſays, 'I wiſh his Chief may ſucceed in 'his Journey.' Which being compared with the Accounts [16] ſent about that Time from Mr. Davenant at Rome, that the Pretender was preparing to embark; makes it more than probable that he is the Chief, to whom Kelly wiſhes Succeſs.

Kelly then gives an Account of a very important Converſation he had with one Hore: Who is meant by Hore, your Committee will not take upon them poſitively to determine, but by comparing ſeveral Paſſages of the Letters together, it appears to them highly probable, that it is Sir Harry Goring; in which Opinion they are the more confirmed by Hore's being mentioned as ill of the Gout in France, on the 14th of September: And Kelly takes notice in his [17] Pocket-Book, that Sir H. G. went to F. the 23d of Auguſt, which was the Day before the Biſhop was taken up.

In this Letter Kelly ſays, 'Hore is moſt impa-'tient to have a more ſatisfactory Account from 'your Side; and hopes there may be room now 'to expect it, ſince there was nine remitted by 'Repney: he will ſoon, as he tells me, ſend you 'two more, which with the Twelve thouſand 'Arms provided by Mansfield's (Ormond's) Rela-'tions, and which are now ready to be ſent where-'ever deſign'd, and paid for too, will, he hopes, 'bring Matters to ſome Proſpect of bearing.'

Your Committee obſerve, that this Impatience of Hore falls in, in point of Time, with the Account [18] Lord Orrery gave Layer, that Lord North and Grey, Sir Harry Goring, Lord Strafford and others, were going to do a raſh thing in favour of the Pretender. That it likewiſe agrees with the [19] Letter to Dodſworth, mention'd in the former Part of the Report; where it is ſaid, 'That 'the Hopes given by G. to expect a great Sum, 'and by N. that he had raiſed Twenty thouſand 'Pounds, induced Ormond to ſupply Morgan, and 'to make other neceſſary Proviſions;' part of which Proviſions appear to have been the Twelve thouſand Arms mentioned in [20] Ormond's Letter of the 27th of April, in [21] Mr. Stanhope's the 8th of June, and again in this Letter of Kelly's.

Kelly adds, 'That he hears Ormond continues 'ſtill upon the old String, that he can get no Of-'ficers, and ſays, I wiſh the ſending over Hore's, '&c. Commiſſions may not do more hurt than 'good; for that Affair is already become no Se-'cret, and may pique ſome Friends, as well as 'put Ill-wiſhers on their guard.'

This Paſſage ſhews that the Scheme for an Inſurrection was at that time in ſuch Forwardneſs, that Commiſſions were actually ſent over; and confirms the Account of the late Duke of Ormond's being expected with Officers and Arms to ſupport it.

On the 1ſt of May O. S. Dillon's Secretary writes [22] to Kelly, 'That he believes they have a 'ſufficient quantity of Barrels beſpoke, for the 'Wine they intend to buy; and that he hopes 'Clynton and Company have ſent Malcom half 'Money, which Hore ſaid he had, to pay for 'the Barrels which Jacobs has at his diſpoſal.'

It has already been ſhewn that Malcom means the Pretender, and as Clynton's Money, which was before to be divided between Ormond and Jackſon, is now to be ſent half of it to Malcom: This is a farther Confirmation that Jackſon means the Pretender; and agrees with the [23] Intelligence from France, of Sums ſent about this time to Ormond and the Pretender.

In a Letter to Kelly of the 2d of May, was incloſed one [24] from Dillon to Jemiſon, who appears to be ſome intimate Friend of John Plunket's, and [25] was preſent in France, when the Cyphers were ſettled between Dillon and Kelly; but his real Name is undiſcover'd.

In this Letter Dillon acquaints Jemiſon, 'That 'Mrs. Freeman intends to bring her Cauſe to a 'Trial as ſoon as poſſible; and that he believes 'Mr. Abel's Departure will be no Detriment to 'her Pretenſions.' This Paſſage, compared with other Letters, ſhews that by Freeman is meant the Pretender, and by Abel his Majeſty; and confirms the Deſign of an Inſurrection at the beginning of May.

Dillon then deſires Jemiſon, 'To aſſure his Cou-'ſin Rogers (John Plunket) of his beſt Reſpects, 'and how much he depends on her friendly and 'kind Offices in his Family-Concerns, which have 'great need of ſo good Aſſiſtance.'

Plunket being [26] examined by the Committee in relation to this Letter, denied his knowing any ſuch Perſon.

On the 7th of May, Kelly [27] writes to Dillon, acknowledging the Receipt of the Letter for Jemiſon, mentions a long Diſcourſe he had with one whom he calls Mr. Fox, who reſented his being put out of the Pretender's Service by Dillon; but Kelly endeavour'd to convince him that Dillon had no hand in it, and laboured to regain him. Who Fox is, does not appear to your Committee.

Kelly then takes notice, 'That the Pretender's 'Favours to Hore, &c. had given great Offence; 'and that Rogers (Plunket) hearing of the Free-'dom which Hore and ſome of his Partners took 'with him, is much diſobliged at it, and order'd 'Jemiſon to tell Dillon ſo.'

Your Committee obſerve from this Paſſage, that Plunket is treated as one whom it was thought of conſequence not to diſoblige; and that Kelly was appriſed of his Intimacy with Dillon.

Kelly then gives an Account of his having called on Mrs. Medley's (the Dutcheſs of Ormond's) Chaplain. The Letter which deſired him ſo to do, was directed to James Baker; and this in which he ſays he has called upon the Chaplain, is ſigned J. J. which ſhews that James Baker is the ſame with J. J. which are the initial Letters of James Johnſon.

On the 10th of May, Kelly [28] writes to Dillon's Secretary an Account of the Diſcoveries made by [13] A. 32. [14] A. 45. [15] E. 35. [16] A. 3. [17] E. 17. [18] B. 10. [19] AA. 6. [20] AA. 5. [21] A. 15. [22] E. 37. [23] A. 6. [24] E. 39. [25] E. 57. [26] C. 73. [27] E. 41. a. [28] E. 44.

the Government, and the Encampment of the King's Forces; but your Committee observe his Assurances of Success were so strong, that in the same Letter he says, 'The King will go abroad 'next Month, and if you can then compass Bar- 'rels enough, the sooner the Wine comes, I be- 'lieve the better.'

On the 19th of May he was taken into Custody; and it appears to your Committee by the Deposition [29] of one of the Messengers who seized him, that when he was seized he offered to draw his Sword, but was prevented. That the other Messenger being called out of the Room to rescue one of their Companions, who was in danger of being murdered in the Street, Kelly called to the People of the House to lock the Door; and seizing his Sword, which had been laid by in the Window, drew it, and made a Pass at the Messenger, who verily believes he did it with an Intention to murder him: That he afterwards made a second Pass, and swore if he came in again he would stab him; and said, that if the Secretary of State who signed the Warrant had been there, he would have done the same. That the Messenger going out to call for help, and returning within a Minute, was told, that Kelly had in the mean time burnt one of the Papers seized upon him.

Another of the Messengers [30] has deposed, That before Kelly offered this Violence, he had been shewn by the Messengers the Scutcheons or Badges of their Office, and likewise had been shewn their Warrant, signed by one of the Secretaries of State: That the Warrant was also shewn to a Person present in the Room, who perused it, and declar'd to Kelly, that it was a sufficient Authority for apprehending him.

Your Committee think it unnecessary to make any Observation on a Behaviour, which implies his having so strong a Sense of his own Guilt, that he rather chose to stand all the Consequences of resisting and assaulting his Majesty's Messenger in the Execution of his Office, than to let his Papers fall into the Hands of the Government; fearing (as may justly be concluded) that such a Discovery might prove fatal to himself, as well as others.

But your Committee find, that however careful he was to destroy all his Papers, yet one was seized upon him and preserved, which is of itself sufficient to prove him concerned in the treasonable Correspondence above set forth.

It was a List of Directions, in the following Words:

> To Anthony Saunders Esq; or Mr. Joshua Vernon at Will's Coffeehouse, Covent-Garden, London.
> To Mr. James Baker, or Arthur Stephens Esq; at Burton's Coffeehouse in King's-street, near St. James's, London.

By the three first of these Names, most of the Letters to him abovementioned came directed; and your Committee find, that a Person having been employed to watch at Burton's Coffeehouse, who should take up Letters directed to Mr. James Baker at that House, has [31] deposed upon Oath, That on the 14th of May a Letter so directed being left there by the Postman, George Kelly came in and took the same, opened and read it, and went out of the House with a Letter in his Pocket to Mrs. Barnes's.

It appears to your Committee, that when he was [32] examined before the Lords, the 21st of May, 1722. he endeavoured to account for his receiving Letters by various Names, by saying, That one Mr. Talbot, who was under a Cloud, and who went for France or Spain about a Week before, had desired him to call at Coffeehouses for Letters directed to the said Talbot by several Names; and particularly that the Letter directed to Baker, which he own'd he took up, was for the said Talbot. Yet your Committee observe, that the said Talbot [33] arrived at Boulogne on the 25th of April, and did himself send a [34] Letter from Paris to Kelly, on the 2d of May, signed J. T. directed To Mr. James Baker at Burton's Coffeehouse aforesaid; and Letters [35] continued to be sent by that Direction from Paris, till the time that Kelly was taken into Custody, tho Talbot was all that time in France.

Kelly being [36] examin'd by your Committee in relation to these Letters, persisted in the same Account, that they were for Talbot, and that the Occasion of Talbot's going abroad, was, that Talbot had received an Account of General Crofton's being dead, and of his having left him what he had. Which Particular, your Committee observe, agrees in part with Neynoe's [37] Account, that Kelly had shewn him a Letter at Burton's Coffeehouse, from Dillon's Agent or Secretary, in which it was said, that the Death of General Crofton would be a great Loss to Mansfield, which Name Kelly explain'd to him to mean the late Duke of Ormond.

Kelly farther [38] owned to your Committee, 'That he went to France the beginning of the 'Winter 1721. and again the Spring following, 'on account of Transactions he had in the Stocks 'there. That he was desired by a Brother of the 'Lord Dillon's to carry over to General Dillon an 'Act of Parliament relating to the Estate of that 'Family, but that this was the only Paper he 'carried. That he saw Christopher Glascock, who 'is a Captain in Dillon's Regiment, and knew Sir 'John D'Obryan, who is Dillon's Secretary, and 'had likewise seen Colin Campbell of Glenderoule at 'Coffeehouses, but had never spoke to the latter.'

Yet your Committee observe, that as in his Letters he often sends Services to Sir John and Christy, he does also to Glen and Collins, which last Name is explain'd Glenderoule in his own Cypher [39] taken among Dennis Kelly's Papers. And when he was examin'd before the [40] Lords, he own'd his having receiv'd Letters from one Glasgow at Paris, which Name in Plunket's Cypher is expressed by the fictitious Name of Howell, and has been shewn above to mean the same with Quitwell, Querry, Bonnaville, and other Names which belong to Dillon's Secretary, and are subscribed to several treasonable Letters from France.

Kelly denied to your Committee his being at all known to the late Lord Marr, or Alexander Gordon of Boulogne; tho he own'd his going by the Name of Johnson, by which Name the [41] Letter to Gordon was signed, and the [42] Answer from Gordon directed: And the [43] Letter from Marr was directed to Hatfield, which Name has been shewn to mean the same Person as James Johnson, and has been prov'd by other Circumstances to belong to Kelly.

He own'd his writing to a broken Banker at Paris by a fictitious Name in relation to Stocks, but said that he had forgot the Name, and that he

he never received a Letter in his Life signed by a fictitious Name.

But your Committee had reason to believe from the whole Tenour of his Behaviour at his [44] Examination, that he grosly prevaricated with them; for at his first coming in, before he would make any Answer, he very formally insisted that nothing he should then say should be made use of against his own Life, nor as Evidence against any other Person: and upon these Conditions he promised to answer directly to all Questions that should be ask'd him.

Your Committee seeing some Reason from the manner of his insisting upon these Conditions, to believe that he was dispos'd to act ingenuously with them, order'd him to withdraw, that they might consider amongst themselves, how far it was in their Power, or proper for them to agree to Conditions, which would have made his Examination of no Effect; and upon his being called in again, and receiving such Answer as the Committee thought it in their Power to give, he deny'd his knowing any thing at all of the Conspiracy. This your Committee apprehend to be altogether inconsistent with the Conditions he insisted on, which manifestly imply'd that a Confession of all he knew, might endanger his own Life, as well as affect other Persons. But in the Course of his Examination he owned to them, that the Promise they had given him, was not satisfactory, tho, as he pretended, he could not have answer'd their Questions in any other manner, if their Promise had come up to the Conditions he insisted on.

Your Committee observe, that Kelly was admitted to Bail from his first Confinement about the seventh of June last, and they conceive it to be a great Aggravation of his Guilt, that he immediately took advantage of this Enlargement to resume the same treasonable Correspondences, and to send triumphant Accounts to France, of his having baffled the Government by the harden'd Obstinacy of his Behaviour; thereby improving, as far as in him lay, the Liberty granted him by the Favour and Indulgence of the Laws, to the Subversion of our happy Constitution. For on the 11th of June, but a very few Days after his being out on Bail, he sent a long [45] Letter to Gerrard, (whom your Committee believe to be Sir John D'Obryan, as has been already observ'd) in which, the better to disguise the Matter, he gives an Account of his Cousin's late Misfortune, as from a third Person; but in a [46] subsequent Letter to Dillon the 18th of June, he owns the writing this Letter himself.

In this Letter to Gerrard he says, 'That he 'was bail'd the Thursday before, and that the 'Judges were never known so severe in any Case 'of the like kind: that most of the Questions 'ask'd him at his Examination were about a lit'tle Dog which he got from a Surgeon when he 'was last in France; that they mention'd no Per'sons to him but General Dillon, and one Mr. 'Morgan: that to the first he owns he is a little 'known, having carry'd over an Act of Parlia'ment to him that concern'd his Family, but 'that the latter he never saw: that Lord Car'teret had a List of five or six Cant Names, as he 'call'd them, which were Illington, Jones, Howel, 'Quitwell and Hacket, and what he never heard 'of before; that however they would persuade 'him he knew some Persons that were meant by 'those Names, which he vows he never did, and 'whosoever Illington is, he was the Person princi'pally struck at. That he is not at all satisfy'd 'with the Behaviour of his Friends: that Gerrard's 'old Friend Rig indeed offer'd all that could be 'expected of the poor Man; but others in whose 'Power it was to do more, shew'd no Concern at 'all for his Misfortune. That he lay ten Days in 'the closest Confinement, without so much as a 'Message from any of those that he depended 'most upon; that it is well he had no Secrets to 'reveal, since such Usage might provoke a pas'sionate Man, and that the World is pretty well 'convinc'd that he had not, since no Persons 'seem'd to be the least apprehensive that he could 'do them any Mischief.

'That this shews what the Friendship of some 'People is; but whilst there is one righteous Per'son, we must, for his sake, overlook greater 'Misfortunes.

'That he is very well, and under no great 'Concern for any thing as to himself but the Ex'pence, having more than his own to answer.

'He concludes, with desiring Gerrard to di'rect under Cover to Mr. Andrews at the Dog and 'Duck in St. James's-street.'

Your Committee find, that after this Time several Letters did come from France, directed to Mr. Andrews at the Dog and Duck, and that the Master of that House having been examined, [47] has deposed on Oath, 'That one Andrews or'der'd him to take in Letters that should come 'by the foreign Post so directed, and that three 'of those Letters were directed to the Dog and 'Duck in King-street, by Mistake; but were 'afterward brought to his House in St. James's-'street, and taken up by Andrews, who happen'd 'to be there when they came in.'

It appears farther to your Committee, that the said Andrews having been examin'd, [48] has deposed on Oath, 'That Mr. Johnson alias Kelly, 'desired him to take in some Letters directed to 'him, Andrews, at the Dog and Duck Ale-house 'in St. James's-street; that he received in the 'whole four or five in the Months of July, Au'gust and September last, to the best of his Re'membrance; that they appeared by the Charge 'of Postage to be foreign Letters, and that he 'delivered them unopened to the said Johnson 'alias Kelly, who paid him the Postage; that he, 'Andrews, knew nothing of the Contents, not 'ever return'd any Answer to them.'

On the 18th of June, [49] Kelly writes to Crow (James Talbot) giving him an Account of his late Misfortune, and the Reasons of his Silence, and mentioning his Design of going over into France, as soon as his Appearance in Westminster-Hall should be over.

'He then sends his Service to all Friends, par'ticularly to Sir John and Christy (Sir John 'D'Obryan and Christopher Glascock,) and desires 'Talbot to tell the latter he must find out some 'other Address for him to write by, since he has 'good Reasons for not using the former, which 'have prevented him from writing to him these 'ten Days past, and that if it were to a French 'Person, it would be so much the better.'

Your

Your Committee obſerve, that ſoon after a French Direction to Monſieur Maſſonneuve [50] was ſent over to Kelly by Chriſtopher Glaſcock, which Kelly made uſe of for ſome time, and the [51] original Letter in Kelly's Hand ſtopt at the Poſt-Office, is ſo directed. They likewiſe obſerve the Reaſons which Kelly ſays he had, not to make uſe of the old Directions, appear evidently to have been, that he was queſtioned before the Lords on the Names of Howell and Quitwell, which were the Names made uſe of for Glaſcock.

He concludes his Letter to Crow, with deſiring him to direct to him by the Name of Wilkins at Will's Coffee-houſe; and your Committee obſerve, that not long after [52] a Letter came ſigned J. T. and ſo directed; which was ſtopt, and is in the ſame Hand with the [53] Letter ſigned J. Talbot, ſeized at Mrs. Barnes's; which confirms Talbot to be Crow.

In this Letter to Crow was encloſed one from Kelly to Dillon by the Name of Dixwell; the Subſtance of which has been partly ſet forth in that Part of the Report, which relates to the Biſhop of Rocheſter. In this Letter 'he deſires to be excuſed from meddling in Buſineſs for ſome time; but ſays, it does not proceed from any Change of Opinion, or Reſentment of the little Concern that has been ſhewn him; but from a Conviction, that without changing both their Method and their People it will be impoſſible to make any thing of it.'

Kelly adds in this Letter: 'Your Correſpondents at Will's and Burton's are gone, and deſire you may write no more that Way; and when you do me that Favour, pleaſe to addreſs under Cover to Mr. David Wilkins at Will's Coffee-houſe, Covent-Garden, and not to Andrews, as I deſired.'

This Paſſage confirms the Liſt of Directions to Will's and Burton's, found in Kelly's Pocket; and ſhews that the Letters to Wilkins, as well as Andrews, were for Kelly, tho, as is before obſerved, 'he denied the having ever received any Letter under a fictitious Name.'

On the twenty-eighth of June, James Talbot [54] writes to Kelly, 'congratulating him on his Enlargement and Behaviour, and expreſſing his Surprize, that he ſhould at ſuch a Juncture have Reaſon to complain of want of Friends.'

On the ſame Day Glaſcock [55] writes to Ireton under Cover to Andrews; and as Andrews delivered theſe Letters unopened to Kelly, this ſhews that Ireton is another Name for Kelly, of which the Matter of the Letters furniſhes abundant Proof.

In this Letter Glaſcock takes notice, that Kelly's Letter to Chitwood came ſafe. This refers to Kelly's Letter of the eighteenth to Dixwell, and ſhews Chitwood to be another Name for Dillon.

'That what he had recommended in relation to the New Book of Accounts would be obſerved, and that Forreſter had the ſame Advice given to him and Ormond.' Who Forreſter is does not appear to the Committee, but as he is mention'd here with the late Duke of Ormond, he is probably the Perſon who wrote the Letters to Dunville and Dodſworth above-mentioned.

Glaſcock then tells him, 'That Ormond had expreſſed much Concern for what had befallen Kelly. He afterwards deſires the Particulars of his Caſe, and to know what is wanting for paying off the Doctor's and Apothecary's Bills, acknowledges the Receipt of a Letter from Rogers, and inquires after Jemiſon.'

On the twenty-eighth of June, Kelly [56] writes to Talbot 'of the Neglect that had been ſhewn him, and the Reaſons that he had to decline any farther Traffick with the Merchants here; he ſays, if Talbot perceives no likelihood of a ſudden Change for the better, he muſt retire to ſome cheap part of the Country, if Dillon allows of it; expreſſes his great Obligations to Dillon, and his Readineſs to execute any private Commands of his;' and adds, (what appears to your Committee very remarkable) 'If I were in a Condition to bear the Weight of publick Buſineſs, Dillon ſhould never be at the trouble to employ another, but that he is heartily ſorry Dillon himſelf has done it ſo long, for ungrateful People on this Side; ſays, he never intended to trouble his Friends on this Side on his own private Account, but publick ones of this Nature are what he thinks they ought to take care of, ſince they are beſt able to do it, and expect the beſt Returns for it.'

Your Committee obſerve from Paſſages, that, tho Kelly would have it believed he only correſponded with Perſons in France on private Affairs, relating to the Stocks, yet he here owns in effect, that he had been truſted with Affairs of a publick Nature, and that thoſe Tranſactions having brought on him the Diſpleaſure of the Government, it was reaſonable for him to hope for Support from thoſe in England, who expected the beſt Returns from his and Dillon's joint Labours.

Your Committee farther obſerve, that this Letter was directed to Crow, and yet in it was incloſed one from Ireland, relating to Family Affairs, directed to James Talbot Eſq;.

On the fourth of July, Glaſcock [57] writes to Kelly, 'That Dillon intended to have ſent him a Letter of Credit by the Poſt, drawn on Mr. Harrold, but kept it back till he heard from him, for fear by removal into the Country, or by any other Accident, it ſhould be loſt.

On the eleventh of July Glaſcock [58] repeats the ſame, and his Suſpicion that the Letters to Andrews had miſcarried. Then acquaints Kelly with kind Expreſſions that he had ſeen from Dr. Freeman and Mrs. Malcom (the Pretender and his Spouſe) in relation to Hawksby's firſt Operation in his late violent Diſtemper.

Your Committee obſerve from what follows in this Letter, that, tho in Plunket's Cypher Hawksby ſtands for King George, yet in the Pretender's Cypher it ſtands for George without any Addition, and appears for that Reaſon to be made uſe of to denote George Kelly in this Place. Be that as it will, it is evident from what follows, that Kelly is the Perſon here meant.

The Pretender's Words mention'd in this Letter are as follows:

'Hawksby's ſteddy and reſolute Behaviour in the firſt Operation, anſwers the good Opinion I have long had of him; I am fully perſuaded that all the Surgeons will do hereafter ſhall not be able to alter his Temper, and I hope he will come off with Patience and a ſhort Confinement, by which his Health will become more perfect and ſatisfactory to his Friends.'

Glaſcock

Glaſcock then adds, 'Mrs. Malcum (the Pretender's Spouſe) in her ſhort way of Expreſſion, 'ſays, I am truly glad that honeſt Hawksby is recover'd, for I take him to be a very valuable Man.'

Then he ſays, 'I know theſe Compliments will 'be comfortable to a ſick Perſon from his Friends, 'for which reaſon I trouble you with them, as a 'Proof of my Attention towards one I wiſh ſo 'well.'

Theſe laſt words ſhew, that this Comfort was intended for Kelly, to ſupport him under his Trouble, which is diſguis'd under the Notion of Sickneſs; and your Committee think it unneceſſary for them to make any Obſervation on a Paſſage, which ſhews ſo plainly for whoſe ſake it was underſtood he had brought this Trouble on himſelf.

Glaſcock next tells him, 'That as he is upon re-'gulating his new Book of Accounts, he ſhould 'be glad to know whether Kelly and Jemiſon had 'thoſe by them, they and Glaſcock rectify'd to-'gether.'

This ſhews that Kelly's Journeys into France were not wholly on private Affairs, and confirms [59] Neynoe's Account of his having ſeen Cyphers in Kelly's Hands, and is again confirm'd by the [60] Cypher found among Dennis Kelly's Papers, which is in George Kelly's Hand-writing.

Glaſcock then ſends him the French Direction he had deſired.

On the ſeventeenth of July Glaſcock [61] writes again to Kelly, to let him know why the Bill was not ſent, and to deſire a ſure Addreſs. He likewiſe cautions Kelly not to draw any more on Digby, but on Meſſieurs Chitwood and Dupleſſis, at Mr. Hues Banker rue de la Monnoye. Your Committee obſerve, that this was about the time that Mr. Crawfurd [62] made the Diſcovery above related about the Name of Digby; and that for ſome time after Kelly directs his Letters for Dillon to Dupleſſis, till a new Cypher, which he, Kelly, ſent over afterwards, came to be made uſe of.

On the 19th of July, Kelly [63] writes to Glaſcock, that Mr. Andrews received the ſeveral Letters from Glaſcock all together; which was occaſioned by a Miſtake in directing them to King's-ſtreet, inſtead of St. James's; which agrees with Andrews's [64] Depoſition above-mention'd.

He then 'returns Thanks for the Letter of 'Credit intended him, and ſays it will come ſafe 'either to Mr. Wilkins at Will's Coffee-houſe, or 'to Mr. Andrews at the Dog and Duck.' This, compared with Andrews's Depoſition, ſhews that the Bill was for Kelly himſelf: which Obſervation the Committee think it proper to make, becauſe, when he was examined before them in relation to the Letters directed to Andrews, tho nothing was ſaid to him about the ſaid Bill, he immediately endeavour'd to explain away that Matter by the following [65] Prevarication.

He ſaid, 'He had been deſir'd by one Mrs. 'Oxburgh in the City, Daughter to him who was 'executed, to receive ſome Letters for her from 'abroad, and that he did not know, but he might 'employ one Andrews, or ſome other Friend to 'take up ſuch Letters. That he had likewiſe re-'ceived ſome Money on a Bill for the ſaid Mrs. 'Oxburgh, of a little Man a Banker in Lothbury, 'or ſomewhere behind the Exchange, and that he 'had endorſed the Bill with his own Hand.'

Your Committee obſerve that this laſt Circumſtance makes it probable the Bill was for himſelf, ſince his Endorſement on a Foreign Bill (which is not uſually made payable to the Bearer) would not have entitled him to have received the Money, nor have been a ſufficient Diſcharge, except the Bill had been made payable to him.

They likewiſe obſerve, that Mr. Martin Harold, on whom the Bill was drawn, whom Kelly avoided to name, does live behind the Exchange, tho not in Lothbury; and in Glaſcock's [66] Letter of the Twenty-fourth of July, Kelly is particularly directed to indorſe the Bill on Harold with his own Name. Your Committee ſubmit it to the Conſideration of the Houſe, whether it is not evident from theſe Circumſtances, that Kelly received the ſaid Money for his own uſe, as a Reward for his Sufferings, and an Encouragement to perſiſt in his Obſtinacy.

On the 23d of July, Kelly [67] writes to Talbot, 'That this Bill, and the hopes of Succeſs in ano-'ther Particular, when the Term is over, makes 'him a little eaſy.

'That as to what they had ſo often talk'd a-'bout, he did not know what to ſay to it, and 'that Nicholas Wogan's Return gave him the leſs 'hopes of it; but that he heard the Beautiful Squire 'was certainly determin'd on ſomething, but 'when, and in what manner, is what he knows 'nothing of.' Who is meant by the Beautiful Squire, the Committee cannot take upon them to determine; but they obſerve this Letter was writ the Day after Layer's return by Epping from Norfolk, at which time he told [68] Plunket, 'That the 'Pretender's Friends would run down the Miniſtry 'and King George in a little time, and bring 'the Law-Suit to bear on their own bottom, 'independent of the Regent, or any Body elſe;' as is related in Plunket's Letter of the ſame Date with this of Kelly's.

On the 2d of Auguſt, Kelly [69] writes to Glaſcock, 'That he had received the Bill. That his 'Letter of Licence is not out till the end of 'October, and that his Creditors threaten then to 'ſhew him no mercy: In the mean time he muſt 'hope the beſt, and wiſh that ſome good Turn 'of Fortune may enable him to do them juſ-'tice.'

He adds, 'That he expected to have ſent the 'State of their Accounts before now, but that 'the Gentleman who was to carry them, met 'with an Accident the other Night, which pre-'vented him; therefore he cannot do it till he 'recovers, or ſome other Opportunity offers:' Then ſends a long Account of Dennis Kelly's being taken up.

On the 6th of Auguſt [70] he ſends the ſame Account to Dillon, and mentions the great Terror the Guards are under from Informers; which Intelligence your Committee obſerve, was thought conſiderable enough to make an Article in the Pretender's late Declaration.

On the ſame day he ſends [71] Glaſcock an account of Sample's, Cotton's, and one Campbell's being taken up; 'That there were Reports 'of one Sir Harry Goring's being taken, and of 'Forces being ſent for the Lord North and Grey,

'Lord

'Lord Strafford, and other Perſons of Quality; 'but that he finds that there is no Truth in them, 'and is told that the two laſt are come to Town. 'He then deſires to know Dillon's private 'Thoughts from whence the ill Report of his 'Couſin's Circumſtances comes, which has occa- 'ſion'd this Severity from his Creditors, and ſays, 'he hopes ſoon to ſend the State of their Ac- 'counts, which has hitherto been delay'd for 'want of a proper Hand.'

On the 9th of Auguſt, Kelly [72] writes to Glaſcock, 'That Den is come to Town, and behaves 'like a Friend; but that Rep is ſtill in the Coun- 'try, and ſo is Ho; and that the latter had ear- 'neſtly deſired Kelly to go to him for a few Days, 'which he had hopes of doing, but intended to 'make but a ſhort ſtay.'

Your Committee ſee reaſon to believe, that by Ho is meant Hore; and they find an Entry into Kelly's Pocket-Book of his having been at Mrs. H.'s, and another Entry in theſe Words; To enquire for Mr. —— at Mr. William Bayſing's at Horn-Dean, which is a Houſe much frequen- ted by Sir Harry Goring, as appears by a [73] De- poſition annexed to this Report.

Who are meant by Den and Rep your Com- mittee will not take upon them to determine, tho they think this Letter compared with that writ three Days before, may lead to a Diſcovery of the Perſons meant.

On the 13th of Auguſt, Kelly [74] writes again to Glaſcock, 'That he intends to viſit H. who being 'at a pretty good Diſtance in the Country, he 'cannot return under four or five Days. Which agrees with the Circumſtance of his going down as far as Horn-Dean near Petersfield.

He afterwards adds a very remarkable Para- graph in theſe Words: 'What would you adviſe 'poor Trotter to do, he is ready to take a Voyage 'any where, and is, you know, an honeſt and fit 'Perſon for that Buſineſs; he has wrote very 'earneſtly to me for my Advice, which I told 'him I could not give till I heard from you.'

Your Committee think it their Duty to ob- ſerve to the Houſe, that in the [75] Cypher found among Dennis Kelly's Papers, in George Kelly's own Hand-writing, Trotter is one of the fictitious Names ſet over againſt the Name of Carte, and that on the Day this Letter was writ, His Majeſty had iſſued his Royal Proclamation for apprehending the ſaid Carte, againſt whom it is there ſet forth a Warrant had been iſſued by one of the Secreta- ries of State for Treaſonable Practices, and that he had abſconded and fled from Juſtice.

Yet it appears from this Letter, that George Kelly, far from diſcovering where the ſaid Carte was con- ceal'd, was deſirous to promote his Eſcape, by getting him invited to undertake a Voyage into foreign Parts; and that notwithſtanding the trea- ſon ble Practices alledged againſt him, he here gives him the Teſtimonial of an honeſt Man, owns his having had Communication with him by Let- ter, after the Time of his Eſcape, ſolicited Glaſ- cock in his Favour, and undertakes to aid and aſſiſt the ſaid Carte with his Advice, as ſoon as he ſhould have an Anſwer from Glaſcock.

On the 13th of Auguſt, [76] Glaſcock writes again to Kelly, in relation to the Bill on Harold, and mentions his expecting the Gentleman ſoon that was to clear Accounts.

He afterwards tells Kelly, 'That Mrs. Muſ- 'grave had received Advice from her Father, 'that ſhe is not to expect a Farthing of the Al- 'lowance due to her for the Time paſt, or to 'come, which Allen had procured a Seizure of, 'on account of her Husband's Debts and Miſ- 'management.'

Your Committee, from comparing this Letter with others, where Muſgrave is mentioned, and from obſerving the Date, ſee reaſon to believe, that this Paſſage relates to the ſtopping a Penſion, which the Committee are informed by his Ma- jeſty's ſingular Bounty and Indulgence, and upon Application from the late Lord Marr, and Pro- miſe of Services, was allowed to him; and they cannot reflect, without Indignation and Aſtoniſh- ment, on the black Ingratitude of Perſons, who, while they were in a great meaſure ſubſiſted by his Majeſty's unexampled Liberality, were labour- ing by the moſt wicked and unjuſtifiable Practices to diſpoſſeſs him of his Crown, and to deſtroy his ſacred Life.

On the 17th of Auguſt, Glaſcock [77] writes again to Kelly, and among other things ſays, 'He is 'contriving to get at Barker for a Relief in favour 'of Farmer's (the Pretender's) Children, in caſe 'their Step-Father ſhould pretend to deprive 'them of their Due.' It appears by another [78] Letter, Barker means ſome conſiderable Perſon in France; but what this Paſſage particularly re- lates to, your Committee cannot with certainty determine. However, they have thought it their Duty to lay this and other obſcure Paſſages be- fore the Houſe, that it may be ſeen how much it is in the power of Perſons now in cuſtody to diſ- cover; and of what Importance it is to the Safe- ty of his Majeſty's Government, that ſuch Diſ- covery ſhould be required at their Hands.

On the 20th of Auguſt, three Days before the Biſhop of Rocheſter was taken into cuſtody, Kelly [79] writes to Glaſcock (the Original of which Letter is ſtopp'd, and ſworn to be his Hand-writing;) and ſays, Your Couſins Ireton and Wilkins are both gone into the Country, and earneſtly beg the favour of you not to write to them any more for which you will ſoon know the Reaſons.

On the 30th of Auguſt he [80] writes to Dillon; and after giving a very long and particular Ac- count of all the Circumſtances of the Biſhop's be- ing taken up, examined, and committed to the Tower, he ſays, 'You are by this ſatisfy'd of 'the Reaſons of my late Silence.' Your Committee obſerve, That theſe Paſſages ſhew the Connection which Kelly thought there was between the Biſhop and himſelf.

In the ſame Letter of the 20th of Auguſt your Committee obſerve another very remarkable Cir- cumſtance; Kelly ſays, that he is going to the Country that Day, and he had ſaid [81] before that he was going to Mr. Hore's.

In his [82] Pocket-Book notice is taken, that Sir H. G. went to F. on the 23d.

On the 14th of September, Glaſcock [83] writes him word, 'That Mrs. Hore was under a Fit of her 'old Sickneſs at Rouen; but that it was not ſafe, 'for many good Reaſons, to have her tranſported 'to Paris, there being abundance of Quacks go- 'ing about, which cauſe much Miſchief.'

From this time forwards Kelly makes uſe of a new Cypher of Names, and new Directions to his Letters.

On the 27th Kelly [84] writes again, and ſays, 'That ſince Mr. G. Sampſon went, he has not 'heard a Syllable from his Correſpondents in 'France, which has been a great Detriment to 'ſeveral of their Friends.'

On the 9th of October [85] Glaſcock ſends him word, 'That all the Letters he wrote by the Poſt, 'came ſafe; but that he had not yet ſeen the 'Perſon who was to deliver him the particular In-'ſtructions and Addreſs he was to make uſe of, 'that Perſon being ſtill detained in the Country; 'but that he had taken meaſures to get from him 'the Memorandum Kelly had given him.'

On the 17th of October, Glaſcock [86] ſends Kelly word, 'That the Book of Accounts ſent by G. 'Saunders is at laſt come to hand, tho the Perſon 'that brought it is ſtill in the Country, ſo that 'they are now in a Condition to ſettle Accounts 'with Kelly.' And from this time forward the Correſpondents in France make uſe of a new Cypher of Names, and new Directions to their Letters.

From all theſe Circumſtances, your Committee ſee reaſon to believe, that Kelly ſent over a new Cypher, and a new Liſt of Directions to France by Sir Harry Goring; in which they are the more confirm'd, by obſerving that this new Cypher appears fram'd in ſuch a manner, that the initial Letters of the real Names are always prefixed to the fictitious ones, which laſt are frequently varied, but the initial Letter never. This will be more clearly underſtood by inſtancing in one of the Names.

The Perſon who carried over the Cypher and Liſt of Directions from Kelly, is in ſome Letters call'd G. Sampſon; in others G. Stephenſon, G. Saunders, and G. Sandford; and appears to be the ſame with Mrs. Hore, who was obſerved before to be probably Sir Harry Goring.

Your Committee farther obſerve, That all the Names made uſe of in the new Directions, were enter'd by Kelly in the [87] Pocket-Book that was taken upon him when he was laſt ſeiz'd, with ſuch Marks and Obſervations before them, as need no great Explanation. Over-againſt the Names of Bonnaville and Diſode, is writ the Abbreviation Glaſ. and a [88] Letter ſigned Diſode, having been ſtopped at the Poſt Office, appears to be in the ſame hand as thoſe ſigned Howell, Quitwell, Querry, &c. which were ſhewn above to have been writ by Glaſcock. Over-againſt Briſac and Du Puy, is writ Stur; and your Committee find that Letters came for Kelly, directed by theſe Names to Sturgis's Coffee-houſe. Over-againſt Contade and Lunelle, is writ Slau; and your Committee find, that Letters thus directed were left for him at Slaughter's Coffee-houſe.

The Committee are ſenſible, that their entering into ſo minute a Detail, muſt be tedious to the Houſe; but as the Conſpirators have been no leſs induſtrious, than they are obſtinate in concealing their Treaſon, your Committee have thought it their Duty to trace it thro' every Diſguiſe, as near as they could, and to lay before the Houſe every Circumſtance which may any way tend to a Diſcovery ſo neceſſary for the Safety and Quiet of theſe Kingdoms, and yet ſo little to be hoped for from the preſent Temper and Diſpoſition of the Conſpirators themſelves.

The firſt [89] of Kelly's Letters, writ in this new Cypher, is of the 10th of September, directed to Bonnaville (Glaſcock) under Cover to Hues, Banker at Paris.

In this he ſays, I hope you have ſeen G. Stephenſon before now, and mentions a Trunk that he is ſoon to ſend to him; which Circumſtance ſhews he is the ſame Perſon meant by G. Sandford in other Letters.

He then takes notice of a young Fellow that he had recommended, (which was obſerved before to be probably Neynoe) 'and earneſtly begs the 'Goods he carries with him may be diſpoſed of 'at any Rate; and, if poſſible, without Mr. L. 'Crawford's or his Partners being concerned in 'the Bargain.' Your Committee obſerve from Neynoe's Informations, that he was to be recommended by Kelly to Lord Lanſdown's Family. They likewiſe obſerve from ſeveral other Letters, that Dillon, upon the Caution given him by Skinner from the Biſhop of Rocheſter, was grown very jealous of his former Friends at Paris; from which Circumſtances, they think it probable, that by L. Crawford, is meant Lord Lanſdown.

He then adds, 'Your Couſin C. Saunders is 'well, and with a Friend in the Country, who 'will take particular care of her, till a better 'Service can be got for her.'

This compared with what he ſays in his Letter of the 13th of Auguſt, of Trotter's having writ to him for Advice, and wanting to be employ'd in a Voyage or other Buſineſs, makes it probable, that by C. Saunders is meant Carte.

He then adds, 'Your Relations N. Crone and 'S. Farrel have made ſeveral Bargains for ready 'Money in the third Subſcription; and as the 'time allow'd by Parliament for Non-proſecution 'will be out, as ſoon as it ſits, their Creditors 'will then fall upon them and all their Friends, 'and put them in Jayl, except you can ſend them 'ſome Relief: And tho your Actions are at a 'very low Price, however, I believe, they would 'be extremely pleaſed to have them ſold at any 'rate, to enable them to pacify their Creditors 'on this ſide, and to put them in a ſtate of 'Safety.'

It has been obſerv'd that the Conſpiracy is often treated of under the Cant of Stocks; and whether this third Subſcription may not mean the third Period of Time fix'd by the Conſpirators, and the Relief deſired be not ſome Aſſiſtance from abroad, is ſubmitted to the Conſideration of the Houſe.

That this Paſſage cannot be underſtood in the literal Senſe, is evident from its being ſaid, that the Time of Non-proſecution expires at the Sitting of the Parliament; but your Committee apprehend, that the Meaning of this Paragraph is fully explain'd by another in the ſame Letter, in which Kelly ſays, 'There is no Proſpect of the 'State Priſoners getting out till next Term, and 'if the Habeas Corpus Act be ſuſpended at the 'Meeting of the Parliament, they will remain 'during the Government's Pleaſure, and per-'haps have Company enough.' Who are meant by N. Crone and S. Farrel, is ſubmitted to the Conjecture of the Houſe.

His next [92] Letter to Glaſcock is of the 27th Sept. in which he complains, 'That he has not 'heard a Syllable from D. Gainer (Dillon proba-'bly) or G. Roberts (Glaſcock probably) ſince Mr. 'G. Sampſon (Goring) went, which has been no 'ſmall Detriment to ſome of their Friends.' He adds, 'The Term being ſoon at hand, we ſhall 'be much at a loſs how to manage without their 'Advice; which G. Sampſon poſitively promis'd to ſend a ſpeedy Account of.

'The Situation of your Friends ſtands much 'as it did, and nothing has happened of late 'in your Family to eaſe their Loſſes, or mend 'their Condition.'

He then gives a long Account of the Lord North and Grey's being ſeiz'd at Portſmouth, and of his being to be brought to Town that Night; and concludes thus:

'I muſt now plainly tell you, that I am afraid 'your Couſin N. Clifton is in a very bad way, 'and a Perſon (whom he lately employ'd to ma-'nage ſome things for him, particularly to com-'pound ſome S. Sea Bargains) has not been true 'to him: for his Creditors have actually put him 'in Jayl, and except you can contrive to ſend him 'ſome Relief from what Effects he put into your 'Miſſiſippi (for I don't find he has any other Proſ-'pect) his Confinement will prove fatal to him. 'You know his Worth, and for Heaven's ſake 'don't forſake him.'

This Letter being mention'd to be writ on the Day Lord North and Grey was brought up in Cuſtody, your Committee cannot but be led to conjecture, that by N. Clifton is meant the ſaid Lord, and that the Perſon ſaid to be employ'd by him, and ſuſpected of being falſe to him, is either Lynch or Layer; and if this Conjecture be admitted, it is not improbable that by N. Crone, in the former Letter, may be meant the ſaid Lord North.

On the 20th October Glaſcock [93] writes to Kelly, 'That D. Gainer (who in another Part of the 'Letter is call'd D. Gregory, and is probably Dil-'lon) thinks very ſeriouſly of the Commiſſions with 'which Kelly had charg'd him for his Friends, and 'does not refuſe to employ his whole Credit in 'that Affair; but that one ſingle Article had con-'ſum'd the Bill of Exchange, which N. Cleaton 'ſent, and that there is not any other come that 'Dillon knows of.'

Here N. Cleaton means evidently the ſame as N. Clifton in Kelly's Letter; and it appears he had ſent a Bill of Exchange to France, which was all conſum'd in one ſingle Article of Expence. In former Letters notice was taken of a Bill of Exchange ſent over by Repney, and of 20000 l. raiſed by N.

In the ſame Letter, Glaſcock takes notice of ſome Goods ſent by Comtade and Lunelle for Kelly's Uſe, which he deſires Kelly to ſend for, and to acknowledge the Receipt of them carefully.

It appears to your Committee, that theſe Goods were the Pretender's Declarations, which [94] came incloſed that Poſt, or the next, under blank Covers to Comtade and Lunelle at Slaughter's Coffee-houſe, agreeable to the Memorandum in Kelly's Pocket-Book.

In another part of the foregoing Letter, it is ſaid, that Mr. G. Sampſon has ſent over his Project of Accommodation, and waits the Event of it, which it is probable relates to the ſame Declaration.

Kelly being examin'd by the Committee in relation to the Names in his [95] Pocket-Book, ſaid, 'They were Names of Perſons, with whom he 'had tranſacted Stock-Affairs in France ſeveral 'Years ago. He own'd he had ſeen Letters at 'Slaughter's and Sturgis's Coffee-houſe, directed 'by ſome of thoſe Names, but that it might 'eaſily happen, that there might be Perſons 'in England of the ſame Names with others 'in France; and that it was his Misfortune 'Letters ſhould come directed by thoſe Names. 'He inſiſted, that his Pocket-Book, tho ta-'ken upon him, was an old one, that had lain 'by neglected theſe three Years.' Yet your 'Committee obſerve, the Memorandums in it were of a late Date, and contain'd a particular Account of the Time of his Journeys to and from France, and of the Days on which he and Dennis Kelly, and the Biſhop of Rocheſter, were taken into Cuſtody.

The Houſe will obſerve, that this long and particular Account of George Kelly is extracted out of ſuch Papers and Informations, as were in the hands of the Government relating to him, ſupported by ſuch Explications as ſeem to the Committee naturally to ariſe from comparing the ſeveral Parts of them together; but that he himſelf upon his Examination refuſed to make the leaſt Diſcovery that might give Light to any part of this treaſonable Correſpondence, tho he plainly intimated he had it in his power to do it. And if in ſome Particulars, the Committee ſhould have fallen ſhort of the true and genuine Explanation of the Names, or other Facts, which may eaſily have happened in unfolding ſuch Variety of Matter, ſo induſtriouſly wrapt up in the utmoſt Obſcurity; yet they conceive it will not leſſen the Credit of thoſe Facts in general relating to him, which are ſupported by unqueſtionable Evidence, notwithſtanding his denying of them, and his prevaricating ſo groſly with the Committee.

Your Committee will now proceed to lay before you ſuch Particulars, as they have collected from the Papers referred to them, relating to Dennis Kelly Eſq; who appears to them, from ſeveral Paſſages in the intercepted Letters, to have acted in Concert with the other Kelly, and behaved himſelf with the ſame Obſtinacy on his [96] Examination before them.

Your Committee ſee Reaſon to believe, that the ſeveral fictitious Names of Kirton, Killegrew, Sandford, St. George, and Hubberts, are made uſe of in the intercepted Letters to expreſs one and the ſame Perſon: and as this Perſon is frequently ſpoken of as living at the Cockpit, as being himſelf ill of a Fever and Ague part of laſt Summer, as having a Daughter who was troubled with Returns of ſpitting Blood at particular Times there mention'd, and as being to ſet out with his Family for France by Diepe, the latter end of July; theſe ſeveral Circumſtances being confirm'd to your Committee by the written [97] Examinations of Mr. Dennis Kelly's Servants to have been true of him, and being in the Opinion of the Committee applicable to no one elſe, they ſee Reaſon to conclude, that what is affirmed in the intercepted

Correſpondence

Correspondence of the Person designed by the Names above-mentioned, is affirmed of him.

Your Committee have likewise been [95] informed, that Enquiry having been made at the British Coffee-House, who took up Letters directed thither by the Name of Sandford, it was found that one Mr. Kelly, who frequented that House, took them up. And a Letter from France so directed, having been copied at the Post-Office, and then delivered out, the [97] Original of the said Letter, signed M. Digby, was found in Dennis Kelly's Pocket, when he was taken up, as appears by the [96] Affidavit of the Messenger who seiz'd him.

In this Letter Digby sends his Service to his Cousin Ireton, which has been shewn above to be one of the Names belonging to George Kelly; and also mentions Hore, who has been already explained to be probably Sir Harry Goring.

Your Committee observe, that the said Letter was writ in the same Hand with another [99] signed J. Gerrard, which was likewise found among Dennis Kelly's Papers, and has been observ'd above to be probably the Name made use of by Sir John D'Obryan, whom George Kelly declared to be Secretary to Dillon.

They farther observe, that both these Letters, signed Gerrard and Digby, were in the same Hand with [1] others found in his Custody relating to Dillon's private Affairs; which confirms Digby to be Dillon, and Gerrard to be one whose Hand Dillon makes use of for his Dispatches.

Another [2] Fragment of a Letter was found among his Papers, mentioning the Names of Ireton and Hore; which is in the same hand with the Letters to Plunket, signed Dixwell and Howell, and is therefore probably the writing of Christopher Glascock, George Kelly's Correspondent.

Some other [3] Papers were also found in his Custody, mentioning others of the fictitious Names used in George Kelly's Letters, as also a long [4] List of Names, with fictitious Names over-against them, and a [4] Cypher of Figures, which appear to be George Kelly's Hand-writing, and are sworn, by the Clerks of the Post-Office, to be the same Hand in which the Letters signed Johnson, Hatfield, &c. were writ. It has already been observed, that this Cypher of Figures is found to be a Supplement to the Cypher in which the Letters of the late Duke of Ormond, and the Bishop of Rochester were writ; and that the said Cypher last mentioned is made use of in [5] one of the intercepted Letters from Dillon to Dennis Kelly.

There was also found, among his Papers, an exact [6] List of the quartering of his Majesty's Forces a little before the time of the Elections, and a [7] Scheme for erecting By-Boats between London and Bolougne, which seems referred to in the [8] Letters between George Kelly and Gordon of Boulogne.

There was also taken among his Papers a [9] Fragment of a very treasonable Letter, signed F. M. which your Committee conjecture was from one Francis Macnamarra, a Person concerned in the former Rebellion, there being [10] another Letter among his Papers, with the Name at length, in the same hand.

Your Committee have laid together these several Circumstances, that it may appear Dennis Kelly was concerned in the treasonable Correspondence, which is confirmed by [11] Mr. Crawfurd's Letter from Paris, $\frac{1}{10}$ of May, in which he says, 'There is one Captain Kelly, who frequents the 'Cocoa-Tree and Will's Coffee-house, who is much 'in the confidence of Dillon and Lord Lansdown, 'he was here some Months ago, and is at pre-'sent very active in England.'

Your Committee find, that he was abroad for several Months the latter end of the Year 1721, and that some of the Letters, sent to him by fictitious Names from France, were directed to Will's Coffee-house and the Cocoa-Tree.

The Matters which they find him principally concerned in by the intercepted Letters, are the [12] Remittance of the Bill of Exchange sent over from the Person called Repney, the Receipt of which is acknowledged in several Letters to him, his being present at a [13] Consultation with the Persons called Rep. Ho. and Den. and his being to carry over to France their final Answer, together with a new [14] Cypher, List of Directions, and other verbal Instructions, from George Kelly, for Dillon, Glascock, and Talbot.

As George Kelly's Correspondence was closely connected with that of the Bishop of Rochester, Thomas Carte, and Dennis Kelly, and as he appears to have been privy to Plunket's; so your Committee see reason to believe, that he was not a Stranger to that of Sample, who appears to be mentioned in a [15] Letter from Gerrard to Kelly.

Your Committee find, that John Sample, being examined before the Secretaries of State, and two of your Committee [16], owned, that Francis Son of the Lord Sempill, commonly so called, had been in England that Summer, and returned to France about three Weeks before his Examination, which was taken on the 4th of August last.

That during his Stay in England, he (John Sample) was twice in company with him, and that two Letters found in his Trunk were received by him from the said Francis Sempill before his coming to England.

In the [17] first of these Letters, dated June $\frac{2}{11}$ 1722. Fr. Sempill tells him, 'That they are daily 'confirmed Mrs. Hews's Distemper is but imagi-'nary or counterfeit.' By Mrs. Hews, he said, was meant the King, and by his Distemper the late Disturbances.

Fr. Sempill then tells him, 'That this has put a 'Stop to Mr. Standwell's Proceedings (Standwell 'he owned to mean the Pretender) but that this 'cannot disconcert Standwell's Measures, nor e-'ven delay any thing above a few Weeks.

'That perhaps he may soon produce himself 'to their Cost, but it is not yet full time to give 'him (Sample) hopes of that kind. He adds, that 'they have not yet heard from Mr. Houlder,' whom Sample explained to be the late Duke of Ormond.

Your Committee observe, That this agrees with the Accounts given in the former Parts of their Report, of the Attempts that were to have been made in England about the beginning of May, which were prevented, tho not entirely discontinued, by the Discoveries made here, and by the Encampment.

Sample being shewn the Copies of several Letters, taken at the Post-Office, directed to Mr. Sempill at Paris, and enclosing others, owned, as appears by his [18] Examination, the writing of them all, and gave Explications of the Names made use of in them. [19] One of these Letters is to Standwell, whom he owned to mean the Pretender, and [20] another is mentioned to be for Glascow's Master, which is probably General Dillon. He likewise owned his having writ to the late Duke of Ormond, and to Kennedy his Secretary; and while he was in Custody of the Messenger, he begun to put down in writing a Confession of his Crimes, [21] which was found in his Room after his Escape. But tho some of his Letters appeared dictated by him to other Persons, your Committee do not find he would discover who those Persons were.

Your Committee will next proceed to lay before you the Substance of the several Papers and Examinations referr'd to them, relating to Mrs. Spelman, alias Tallop; in doing which, they find themselves indispensably obliged to mention a Person of high Rank and Distinction, Thomas Duke of Norfolk, among others concern'd in the treasonable Correspondence convey'd thro' the hands of the said Mrs. Spelman.

It appears to your Committee, that Mrs. Spelman being examined on the 19th of October, concerning several Letters from abroad, directed to her by the Name of Mr. or Mrs. Burton, has [22] declared upon Oath, that Mr. George Jernegan, (who, as your Committee are inform'd, is a Roman Catholick, and appears to have been long employ'd by the Pretender) 'being in England about six Months before her Examination, did, 'upon his going for France, leave Orders with 'the said Mrs. Spelman to send to the Duke of 'Norfolk such Letters as she should receive from 'him, Jernagan, directed to Mrs. Jones; and to Mr. 'Harvey of Combe, such as she should receive from 'him, directed to Mrs. Williams, in Newgate street, 'Norwich; and to Mr. William Moor (who lives, 'or did live in Brownlow-street) such as she should 'receive from him, directed to Mr. Frampton: 'and that it was agreed between her and Jernegan, that he should direct to her by the Name 'of Burton, when he did not do it by her own 'Name.

'That she did accordingly send (as had been 'agreed between them) the Letters that came 'to her with the Directions abovemention'd, 'having first enclosed them under new Covers, 'which she herself directed; that she sent them 'by common Porters, who always brought her 'back an Account of their having delivered them, 'or of the Person's not being at home; that 'particularly one to the Duke of Norfolk was 'brought back again by the Porter, his Grace 'not being in Town, which Letter she kept till 'he came to Town, and then sent it to him. 'That she once received a Message from the 'Duke of Norfolk by Mr. Edward Jernegan, that 'his Grace could not answer a Letter she had 'convey'd to him from George Jernegan, because 'he, the Duke of Norfolk, had not the Key of 'the Cypher, it being in his Brother's hands; 'she likewise own'd her receiving several Cyphers and Keys of Cyphers from George Jernegan, which she burn'd between the time of 'her first and second Examination.'

Copies of these Cyphers having been taken at the Post-Office, it appears that [23] one of them was mark'd, A Key and Cypher, with Mr. Farmer and Jerry; and [24] another, D, O, and J; the first of which is probably a Cypher betwen the Pretender and Jernegan, and the latter between him and the late Duke of Ormond.

It farther appears to your Committee, that Edward Jernegan being examin'd in relation to the Message from the Duke of Norfolk abovemention'd, has [25] deposed upon Oath, 'That about 'a Fortnight before the Duke went to the Bath, 'being inform'd that his Grace had inquired for 'some of their Family, he, Jernegan, went to 'wait on him, and his Grace told him, that he 'had received a Letter from George Jernegan, who 'was then abroad, but that he could not answer it, because his Grace's Brother had the 'Key of the Cypher, in which it was written; 'and that he, Jernegan, delivered this Message 'to Mrs. Spelman.'

The first Letter directed to Mrs. Jones, (the Duke of Norfolk) of which a Copy was taken, is dated, Cambray, 12th July, 1722. and is partly in Cypher, but has been decypher'd in the manner following:

SIR,

'VArious Considerations, which obliged me 'to submit, deprived me till now the Honour of Writing to you; therefore I flatter myself, you incline to favour me with opinion, 'that my Zeal and Attention are above falling into 'any Negligence, where your Sollicitude or private Satisfaction is concern'd. You have been 'in some manner a Witness of the late Turn in 'Affairs, and undoubtedly know so much of them, 'that I fear it will prove superfluous to trouble 'you with the Particulars which I have: after 'several Meetings with some of our Friends at 'Paris, ... was of opinion, that the 'whole should be communicated to the Regent; 'which being agreed to, that Lord was deputed 'to wait on him: they met, and parted in appearance the best Friends in the World, notwithstanding immediately by the Regent's Orders the Secret was discovered to King George. 'How is it possible to arm one's self with sufficient Prudence against such a Conduct? These 'being our private Concerns, I leave 'em, to 'divert you with the publick News: the Overture of the Congress seems now in the way to 'be deferred to the K. of Fr. Majority, who, 'since his Removal to Versailles, is in a manner 'solely in the Hands of the Regent. His Coronation remains still fix'd to the 15th of October; so, in all appearance, this Year produces 'no Disturbance to the present Peace of Europe. 'The Emperor grows daily more powerful in 'Italy, by the Pope's falling into that Interest; 'he has lately seiz'd the Fortress of Massa in Florence, and promises the Investiture thereof, 'with that of Parma, to the Prince of Baviere, 'upon his Marriage with the Princess Josephina. 'Spain will be under great Difficulties to find 'means to support their claim to these Provinces, 'especially at a time that France seems negligent 'of every thing that concerns them. There is 'no appearance likewise that the Affairs in the 'North produce any thing material this Season. 'The pacifick Temper of the K. of Prussia secures every thing on that side, and has probably

'prevented

'prevented the Disturbance threaten'd in those 'Parts. Thus at present are the Affairs of 'Europe.

'I did not fail to repeat my usual Sollicitations 'in favour of your Brother, and to add what in 'Justice I thought you merited: this I did upon 'the first occasion, after my coming over; 'to which, from the King, I have this Answer:

June the 15th.

"No body has a better Opinion than I have "of the great Person you mention, nor does his "Character more Justice: I shall be always de-"sirous to do what is in my power to convince "him of my Regard for his Brother, who now "is in the Country with me; but I fear it will not "be time to move in the Particular you mention "of some years yet, which will be the Case of all "others who pretend to the same Right as I "do.

'Thus far was his. There is a Pleasure to see 'with what generous Virtue he repays all who 'consider his Misfortunes.

'I presume to mention one thing more, being 'moved to it out of a pure Consideration to the 'Credit it will give to your Name. Dr. Witham 'finds himself under the necessity of building the 'old House, being ready to fall; and next Spring 'they begin, but upon so small a Fund as will 'never finish the Work, as it ought to be; the 'Consequence of which must necessarily oblige 'them to beg the Assistance of their Friends. I 'should be sorry upon this Occasion, that any 'other Person should distinguish himself so, by a 'Donation, as to merit his Arms to be placed in 'the Front, where I could wish to see your own. 'I have not spoke one word of this to any Per-'son in the House, thinking it would look more 'generous in you, if disposed to take the Credit 'in laying the first Stone, to move and offer it 'yourself. As to other Matters, if I can be ser-'viceable in these Parts, either in your particu-'lar, or to the Interest of the Party, you know 'me faithfully devoted to both. I have obtain'd 'leave to return by the end of Summer, finding 'it inconvenient to my private Situation to re-'main longer abroad: I hope then to present 'you with fresh Proofs with what Zeal and Re-'spect I've the Honour to be,

Sir, your most Obedient and

most Humble Servant.

'Be pleased to address to me,
'à Monsieur Hooker under Cover à Monsieur
'Pigault Banquier à Calais.

Your Committee observe from this Letter, that Jernegan supposes the Duke of Norfolk already acquainted with a Design, on which Application had been made to the Regent, and with the Causes of its Miscarriage; that however, in order to shew his Zeal and Attention in any thing, where he thought the Duke's Sollicitude concern'd, he sends him an Account of what had happen'd to their common Friends at Paris, and of the Secret's being communicated to King George by the Regent's order; and then laments the impossibility of arming themselves with sufficient Prudence against such a Conduct, which, supposing it to have been such as they represent, yet could not possibly have appear'd blameable to any but the Enemies of our present happy Establishment.

He then shews from the Situation of Affairs in Europe, there is but little Prospect of any Rupture, which may be favourable or advantageous to their Designs.

He afterwards acquaints the Duke, that he had repeated his Sollicitations to the Pretender in favour of his Grace's Brother, and had also added what in justice he thought His Grace himself merited; to which he received an Answer from the Pretender (whom he stiles the King) acknowledging his great Opinion of the Duke, and the Justice he does his Character, and his Readiness to convince his Grace of his Regard by any Kindness he can shew his Brother.

And the Inference, which Jernegan makes from the Regard express'd towards the Duke in this Letter of the Pretender's, is, That there is a Pleasure to see with what generous Virtue he (the Pretender) repays all those, who consider his Misfortunes.

He concludes with telling the Duke, that if he can be serviceable in those Parts, either in his Grace's own Particular, or to the Interest of the Party, his Grace knows him faithfully devoted to both.

On the $\frac{2}{12}$ of August, Jernegan writes a second Letter to the Duke, as follows.

SIR,

'THE Vicissitude in our Affairs being a 'perpetual ebbing and flowing, 'tis ex-'tremely difficult to assure any thing with cer-'tainty: In my last of the 12th I mention'd how 'things had happen'd; and altho the Fact was 'true, yet the Consequence did not answer what 'we apprehended: It was a politick Necessity, 'which urged and demanded that Conduct, and 'it appears now to have succeeded so well, that 'every Hand is at work, as before, to draw 'things to a right Conclusion; brief's, we are 'flatter'd that the Regent is cordially in our 'Interest, and disposes every thing to undertake 'the Work, which according to some Accounts 'will be put in execution within two Months. 'Those, who are serious and make due Reflec-'tion on these Matters, know how far they may 'be useful to the Cause, and with timely and 'prudent Precautions may dispose their Friends to 'act a lively part; whilst they themselves keep 'retired, till the Success one way or the other 'determines what is necessary to be done.

'I have opportunity, by being in these Parts, 'of picking up several good Officers, and with 'a little trouble as many as would compleat an 'entire Regiment, into which any Gentleman 'might enter himself, and do his Duty with Ho-'nour. This is what I thought fit to propose on 'this occasion, and should be glad to know, if 'solely upon your own Bottom this may be 'thought on. I shall take all necessary Precau-'tion, and shall first know certainly what there 'is to depend upon. Your Opinion on these 'Matters, with the assistance of your Advice, 'will lay a most sensible Obligation on him, who 'entirely devotes himself,

Sir, your most Obedient and

most Humble Servant.

'Let the Conveyer of these furnish you with 'my immediate Address.'

Your

Your Committee obſerve, that in this Letter, Jernegan does, with an Air of great Satisfaction, try to leſſen the Apprehenſions and Diſcouragements, which he ſuppoſed his former Account of the Regent's having betray'd the Secret might have rais'd in his Grace, and ſays that every Hand is now at work as before to draw things to a right Concluſion, without explaining what that former Work, or the right Concluſion hoped for is; which Particulars, it appears, he thought ſo well known to the Duke, as not to need the leaſt Explanation.

Then after telling his Grace, We are flatter'd the Regent is cordially in our Intereſt, and is diſpoſing every thing to undertake the Work within two Months time, he intimates, that from this Hint one of his Grace's Seriouſneſs and Reflection might be uſeful to the Cauſe, by diſpoſing his Friends (who may juſtly be underſtood to be the Roman Catholicks) to act a lively part, while he himſelf lies retired, waiting till the Event ſhould determine what part it was proper for him to take.

He then makes the Offer to his Grace of raiſing an entire Regiment of Officers in Flanders, into which any Gentleman might enter himſelf, and do his Duty with Honour; and deſires to know, whether on his Grace's own Bottom ſuch a thing might be thought of.

This treaſonable Offer, from an humble Servant of his Grace's, ſhews that Jernegan was at leaſt perſuaded it would not be ill received; which could only proceed from a thorow Aſſurance of the Duke's Inclinations to the Pretender's Cauſe, and of his Intentions to ſupport it with Men and Money, whenever a Probability of Succeſs ſhould make it ſafe and proper for him to eſpouſe it openly.

Your Committee farther obſerve, that this Letter was writ about the ſame time, that Plunket was ſo buſy in preſſing Dillon to ſollicit the Regent's Aſſiſtance; and that the Term for putting the Deſign in execution, which is mention'd in Jernegan's Letter to be within two Months from the beginning of Auguſt, has an evident relation to the third Period pitch'd upon by the Conſpirators, which, as has been obſerved before, was the breaking up of the Camp. And it appears to your Committee, by ſeveral concurrent [26] Advices from France, Spain, and Italy, during the Months of July and Auguſt, that the Deſign, which had been ſuſpended upon the firſt Diſcovery of the Plot, was again reſumed, and Preparations made for the Pretender's leaving Italy about the beginning of September; for which purpoſe the Ship Revolution (ſince taken) ſet ſail for Italy the latter end of Auguſt, having on board near two hundred Men and a great number of Officers.

Mention is made in Jernegan's Letters to Mrs. Spelman of a great number of Letters written to and received from Mr. Harvey of Combe, by the name of Mrs. Williams; and in [27] one of his Letters to Mr. Harvey he ſays, 'The Regent plays 'a Game a-part, and confides in none but Bri- 'tain, and has ſacrificed Us to make a firm Friend 'of King George. The late Diſappointment in 'our Affairs has given a ſurprizing Power to the 'Court of France: they ſilence all other Princes 'in regard to Us; none now dare look that way, or 'undertake the leaſt trifling Service in our favour.'

On the 20th of July, Mr. Harvey ſent an Anſwer to this Letter, the Original of which is ſtopp'd, and is [28] ſworn by Mrs. Spelman to be his Hand-writing; but it contains ſuch an odd Heap of low and virulent Scandal, that the Committee do not think proper to trouble the Houſe with any Extract of it, but have [29] annexed it entire to their Report.

Your Committee have already taken notice, that the treaſonable Correſpondence, above ſet forth, was not confined to England only, but was carried on in Scotland, under the ſame Cant Expreſſions of Wine, Trade, Goods, &c. And it appears that the Pretender's Agents were equally buſy in diſpoſing Matters for an Inſurrection in that part of the Kingdom, at the ſame Periods of Time as were fix'd on in England.

They find that the Government has receiv'd [30] Information upon Oath from one Lodoick Anderſon, 'that on the 28th of January 1721, Bri- 'gadier Mackintoſh was ſeen by him (Anderſon) 'at the Houſe of Sir John Mackenzie of Coul, and 'told Anderſon that the Pretender deſign'd to have 'on the Crown of Scotland before Midſummer, 'and that he was to be aſſiſted from France, Spain, 'and Muſcovy; that General Gordon and Captain 'Tullock were to land at the Loach Elch with 'Arms for this purpoſe.'

That Mackintoſh was then in Britain, agrees with [31] Pancier's Depoſition.

'Anderſon farther depoſed, that on the 15th 'of February he met the Lord George Murray at a 'place not far from the Earl of Kintore's, who con- 'firm'd to him what Mackintoſh had ſaid, with 'ſeveral other Particulars; that two days after 'he met Mr. James Keith, Brother to the Earl 'Mariſhall, who after having told him that there 'would be a Deſcent in favour of the Pretender, 'named to him ſeveral Perſons (ſpecified in his 'Depoſition) that were come over to get Mat- 'ters in a readineſs.'

This, your Committee obſerves, anſwers to the firſt Period of Time for beginning an Inſurrection with the help of foreign Forces during the Time of the Elections.

About the beginning of May a [32] Letter was intercepted, directed to Mr. Peter Smyth at Boulogne, and incloſing [33] another to De Martin: which Letters, as your Committee are informed, are in the Hand-writing of Mr. Cochran. Who is meant by De Martin, does not appear.

In this Letter Cochran ſays, 'Our Cuſtomers, on 'this Side the Water, are as fond of taking our 'Goods, as you are of ſending them; but I am a- 'fraid if they are not ſent ſoon, the Market will 'be foreſtalled, for our Enemies begin to be upon 'their Guard. He adds, that their Friends in 'England are willing to ſend Money to pay for 'them per Advance, and that they in Scotland are 'not backwards, but hope, in a few days to re- 'mit as much Money as will be ſufficient for their 'Country. He then deſires to know how ſoon 'they may expect their Wines on this Side the 'Water, that they may put themſelves in a ſufficient 'Poſture for receiving them.'

Your Committee likewiſe find that Chriſtopher Glaſcock, Dillon's Agent, carried on [34] Correſpondences to the ſame effect, with one who went by the Name of James Johnſton at Edinburgh; and [26] A. 24. 26. 29. 31. 33. 41. 42. 43. [27] H. 19. [28] H. 4. [29] H. 16. [30] I. 2. [31] D. 1. [32] I. 3. [33] I. 16. [34] I. 3.

that [35] George Kelly corresponded with the same James Johnston, and owned to the Lords, at his [36] Examination, his having sent the said Johnston a Paper from Glascock, which he pretended related only to the Mississippi.

Letters were likewise intercepted going from Edinburgh, directed to Collins at Mr. Waters's, Banker at Paris; which Collins appears, by Kelly's [37] Cypher, to be Colin Campbell of Glenderoule.

In [38] one of these Letters to Collins, mention is made of a Person of great Consequence and Distinction, lately regained to the Pretender's Party, who insisted on a Sight of the Contract of Copartnery, which Collins is desired to send over by the first sure Hand; and Collins, in his [39] Answer, signed R. Broun, promises it shall be sent over.

Your Committee observe, that this Particular agrees with [40] Fairfax's Deposition upon Oath, That Layer told him, The People of England were backward, but that those of Scotland had already entered into an Association.

In the same [41] Letter to Collins, it is said, That the Person of Consequence, who had insisted on a Sight of the Contract of Copartnery, desired an Order from Mr. Malcom for raising one or two Battalions, but was told those Orders might come time enough by the hands of those who happened to come first to open the Commerce; which shews of what nature that Commerce was.

In the same Letter Application is made to Mr. Malcom for a Patent for Knight Baronet; both which Circumstances confirm Malcom to be the Pretender.

Your Committee observe, that these Letters, and [42] some others, which appear to have been intercepted about the Month of May, and are annexed to this Report, fall in with the second Period of Time fixed by the Conspirators in England.

And on the 18th of August, O. S. Mr. Stanhope [43] writes word from Madrid, that he had received Intelligence, that the Scotch had engaged to bring 22000 Men into the Field in ten days time, in case the late Duke of Ormond would come over with Arms to head them, and that they daily sent most pressing Messages to Ormond on that Subject; which shews that the Design was reassumed a third time in Scotland, as it was in England.

Your Committee farther observe, that agreeably to what was promised in Mr. Cochran's Letter of the 28th of April, [44] Mr. William Erskine did on the 3d of May, remit Two Thousand Pounds Sterling to Mr. Gerrard (Dillon's Secretary) at Paris, and owned his so doing on his [45] Examination before the Lord Justice Clerk, but refused to discover who Gerrard was, or from whom, and for whose Use the said Sum was remitted.

When he was taken into Custody, a Letter was seized in his Pocket, which, as your Committee is [46] informed, is all in the late Lord Marr's own Hand-writing, dated Paris, February the 9th, 1722. in the following words.

Paris, February 9. 1722.

'I Have, William, yours of the 7th, for which 'I am obliged to you, and take all you say, 'as I ought, from the good Heart from whence 'I know it comes, tho at the same time you put a greater Value on your Friend than he deserves: 'But be that as it will, I am fully persuaded, as 'you may be, that he will never fail an Occasion for what you mean, nor neglect endeavouring to bring it about, where he sees it can be of 'Advantage to his Country; and his Friends and 'Countrymen may depend on it, when they see 'him engaged again, that the retrieving of it from 'the low Condition it is now in, and otherways 'ever like to be, is the chief Motive that induces 'him, and he hopes in that way he will not be 'without the Assistance of all who wish the same 'thing; and the more, that he will take all the 'care he can not to expose them for serving that 'of others, if at the same time he be not pretty 'sure of its doing effectual Service to their own, 'and putting it on a better foot than it has been 'these hundred years past. If he looked but to 'his own private Interest, he could perhaps find 'a way, which could conduce more to it: but 'he hopes, by his former Actions, it appears, 'that he never put that in competition with what 'he thought was the Interest of his Country, tho 'in which he owns he was once mistaken, as many others may have been; but as he never scrupled owning his Fault, since he found it by Experience to be one, so he has ever since endeavoured to make amends, and will as long as he 'lives.

'Things are in such a Situation at present over 'all Europe, that there appears little of any Opportunity of doing what is to be wish'd upon 'that account; but things of this kind are very 'uncertain, and an Opportunity may come, or be 'brought about, when least expected; and you 'may believe it will not be neglected when it 'does: nor will any Endeavours be wanting to 'bring it to that pass. Hush! tho must be the 'word, and Friends must not take amiss their not 'being acquainted previously to the Execution, in 'which it is to be hoped they will not fail.

'You see I make no scruple in writing freely to 'you, but you know the Consequence of this coming into wrong hands, and those it is fit and of 'use to be told to, you know too: So I leave it 'to your own Discretion, of which you have 'given me many Proofs. I have been much out of 'use of writing to H. S. for some years past, and 'I have not yet got a return of one I wrote him 'last Summer; but I shall write to him of what 'you mention in yours.

'As to M——y, I care not to say more about 'him, and were it not that I think it for the 'good of a certain Person and Cause, I should not 'even wish to have all the truth told of him, 'since his being abroad. I cannot answer for 'what handles may be given him for his Justification; but let honest Men, who wish right, 'tell the Truth, where they know it, and that 'it is necessary, and shame the Devil.

'I wish you a good Journey and good Luck with 'all my heart, and that we may soon have an 'Opportunity to meet merrily, and be of use 'to our Country. My Compliments to my 'Friends, and I hope we shall never have cause 'to be ashamed of other.

'I shall long impatiently to hear from you after 'your getting to London and Edinburgh; and pray 'do not fail writing after your coming to both 'Places, and have seen People.

'My Family ſalute you, and wiſh you all Hap- 'pineſs, as I do, who am ſincerely and affectio- 'nately yours, &c. Adieu.

Your Committee likewiſe find evident Footſteps of this treaſonable Correſpondence [47] from Ireland; but having already ſhewn ſufficiently the Extenſiveneſs of the Conſpiracy, they forbear to tire the Houſe with any further Particulars.

Your Committee have now gone thro' the ſeveral Matters, that appear'd to them from the Examinations of the Perſons or Papers referr'd to them; and they are in hopes, that in reporting every Circumſtance, that ſeem'd material, they have ſtrictly comply'd with the Intentions of the Houſe in appointing them.

If the frequent Repetitions of the ſame Matter have ſwell'd the Report into too great a length, they are perſuaded the Houſe will excuſe it, ſince it was in all the Places where they have done it, neceſſary to explain the Paſſages related, or elſe to ſhew the Connection of the Treaſons, as well as the Co-operation of the Conſpirators in their wicked Deſign of dethroning his moſt ſacred Majeſty, and overturning our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment in Church and State.

ON March 8. The Houſe proceeded to take the ſaid Report into conſideration. Whereupon the Houſe came to the following Reſolutions, viz.

'That upon Conſideration of the Report, and 'the ſeveral Papers and Examinations relating to 'the Conſpiracy, it appears to this Houſe, That 'a deteſtable and horrid Conſpiracy has been 'formed and carried on by Perſons of Figure 'and Diſtinction, and their Agents and Inſtru- 'ments, in conjunction with Traitors abroad, 'for invading theſe Kingdoms with foreign For- 'ces, for raiſing Inſurrections and a Rebellion at 'Home, for ſeizing the Tower and City of Lon- 'don, for laying violent Hands upon the Perſon 'of his moſt ſacred Majeſty and the Prince of 'Wales, in order to ſubvert our preſent happy 'Eſtabliſhment in Church and State, by placing 'a Popiſh Pretender upon the Throne.

'That it appears to this Houſe, that John 'Plunket has been a principal Agent and Inſtru- 'ment in the ſaid horrid and deteſtable Conſpi- 'racy, and has carried on ſeveral treaſonable 'Correſpondences, to procure a foreign Force to 'invade theſe Kingdoms, and to raiſe Inſurrec- 'tions and a Rebellion at Home, and was en- 'gaged with others in the villainous and exe- 'crable Deſign of laying violent Hands upon His 'Majeſty's moſt ſacred Perſon.

'That it appears to this Houſe, that George 'Kelly, alias Johnſon, has been a principal Agent 'and Inſtrument in the ſaid horrid and deteſta- 'ble Conſpiracy, and has carried on ſeveral 'Treaſonable Correſpondences, to raiſe Inſurrec- 'tions and a Rebellion at Home, and to pro- 'cure a foreign Force to invade theſe King- 'doms from Abroad.

'That it appears to this Houſe, that Francis 'Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was principally con- 'cern'd in forming, directing and carrying on the 'ſaid wicked and deteſtable Conſpiracy, for in- 'vading theſe Kingdoms with a foreign Force, 'and for raiſing Inſurrections and a Rebellion at 'Home, in order to ſubvert our preſent happy 'Eſtabliſhment in Church and State, by placing 'a Popiſh Pretender upon the Throne.'

In Purſuance of theſe Reſolutions, it was order'd by the Houſe, that Bills of Pains and Penalties ſhould be ſeverally brought in againſt the ſaid John Plunket, George Kelly, and Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter.

March 14. The Houſe came to a Reſolution to communicate their Report to the Lords at a Conference, and alſo (having obtained the King's leave) the Letters and Papers relating to the Conſpiracy.

March 16. The Houſe of Lords choſe the following Peers to be a Committee to inquire into the ſaid Conſpiracy.

His Grace the Duke of Dorſet.
His Grace the Duke of Montroſe.
The Earl of Scarborough.
The Earl of Lincoln.
The Earl of Ilay.
The Lord Lonſdale.
The Lord Torrington.
The Biſhop of Lincoln.
The Biſhop of Salisbury.

This Committee made their Report on April 23d, which was as follows.

THE Committee to whom the Report and Original Papers relating to the Conſpiracy, delivered by the Houſe of Commons at ſeveral Conferences, were referred; and who were impowered by your Lordſhips to examine Chriſtopher Layer, and ſuch other Perſons as they from time to time ſhould think proper; having carefully compared the ſaid Report with the Original Papers referred to them, and having examined ſeveral Perſons in relation to the Treaſonable Practices and Correſpondences therein ſet forth, are fully ſatisfied and convinced, That a deteſtable and wicked Conſpiracy has been formed and carried on for ſolliciting a Foreign Force to invade theſe Kingdoms, for raiſing a Rebellion and inciting Inſurrections in London, and divers other Parts of Great Britain, and even for laying violent Hands on the Sacred Perſon of His Majeſty, and on His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, in order to deſtroy our Religion and Conſtitution, by placing a Popiſh Pretender on the Throne.

And the Lords Committees think themſelves obliged in Juſtice to obſerve, that the extraordinary Vigilance and Application which has been ſhewn by the Houſe of Commons in detecting this Scene of Iniquity, and laying its moſt hidden Springs in ſo full and clear a Light, as it has greatly contributed to the Publick Safety, by opening the Eyes, and awakening the juſt Resentment of an injur'd Nation; so it cannot fail to excite a proportionable Zeal and Emulation in your Lordships, for concurring with that House in the no less necessary Work of bringing the Authors of these wicked Designs to such exemplary Punishment as may be a lasting Admonition to Posterity, that Artifice and Disguise can no more lessen the Danger, than mitigate the Guilt of Treason; and that they act under a fatal Delusion, who hope to abuse the Lenity of our Laws to the Ruin of our Constitution.

The Lords Committees think it a strong Confirmation of the Truth and Exactness of the said Report, that several material Observations which are there advanced as grounded on probable Conjectures only, have since been amply verified and supported by fresh Discoveries arising from the Papers lately referr'd to them by your Lordships; which Papers are contain'd in an [48] Appendix annex'd to this Report.

The Intelligence sent by Colonel Stanhope, and Sir Anthony Westcombe, in relation to the Pretender's Ships under Morgan, as well as the Explication given by the Committee of the House of Commons to several of the fictitious Names in the intercepted Correspondence, is very much illustrated and confirmed by Papers seized on board the Revolution, and by the Examinations of some of the Prisoners belonging to that Ship.

It appears by [49] those Papers and Examinations, that Morgan, who went by the Name of Walton, and Gallwey (an Irish Roman Catholick) who went by the Name of Gardiner, with others acting under their Direction, have for several Years past been employ'd in fitting out Ships under English Colours, which were ready on all Occasions to attend the Motions of the Pretender, who in [50] several of the Letters is stiled their King, and their Royal Master. That the Money for these Ships was supply'd [51] partly by Persons in England, [52] partly by Waters the Banker at Paris, and [53] partly the late Duke of Ormond. That one of these Ships, in the Year 1719, [54] was sent by Morgan to the Groyne, with an Express to fetch the late Duke of Ormond to England; at which time it appears, [55] that Morgan and Gallwey were promis'd a Supply of Fifty Thousand Pounds from Friends in England; that others of these Ships lay hovering about the Coast of Britanny, from the Year 1718, to 1721, [56] expecting to be employed either by Cane and Chivers (General Dillon) or [57] by Hore, (Sir Harry Goring) in what they call their Home Trade. That in the Year 1721, despairing of any Employment of this kind, on account, as is express'd in [58] one of their Letters, of Hore and his Partners being Cowards in Trade, they engaged themselves in the Service [59] of the Swedish Madagascar Company, and in December 1721, rendezvouz'd in the Bay of Cadiz for this Purpose; but this Project likewise failing, on account of some Deficiency on the Part of the Swedes, Morgan waited on the late Duke of Ormond at Madrid, and was by him supplied with Twelve Thousand Pieces of Eight, for fitting out the Ships Lady Mary and Revolution [60] for the Pretender's Service; [61] soon after Morgan's Return to Cadiz, the Arms and Ammunition which had been prepared for the Madagascar Voyage, consisting of two thousand Muskets, two thousand Bayonets, one thousand Carbines, four hundred Barrels of Powder, and a proportionable Quantity of Match, Flints, &c. were consigned to Morgan, and by him put on board the Pretender's Ship called the Lady Mary, and Morgan having embarked on board the said Ship with several Irish Officers, set sail from the Bay of Cadiz the latter End of April 1722, and went first [62] to Sancto Antonio, and then to Sancto Andero in the Bay of Biscay.

The Committee having sent for Mr. Gustavus Bâhr, formerly a Captain in the Swedish Service, who being at Cadiz on account of the Madagascar Expedition, had occasion to transact several Affairs with Morgan, and the other Officers of the Pretender's Ships, they were informed by him that the Arms above-mentioned were brought, part of them from Gottemburg, and part from Hamburg, by one of the Pretender's Ships, named the Fortune, commanded by one Butler. That two thousand of the said Arms belonged to the Swedish Madagascar Company, and were delivered by him, Bâhr, to Morgan.

That the Remainder, which belonged to Count Rhenstierna a Sweed, were also purchased by Morgan, but not till some Weeks after the first two thousand. That Morgan went to Madrid, and returned with twelve thousand Pieces of Eight in Bills and Money, which Sum, he, Bâhr, saw in Morgan's Hands. That Baron Seebach, and one Osthoff (who are frequently mention'd in Morgan's Letters) as also Count Rhenstierna's Agent, who delivered the Arms to Morgan, declar'd to him, Bâhr, since his Return to Gottenburg, That Morgan was supplied with these twelve thousand Pieces of Eight from the late Duke of Ormond, and that the Arms were paid for out of the said Money. And Morgan's Son being examined by the Committee, owned that his Father went at that time to Madrid, that the late Duke of Ormond was then there, and that his Father did there receive Bills for fitting out the Ships, but from whom he cannot tell.

Bâhr farther declared, That all the Swedish Officers at Cadiz looked on Morgan's Ships as belonging to the Pretender, and spoke of them in all Conversations as such, which was confirmed to him expressly by Baron Seebach and Osthoff. And one of the Sailors of the said Ships owned to the Committee, That they went from Port to Port without taking in any Cargo; That they had sometimes but sixty, and sometimes one hundred and thirty Men on board the Revolution, and often received Orders for Sailing with all possible Expedition, which Orders were afterwards countermanded, without any apparent Reason for one or the other; and that this unaccountable Proceeding satisfied him, the said Ships were engaged in some unwarrantable Design. Bâhr farther declared, That Osthoff told him, the Ship Revolution was at first purchased in England, for transporting the late King of Sweden in Person, in his projected Descent on Scotland; and that he, Bâhr, saw the Name Carolus still standing in the Cabin of the said Ship, when he was last on board her. And Morgan's Son owned, That he had observed the Arms of the Crown of Sweden in the said Cabin, which he supposed were placed there as a Token that the said Ship was engaged in the Service of the Swediſh Madagaſcar Company; tho he owned that the other Ships engaged in the ſame Service had no ſuch Token.

Some of the Particulars above related, do very much explain and confirm [61] O——'s Letter to L—— of the 27th of April, as alſo [64] thoſe to Dunville and Dodſworth, in which it is ſaid, That the Hopes of Remittances from Perſons in England had induced O —— to ſupply M—— (which appears to be Morgan). That O—— could depend on two thouſand Arms from M—— (which appear to be the two thouſand Arms delivered to Morgan by Bâhr [63] before the Date of O——'s Letter.) That M—— had writ from C—— (which appears to be Cadiz) that he could get more Arms if he had more Money; and accordingly the Committee find that a ſecond Supply of Arms was purchaſed by Morgan from Count Rhenſtierna's Agent. O —— in his [66] Letter to L—— dated the 27th of April, ſays, 'I have order'd 'M——'s Ship to come to A——;' and it [67] appears that Morgan did at that very time embark on board the Lady Mary, with the Arms abovementioned, and [68] went firſt to Sancto Antonio, and ſoon after to Sancto Andero.

The Sailors on their Examination having mentioned one Hilton, as commanding a Ship under Morgan, and the Committee finding a [69] Letter from Morgan, directed to Don Nicholas, which in a ſubſequent [70] Letter is mentioned to have been writ to the ſaid Hilton, they thought it probable Hilton might be a fictitious Name for Nicholas Wogan, in the ſame manner as Walton was for Morgan, and Gardiner for Gallwey. Having accordingly examined the Sailors as to this Particular, one of them ſaid, he believed Hilton was a fictitious Name; and Morgan's Son owned that Hilton's true Name was Nicholas Wogan, and that he had been confined in England on account of the Preſton Rebellion, as he was told by Nicholas Wogan Jun. who went by the Name of Paterſon: and one of the Sailors declared, that the ſaid Wogan Sen. obtained the Command of one of the Ships under Morgan, after their Arrival in the Bay of Cadiz.

Theſe Particulars agree with Glaſcock's [71] Letter to George Kelly of the 24th of April, O. S. in which he mentions Nicholas Wogan by the Name of Xoland, as being to have the Command of a Veſſel at Cadiz, to cruiſe againſt the Turks, or for other Views, on which he will not pretend to decide; and Kelly [72] anſwering this Letter, wiſhes Wogan's Chief may ſucceed in his Journey. The ſame Particulars confirm Mr. Crawfurd's [73] Letters of the 18th and 25th of July, by which it appears, that the two Nicholas Wogan's were at that time come to Morlaix, expecting Morgan's Ships to follow them to that Port, in order to their ſetting ſail for England; that the eldeſt of them was to have been Captain, and the other Lieutenant of one of thoſe Ships, and that they owned the Project in Spain, by what they had learnt of it, was for the late Duke of Ormond to have landed in the Weſt with Iriſh Officers and Arms.

On the 8th of June, N. S. Colonel Stanhope [74] writ Word that the late Duke of Ormond was preparing to embark with Arms and Officers for England. And your Committee find, that [75] about that time the Ship Revolution ſet ſail from the Bay of Cadiz: That the Sailors knowing the Madagaſcar Voyage to be dropped, refuſed to do their Duty till they were ſatisfied as to the Place they were deſigned for. That hereupon Gallwey aſſured them it was to Gibraltar, in order to clean the Ship; but having got them under ſail, and ſatisfied them about their Wages, they proceeded to the Bay of Biſcay: That they put in at Sancto Antonio to take Morgan on board, and then joined the Lady Mary at Sancto Andero. That upon their Arrival at this Place, the common Report on Shore was, That the late Duke of Ormond, and four Companies of Soldiers, were to be taken on board the Revolution: That Corn and Cattle were provided for the ſaid Soldiers; and that the late Duke of Ormond was within a ſhort Day's Journey of Sancto Andero: That hereupon the firſt and ſecond Mate of the ſaid Ship, ſuſpecting Gallwey to be engaged in ſome unwarrantable Deſign, agreed not to ſerve any longer, unleſs Gallwey would give them a Note under his Hand, that they were forced into the Service, and would alſo declare whither they were bound, and give them Security that they ſhould not be employed in any other Voyage than ſuch as he ſhould declare to them; whereupon one of them was confined, and the other diſcountenanced by Gallwey.

But that Gallwey's real Expectations were to have come over with the late Duke of Ormond, appears to the Committee moſt evident from the [76] Copy of a Letter of his, dated the 16th of June, the Day before he ſet ſail from Cadiz, in which are theſe Words, 'I hope the —— will 'ſet ſail to-morrow; your not repeating Or-'ders and Advice concerning the Buſineſs in 'hand, gives me a thouſand Apprehenſions; 'God ſend our Bankers and the reſt of our 'Friends are ſafe, and ſtand their Ground. I 'intend to embark myſelf on board the—— for 'fear my Dear Aunt ſhould have any Occaſion 'for Aſſiſtance, of whom I am ſo tender that I 'would not if poſſible have the Care of her put 'into any other hands.'

The Committee obſerve that the ſame Expreſſion of My Aunt is uſed in the Letter to Dodſworth, with ſuch Circumſtances as make it highly probable, that in that [77] Letter, as well as this of Gallwey's, it denotes the late Duke of Ormond. They likewiſe obſerve, that the Names of Manfield and Medley are uſed in Morgan's and Gallwey's Letters, in ſuch a Manner as confirms thoſe Names to mean the late Duke of Ormond, agreeably to the Explication given them in the Report of the Committee of the Houſe of Commons.

Gallwey in his [78] Letter of the 3d of November 1722, ſays, He has a couple of fine Grey-hounds, a Dog and a Bitch, for Mr. Freeman; the ſame Dogs are mentioned in [79] another Letter, and in the [80] Depoſitions of two of the Sailors, to have been a Preſent from the late Duke of Ormond, to the Pretender: which confirms the Explication of the Name of Freeman, mentioned in the ſaid Report, to be true.

There was likewiſe ſeized on board the Revolution, a [81] Letter to Gallwey, ſigned John Obrien; which appears to be in the ſame Hand-writing with the [82] Letters ſigned Gerrard and M. Digby, taken among Mr. Dennis Kelly's Papers, and confirms Gerrard to mean Sir John Obrien, one of Dil- lon's Secretaries, agreeable to the Conjecture in the said Report.

Gallwey, in a [83] Letter dated from Alicant Bay, the 13th of September last, expresses his Concern for Kelly's Confinement, but hopes that is the worst that can befall him; and a [84] Letter in Kelly's Hand-writing signed Ja. Johnson, directed for Gardiner, but enclosing a Note for twenty Guineas payable to Gallwey, was found on board the Revolution, as also a Direction entered with Kelly's own Hand in a [85] Pocket-Book, supposed to belong to Morgan. Kelly in his Letters acknowledges the Receipt of one from Sir John (which is probably their common Correspondent, Sir John Obrien) and says their Friends in Spain are well, as one of the Family writes him word: which shews how extensive Kelly's Correspondences were.

Gallwey in a [86] Letter from Genoa of the third of November, 1722, (which appears to have been writ to one of the Pretender's Family) says, he has acted for many Months past under the Direction of Medley (Ormond) who, he makes no doubt, has mentioned him to Mr. Freeman (the Pretender:) yet in his [87] Letter to Lord Carteret, after his Ship was taken, he has the Assurance to affirm, that he never saw the late Duke of Ormond since he left England, nor ever corresponded directly or indirectly with him or the Pretender, or any of their Adherents at home or abroad, but was always zealously well affected to his present Majesty and our happy Establishment.

Gustavus Bâhr above-mentioned [88] deposes among other Particulars, that he has been informed the Pretender's Agents had Arms for three thousand Men, lodged at a House belonging to the late Duke of Ormond, near Morlaix in Britanny; which Port the Committee observe was one of the usual Stations of the Pretender's Ships under Morgan. And it appears probable, that these three thousand Arms made part of the ten thousand mentioned in O——'s [89] Letter to L—— as provided by D———, who is supposed to be Dillon.

Robert Franklyn, second Mate of the Ship Revolution, [90] deposes, that Letters directed to John or James Jacobs at Genoa, were taken up at the Post-house by Gallwey. The Committee observe, that Jones in his [91] Letter to Chivers, mentions his having communicated the Copies of Mansfield's and Jacobs's Letters; and Glascock in his [92] Letter to George Kelly of the first of May, says, 'He hopes Money is sent to pay for the Barrels, 'which Jacobs has at his Disposal.' In both which Places it is probable, that Jacobs means Gallwey; and that Barrels mean Stands of Arms, is confirmed by a [93] Letter of Morgan's, in which speaking of that very Ship that brought the Arms above-mentioned from Gottenburg and Hamburg to Cadiz, he says, 'She had received Orders 'for taking in nineteen Barrels, with every thing 'necessary to make use of them:' Which last Words seem to refer to the Bayonets, Flints and Powder. [94] The Intelligence sent by Mr. Crawford, on the 27th of May, That Gordon of Boulogne was to have a Ship ready to transport some of the Chiefs of the Conspiracy to England; is confirmed by the Deposition of Roger Garth (already published) who declares, 'That the said Gordon '(whom he had good Reason to believe to be an 'Agent of the Pretender's) did some time last 'Summer endeavour to engage him to ply off of 'that Station with his Sloop, in order to carry 'over such Persons as he the said Gordon should 'recommend to him, promising him that he 'should have Employment enough.'

The Lords Committees conceive, that the several Particulars above related, will appear to the House very much to corroborate the Accounts received from abroad, of Ships provided for transporting the late Duke of Ormond to England, with Arms and Officers, the beginning of last Summer; and that they also confirm the Decyphering of the Letters, and Explication of the Names, contained in the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons.

The Lords Committees observing that some Paragraphs of the Letters referr'd to them were writ originally in Cypher, thought it proper to call the Decypherers before them, in order to their being satisfied of the Truth of the Decyphering. The Account they receiv'd from those Persons, was, that they have long been versed in this Science, and are ready to produce Witnesses of undoubted Reputation, who have framed Letters in Cypher, on purpose to put them to a Trial, and have constantly found their decyphering to agree with the Original Keys which had been concealed from them. It was likewise confirmed to the Committee, that Letters decyphered by one or other of them in England, had exactly agreed with the decyphering of the same Letters performed by Persons in foreign Parts, with whom they could have no Communication; and that in some Instances after they had decyphered Letters for the Government, the Keys of those Cyphers had been seized, and upon comparing them, had agreed exactly with their decyphering.

With respect to the intercepted Letters in question, they alledged that in the Cypher used by George Kelly, they find the Words ranged in an alphabetical Order, answering the progressive Order of the Figures by which they are expressed, so that the farther the initial Letter of any Word is removed from the Letter A, the higher the Number is, by which such Word is denoted: that the same Word will be found to be constantly denoted by one and the same Figure, except in the Case of Particles or Words of very frequent Use, which have two or three Figures assign'd to them, but those always following one the other in a progressive Order. They likewise set forth, that in the Cypher above-mention'd, a certain Order is constantly observed as to the placing of the Words made use of, that under each Letter of the Alphabet the first Cyphers are allotted to the proper Names of Places, the next to the proper Names or Titles of Persons, the next to whole Words in common Use, and the last to denote single Letters.

As to the Truth of the Decyphering, they alledged that several Letters written in this Cypher had been decyphered by them separately, one being many Miles distant in the Country, and the other in Town, and yet their Decyphering agreed; that Facts unknown to them and the Government at the time of their Decyphering had been verified in every Circumstance by subsequent Discoveries, as particularly that of H———'s Ship coming in Ballast to fetch O—— to England, which had been so decyphered by them two Months before the Government had the leaſt notice of Halſtead's having left England: That a Supplement to this Cypher having been found among Dennis Kelly's Papers the latter end of July, agreed with the Key they had formed of that Cypher the April before: That the decyphering of the Letters ſigned Jones, Illington, and 1378, being afterwards applied by them to others written in the ſame Cypher, did immediately make pertinent Senſe, and ſuch as had an evident Connexion and Coherence with the Parts of thoſe Letters that were out of Cypher, tho the Words in Cypher were repeated in different Paragraphs and differently combined. And they inſiſt that theſe ſeveral Particulars duly weighed amount to a Demonſtration of the Truth of their decyphering.

As to the other Cyphers made uſe of by Jerningan, Stanley, and Walter Grahame, they conſiſt only of twenty four Figures, for the twenty four Letters of the Alphabet, and ſome other Figures for proper Names or whole Words, in the placing of which Names a certain Order is alſo obſerved.

Theſe ſeveral Particulars they declared themſelves ready to atteſt upon Oath, and to produce ſufficient Witneſſes to their Character and Integrity as well as their Skill.

The Committee being empowered by your Lordſhips to examine Chriſtopher Layer, did accordingly ſpend ſome time in the ſaid Examination, which produced a tedious Repetition of the Particulars contained in his Examination before the Committee of the Houſe of Commons, and ſome few Circumſtances which they found he had recollected by reading the printed Report and Appendix.

All that he confeſſed to them which is new, was, that he did before his ſetting out for Rome acquaint Plunket with his Intentions of carrying over a Note of the Names of the Tory Gentlemen of Norfolk, if Plunket thought it would be acceptable; that during his ſtay at Rome, Sir William Ellis told him, that he had formerly correſponded with Plunket at the Requeſt of the Lady Middleton, but that he had not for ſome time paſt correſponded with Plunket, or any one elſe, in relation to the Pretender's Affairs; for that from the time of the Action at Dumblain ſo many Scottiſh Noblemen and Gentlemen had come over to the Pretender, that he and all the reſt of the old Servants had been forbid all Correſpondence in England, or elſewhere. Upon Layer's deſiring leave to correſpond with him if it were practicable, he told Layer, that on Condition he would promiſe to write nothing but what might be ſhewn to the Pretender himſelf, he would ſettle a Correſpondence with him; for that tho he had followed the Fortunes of the late King James and his Family, ever ſince the Revolution; and had always been faithful to the Pretender, and for many Years his Caſhier, yet if any of the Scottiſh Gentlemen that were about the Pretender ſhould know he received a Letter without communicating it to him, it would coſt him his Place, and he ſhould be in utter Diſgrace: That Layer promiſing to write nothing but what might be ſhewn, Ellis gave him a Cypher of his own Hand-writing, as alſo another Cypher of cut Paper for carrying on the Correſpondence; that he Layer likewiſe ſettled a Cypher of fictitious Names with Mrs. Hughes, Nurſe to the Pretender's Child, and received a Letter from her in relation to the Chriſtening of his Daughter. He would not own that he knew of any other Cypher, and perſiſted that Mrs. Kinder meant the ſaid Mrs. Hughes, tho in Ellis's Cypher it ſtands for Mrs. Fox. He ſaid that the Paper which he deſired a Copy of from Sir William Ellis, and which is referred to in [95] Ellis's Letter of the 30th of January, was a ſhort Scheme relating to the Preſton Affair, ſhewn him by Ellis while he was at Rome, of which he remembers no other Particulars, but that Inſurrections were to be begun in ſeveral Counties in a dark Night. That when he made Application to Plunket for the fictitious Names of Burford, Steele, &c. he was forced to acquaint Plunket with his having ſettled a Correſpondence with Ellis, which Plunket reſented, and ſaid he thought Ellis had been forbid all Correſpondence with Perſons here. That the Reaſon of his asking Plunket for a fictitious Name for Lord Orrery, was, that he had occaſion to mention to Ellis a Club which Plunket had often told him of; that Plunket once ſhewed him a Liſt of this Club of his own Hand-writing, which he read over two or three times, but that Plunket talked ſo inconſiſtently of them, that he, Layer, verily believes it was a mere Fiction of his own, and that there never was any ſuch Club. That he, Layer, thinks Lord Orrery mentioned to him Lord Strafford, as one of thoſe who, with Lord North, Sir Harry Goring, and others, were (as Lord Orrery was informed) going to do a raſh thing in favour of the Pretender: but that he cannot be poſitive as to Lord Strafford. That he, Layer, wrote himſelf to the Pretender, concerning the Difference of Opinion which he obſerved in Lord North and Lord Orrery about the Means of reſtoring him, and the Neceſſity there was that the Regent ſhould permit General Dillon to come over here with ſome foreign Forces. That he alſo drew up a Scheme of a Lottery to have been opened here in favour of the Pretender, and encloſed the ſaid Scheme in a Parcel with ſome Silk Stockings, which he ſent as a Preſent to the Pretender and his Spouſe by Andrew Haye, who travelled to Italy with Alderman Barber. That he delivered this Parcel to Haye with his own Hands, who promiſed to convey it to Ellis, and ſaid he could do it with Safety. That Haye, as he believes, underſtood the Stockings to be for the Pretender and his Spouſe: That he likewiſe had ſome Diſcourſe with Haye about getting Copper Plates engraved at Rome in Engliſh and Italian for the Tickets of the ſaid Lottery, and deſired him to receive Sir William Ellis's Directions about it, which Haye promiſed to do. That while he, Layer, was at Rome, Haye asked him whether he would not ſee the King, meaning the Pretender; and that the ſaid Haye went frequently to the Pretender's Family in the way of his Buſineſs, and was, as he believes, preſent while the Pretender's and his Spouſe's Pictures were drawn.

Haye being examined by the Committee, owned the Receipt of the Stockings, but denied their being delivered to him by Layer, or that he knew who they were for. He likewiſe owned the carrying a Packet to Belloni, the Banker at Rome, which was brought to him by a Porter from Layer, as he ſuppoſed.

[95] B Y. 38,

Layer

Layer owns, that Haye told him Belloni was the Pretender's Banker, but denies his sending any such Packet by Haye: and in several other Particulars of their Examinations they contradicted each other.

96 A Scheme of the Lottery above-mentioned (for raising 225,000 Pounds Sterling) having been found among the Papers of Walter Jefferyes, now in Custody, the Lords Committees thought proper to examine him how he came by it. He owned his being acquainted with Layer and Plunket, that he saw Layer about the time of his going abroad, and help'd him to a Bill on a Banker at Antwerp: but he denied his knowing from whom he received the said Scheme, or his having had any Conversation with any one about it; and said it might be put into his Hands by Plunket, for ought he knew, but that he was not sure he had ever read it; and if he had known such a Paper had been in his Custody he should have destroyed it.

The Lords Committees being informed that Layer, between the time of his delivering the larger and lesser Bundle of Papers to Mrs. Mason, had deliver'd to her a large Parcel covered with blue Paper and sealed in several Places, and that he did within a few Days after take it back again, telling her he wanted to carry it to Lord North and Grey's, they examined Layer particularly on this head, but he denied that he ever delivered her any such Bundle.

The Lords Committees next proceeded to the Examination of John Plunket, who began with large Protestations of his Innocence, and offered of himself to account for three Facts charged upon him in the Report, and to shew they were great Mistakes. The first was, his receiving a Letter from George Kelly; the second, his receiving the Letter at Antwerp, signed Dixwell; and the third, his receiving the Letter from the Pretender, taken at Mrs. Creagh's. And as in his Examination before the Committee of the House of Commons he had fallen on the Expedient of substituting Hugh Thomas to personate Rogers, so now they found he had furnished himself with three different Persons, at different Places, all of the Name of Plunket, to whom he would have it believed these Letters were written; without offering any the least Proof or Circumstance of Probability to shew that such Persons were at all concerned in those Letters, or that there ever were any such Persons in being.

The Letter from George Kelly, he said was not writ to him, but to one Harry Plunket, who delivered it to him at Will's Coffee-House, Covent-Garden, and that it related to some Money that was to be raised on a Security of Mrs. Barnes's.

As to the Letter signed Dixwell, he said, there were two Clergymen of the Church of Rome, one or both of which travelled with him and Layer from Dover to Antwerp; that one of them went by the Name of Loyd, but his real Name was Plunket. That this Man dropped the Letter signed Dixwell at a Coffee-House; and he, John Plunket, taking it up with a design of restoring it to him in Lorrain, (to which Place sometimes one and sometimes both of these Clergymen were gone) shewed it to Layer, who took it into his Head that this Letter had been writ to him, John Plunket.

The Letter from the Pretender, he said, fell into his Hands much in the same manner; that there is one Father Plunket at Rome, to whom the Pretender always writes when any Body is to be introduced to him. Being asked whether Father Plunket travelled with Layer to Rome, (because mention is made in the Pretender's Letter of a Companion of Plunket's) he said the Pretender always called the Person that was to be introduced by Father Plunket, his Companion. That this Father Plunket happening to shew him this Letter, and commending the Hand, he, John Plunket, said he had a Friend at Rome, that would be glad to see the Pretender's Hand-writing. And Father Plunket having accordingly left the Letter with him, he shewed it to Layer, and forgot to return it to Father Plunket, who never called for it, having fifty more Letters of the same kind by him.

Upon the Lords Committees asking him whether he went by the Name of Rogers, he said he went by several Names in his Travels, that he, might not be imposed upon in his Reckonings as the English generally are. Being asked whether he took the Name of Rogers to prevent his being thought an Englishman, he said that in Italy he was called Rogieri.

They farther asked him, whether he had dictated any fictitious Names to Layer, or had mentioned any thing to him of a Club? to which he answered, that he had given Layer the fictitious Name of Bedford or Burford, for Lord Orrery, which Name he had from Neynoe. That one Night being in company with Layer, and some Clergymen whose Names he has forgot, the Discourse turning on the Protests of the Lords, and the Names that were subscribed to them, one of the Company said, These are a Loyal Club; another said, They are Jacobites; and that he, Plunket, said, there was a Loyal Club of eighty or ninety Lords who would stand in Defence of their Country.

He farther observed to the Committee, that in the Bill now depeuding before your Lordships, he is not mentioned by the Name by which he was baptized and confirmed: he said his Sirname was Plucknet, but his Christian Name he declined telling; and seemed to place some Hopes and Confidence in this Subterfuge.

The Committee finding him trifle with them in this egregious manner, asked him in general, whether he had ever been in Conference with the Pretender, or had corresponded with him, or any of his Agents: to which he answered in the Negative.

The Committee next sent for George Kelly, who told them that the Affair being soon to be brought before your Lordships, he desired to be excused from answering any Questions; so that they had no Opportunity of examining him as to the new Matters alledged against him in the Depositions of Mr. Philip Caryll and others.

However they thought it proper to send for the said Mr. Caryll, and to ask him whether he had any thing to add to or retract from his former Accounts. His Depositions being read over to him, he expressed himself very angry and uneasy at their being made Publick; and told the Committee he was not disposed to answer any farther Questions, being sorry for what he had said already; he likewiſe inſinuated, that what he had ſaid had not been taken down exactly as he dictated it, and ſemed apprehenſive that he was called upon to accuſe himſelf of Matters that might be prejudicial to him. But upon the Committee's telling him that the moſt effectual way he could take to do himſelf Service, was to make a candid and ingenuous Diſcovery of the whole Truth, he ſaid he had already given a candid Account, and hoped he ſhould not have been a Sufferer for his Candour. Being asked whether his Depoſitions had not been read over to him before he ſigned them, he ſaid they were; but that he was in a great Confuſion at the time they were taken. Being then required by the Committee to read them over himſelf, and to ſhew in what Particulars they vary from his Senſe and Meaning, he grew more compoſed; and having read over the firſt, dated the 27th of March, ſaid, he believed it was right enough. In reading over the ſecond (dated the 29th of March) he ſaid it was not ſtrictly true that Sir Harry Goring had told him what is there related, concerning an Invaſion, Commiſſion, &c. but that it was true, he had heard Sir Harry Goring ſay ſo; that as to Lord Lanſdown's being to land in the Weſt, he could not be poſitive, but he thinks Sir Harry Goring ſaid ſo. He ſaid, it was but a Suppoſition of his own, that the Diſcourſe which occaſioned the Biſhop of Rocheſter's taking Sir Harry Goring by the Collar, related to the Pretender's Affairs: but that he remembers very well, Sir Harry Goring did affirm, that on his ſaying the Words there recited, (this is Rocking the Cradle indeed) the Biſhop did take him by the Collar, and that he, Caryll, did apprehend the ſaid Diſcourſe to have Relation to the Pretender's Affairs. He ſaid it was about two Years ago that being at Sir Harry Goring's he ſaw a Letter lie on his Scrutore, directed to Mr. Hore, and upon his asking Sir Harry who the ſaid Letter was for, Sir Harry told him it was writ to himſelf. He ſaid that the Words in his Depoſition which import, that he, Caryll, had Reaſon to believe Kelly and Sir Harry Goring were ſettling together a Key at his Houſe at North, by which they might correſpond, are too ſtrong; for that he, Caryll, did not ſee any ſuch Key, only it was his Suſpicion and Thought at that Time that they were framing ſuch a Key.

He likewiſe ſaid, that what relates to Boyce in the ſaid Depoſition is rather ſtronger than he meant it; for that Boyce only told him he was afraid the Servant, he, Caryll, had ſent to him to help off, was Sample; alledging this Reaſon, that he had obſerved he was diſguiſed, and that he was afraid he was ſomewhat like the Deſcription given of Sample in the Proclamation. All the other Particulars of his Depoſitions he averred to be true, but ſaid, he had nothing farther to add, and that he would rather a thouſand Times die in Newgate than be an Evidence.

Boyce, being examined by the Committee, owned that Sir Harry Goring went to France in his Yatch, and that a Servant went over with him in a Black Wig, whom he had never ſeen with Sir Harry Goring before; but he utterly denied his having conveyed over any Perſon ſent to him by Mr. Caryll, or his having had any Diſcourſe with Caryll about any Perſon's anſwering the Deſcription of Sample.

The Committee having ſummoned before them William Beaſing, of Horn Dean, and having read to him his former Depoſitions, find that he retracts what he had there depoſed on Oath, of Caryll and Sir Harry Goring's being in Company at his Houſe with the Perſon who had but one Hand: he ſays, ſuch a Perſon was at his Houſe with two other Gentlemen, but that he now recollects Caryll and Sir Harry Goring were not there at that time. Being asked whether he had received any Letter or Meſſage, ſince his being in Cuſtody, which had helped to ſet him right in this Particular, he anſwered in the Negative.

The Committee obſerve from the Parts of Mr. Caryll's Depoſitions which he affirmed, that the Explication given to the Name of Hore, in the Report of the Committee of the Houſe of Commons, as alſo the Decyphering of that Part of Kelly's [97] Letter which mentions Hore's Commiſſion, and the Conjecture of Goring's having carried over a new Cypher from Kelly to France, are very much confirmed. They likewiſe obſerve that what is ſaid in Glaſcock's [98] Letter to Kelly of the $\frac{2}{13}$ of October, concerning the Arrival of the little French Merchant, mentioned by Kelly, and the Precaution they intend to uſe in relation to him till ſome other appears with whom they may talk of Buſineſs more to the Purpoſe, has probably relation to Sample's being got ſafe to France. And the Letters ſigned Fra. Phillips, which Caryll owns he received from Kelly, not only confirms Kelly's writing by fictitious Names, but is a ſtrong Argument of his being the Perſon that writ the [99] Letter to Bonnaville of the 27th of September, and conſequently the other Letters charged upon him in the Report. For as in his Letter to Caryll, he ſays: 'I have never heard a Syllable from your other Lawyer, (Sir Harry Goring) ſince you and I were with him, which you'll ſay is pretty ſurprizing, and am afraid very detrimental.'——ſo in that to Bonnaville (writ within five Days of the other) he ſays, 'I have not heard a Syllable from D. Gainer, or G. Roberts, ſince Mr. G. Sampſon went, which has been a great Surprize, and I may ſay no ſmall Detriment, to ſome of their Friends.'

This Identity of Expreſſion, in two Letters writ ſo near the ſame time, appears to be a farther Confirmation that the ſame Perſon writ them both, and confirms G. Sampſon to be the ſame with the other Lawyer, which Caryll has explained to mean Sir Harry Goring.

The Lords Committees alſo find in the Papers referred to them new Evidence of Kelly's viſiting, writing to, and receiving Letters from the Biſhop of Rocheſter, as appears by [1] Affidavits from the Perſons who carryed Kelly to the Biſhop's Houſe, and who alſo delivered Letters from him to the Biſhop, and brought back the Biſhop's Anſwers; and Mrs. Levett [2] depoſes on Oath, that Mrs. Barnes has told her, Kelly received in one Day as many Letters from abroad as came to fourteen or fifteen Shillings, the Directions of which ſhe, Barnes, ſaw, but they were in ſuch odd fictitious Names, as no one could find out but Kelly, who had the Key; that among theſe Letters there was one for the Biſhop of Rocheſter, (as Kelly told her) which he was at that time gone to deliver to the Biſhop. And John Malone [3] depoſes, that among the Letters which he carried from Kelly to the Poſt, there were ſome directed to Waters the Banker at Paris, under whose Cover it appears that most of the Treasonable Letters were sent; and the original [4] Letter in Kelly's own Hand stopt at the Post-Office was enclosed in a Cover so directed. Mrs. Levett farther [5] deposes, that Mrs. Barnes told her, under Secrecy, that the Dog sent from France was a Present from the late Lord Marr, to the Bishop of Rochester's Lady; which is in some measure confirmed by the Draught of the Affidavit prepared for Birmingham at Paris, in which he is desired to swear that Lord Marr knew nothing of any such Dog. And tho this Affidavit does not appear to have been sent over by Kelly directly, yet express mention is made in the Letter to Gordon, that the said Affidavit is the Copy of a Note from the Person concerned, with the Substance of what he thinks requisite. This Circumstance of the Dog's having been sent by the late Lord Marr, which is not expressly alledged in any part of the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, is a new Confirmation that the [6] Letter signed 918, which mentions the sending the Dog, is from Marr; and that Musgrave, to whom the Receipt of the Dog is acknowledged in [7] two several Letters, is likewise a Name denoting Marr, agreeably to what is asserted in the said Report.

[a] Banker

The Committee find by [8] two Affidavits referred to them, that George Kelly, the last time he was taken into Custody, offered the Woman of the House a Gold Watch, forty Guineas in Money, and a Note for forty Pounds more, to let him escape.

The Committee have laid the Substance of these several Examinations together, as having some Reference to George Kelly.

They likewise examined Mr. Dennis Kelly, who utterly denied his being advised with, or knowing any thing relating to any Conspiracy. Several Papers found in his Custody being shewn to him, he denied his having ever seen them before, except when some of them were shewn to him, at former Examinations.

They next sent for Captain Pancier, and having ordered his [9] former Depositions to be read to him, ask'd him whether he had any thing to add or retract; he affirmed every part thereof to be true, and said he had only this farther Particular to add, That having lately seen George Kelly, as he was brought down to the House of Commons; he recollects that he has often seen him at the Gaming-Tables with Skeene, and that Skeene and the said Kelly were intimately acquainted, as he is able to prove by several Witnesses of Credit. Skeene being call'd in, and having heard Pancier's Depositions read over to him, own'd that he was acquainted with Pancier, and had been in Company with him at several of the Times and Places mention'd in the said Depositions; That he was taken Prisoner in the Preston Rebellion, but is not related to Marr, nor has ever seen Mackintosh since he parted from him at High-gate. He own'd he had had general Discourse with Pancier relating to a Plot, and that Pancier had ask'd him several Questions about it, to some of which he (Skeene) assented, and to others not; but he deny'd his having told Pancier any farther Particulars than were in the News-Papers, or in the current Report of the Town. As for Instance, when Pancier asked him where the late Duke of Ormond was, he told him the News-Papers said he was at Corunna; but he positively denied his having ever mentioned to Pancier any Particular Persons as concerned in the Conspiracy, or any of the Particular Facts specified in his Depositions.

He farther said, he had reason to believe that Pancier had sent to him since his being in Custody, to advise him to make his Escape; for that one Gerard Fitzgerald having been walking with Pancier in the Park, came directly from thence to him, Skeene, at the Messenger's House, and advised him to make his Escape; tho he own'd that Fitzgerald made no mention of Pancier's having sent him any such Advice.

Fitzgerald being sent for by the Committee, owned he had been to see Skeene, and finding no body at that time in the House but a Woman, told Skeene it would be an easy Matter for him to escape; but he cleared Pancier from having sent any such Intimation or Advice. He farther said, that Skeene told him he did not know but he might have talk'd foolishly to Pancier, but that if he had, Pancier was but a single Evidence, or to that effect.

The Committee find, among the Papers referred to them, a [10] Copy of the Orders which Arnold received from the Owners of the Ship Phineas, requiring him to follow the Directions of Roger Nowell (Halstead) during the Voyage; as also an [11] Affidavit, by which it appears, That the said Halstead was to visit the Bishop of Rochester, and staid an Hour at his House, a few Days before his setting out for Bilboa.

They also find a very remarkable [12] Letter sent to one of the Secretaries of State, by an unknown Hand, dated the 12th of February, 1721-22, and inclosed in [13] one, dated the 31st of March; which first appears to be the Letter referred to in [14] one of Neynoe's Examinations, as drawn up by Kelly and himself, and brought back to him corrected, as he believ'd, by the Bishop of Rochester.

They likewise find a [15] Paper taken in Lord North and Grey's Study at Catlige, which contains several very extraordinary Reasonings on the Nature of Oaths; tending to prove, That the Oaths to the present Government are not Obligatory; and that tho the taking such Oaths is in itself unlawful, and a grievous Sin, as being inconsistent with prior Oaths, or Obligations, yet neither the taking nor breaking them can in strictness fall under the Denomination of Perjury.

This is the Substance of what the Committee have been able to collect from a careful Perusal of the Papers referred to them, and a long Examination of several of the Persons concerned; in some of whose Power they have Reason to believe it was to have made ample Discoveries, if they had been disposed to speak the Truth.

And tho the Lords Committees cannot reflect, without Pity and Compassion, on the misguided Zeal, and wretched Infatuation of those Men, who rather chuse to expose themselves to the greatest Dangers, than to discover the Authors or Accomplices of their Treasons; thereby declaring to the World, that the Leagues and Confederacies of private Villany are dearer and more sacred to them than the strongest Tyes and Obligations of Society; yet the Committee make no doubt but the Matters contained in the Report referred to them, and corroborated by the Result of their preſent Enquiry, will appear to your Lordſhips ſo clearly made out, that the Conſpirators, ſooner or later, will have leiſure to repent of the raſh and impious Choice they have made, of being rather true to one another, than to God, their Conſciences, and their Country.

ON April 24 the Houſe (according to Order) took into Conſideration the Report from the Lords Committees, to whom the Report and Original Papers delivered by the Houſe of Commons at ſeveral Conferences, were referred; and who were impowered by this Houſe to examine Chriſtopher Layer and ſuch other Perſons as they from time to time ſhould think proper: And the ſaid Report being read, It is Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That this Houſe is fully ſatisfied and convinced, That a deteſtable and wicked Conſpiracy has been formed and carried on, for ſolliciting a Foreign Force to invade theſe Kingdoms, for raiſing a Rebellion, and inciting Inſurrections in London, and divers other Parts of Great Britain, and even for laying violent Hands on the Sacred Perſon of His Majeſty, and on His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, in Order to deſtroy our Religion and Happy Conſtitution, by placing a Popiſh Pretender on the Throne.

Ordered, By the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Thanks of this Houſe be given, by the Lord Chancellor, to the ſaid Lords Committees, for their having diſcharged the Truſt in them repoſed, with great Exactneſs, Care, Fidelity, and Candour. Thereupon,

The Lord Chancellor addreſſing himſelf to the Lords of the ſaid Committee, (viz. Duke of Montroſe, Duke of Dorſet, Earl of Scarborough, Earl of Iſlay, Lord Viſcount Lonſdale, Lord Viſcount Torrington, Lord Biſhop of Sarum, Lord Biſhop of Lincoln) gave them the Thanks of the Houſe in the following Words:

My Lords who were of the Committee,

I Am commanded by the Houſe to give your Lordſhips the Thanks of this Houſe, for your having diſcharged the Truſt repoſed in you, with great Exactneſs, Care, Fidelity, and Candour.

My Lords,

The Truſt was as great as ever was repoſed by this Houſe in any of its Members. The Subject Matter of your Inquiry, a Conſpiracy the moſt dangerous as well as deteſtable, big with Miſchiefs of all kinds, and deſtructive of every thing that is valuable amongſt us; carried on and managed in a new deviſed Method with the utmoſt Cunning as well as Wickedneſs, and covered with all the Diſguiſes the moſt artful Dexterity could contrive: and which therefore required the greateſt Penetration and Skill to lay open. And the Papers, ſome of them of ſuch a Nature, that it was thought fit to refer them to your Lordſhips, lock'd up as they were, without reading them in the Houſe.

My Lords,

Your Lordſhips have fully anſwer'd the Expectations the Houſe entertained, when they pitched upon you for this Truſt.

Your Application in going thro' ſo many Papers of affected and ſtudied Obſcurity, your Candour and Exactneſs in Examining the Perſons concern'd, or any way capable of giving any Satisfaction, and in repreſenting what they ſaid; the Accuracy and Judgment of your Remarks; the Light you have ſo happily given to ſeveral Paſſages in the Report of the Committee of the Commons, which, tho in themſelves juſt, were yet liable to Cavils, by ſuch as were loth to have the Truth found out, give, I dare ſay, a ſenſible Pleaſure to every Lord here, that has heard your Report read, and finds himſelf thereby enabled to form a Judgment with ſo intire Satisfaction to himſelf, concerning this abominable Work of Darkneſs, which the Actors have endeavoured to ſurround with impenetrable Obſcurity.

This noble Pleaſure of ſeeing the Truth, notwithſtanding ſo many Contrivances to hide it, and of being thereby enabled to come to right Reſolutions in a Matter of ſuch Importance, has very naturally and agreeably broke out into ſo unanimous a Reſolution of returning the Thanks of this Houſe to your Lordſhips, to whom they ſo much owe it. And in Obedience to their Commands, I do, with particular Pleaſure, give your Lordſhips the Thanks of this Houſe, for your having diſcharged the Truſt in your Lordſhips repoſed, with great Exactneſs, Care, Fidelity, and Candour.

March 19. The Bill to inflict Pains and Penalties on John Plunket was brought into the Houſe of Commons, to which Plunket making no Defenſe, it paſs'd that Houſe on April 5. and was ſent up to the Lords, who after hearing Counſel for the Bill, and Plunket himſelf againſt it, paſs'd the Bill; which afterwards obtained the Royal Aſſent, and was as follows.

An Act to inflict Pains and Penalties on John Plunket.

'WHEREAS in the Years One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty one, and One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty two, a deteſtable and horrid Conſpiracy was formed and carried on by divers Traitors for invading your Majeſty's Kingdoms with foreign Forces, for raiſing an Inſurrection and Rebellion againſt your Majeſty, for ſeizing the Tower and City of London, and for laying violent Hands upon your Majeſty's moſt Sacred Perſon, and upon his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, in order to ſubvert our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment in Church and State, and to place a Popiſh Pretender on your Throne: And whereas for the better concealing and effecting the ſaid Conſpiracy, divers treaſonable Correſpondences were, within the time aforeſaid, carried on by Letters written in Cyphers, cant Words, and fictitious Names; which Conſpiracy, had not Almighty God in his great Mercy diſappointed the ſame, would have deprived your Majeſty's Kingdoms of the Enjoyment of their Religion, Laws and Liberties, involved them in Blood and Ruin, and ſubjected your People to the Bondage and Oppreſſion of Romiſh Superſtition and Arbitrary Power: for which execrable Treaſon Chriſtopher Layer hath been indicted, tried, convicted and attainted. And whereas John Plunket hath been a principal Actor in the ſaid horrid and deteſtable Conſpiracy, by traiterouſly conſulting and correſponding with divers Perſons, to raiſe an Inſurrection and Rebellion againſt your Majeſty within this Kingdom, and

'to procure a foreign Force to invade the same, 'with a design to depose your Majesty, and to 'place the Pretender on your Throne, by traite-'rously corresponding with the said Pretender, 'and by engaging in a most execrable and vil-'lanous Design of laying violent Hands upon the 'Sacred Person of your Majesty (whom God 'long preserve.) Therefore to manifest our just 'Abhorrence of so wicked a Conspiracy, and our 'Zeal and tender Regard for the Preservation of 'your Majesty's Person and Government, and 'for the Protestant Succession in your Majesty's 'Royal Family, the solid Foundation of our pre-'sent Happiness and future Hopes; and to the 'end that no Conspirator may, by any Contri-'vance or Practice whatsoever, escape Punish-'ment, and that all Persons may be by the Justice 'of Parliament for ever hereafter deterred from 'engaging in any traiterous Conspiracies or At-'tempts, We your Majesty's most dutiful and 'loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Tempo-'ral, and Commons in Parliament assembled, do 'humbly beseech your Majesty, that it may be 'enacted; and be it enacted by the King's most 'excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and 'Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, 'and Commons in Parliament assembled, and by 'the Authority of the same, That the said John 'Plunket shall be detained and kept in close and 'safe Custody, without Bail or Mainprize, du-'ring the Pleasure of his Majesty, his Heirs and 'Successors, in any Goal or Prison within the 'Kingdom of Great Britain, to the Custody of 'the Goaler or Keeper whereof the said John 'Plunket shall from time to time be committed, 'in pursuance of this Act, by Warrant under the 'Hand and Seal of any Secretary of State of his 'Majesty, his Heirs or Successors: Which War-'rant or Warrants any Secretary of State for the 'time being is hereby authorized and impow-'ered to make; and that the said John Plunket 'shall forfeit to his Majesty all his Lands, Tene-'ments, Hereditaments, Goods and Chattels what-'soever.

'And for more sure detaining the said John 'Plunket in safe Custody, be it further enacted by 'the Authority aforesaid, That if the said John 'Plunket shall break such Goal or Prison to which 'he shall be so committed, or shall escape out 'of the Custody of the Person in whose Custody 'he shall be by virtue of such Commitment, That 'then the said John Plunket, and all and every 'Person and Persons whatsoever, who shall be 'aiding or assisting the said John Plunket in break-'ing such Goal or Prison, or in making such 'Escape, as aforesaid, or who shall by Force 'take or rescue the said John Plunket out of such 'Custody, Goal, or Prison, during the Conti-'nuance of his Imprisonment by virtue of this 'Act, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be 'adjudged Guilty of Felony, and shall suffer 'Death as in Case of Felony, without Benefit of 'Clergy.'

The same Day the Bill to inflict Pains and Penalties on George Kelly alias Johnson was brought into the House of Commons, who after hearing Counsel for the Bill, and Kelly and his Counsel against it, pass'd it on April 6. and sent it up to the Lords, who heard Counsel for and against the Bill, when Kelly made the following Speech.

My LORDS,

'SINCE my Counsel have so fully answered 'every Article alledged against me, it may 'seem unnecessary to take up your Lordships 'Time, by saying any thing for myself. And, 'indeed, it would be so; if my Charge were Or-'dinary or Particular. But, my Lords, I have 'been represented as a Person doubly guilty; 'First, In transacting Treason for myself: and, 'Secondly, In doing it for other People. These 'are Crimes of the most heinous Nature; and 'if they were as clearly proved, as they have 'been strongly asserted, I should justly merit 'your Lordships highest Displeasure, and all the 'Pains and Penalties you could possibly inflict 'upon me.

'And since my Charge is so very extraordi-'nary; since these Proceedings seem to be with-'out any Precedent; and, that the Innocence 'of other Persons calls upon me for publick 'Justice; I believe your Lordships will easily al-'low, That to be silent in such a Case would be 'truly criminal, and too justly censured.

'To enter into all the Particulars of my Ac-'cusation, would take up more Time than is rea-'sonable for me to ask, or for your Lordships to 'allow: And tho the many Inconsistencies, Con-'tradictions, and false Conclusions which appear 'in almost every Page of the printed Reports, 'plainly shew the Weakness, Absurdity, and 'Sophistry of them; however, I shall only beg 'Leave to touch upon those material Parts 'which relate to myself, and my Defense to 'them.

'The first Article which I find myself charged 'with, is, The employing of one Neynoe to 'draw up three Memorials to the Regent of 'France, to sollicit Foreign Forces to invade 'this Kingdom. And for Proof of this, the Ex-'aminations of the same Person, which are nei-'ther upon Oath, nor so much as signed by him, '(and whom the Committee of the Honourable 'House of Commons have represented as a very 'infamous Fellow) are the only Evidence assigned 'against me.

'This, my Lords, is the Crime! and This the 'Proof!

'And tho the bare mentioning of it might be 'sufficient to convince your Lordships of its 'Weakness; however, since so great a Weight 'has been laid upon this Kind of Evidence in 'another Place, it will be necessary to be a little 'more particular about it.

'The two first of these Memorials (viz. 'those before and after the South-Sea Scheme) are 'but slightly mentioned: But the One pretended 'to be drawn up in December 1721, (and con-'taining a Demand of 5000 Men) and a Letter 'said to be written the March after (to amuse the 'Government into a false Security) are the chief 'Things upon which any Stress is laid. And 'how false both these Allegations are, has evi-'dently appeared to your Lordships. For, had 'my Accuser been really employed to draw up 'any such Memorials, it is reasonable to believe, 'that he would have Copies of some, and especi-'ally of the last of them; since a Person who 'turned Informer so suddenly after, may very 'well be presumed to have had Thoughts of it for ſome Time before; and ſuch Papers would, no doubt, give great Weight to his Information. But the Miniſtry have produced no ſuch Copies; neither do they pretend to have them: Which is a very great Indication, that there never were any ſuch Memorials at all.

'Beſides, There are no two of his Examinations of a-piece. Nay! he contradicts himſelf in almoſt every one of them. For in his ſecond Examination he ſays, That theſe Memorials were all drawn up by the Order of one Henry Watſon (whom he really did not know, but took to be the late Earl Mariſhall) without making the leaſt mention of me. In his third Examination he ſays, They were delivered to me and Watſon; and in his fourth he ſays again, They were all drawn up by the Order of Henry Watſon only. And in a few Lines after contradicts himſelf, and ſays, that the Heads of them were given to him by me and Watſon: Which are ſuch Inconſiſtencies, as (your Lordſhips will eaſily grant) are not to be reconciled: And if his Memorials were no better drawn than his Examinations, I believe they were not likely to meet with any great Succeſs.

'As to the Earl Mariſhall, how reaſonable it is to believe, that a Perſon in his Circumſtances ſhould venture to come into England, and live ſo openly here, as to intruſt himſelf, and a Secret of this Nature, to a Fellow, who (by his own Confeſſion) did not know him, is humbly ſubmitted to your Lordſhips. And as for my Part, it is very plain that I could have no Hand in them, ſince the Minutes in my Pocket-Book (in which I could have uſed no Diſguiſe) agreeing with the concurrent Teſtimony of ſeveral Witneſſes, plainly ſhew, That I was not in the Kingdom at the Times in which my Accuſer pretends to have been ſo employed. For, by thoſe Minutes, and their Teſtimony, it appears, That I went to France the 23d of November 1721, and did not return till the latter End of the next Month: And my Accuſer himſelf owns in his firſt Examination, That he did not ſee me after my Return, till the January following; which makes it impoſſible that he could have been ſo employed by me in December, ſince I was moſt part of that Month out of the Kingdom; and the few Days of it that I was here, he owns he did not ſee me.

'Nor has the other Part of his Information relating to the Letter (which he pretends to have drawn up in March) better Grounds—— For, by the ſame Minutes, and by the ſame Evidence, it likewiſe appears, That I went to France the 22d of February after, and did not return till the middle of April; which makes it as impoſſible that he could have been employed by me in March, ſince I was then likewiſe out of the Kingdom. Had this Examination been at any Diſtance of Time, it is poſſible he might be miſtaken in it: but his firſt Information muſt have been about the middle of April, ſoon after my Return from France; for he confeſſed to the Perſon taken up with him at Deal, That he was the firſt who ſet the Miniſtry upon intercepting Letters. And the firſt Letters ſo intercepted, are owned, in the 42d Page of the Report made to the Lower-Houſe, to have been the 22d of April, 1722.——And, ſurely, he cannot be ſuppoſed to have forgot ſo ſoon what happened the very Month before; eſpecially ſince he has been ſo particular, as to name the very Day (Saturday) upon which he ſays this Letter was ſo drawn up. By all which it plainly appears, That this Article is not only groundleſs, but evidently falſe; and likewiſe, that he had no ſuch Intimacy with me (as the Report pretends) ſince he has declared, That I never ſpoke to him of the Conſpiracy; and that I could be a Month at one Time, and Two Months at another out of the Town, without his knowing any thing of it. As to what is ſaid to his coming ſometimes to my Lodgings, I believe it may be true; but it has been fully proved, That his Viſits were never to me, but always to another Perſon who lodged in the ſame Houſe. And I do ſolemnly affirm to your Lordſhips, that I never was acquainted with the late Earl Mariſhall, or with any ſuch Perſon who went by the Name of Watſon: That I knew very little of my Accuſer; ſo little, that I am confident, I never ſpoke to him Ten times in my Life; nor ever employed him in this or any other Affair whatſoever.

'The ſecond Article charged upon me, is, the carrying on a Treaſonable Correſpondence for the Biſhop of Rocheſter. And for Proof of this, the Examination of the ſame Perſon is the only Evidence produced againſt me, wherein he ſays, That I frequently told him, the Biſhop was concerned in ſuch a Correſpondence; and that I managed it for him; with other Particulars not worth mentioning. How reaſonable it is, that I ſhould tell ſuch a ſtrange Untruth to a Perſon that I knew ſo very little of, and what Credit ought to be given to his bare Aſſertion, who has affirmed ſuch groſs and notorious Falſehoods in the former Article, muſt be ſubmitted to your Lordſhips. And, in my preſent unhappy Situation, I cannot but think it a very great and ſingular Happineſs, to have ſo publick and honourable an Occaſion of purging myſelf from ſo vile a Calumny, and of doing Juſtice to that moſt worthy and learned Prelate.

'And I do ſolemnly declare to your Lordſhips upon the Faith of a Chriſtian, That I never wrote or received a Letter of any kind for the Biſhop of Rocheſter, or was privy to any Correſpondence of his at Home or Abroad: That I never ſhewed him any Letter that ever I wrote to France, or ever ſent one there by his Privity or Direction: That I am very little known to his Lordſhip, went very rarely to wait upon him; ſo rarely! that I am confident few of his Servants know either my Name or Face; and I have not ſeen him above three or four Times theſe two Years paſt, and not above eight or ten times in my whole Life.

'I do farther declare, That my Viſits to his Lordſhip were always publick; that I never went privately in a Chair to his Houſe; always found other Company with him, who were generally Strangers to me; and never once mentioned his Name, upon this or any other Account, to the Perſon who has thus accuſed me. Which with the Evidence that has been produced of his own Confeſſions to that Purpoſe, is, I hope, ſufficient to convince your Lordſhips of the Truth of it.

'And as for the Dog, which has been brought as a Circumſtance to prove this Matter, I do in the ſame ſolemn Manner declare, That he was given to me by a Surgeon at Paris, whoſe

'Affidavit

'Affidavit has been offered to be produced) and who, 'at that Time, I do verily believe, never heard 'of his Lordship's Name; and that he never was 'design'd for any body but the Person I gave 'him to. And I appeal to the very Ministers 'themselves, if the British Resident at Paris (who 'is constantly attended by that very Surgeon, 'and examined him about it) has not confirmed 'the Truth of this Account to them. I do far-'ther affirm, That the Bishop of Rochester never 'saw him; never received any Letter or Mes-'sage by me, nor (do I believe) by any other 'Person about him: Neither did I ever know or 'hear, That his Lordship had any Intercourse or 'Correspondence with the late Earl of Marr, or 'any other disaffected Person abroad.

'My LORDS,

'It cannot be imagined, that I have any par-'ticular Interest or Concern in this Matter; for 'I never received any Favours from his Lordship; 'neither do I owe him any Obligations, but those 'of common Justice: And those I should per-'form, where I have so much Truth of my Side, 'to the greatest Enemy I have upon Earth. As for 'the other Circumstances, which are brought to 'strengthen my Accuser's Examinations, and are 'set forth in one Pancier's Deposition, They will 'appear, I don't doubt, as groundless and in-'consistent as the Examinations themselves. For 'this Person swears, That another told him of 'this Conspiracy; that six or eight Battalions of 'Irish Forces were to come from Spain to assist 'the Conspirators; that 200000 l. were raised, 'and 800 Men regularly subsisted for this Pur-'pose in London. These, My Lords, are called, 'in the 38th Page of the Report of the Lower 'House, The Concurrent and Corroborating Proofs 'of my Accuser's Examinations: And I humbly 'appeal to your Lordships, if any one of them 'carries the least Colour of Reason or Probabi-'lity with it. For can it be imagined, That such 'a Force should come from Spain, when there 'appears to be so strict a Friendship between 'the two Kingdoms? Or that 200000 l. could 'possibly be raised among all the disaffected 'in England, in case there was a Licence for 'it? Or 800 Men regularly subsisted in this 'City, without a Discovery? These are such 'idle inconsistent Tales, as (I am persuaded) 'can never have any Weight with your Lord-'ships. Besides, my Lords, this is only bare 'Hear-say; and if the Hear-say of such infamous 'Persons (or, indeed, of any Persons) be look'd 'upon as sufficient Evidence, I believe no Man 'in England can be sure of his Life or Liberty 'an Hour, since any two People may talk him 'into High-Treason whenever they please; and 'the greater the Person is, the greater his Dan-'ger always will be.

'The Third Crime which I stand charged with, 'is, the Writing of three treasonable Letters 'for the Bishop of Rochester, supposed to be for 'the Pretender, the late Earl of Marr, and Ge-'neral Dillon, which Letters are said to have 'been sent by me to Mr. Gordon at Boulogne, with 'Directions to be delivered to one Mr. Talbot. 'And for Proof of this, the Clerks of the Post-'Office are produced, who swear, That those 'Letters were (to the best of their Knowledge) 'written in the same Hand with an Original 'which was stopt as a Specimen of it. Which 'Original has been sworn by two Persons to be 'my Writing, and consequently those Letters 'must be so too.

'My LORDS,

'These Letters are dated the 20th of April, 'and the Specimen so stopt the 20th of August, 'just four Months after. And how it is possible 'for People (who receive such a Number of 'Letters) to swear to a Likeness of Hands, at 'such a Distance of Time; and what Weight 'ought to be laid upon this kind of Evidence; 'or upon that modern and mysterious one given 'by the Decypherers, in which they don't pre-'tend to a Certainty themselves, must be sub-'mitted to your Lordships. And as to the Per-'sons who have sworn to my Hand, I hope it 'will be considered, That one of them is a Mes-'senger, who never saw any of my Writing, but 'the Superscriptions of a few Letters, which '(your Lordships may easily see) do not bear the 'least Likeness with what he has sworn to. Be-'sides, this very Person was turned out of his 'Employment upon my Account; and a few Days 'after he gave this Evidence in the House of 'Commons, I saw a Paragraph in the News-Pa-'pers that he was restored to it again. And as 'to the other, it is to be hoped, That it will be 'likewise considered, that he is a Servant, who 'attended me only about three Weeks, and was 'turned off for an infamous Action, which he has 'acknowledged himself to have been guilty of: 'Besides, he has confessed, That he never saw 'me write, but as he went backwards and for-'wards in the Room; and at such a Distance 'as not to be able to distinguish one Character 'from another: And it has been proved by two 'Witnesses, (one of which was a particular Friend 'of his own) That he declared he never knew 'any thing of my Hand; but was threatned by 'the Secretary into the Affidavit, which has been 'printed in the Appendix. And if that Paper had 'been my Writing, it is impossible they could be 'reduced to a Necessity of making use of such 'improper Evidence, since no Pains have been 'spared to procure better; since Numbers of 'People have been taken up, confined and exa-'mined to this very Point; and Newgate sent to, 'more than once, for Witnesses to it. And tho 'it might be proved by the very Report of the 'Lower House, That those Letters could not 'have come from the Bishop of Rochester; how-'ever, my Business is only to convince your Lord-'ships, That I was not the Writer of them, and 'of this, I believe, it is impossible to give clearer 'Proofs than I have done: For if those Letters 'had been dictated to me the twentieth of 'April (as the Report pretends) it must have 'been at his Lordship's House in the Coun-'try; since it appears by the Deposition of 'his Coachman, that he went there the 12th 'of that Month, and did not leave it till the '5th of May.

'But it has been proved, that I was in London 'all that time; and if it had been permitted, 'there is not a Person in the Bishop's Family, 'but would testify, That I was not then at his 'House in the Country; and consequently could 'not have written any such Letters for him. 'Besides, I have brought several Persons of Cre-'dit and undoubted Characters, who have all 'testified, that the Hand in which those Letters 'are said to be written, is not mine, nor any 'thing like it.

'An

'An Affidavit has been produced from Mr. Gordon, That he never received any ſuch Letters from me, nor ever had any Correſpondence, or even an Acquaintance with me.

'And it has been likewiſe proved, That Mr. Talbot, to whom thoſe Letters are ſaid to be delivered by Mr. Gordon, was in this Town the very Day upon which they are ſaid to have been delivered to him at Boulogne: And if I had any ſuch Letters to tranſmit, can it be imagined that I would truſt them to the common Poſt, when I had ſo good an Opportunity to ſend them by, or direct them to Boulogne, when the ſame Poſt might as well have carried them to Paris? Theſe are ſuch full, ſuch evident Proofs, as, I hope, cannot fail of giving your Lordſhips the utmoſt Conviction in this Matter; and, conſequently, that this Article is, like the reſt, both groundleſs and manifeſtly falſe.

'But, if any Credit is to be given to the Confeſſions which my Accuſer made to the Perſon taken up with him, it is very plain, that thoſe Letters muſt have come from another Quarter; and, to ſay no worſe, were at leaſt calculated to carry on his own baſe and villainous Deſigns.

'For it has been proved to your Lordſhips, that he confeſſed to have been employed by one of the Miniſters, received 300 l. from him, and was to have 2000 l. more. That this Miniſter declared a perſonal Prejudice, upon ſome private Account, to the Biſhop of Rocheſter; was reſolved to pull down the Pride of that Haughty Prelate, and to ſqueeze me (as I think the Expreſſions were) to that Purpoſe.

'My LORDS,

'I ſay, if any Credit is to be given to this Confeſſion, there can be no great Difficulty in tracing out the Source of this Part of the Conſpiracy; and I am heartily ſorry to ſay, That there are ſome Circumſtances which ſeem to give but too great a Countenance to the Truth of it. For, my Lords, He made this Confeſſion at a Juncture, when he may very well be ſuppoſed to have ſpoken in the Sincerity of his Heart; when he ſaw his Villainy detected; believed himſelf to be in the greateſt Danger, and depended upon the Perſon's Aſſiſtance (to whom he made it) to help him out of his Misfortunes. ——And how particular this Proſecution is, and how ſufficiently I have been ſqueezed, are Things but too viſible, and too well known to the World.

'Beſides, the very Cypher by which thoſe Letters were written, (and which he owned to have received from that Miniſter) was actually caught upon the Perſon to whom he gave it; and he confeſſed, That he put a Paper of Directions into one of my Drawers, by which (the Report ſays) moſt of the treaſonable Letters were addreſſed. And it has been proved to your Lordſhips, that thoſe Drawers were conſtantly open, and that he made ſome Pretext for being alone in my Lodgings, the very Night before I was firſt taken up. And ſince he was the firſt that ſet the Miniſtry upon intercepting Letters, which he ſaid were mine; it is very extraordinary, that ſuch a material Part of his Evidence ſhould be omitted in his Examination; or that the very firſt Letters ſo intercepted, ſhould be thoſe alledged againſt the Biſhop of Rocheſter: And if the Originals of thoſe Three Letters were ſtopt, I don't at all doubt, but they might be proved to be my Accuſer's own Hand-writing. And how ſtrong a Senſe he had of his Guilt, by attempting an Eſcape which proved fatal to him; and how viſibly the Hand of God has interpoſed in that eminent Prelate's Favour, by taking one of the Perſons (deſigned for his Deſtruction) out of the World, and giving the other Grace and Virtue enough to withſtand all Temptations to his Prejudice, are Things highly worthy of your Lordſhips juſt and moſt ſerious Conſideration, and no ſmall Indication of his Innocence. And as to the Money which my Accuſer owned to have received, That there was a very ſudden and extraordinary Change in his Condition; that from the loweſt State of Poverty and Want, he ſoon arrived to that of a vicious and moſt profligate Affluence, is a Truth ſufficiently known to all thoſe who were acquainted with him. But from whence this Change proceeded, or what real Grounds he had for aſperſing that Honourable Perſon, I will not pretend to ſay: But if thoſe Aſperſions be falſe (as I wiſh they may) it may be juſtly inferred, That a Fellow who was capable of vilifying one Perſon, may very well be judged as capable of doing ſo to another: And if his Veracity is not to hold good in one Caſe, there can be no Reaſon for allowing it in the other.

'The fourth Crime alledged againſt me, is, a Number of intercepted Letters, ſuppoſed to be written to, and received from the late Earl of Marr, General Dillon, and other diſaffected Perſons abroad. And for Proof of this a Frenchman has been produced, who ſwears, That he once ſaw me take up a Letter at Burton's Coffee-houſe, by the Name of Baker, which Name (it is ſaid) ſome of the treaſonable Letters were addreſſed by; and was, in a Paper of Directions, found in my Lodgings.——How that Paper came there, has been already proved; and as to the Perſon who has ſwore to this Particular, I muſt obſerve, That when he gave this Evidence to the Houſe of Commons, he did not know me, tho he ſpoke to me, and look'd ſeveral times earneſtly at me: and for the Truth of this, I can appeal to moſt of the Members of that Honourable Houſe, who were Witneſſes of it: And he would ſtill have probably continued in his Ignorance, if ſome private Hints (as I have been told) were not given him, or the ſame Method taken which has been done with a Number of other ſtrange Fellows, who were frequently ſent to the Tower, and had no other Buſineſs but to take a View of me. Beſides, the People of the Coffee-houſe have teſtify'd the contrary, and that no ſuch Letter ever came to their Houſe. And tho it be ſet down in my Examination before the Council, That I confeſſed to have taken up ſuch a Letter, I humbly appeal to my Lord Chancellor (if it can be worth his Lordſhip's while to recollect it) If he did not aſk me that very Queſtion two or three times? and if I did not as often deny it? Neither is this the only Particular that is falſely ſet down in that Examination. And I do ſolemnly affirm to your Lordſhips, That I never did receive any ſuch Letter, nor ever ſaw that Paper of Directions, till it was printed in the Report. And there is one Cir-

'cumſtance

'cumstance pretty remarkable in this Correspondence, That as it began with my Accuser's Information, so it ended with his being taken up. For immediately after a new Correspondence is pretended to be discovered; and to fix this likewise upon me, it has been suggested, that I sent Cyphers by Sir Harry Goring to France, and had Letters directed by them to Sturges's and Slaughter's Coffee-house.

'But, my Lords, no such Cyphers were found in my Custody, nor any Papers relating to such a Correspondence; and the People of those Coffee-houses have all sworn, That I never ordered any Letters of that kind to be taken in, or received one, either by my own or any other Name from them. Nay! one of them has sworn, That no such Letters ever came to his House at all; and the other says, That a Messenger from the Secretary's Office, was the only Person that ever called at his House for those directed to it.

'As to the printed Examination of one Mr. Carryl to this Purpose, it were to be wished, That this Gentleman's Reasons had been published, as well as his Accusation. For I am confident, he will not pretend to say, that ever he saw me write a Line in his Life, or give a Piece of Paper of any kind to Sir Harry Goring; and what Reason he could have for believing that we settled a Key for such a Correspondence, is very extraordinary: Nor have the other Particulars which he has affirmed, the least Foundation of Truth; for I do solemnly aver, That I never saw Sample in my Life, or gave Captain Bonin any such Letter of Recommendation; neither had I ever the Honour of speaking to my Lord North and Grey, or of being any ways known to his Lordship: And that I should mention him so familiarly by the fictitious Name of Johnson, (and which, of all Names, I should never make use of in that manner) will, I hope, appear very incredible to your Lordships; especially since Mr. Carryl himself has furnished so good a Reason for the Disbelief of it.

'For he has likewise affirmed, That my Examination before the Council was read at Doctor Talden's House: The Doctor has, indeed, already done me Justice in that Point; and Mr. Tucker (who was all the while in company) will, I am very sure, do the same. And since Mr. Carryl appears to be so plainly mistaken in this Particular, surely he may very well be supposed to be so in all the rest; especially since he has not assigned the least Reason for any of them.

'As to the rest of the intercepted Letters, the People of the several Coffee-houses have likewise cleared me from them; and all testify, That they never delivered me any such Letters, or received any Directions from me about them; which, I hope, will be sufficient to convince your Lordships, that I was not concerned in any such Correspondence; especially since no Letters of this kind were found in my Possession, nor any other Papers relating to the Conspiracy.

'There are two other Crimes, in which I most humbly crave your Lordship's Patience to be heard, because they are the blackest that can be imagined, and seem to be Personal. The First is a Letter directed to Mr. Gordon at Boulogne, with two Affidavits, which have been printed, and are suggested to be sent by my Directions, 'in order to have him and one Birmingham perjure themselves upon my Account:—For in this 'Letter it is said, That the Inclosed is a Copy of a 'Note from the Person concerned, with what he thinks 'requisite.

'My LORDS,

'This Letter is dated the 20th of March, at 'which Time, and for five Months before, I 'never was allowed the Use of Pen, Ink, or Paper, or the Liberty of seeing any Person that 'could possibly have conveyed such a Note for 'me; for I have been guarded in a different manner from other People in the Tower: My Warders were put into the very Room with me, and 'ordered never to stir a Moment, Night or 'Day, out of it; which Orders they punctually 'obeyed, and were constant Witnesses to all my 'Actions.

'And those Warders will depose, that they believe it was impossible for me to have written 'or sent out any such Directions; the Officers, 'I don't doubt, will do me the same Justice. 'And when my Sollicitor was admitted, finding 'that Mr. Gordon's Affidavit might be of use, if 'allowed as Evidence, a Person was immediately 'dispatched, and who brought it in a different 'Form from those which have been printed. 'And my Sollicitor can testify, That no Draughts 'were sent by him; which, with the gross Management of the Persons concerned in this Affair, is, I hope, sufficient to give your Lordships the clearest Conviction of my Innocence 'in it. And I do solemnly affirm, That I never 'knew any thing of them; never heard of the 'Name of Aikenhead before; nor can I find out 'any Person (besides the Master of that Vessel) 'that ever did.

'The other Crime is set forth in one Levett's Deposition, in the Report made to this most Honourable House: wherein (among a great many 'other most notorious Falshoods) she swears, 'That one Mrs. Barnes told her, that I was instrumental in, or privy to, the shutting up of a 'Person in a Dungeon, for fear of his turning Informer; and not only of him, but of 200 more 'upon the same Account. Which, I believe, is 'the most surprizing Crime that ever yet was 'alledged against any Christian. Mrs. Barnes 'denies every Syllable of this Conversation; and 'if the Person that swears this against her had 'been produced, she would be proved to your 'Lordships to have been a vile infamous Creature 'all her Life. And if she is to be believed, or 'that your Lordships can think it possible there 'can be the least Truth in her Deposition, it will 'be a Sin to let me live, and impossible to find 'out a Punishment too cruel for me.

'These, my Lords, are the chief Crimes which 'I am charged with; and very great ones they 'are, had they been in any degree made out against me. I am a Stranger to the Methods of 'legal Proof, but have been told by Counsel, 'That the greater a Person's Crime is, the clearer the Evidence ought to be against him; and 'how weak and insufficient the Proofs produced 'for this Purpose are, and how clear and convincing those which have been offered in my 'Justification, has I hope evidently appeared to 'your Lordships, and given you entire Conviction of my Innocence; and that all the Crimes 'alledged against me, are without the least Colour or Foundation of Truth. But how much

'I have ſuffered for theſe ſuppoſed Crimes; and 'what extraordinary Means have been made uſe 'of againſt me, are things much worthier of your 'Lordſhips judicial Conſideration. To be taken 'up, and held to exorbitant Bail, without ever 'aſſigning any particular Crime againſt me; to 'ſuffer a long and cloſe Confinement, where the 'Expence bears no Proportion to my Circum-'ſtances: To have Numbers of People, and 'ſome of them Creatures of the meaneſt Rank 'and Condition, taken up, examined, and tam-'pered with, upon my Account; and Newgate 'ſent to for Witneſſes: To have a Servant (who 'was turned off for his ill Behaviour) brought as 'an Evidence, and my moſt intimate Friends im-'priſoned for not ſwearing againſt me; are 'Hardſhips and Proceedings, I believe, hitherto 'unheard of in England; and ſuch as, I hope, 'your Lordſhips will, in your great Wiſdom 'and Juſtice, think fit to redreſs. All which is 'of a piece with an infamous offer made to my-'ſelf by one of the Under-Secretaries of State, 'who, the Morning after I was firſt examined, 'came to me with a Meſſage (as he ſaid) from 'one of his Superiors, to let me know, That I 'had now a very good Opportunity of ſerving myſelf; 'and that he was ſent to offer me my own Conditions. 'And when I declared myſelf an entire Stranger 'to the Conſpiracy, and was ſorry to find that 'Noble Lord have ſo baſe an Opinion of me, he 'ſeemed to wonder that I would neglect ſo 'good an Occaſion of ſerving myſelf, eſpecially 'when I might have any thing I pleaſed to ask for. 'What Authority that Perſon had for this Meſ-'ſage, or the reſt of his After-Proceedings, I 'will not pretend to ſay: But as I have been 'ruined and utterly undone by them, I hope 'your Lordſhips will take my Sufferings, as well 'as Circumſtances, into your Conſideration; 'and, inſtead of inflicting any farther Pains 'and Penalties, look upon me (as I really am) a 'Perſon highly injured, and not a Criminal con-'cerned in any Tranſactions againſt the Govern-'ment.

'As for my Circumſtances, they are but too 'well known in the World.

'And here I cannot omit my Gratitude to the 'late, and preſent Conſtables of the Tower: for 'the late Conſtable (tho I never had the Ho-'nour to ſee his Lordſhip) was, upon a Repre-'ſentation of my Circumſtances, ſo very good, 'as to procure me the Promiſe of an Allowance 'from the Government: And his Lordſhip, the 'preſent, has been ſo kind as to get it paid. 'But the Officers of the Place can teſtify, That 'this Allowance has not been converted to any 'private Uſe of mine, but conſtantly given to 'the Perſons appointed to attend me. And I 'muſt take leave to aſſure your Lordſhips, That 'it has coſt me more ſince I was ſent there, than 'the Government has now left me really worth 'in the World; and I muſt ſuddenly become a 'Sacrifice to my Neceſſities, if not ſet at Li-'berty by your Lordſhips great Clemency and 'Compaſſion.

'If I have dropped any Expreſſion which may 'not be ſo agreeable to ſome particular Perſons 'in Power, I could wiſh that my Defence had not 'laid me under that Neceſſity: And I do ſo-'lemnly proteſt, that they have not proceeded 'from any Reſentment for my Sufferings; but 'from a ſincere Endeavour to give your Lord-'ſhips the cleareſt Conviction of my Innocence. 'And ſince I could not merit their Favour, I 'ſhall always endeavour to preſerve their good 'Opinion.

'As to the Legality of theſe Proceedings, and 'the Danger of making Precedents of this Kind, 'thoſe are things which have been already fully 'ſet forth by my Counſel, and muſt be ſubmit-'ted to the great Wiſdom and Juriſdiction of this 'moſt illuſtrious Aſſembly: An Aſſembly! which 'is not only the Higheſt and moſt Honourable, 'but the Uprighteſt and moſt Impartial, I be-'lieve, upon Earth; and whoſe Juſtice has ever 'appeared as extenſive as their Power. The 'great, and the only Argument, which I have 'heard offered for the paſſing of this Bill, is, 'That the Occaſion is extraordinary; that your 'Lordſhips are in your Legiſlative Capacity; 'and tho the Proofs may not be ſo legal, how-'ever, in Terrorem, it is neceſſary to paſs it. But 'I humbly beſeech your Lordſhips to conſider 'where the Extraordinarineſs of this Occaſion 'lies:—Has there been the leaſt Commotion in 'any Part of the Three Kingdoms? Or any 'Perſon injured in his Liberty or Fortune, be-'ſides thoſe who have been ſo unhappy as to fall 'under this Suſpicion? Or, Is this Occaſion 'more extraordinary than when there was a 'Publick Inſurrection in the Kingdom? And 'when the Perſons concerned in it, were tried 'by the common and ordinary Courts of Juſ-'tice? And becauſe your Lordſhips are veſted 'with a Supreme Authority, and not tied up 'to the common Forms of Law, can that be a 'Reaſon for your acting directly contrary to it? 'And to ſuppoſe your Lordſhips capable of do-'ing ſo, was not, I muſt ſay, ſo becoming an 'Argument to have been offered upon this Oc-'caſion. And to have a Seſſion, which opened 'with ſo mild, ſo gracious a Speech from the 'Throne, end in ſuch an extraordinary Manner, 'muſt ſurely be very contrary to the Deſign and 'Intention of the Throne at that time; and is, I 'hope, ſo ſtill; eſpecially ſince no intervening 'Accidents have happened to ruffle the Quiet and 'Tranquillity of the Kingdom.

'My LORDS,

'The firſt extraordinary Bill, that, I believe, 'ever paſſed in England, was that of the Earl of 'Strafford; and how much perſonal Prejudice 'was in his Proſecution, and how fatal that 'Bill proved in its Conſequences, I need not 'mention, ſince the Royal Martyr himſelf has, 'in his dying Words, called it, An unjuſt Sen-'tence, and imputed all his Misfortunes to it. 'And pray, my Lords, why was that Sentence 'unjuſt, but becauſe it was not ſupported by 'Law?——And, to the eternal Honour of 'this Houſe be it ſaid, That when the Proofs 'upon his Trial were not found Legal, they 'refuſed to find him Guilty. But when this ex-'traordinary Method was taken, and the Tor-'rent of the Times bore down their uſual Juſtice, 'then the Flood-gates of all thoſe Miſeries were 'opened, which overwhelmed and ſunk the Con-'ſtitution: And of which, ſome of your Noble 'Predeceſſors had ſo ſtrong and lively a Senſe, as 'to declare in this very Houſe, That they 'would be ſooner torn in pieces, than come into 'ſuch illegal Proceedings; and ſo fell a Sacrifice 'to the Love and Laws of their Country.

'To which I shall only beg leave to add one Observation, that, I am sure, is but too well known to that Right Reverend Bench: —— That of all the Prelates who advised his Majesty to the Passing of that Fatal Bill, not one of them escaped the Violence of those very Persons whom they endeavour'd to oblige by that Advice. These, my Lords, were the unhappy Effects and fatal Consequences of one extraordinary Bill: And what those of another may prove, the great Director of all Things only can foresee!

'Many are the Arguments which might be brought to shew the great Injustice, as well as Inconveniencies, of these Laws in particular: But as my Liberty can be of no great Moment to the World, I shall only beseech your Lordships, not thro' me to give a Wound to the Constitution, which, perhaps, may not so easily be cured. The great Characteristick which distinguishes England from the rest of the neighbouring Nations, is, the Excellency of our Laws, of which your Lordships are the great Guardians: And if you suffer those Laws to be broke in upon, and render Life or Liberty so precarious, as to be affected or taken away, by every idle Hearsay, that Excellency must soon disappear, and the best Form of Government now upon Earth, consequently sink into Anarchy and Confusion.

'My LORDS,

'The Words of my Bill are very severe, and do not bear the least Proportion to the Proofs which have been produced against me: And I humbly hope, That my past Sufferings will be looked upon as a sufficient Punishment; especially since it is not pretended, that I have transgressed any Law yet in being. I propose no great Happiness in this Life, and would willingly avoid as much Misery as I could: And must therefore humbly beseech your Lordships, to look upon me as a Stranger in your Kingdom, and a Person (as I really am) inconsiderable in myself; and, consequently, incapable of doing the least Prejudice to any Government. For my Behaviour, I am willing to give the best Sureties that I am able: But if that be not approved of, I hope your Lordships will give me leave to retire to some other Part of the World, where I may enjoy my Poverty with Freedom. But, let my Fate be what it will, I shall ever pray for your Lordships particular Welfare, as well as the general Prosperity of the Kingdom.

'And so resign myself, with the utmost Humility, to your Lordships great Clemency, Justice, and Compassion.'

After which the House pass'd the Bill, which obtain'd the Royal Assent, and was as follows:

An Act to inflict Pains and Penalties on George Kelly alias Johnson.

'WHereas in the Years One thousand seven hundred and twenty one, and One thousand seven hundred and twenty two, a detestable and horrid Conspiracy was formed and carried on by divers Traitors for invading your Majesty's Kingdoms with foreign Forces, for raising an Insurrection and Rebellion against your Majesty, for seizing the Tower and City of London, and for laying violent Hands upon your Majesty's most sacred Person, and upon his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in order to subvert our present happy Establishment in Church and State, and to place a Popish Pretender on your Throne; And whereas for the better concealing and effecting the said Conspiracy, divers treasonable Correspondencies were, within the time aforesaid, carried on by Letters written in Cyphers, cant Words, and fictitious Names; which Conspiracy, had not Almighty God in his great Mercy disappointed the same, would have deprived your Majesty's Kingdoms of the Enjoyment of their Religion, Laws, and Liberties, involved them in Blood and Ruin, and subjected your People to the Bondage and Oppression of Romish Superstition and Arbitrary Power: For which execrable Treason Christopher Layer hath been indicted, tried, convicted, and attainted: And whereas George Kelly alias Johnson hath been a principal Actor in the said horrid and detestable Conspiracy, by traiterously consulting and corresponding with divers Persons to procure a foreign Force to invade this Kingdom, and to raise an Insurrection and Rebellion against your Majesty within the same, with design to depose your Majesty, and place the Pretender on your Throne; for treasonable Practices in which Conspiracy the said George Kelly alias Johnson being arrested, and divers Papers then found about him seized, in pursuance of a Warrant under the Hand and Seal of one of your Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, for seizing and apprehending him the said George Kelly alias Johnson, together with his Papers, and the said George Kelly alias Johnson being in Custody of a Messenger by virtue of the said Warrant, did, by Force and Violence, with a drawn Sword, make an Assault upon, and resist the said Messenger, with intent to destroy the said Papers, and did burn the same: Therefore to manifest our just Abhorrence of so wicked and abominable Conspiracy, and our Zeal and tender Regard for the Preservation of your Majesty's Person and Government, and of the Protestant Succession in your Majesty's Royal Family, the solid Foundation of our present Happiness and future Hopes; and to the end that no Conspirator may, by any Contrivance or Practice whatsoever, escape Punishment, and that all Persons may by the Justice of Parliament be for ever hereafter deterred from engaging in any traiterous Conspiracies or Attempts, We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, do humbly beseech your Majesty, that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That the said George Kelly alias Johnson shall be detained and kept in close and safe Custody, without Bail or Mainprize, during the Pleasure of his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, in any Goal or Prison within the Kingdom of Great Britain; to the Custody of the Goaler or Keeper whereof the said George Kelly alias

'John-

'Johnſon ſhall from time to time be committed, 'in purſuance of this Act, by Warrant under the 'Hand and Seal of any Secretary of State of his 'Majeſty, his Heirs or Succeſſors: Which War-'rant or Warrants any Secretary of State for the 'time being, is hereby authorized and impow-'ered to make; and that the ſaid George Kelly 'alias Johnſon ſhall forfeit to his Majeſty, all 'his Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Goods 'and Chattels whatſoever.

'And for the more ſure detaining the ſaid 'George Kelly alias Johnſon in ſafe Cuſtody, be it 'further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That 'if the ſaid George Kelly alias Johnſon ſhall break 'the Goal or Priſon to which he ſhall be ſo 'committed, or ſhall eſcape out of the Cuſtody 'of the Perſon in whoſe Cuſtody he ſhall be by 'virtue of ſuch Commitment, that then the ſaid 'George Kelly alias Johnſon, and all and every Per-'ſon and Perſons whatſoever, who ſhall be aiding 'or aſſiſting the ſaid George Kelly alias Johnſon in 'breaking ſuch Goal or Priſon, or in making 'ſuch Eſcape, as aforeſaid, or who ſhall by Force 'take or reſcue the ſaid George Kelly alias John-'ſon out of ſuch Cuſtody, Goal, or Priſon, du-'ring the Continuance of his Impriſonment by 'virtue of this Act, being thereof lawfully con-'victed, ſhall be judged guilty of Felony, and 'ſhall ſuffer Death as in Caſe of Felony, without 'Benefit of Clergy.'

March 22. The Bill to inflict Pains and Penalties on Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was brought into the Houſe of Commons, to which the Biſhop making no Defenſe, it paſs'd that Houſe April the 9th, and was ſent up to the Lords, where the Biſhop made his Defenſe by Counſel, who were Sir Conſtantine Phipps, and Mr. Wynne. Sir Conſtantine Phipps ſpake as follows:

My Lords,

BY the Appointment of this Honourable Houſe I have the Honour to attend your Lordſhips, as Counſel for the Reverend Prelate, the unfortunate Priſoner at the Bar: And perſuade myſelf it will not be difficult to defend his Lordſhip from the heavy Pains and Penalties of this Bill; ſince the Counſel for it confeſs that it is ſupported only by circumſtantial Evidence.

Bills paſſing into Laws for taking away Mens Liberties and Eſtates by Circumſtances only, are new. Convictions by Circumſtances were never heard of in Ages paſt; and I hope will never be known in this, or any which is to come: And tho one of the Gentlemen ſaid, that Circumſtantial Evidence is ſufficient at This Time of Day; I hope, the Law is the ſame at This Time of Day, as ever; and that the Lives and Fortunes of Engliſh Subjects will be as well protected and defended by your Lordſhips, as they were by your Predeceſſors.

The Securities which the Laws have provided for our Liberties and Eſtates, and the Happineſs that we cannot be depriv'd of them but by full and legal Proof, are Advantages which were obtain'd at great expence of Blood and Treaſure, by your Lordſhips Noble Anceſtors: And we doubt not but You will tranſmit them to Poſterity, as entire as they have been continued down to your Lordſhips.

The Law is the Rule of Mens Actions; and Perſons accuſed as Criminals for Facts committed by them, ought to be tried by the Laws that were in Force at the Time of the Facts committed, ſecundum Allegata & Probata. But Laws made ex poſt Facto, to puniſh Men for Facts which were not Offences when they were committed, render all things that are dear to Engliſhmen precarious; and for that Reaſon have been as often condemn'd, as they have been made.

The Charge againſt the Biſhop and Mr. Kelly are ſo interwoven, that I beg you will excuſe me, if, in my Vindication of him, I urge any thing, which I offer'd in behalf of Mr. Kelly, when I had the Honour to attend Your Lordſhips as his Counſel: But I ſhall take care to repeat no more than is neceſſary.

My Lords,

I am very far from denying, or conteſting, the Power of Parliaments as to Bills of Attainder; but I hope I may have Leave to obſerve, that ſuch a Power hath been very rarely exerted, unleſs upon extraordinary Occaſions, and in Caſes of Neceſſity. I hope too I may be permitted to ſhew, that the Caſe of my Lord Biſhop is not within either of thoſe Reaſons.

He never withdrew himſelf out of the Kingdom; never fled from Juſtice, but was always amenable and forth-coming, ready to be try'd according the uſual and ordinary Methods of Juſtice. And the Attainders of Mortimer, and the Earl of Arundel, in Edward III's Time, of Sir Thomas Haxey in Richard II's Time, and others afterwards, were revers'd, becauſe the Perſons accuſed were forth-coming, and might have been brought to a Trial according to the uſual Courſe of Juſtice. Wherefore, I hope the ſame Reaſons which prevail'd with thoſe Parliaments to reverſe thoſe Attainders, will have Weight enough with your Lordſhips to prevent this Bill's paſſing into a Law.

The Parliament, at the Reſtoration, did not think fit to interpoſe their Legiſlative Authority even in the Caſe of the Regicides; but left ſuch of them, as were alive, and forth-coming, to the ordinary Methods of Juſtice, and gave them a fair Trial for their Lives and Eſtates. The only remarkable Bill of Attainder, which hath been in ſome Ages (except of ſuch as were in actual Rebellion, or fled from Juſtice) was that of Sir John Fenwick. I own, I mention'd this Caſe on behalf of Mr. Kelly; and it being a Caſe ſo material for my Lord Biſhop's Defenſe, I cannot in Juſtice to his Lordſhip omit making ſome Obſervations upon it: From which it will appear, that the Reaſons given for paſſing that Bill are the ſtrongeſt Arguments in the World againſt this.

The Preamble of Sir John Fenwick's Attainder ſhew'd the Neceſſity of it: For the Preamble ſets forth,——That Sir John Fenwick was upon the Oaths of George Porter, and Cardel Goodman, indicted of High-Treaſon: That he obtain'd his Majeſty's Favour to have his Trial delay'd from time to time, upon his repeated Promiſes of making an ingenuous and full Confeſſion: That ſeveral times were appointed for his Trial; at one of which he had been actually try'd, had it not been for the Expectation of the Discoveries so often promised: That since the times appointed for his Trial, Cardel Goodman, one of the Witnesses, was withdrawn, so that he could not be had to give Evidence. And it appear'd upon the Trial, that Porter had been tamper'd with, and had 300*l.* paid him, and 200*l.* more promis'd him, to go beyond Sea. This made the Presumption very strong, that Goodman was sent away by some of Sir John's Friends. So that there was an Indictment against him; two Witnesses were sworn upon it, and prov'd the Treason; and he promis'd from time to time to make Discoveries.

Hath my Lord Bishop been indicted? Hath there been any Oath made against him? Did he ever impose upon his Majesty or the Ministry, by promising to make any Discovery? Hath he sent away any one that was Witness against him? Since these Circumstances were thought necessary by the Parliament at that Time to induce them to pass that Act; and the present Case is not attended with any one of these Circumstances; this, we humbly conceive, is a Reason, why your Lordships should not pass this Bill.

The greater the Offence is of which any Person is accused, the plainer and clearer the Proof ought to be: And my Lord Coke in his 4th Institute, Page 37. (which I mention'd the other Day) speaking of the Attainder of Cromwell Earl of Essex by Parliament, says; 'The more high and 'absolute the Jurisdiction of the Court is, the 'more just and honourable it ought to be in its 'Proceedings, to give Example of Justice to inferiour 'Courts.'

The Offence charg'd on my Lord Bishop is of the highest Nature; and this Jurisdiction the most high and absolute: Therefore the Proceedings, without doubt, ought to be the most Just and Honourable.

The Punishment inflicted by this Bill, is the greatest that can be, next to Death itself: For what can be worse, than for a Reverend Prelate of such advanced Years, and of so infirm a Body, to be banish'd into another Country, and be forced to seek his Bread in desolate Places?

The Punishment is still much severer to his Lordship, who hath saved nothing to support himself: For his eminent Hospitality, and his extensive Charity, tho they have fitted and prepared him to live in another World, yet have disabled him from subsisting in another Country: There he will himself want that Charity, which he so liberally bestow'd upon others; and must beg upon his Crutches, or starve.

As to the Evidence offer'd against his Lordship, I humbly apprehend the Proof would not be sufficient at Law to support an Indictment for the lowest Misdemeanor. And will your Lordships, in your great Wisdom and Justice, convict a Lord of Parliament, a Member of your own Body, and subject him to such severe Punishment, upon Evidence that at Law would not be sufficient to convict the meanest Subject of the most minute Trespass?

This, I humbly apprehend, will appear to be the Case, when the Charge against my Lord Bishop, and the Evidence to support it, have been consider'd.

The Bill recites, 'That there was a detestable 'and horrid Conspiracy for invading his Majesty's 'Kingdoms with foreign Forces; for raising a 'Rebellion; for seizing the Tower and City of London; and for laying violent Hands upon his 'Majesty's most sacred Person, and upon his 'Royal Highness.'

As to the seizing the Tower, and the City, and laying violent Hands on the King and Prince; neither of These Crimes is charged upon my Lord Bishop. But the Charge against his Lordship is, that he hath been deeply concern'd in forming, directing, and carrying on, the wicked and detestable Conspiracy, by traiterously consulting and corresponding with divers Persons to raise an Insurrection within this Realm, and to procure foreign Forces to invade this Kingdom; and intending to raise a Rebellion, at the time of the Elections; and when the King went to Hannover; and at the breaking up of the Camp.

As to the first, viz. The sending for foreign Forces; the Bishop is not charged with being privy to any one of the three Memorials: For Neynoe says, he wrote them, and they were dictated to him by Kelly, and Watson, whom he suppos'd to be the Earl Marishal.

As to the Charge of raising a Rebellion at the time of the Elections, 'tis founded on a Letter, sign'd 1378, and directed to Mr. Jackson; which, the Report says, the Committee have good Reason to believe was from the Bishop of Rochester to the Pretender.

The Letter says, 'Notwithstanding this Op-'portunity is elapsed, I agree with you, another 'may offer before the end of the Year.' And the Observation made upon it is, that it was wrote the 20th of April, when most of the Elections were over: So consequently the Opportunity was elapsed.

The Letter of the 20th of April is suppos'd to be wrote to the Pretender at Rome. It supposeth a Letter to the Pretender had been wrote, taking notice that an Opportunity was elapsed at the Elections; and that an Answer had been made to that Letter by the Pretender, that another may offer before the end of the Year: which must be at least two Months before the Date of the Letter; and that was before the Elections were begun.

As for raising a Rebellion, when the King went to Hannover; it is inferr'd from dark Passages in Letters of the 20th of May 1722, N. S. 9th of May O. S. and 10th of May O. S. which are said to have pass'd between Dillon, or his Secretary, and Kelly. And by comparing those Passages, you will observe what Foundation there is for such a Charge.

In the Letter of the 9th of May O. S. 20th N. S. Quitwell, suppos'd to be Dillon's Secretary, writes to Baker, suppos'd to be Kelly, 'That if this 'Post hath not brought an Addition of Three to 'the Six, formerly come from Repney, it is easy 'for Mrs. Jones to see, what is still wanting for 'the Purchase she intends to make.'

In the Letter of the 10th of May O. S. Hatfield, who is suppos'd to be Kelly, writes to Howell, who is suppos'd to be Dillon's Secretary, 'That the 'King intends to set out early next Month; if 'they could then compass Barrels enough, the 'sooner the Wine comes, the better; Jones pro-'mises to be a good Customer.'

From hence, and from what Pancier said Skeen told him, 'twas insinuated, that great foreign Forces were to be brought in for the Pretender; that great Sums of Money were contributed for that Purpose; and that those Sums were under the Management of the Bishop of Rochester; and all this, this, becauſe Quitwell tells Baker, if the laſt Poſt did not bring an Addition of three to ſix, Mrs. Jones may ſee what is ſtill wanting for the Purchaſe ſhe intends to make.

Now ſuppoſe, by Quitwell and Howell are meant Dillon's Secretary; and by Baker and Hatſtead, Kelly is intended: and ſuppoſe, that by the Addition of three to ſix, is meant a Remittance of Money; by Wine are meant Soldiers; and by Mrs. Jones is meant my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter: Yet can what Dillon's Secretary writes to Kelly, or what Kelly writes to Dillon's Secretary, affect the Biſhop of Rocheſter? If it can, it is in the Power of any two Men, one reſiding here, and the other beyond Sea, to take away the Life of any Man breathing. But ſuppoſe we can make it appear, as moſt certainly we ſhall, that by Mrs. Jones cannot be meant the Biſhop; then what becomes of this Part of the Charge?

The next thing to ſupport this Charge, is, a Paſſage in an Extract of a Letter dated the firſt of May, written from Quitwell to James Baker; in which 'tis ſaid, that 'Mrs. Jones cannot take a 'better Time to have himſelf fitted with an eaſy 'Saddle, &c.' If an Extract of a Letter can be of any Weight, and the Conſtruction put upon it is to be allow'd; then the Biſhop is turn'd General, or at leaſt a Colonel. For by Neynoe's Information and Plunket's Cypher, Saddlers, and Saddles, are Iriſh Soldiers, and Regiments: ſo the Biſhop is repreſented as undertaking to raiſe a Regiment of Iriſh Soldiers, and to mount on Horſeback himſelf to command them.

As to the third thing charged, which was to raiſe a Rebellion at the Breaking up of the Camp; there is no Pretence of Evidence. So that, upon the whole, there does not appear to be any Pretence for that Part of the Preamble to the Bill, which chargeth the Biſhop with having been deeply concern'd in forming, directing, and carrying on the Conſpiracy.

The next thing charged againſt his Lordſhip, is, that he was concern'd in a Correſpondence Abroad, and ſome Tranſactions at Home, for bringing in the Pretender.

Now as to this, I would obſerve, that there is not one Witneſs againſt his Lordſhip of any criminal Act; that tho all his Papers have been ſeiz'd, yet there appears not any Letter, or Paper, under his Hand, of a criminal Nature; nor any Letter prov'd to be written or receiv'd by him, which is criminal: Neither is there any Charge of any Meeting or Conſultation with any Perſons for carrying on this Conſpiracy. Indeed he is mention'd as a Member of a Club, call'd the Burford-Club, of which the Earl of Orrery was ſaid to be Chairman; which Club (as I apprehend) was never heard of till Layer's Trial. This Accuſation I know to be falſe; and never met with any one that believed it: Therefore ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with any farther Obſervations upon it, than juſt to take notice, that tho he who made the Liſt hath join'd me with Perſons of great Quality and Honour; yet I preſume to ſay, that my Profeſſion in the Law, as well as my Religion, has given me ſuch a Senſe of my Duty, that no Perſons whatſoever are great enough to draw me into a Plot againſt his Majeſty and the Government.

I beg leave to obſerve that this Charge is founded, partly upon the Hearſay of Pancier and Neynoe, and partly upon the three Letters dated the 20th of April, 1722.

As to the Hearſay-Evidence; Pancier depoſeth, that Skeen told him, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter and Lord North and Grey had the principal Direction of the Conſpiracy; that 200000 l. had been raiſed by Contribution, and was put into the Management of the Biſhop; and that it was call'd the Military Cheſt. Now can this be Evidence in an Indictment, or Action, for the moſt minute Treſpaſs, or in any Caſe? Can it be imagin'd, that ſo much Money could be raiſed among the Jacobites? or that ſuch a Sum could be raiſed, and not one Contributor diſcover'd? Can it be imagin'd, that ſuch a Sum ſhould be entruſted with one Man? Or that my Lord Biſhop would be that Man, who would have the Care and Trouble, and run the Hazard, of ſuch a Sum? To which it may be added, that Skeen, the only Perſon living, who by any Perſon living is ſaid to have ſaid this, is now in Cuſtody, ready to be examin'd upon Oath, and denies every Word of it.

As to Neynoe's Examinations, he ſpeaks only what Kelly told him; and can what Kelly told him affect the Biſhop? Beſides, none of his Examinations are upon Oath, or ſo much as ſign'd by him; (whereas the Examination of Goodman, that was given in Evidence againſt Sir John Fenwick, was upon Oath:) all of them appear to be taken after he was in Cuſtody, under great Apprehenſions and Terrors; nay, it appears that one of them was taken the Day before he drown'd himſelf: And moreover, that only one of them was read, which was extracted out of three Examinations, mark'd A, B, C, and ſaid to contain the Subſtance. We deſire all the Three Examinations may be produced, and read; and then it will appear, whether that one contains the whole Subſtance; or whether there be not ſome Things very material omitted: And it will likewiſe appear, that there are ſuch Inconſiſtencies in them, as will take off their Credit. For in one Place he ſays, he ſaw Kelly make uſe of the Cyphers; and that Kelly own'd with great Freedom they were for carrying on a Correſpondence with the Pretender and his Agents: and yet in another Place he ſays, That Kelly never open'd himſelf as to the Plot now on foot; that indeed he had ſeen ſeveral Letters from Paris and other Places, but they contain'd nothing material. So that it muſt be ſuppoſed, either that there was no Treaſonable Correſpondence carry'd on by Kelly; or that Neynoe was not ſo great a Confident of Kelly's as he pretended.

Neynoe ſays, he drew three Memorials; and the laſt was in December 1721, to the Regent for five Thouſand Men; that all the Memorials were drawn by the Order of, and dictated by, one Henry Watſon, whom he did not know, but took to be the late Earl Mariſhal; that Henry Watſon, whom he took to be Earl Mariſhal, was in England all laſt Spring, and that he lay with him ſeveral Nights.

'Tis very extraordinary, that the Earl Mariſhal ſhould truſt a mere Stranger to draw three Memorials, and one of them for five Thouſand Men to invade the Kingdom; and that afterwards he ſhould lie with him ſeveral Nights, and not know who he was.

In one of his Examinations he ſays, the Heads of the Memorials were given him by Kelly and Watſon; in another he ſays, they were all drawn by Watſon: And 'tis obſervable, that the rough Draught, or a Copy of any one of them, is not produc'd; which certainly, he that intended to turn Evidence, and ſo ſoon after became an Informer, would have done, if there had been any ſuch.

The Committee are pleas'd in their Report, Pag. 38. to take notice, that Neynoe ſaid, Kelly told him, that a Lord of the Council gave the Biſhop Notice of his being to be taken up, ſome Days before it happen'd; and are pleas'd likewiſe to ſay, that he afterwards confeſſed, (as they were informed) that in that, and other his Examinations, he endeavour'd all he could to create Diffidence and Suſpicions among his Majeſty's Servants. And what Credit can be given, after this, to one, who had ſo little Regard to Truth, as to ſay any thing, tho never ſo falſe; to ſo wicked a Purpoſe, as to create a Miſunderſtanding among his Majeſty's Servants? eſpecially if one conſiders how probable it is, that the Remorſe he had upon his Conſcience, occaſion'd by the Evidence he had given, and his Dread of the Shame of being forc'd, when he came upon his Oath, to deny what he had ſaid when he was not upon his Oath, were the Reaſons of his making away with himſelf. And we ſhall call ſome Witneſſes, who will give a full Account of him.

We ſhall call one, who but lately depos'd before your Lordſhips, that Neynoe told him, he had ſaid ſeveral things to a great Man, which he neither would nor could ſwear without being perjur'd.

I moſt humbly beg your Lordſhips Pardon, for being ſo particular in a Matter which I had ſo lately an Occaſion to mention: But this is the Hinge upon which the Weight of the whole Charge againſt the Biſhop turns, and therefore I doubt not but your Lordſhips will excuſe me.

The next Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop ariſeth from three Letters, dated the 20th of April, 1722. One ſigned J. Jones, innuendo the Biſhop; to Chivers, innuendo Dillon: The ſecond ſigned Illington, innuendo the Biſhop; to Muſgrave, innuendo Lord Marr: The third to Jackſon, innuendo the Pretender; and ſigned 1378, innuendo the Biſhop. Theſe Letters are ſaid to be wrote by Kelly, and dictated by the Biſhop.

Now as to theſe Letters, I beg leave to obſerve there is nothing Criminal appears to be in any one of them. But then 'tis objected, that two of the Perſons are attainted of Treaſon, and are Agents of the Pretender; and 'tis High-Treaſon to write to them: And the third is the Pretender himſelf.

Suppoſing Chivers were Dillon, and Muſgrave were Marr; yet writing to them in private Matters, not criminal in themſelves, nor relating to the Pretender, is not Treaſon.

But how comes the Lord Marr to be an Agent for the Pretender? He quitted the Pretender's Service many Years before; and from the Time of quitting his Service, till after the Date of thoſe Letters, had a Penſion from his preſent Majeſty. I believe the Counſel for the Bill, and all Mankind, will be at a Loſs to tell by what Law writing to one, who hath quitted the Pretender's Service ſo many Years, and who hath ſubſiſted ever ſince by a Penſion from his Majeſty, can be an Offence.

Indeed, if it be proved that Jackſon is the Pretender, I admit Writing to him is Treaſon: But if it be proved (as it will beyond all Diſpute) that by Jackſon neither is nor can be meant the Pretender; and that my Lord Biſhop neither did nor could write or dictate any one of thoſe Letters; then the whole Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop, founded upon thoſe Letters, falls to the Ground.

The next thing I would obſerve, as to thoſe Letters, is from the Report, Page 42. where the Committee are pleas'd to obſerve, that the Letter to Chivers is, great Part of it, out of Cypher; which ſeems to allow that the other Part was in Cypher. Therefore it was very neceſſary, I think, to have printed the Letters in the Cyphers and Characters, in which they were written; and alſo as they are decypher'd: Then the Perſons accus'd would have had an Opportunity of employing Men skill'd that way, to ſee if they were rightly decypher'd. This was done in Coleman's Caſe.

The French Papers, in the Appendix, are printed firſt in that Language, and then as they are tranſlated; which was not ſo neceſſary as Printing the Letters in Cypher in this Caſe: Becauſe almoſt every one underſtands French enough to tell, at firſt Sight, whether a French Letter be rightly tranſlated; but 'tis impoſſible for a Man of the greateſt Skill in the Art of decyphering, to tell, upon a ſudden at the Bar, whether a Letter be rightly decypher'd: So that all a Man hath in the World, is to depend upon the Skill and Integrity of the Decypherers. Nor are they infallible; for the Witneſſes who decypher'd the Letters, admit, that there are ſome Words in them which they could not decypher; and thoſe Words may give a Turn to the whole Senſe of the Letters. Nay, Mr. Willes ſaid, that one of the Numbers he could not decypher ſtood for two Words: He was likewiſe pleas'd to ſay, it was impoſſible that the Number he could not decypher could make an Alteration in the Senſe; which is very extraordinary for a Man to ſwear: But if one Word could not make an Alteration in the Senſe, ſurely two might.

The writing theſe Letters is charged upon Kelly; which cannot affect my Lord Biſhop, unleſs they were dictated by him, or written by his Direction, or Privity; of which there is no Pretence of Proof. And therefore I ſhall next offer to your Lordſhips ſome Obſervations upon the Arguments and Circumſtances alledged to ſupport this Charge.

It is obſerved in the Report, that the Perſon who wrote theſe Letters, ſpeaks of himſelf as being in ill Health, in great Pain, under ſome ſad and melancholy Circumſtances, which he expects will ſoon blow over; and from thence 'tis inferr'd it muſt be the Biſhop, becauſe his Wife was then ill, and died in ſix Days after; and that he himſelf was at that time afflicted with the Gout. One of the Gentlemen, who was Counſel for the Bill, ſaid, Theſe were Circumſtances, that did not happen to any two Men in the World at that time: And give me leave to inſtance one other Circumſtance, which, I believe, did not happen to any one Man in the World; which is, writing a Letter of Politicks, when his Wife lay a Dying.

Why theſe Circumſtances muſt neceſſarily intend the Biſhop, more than any other Perſon that was ſick, and under Misfortunes, I cannot apprehend. That ill Health muſt neceſſarily imply the Gout; and that it muſt be intended, that no Man had the Gout the 20th of April, but the Biſhop; that melancholy Circumſtances neceſſarily imply a Man's Wife being ſick or dying; and that no Man had a Wife ſick or dying, but the Biſhop; is, in my humble Apprehenſion, a new way of arguing.

Another way of proving theſe Letters to be wrote by the Biſhop, is by the Names and Figures ſubſcribed. For one Letter is ſubſcribed, T. Jones, and another Letter is ſubſcrib'd, T. Illington: And the Report obſerves, that wherever Jones and Illington are named, the Biſhop is to be underſtood. But why the Biſhop is to be underſtood by thoſe Names, non conſtat; nor is there any Preſumption or Evidence. And if we ſhew (as we infallibly ſhall) that by thoſe Names the Biſhop could not be meant, and that he could not write, or dictate thoſe Letters; then the Inferences againſt the Biſhop from thoſe Letters, and from the ſubſequent Correſpondence under thoſe Names, become of no Force or Weight.

A Third Letter is ſubſcrib'd, 1378; which the Decypherers ſay denotes a Perſon, whoſe proper Name begins with an R. And the Report is pleas'd to infer, that it muſt be the Biſhop of Rocheſter. Now why 1378 denotes a Perſon, whoſe Name begins with an R, the Decypherers only know: And we are as much at a Loſs to know, why by a Name beginning with R, muſt be intended the Biſhop of Rocheſter. If that Number appear'd to denote a Name beginning with R, and if no Name began with that Letter but the Biſhop of Rocheſter's; there would then, I confeſs, be ſome Weight in the Obſervation.

That Jones and Illington are not the ſame Perſon, appears from the Letter of the 10th of May, from Hatfield to Howel; where, within the Compaſs of two Lines, they are diſtinguiſhed. For in one Line he ſaith, Jones promiſeth to be a good Cuſtomer; and in the next Line but one he ſaith, Illington is gone into the Country; which plainly ſhews them to be diſtinct Perſons. Beſides, in the Papers mention'd concerning the Duke of Norfolk, his Grace is ſeveral times denoted by the Name of Jones: In Layer's Liſt, Sir William Ellis is deſcrib'd by that Name; and in Plunket's Liſt, Jones ſtands for the Germans.

The Evidence to prove Jones and Illington to denote the Biſhop, and the Intimacy between the Biſhop and Kelly, is the Preſent of a Dog called Harlequin.

The Evidence ſtands thus. ——Rep. 40. E. 35. ‘ Hatfield, who is ſuppoſed to be Kelly, in his ‘ Letter of the 30th of April to Howel, who is ‘ ſuppoſed to be Dillon's Secretary, writes thus. ‘ Mrs. Jones died laſt Week; pray preſent my ‘ Reſpects to Mr. Muſgrave (meaning Marr) ‘ and let him know, I receiv'd the Preſent ſent ‘ by the young Lady; that he had a Leg broken ‘ in the Journey: However I will take all the ‘ Care imaginable of him; and inform Mr. Jones ‘ of it, to whom I know any thing from that ‘ Quarter will be very acceptable.’

Hatfield, in his Letter to Muſgrave of the 7th of May 1722, ſays; ‘ Mrs. Illington is in great ‘ Tribulation for poor Harlequin: However his ‘ Obligations to the Lady are as great, as if he ‘ had come ſafe.’

From theſe Letters 'tis inferr'd, that by Jones and Illington the Biſhop is meant; and that a young Lady ſent the Dog to Kelly as a Preſent for the Biſhop: And 'tis urged, that Mrs. Barnes in her Examination of the 23d of May, ſays, The Dog was not deſign'd for her, but for the Biſhop of Rocheſter; That Kelly told her, the Dog was for the Biſhop; and that Kelly promiſed to get the Dog for her from the Biſhop, in caſe it did not recover its Lameneſs.

It is admitted, that Mr. Kelly brought ſuch a Dog from France; that Mrs. Barnes had it; and that its Leg was broken: But that it was deſign'd for the Biſhop, or that the Biſhop ever had, or ſaw it, there is no Pretence of Proof; and my Lord Biſhop utterly denies it; and Mr. Kelly hath ſolemnly deny'd it to your Lordſhips: And inſtead of its being a Preſent from a young Lady to the Biſhop, Mr. Kelly ſays he bought it of a Surgeon at Paris, to give it to Mrs. Barnes.

There is one Expreſſion in the Letter of the 7th of May, which is remarkable; and, in my humble Opinion, enervates and deſtroys the Force of all thoſe Letters relating to the Dog: For it was written four or five Days after the Biſhop's Lady was bury'd; and it ſays, ‘ Mrs. Illing- ‘ ton is in great Tribulation for poor Harlequin.’ Mr. Kelly was ſuppos'd to write that Letter, and was ſuppoſed to be a Friend of the Biſhop's; and could a Friend, could any Man of Common Senſe, be guilty of ſuch a fooliſh and ridiculous Expreſſion? Could any Man ſay of one of my Lord Biſhop's Character, who was in the utmoſt Affliction for his Lady, that he was in great Tribulation for the breaking of a Dog's Leg? 'Tis evident, he who wrote that Letter, did not know the Biſhop's melancholy Circumſtances: 'Tis likewiſe well known, that the Biſhop never loved a Dog, nor ever had one.

The next Method of proving Letters upon the Biſhop, is by Similitude and Compariſon of Hands; not by comparing any Paper written by him with any other Writing; but by producing a Letter ſuppos'd to be written by Mr. Kelly in Auguſt, and by proving that the three Letters written in April, were open'd and copy'd, and ſent forward; and that thoſe Letters were of the ſame Hand with that produced.

It was to be hoped, that, ſince Mr. Sidney's Caſe, the Evidence by Similitude of Hands in criminal Proſecutions would never have been offer'd: He was convicted upon ſuch Evidence, and for that Reaſon his Attainder was revers'd in Parliament. And therefore, I humbly hope your Lordſhips will not in your Legiſlative Capacity admit that to be Evidence in this Caſe, which in the ſame Capacity you were pleas'd to condemn in Mr. Sidney's.

In 1695, Crosby was indicted for writing treaſonable Letters; and the Evidence was Similitude of Hands: which Evidence was diſallow'd by the Chief Juſtice Holt, and Crosby was acquitted.

In Francia's Caſe, my Lord Chief Baron Bury declared Similitude of Hands to be no Evidence: And if it was not admitted in thoſe Caſes, where Papers were produced, and proved to be of their own Hand-writing, and the Papers with which they were charged were produced, and compared with thoſe other Papers; we preſume, your Lordſhips will not allow it in this Caſe, where it is carry'd farther than ever it was attempted before.

The Proof, as to this Point, ſtands thus. ——Three Clerks of the Poſt-Office ſwear, that the 20th of April 1720. theſe three Letters were open'd; that they took Copies of them, and ſeal'd them up again, and ſent them forward; that four Months after, another Letter came to the Office, which was stopp'd: That is produc'd; and they all swear, they believe the three Letters were the same Hand-writing with the Letter produc'd. Now that Men, who never saw a Hand but once, and thro' whose Hands so many Letters pass in a Month, should be able to swear, that three Letters, which were sent in April 1720, were of the same Hand-writing with a Letter which was stopp'd four Months after, is strange and incredible.

I beg leave farther to observe, that the Clerks of the Post-Office own they did not compare the Copies of the three Letters with the Originals. And was ever a Copy allow'd to be read, unless the Person who produced it swore that he compar'd it with the Original, and that 'twas a true Copy?

It is remarkable, that Clark, one of the Post-Office, said, It was impossible to write a Hand, that had any Resemblance to those Letters; but yet, he said, the Figures bore a Similitude to the Hand-writing: So that one Hand cannot be like another; but Figures may be like a Hand-writing.

It is also observable, that the Letter produced is proved to be Kelly's Hand-writing, only by Hutchins the Messenger; who says he had him in his Custody a Week, and saw him write several Letters; and by Malone, who proves Mr. Kelly's Hand by a Superscription in French, and yet owns he cannot read French: Whereas, we shall prove by three positive Witnesses, that this is not his Hand. Besides, they might have produced the Letter which he wrote to my Lord Townshend, which is admitted to be his Hand.

We shall likewise prove by several Witnesses, That at the time when the three Letters are said to be written, the Bishop was at Bromley, and so lame with the Gout, that he could not stir Hand or Foot; that his Lady was dying; that no Person was admitted to him, but two or three Servants; and that Mr. Kelly was not at Bromley at that time, nor for three or four Months before, or after. And therefore 'tis impossible those Letters should be written, or dictated, by the Bishop.

The Evidence of Wood the Coachman, confirms this. For he swore, that he never saw Mr. Kelly, till he was carry'd to see him in the Tower; and that Kelly was not at Bromley; that no Stranger was at Bromley from the 12th of April till the 26th, when the Bishop's Lady died; and that he must have known it, if there had; that the Bishop never sent the Coach for Kelly, or any other Person in Berry-street, or any Place near Pall-Mall. So that by this, the Examinations of Elizabeth Levet and Neynoe are quite destroyed.

But 'tis objected, that a Man might put his Horse at an Inn, and come to see the Bishop, and Wood not know it. Can it be imagined, that Kelly, who is supposed to be so particular a Friend of the Bishop's, would leave his Horse at an Inn? But we shall examine other Witnesses to this.

It was objected, that on the 10th of June the Bells rang, and the Servants had Roses. But it appears, most of them were red Roses: And if it should be criminal to ring the Bells on the 10th of June, we shall shew that the Bishop knew nothing of the Ringing of the Bells, or of the Roses.

In the Report, Page 50. the Committee of the Commons are pleased to take Notice; "That "on the 11th of June, Kelly sends his Friends at "Paris an Account of his late Misfortunes; "and after complaining of the Neglect in not "bailing him out sooner, says, your Old "Friend Rig, indeed, offer'd all that could be "expected from the poor Man," and infer, "That by Rig is meant the Bishop of Ro-"chester."

Can it be imagined, that Kelly would call the Bishop Gerrard's old Friend; who, 'tis not pretended, ever knew him, or saw him? And if poor Man be taken by way of Contempt; can it be imagined that Mr. Kelly, a Gentleman of that good Sense, and Breeding, would use such an Expression of my Lord Bishop? If these Words are taken in the literal Sense, 'tis as improbable; for the Bishop was not taken for a poor Man: Besides, how could he, who had 200,000 l. Contribution-Money, and had the Command of the Military Chest, be said to be poor? And I dare say, there is nobody but believes, that if my Lord Bishop would have intermeddled on Mr. Kelly's behalf, he had Interest enough to procure whatever Bail Kelly wanted: And therefore I apprehend, that Rig cannot be intended to be the Bishop.

Indeed, no Credit can given to Cant-Names; for the same Names are us'd for several Persons: As Laws in Plunket's Cypher stands for Marr; and in the Cypher found on Dennis Kelly, it signifies Mr. Cæsar. Hawksby in Plunket's Cypher, stands for King George: And in the Report 62, there are Compliments from the Pretender and his Spouse to Hawksby; which, I presume, they did not mean for his Majesty. Jones is used many times for the Duke of Norfolk. It is used for Sir William Ellis; and it is also used for the Germans; as I before observ'd.

That Jackson cannot mean the Pretender, is plain. App. E. 30. A Postscript in the Letter from Quitwell to Vernon says, "Mr. Chivers ad-"vises, that the Money you mention, in Clinton's "Hands, should be equally divided between "Medley (meaning the late Duke of Ormond) and "Jackson, meaning the Pretender." Now would any one devoted to the Pretender's Interest, put Ormond before the Pretender? Jackson is put for the Pretender only in Plunket's List; and yet 'tis observable, that Plunket in all his Correspondence never calls him Jackson, but Joseph, or Jephson: And in the voluminous Correspondence charged on Kelly, he is not once called Jackson; but the usual Names are Jephson and Joseph.

As for the Letter to Dubois, it seem'd at first to be a Letter written from France TO the Bishop, by the Name of Dubois; and after a Month's time they find it to be a Letter written BY the Bishop. If so; Writing a Letter, and not sending it, can be no Offence. But how comes the Bishop to keep that Letter seal'd, which he had written seven Months before? The Writer of that Letter owns, he had receiv'd one from Dubois two Months before, by Mr. Johnson; which was the Name Kelly went by: And 'tis very strange, that the Bishop should be so weak, as to mention the Name of the very Person, who, 'tis said, used to write his Letters, and by whom he was suppos'd to carry on his Correspondence. If it be presum'd that He wrote this Letter; it must also be presum'd, he was out of his Senses when he did it.

That

That Letter was not ſigned, and was dated the 16th of Dec. but no Year; tho they have put the Year 1721 to it. For a Month together they never thought the Letter to Dubois to be the Biſhop's Hand; tho they had ſeveral of his Letters. As to the Obſervation made by one of the Gentlemen, that the Letter to Dubois was ſealed by a particular Seal, and not the Seal with which he ſeal'd ſuch Letters, as He intended all the World ſhould ſee; that Gentleman would do well to let us know, what Letters were written by the Biſhop, which he intended all the World ſhould ſee.

That ſo many Letters were written before 1712, and ſo few ſince; was occaſioned by his Lordſhip's great Correſpondence about Matters of Learning at that Time, and his being from that Time often afflicted with the Gout, ſo that he could not write many Letters, and conſequently receiv'd but few. Beſides, He was made Biſhop in 1713, and Dean of Weſtminſter; ſo had not Time to write much himſelf, but kept a Secretary.

As the Matters before mention'd to be charg'd againſt my Lord Biſhop, aroſe from Letters ſuppoſed to be written by him; I ſhall next conſider the Charge againſt Him, which ariſes from Letters ſuppoſed to be written to Him.

There are Two Letters mention'd in the Report as written to Him; one of the 11th by Motfield, interpreted to be Lord Marr, wrote to Illington; the other of the 25th of July from Digby, interpreted Dillon, to Mrs. Weſton.

Now I would obſerve, That it is not pretended, that either of thoſe Letters was ever receiv'd by the Biſhop; ſo conſequently muſt be intercepted: Therefore it would have been proper, to have produced the Letters, and to have proved the Hands.

As to the Letter from Motfield, 'tis only a Compliment of Condolence: And 'tis inferr'd that it muſt be the Biſhop, becauſe his Lady died a little before. The Letter ſays, "We muſt ſubmit "with Reſignation, to what the juſt and great "God thinks fit to order; but you know ſuch "Things ſo much better than I do, that I will "not trouble you with ſaying any more upon it." From theſe laſt Words it is infer'd, That this Letter was written to a Clergyman, and conſequently the Biſhop.

What Weight this way of Reaſoning will have with your Lordſhips in criminal Proſecutions, is humbly ſubmitted: But it muſt be obſerv'd, That this Letter is ſaid to be an Anſwer to the Letter, ſaid to be written the 20th of April to Muſgrave. And as we have ſhew'd, that it was impoſſible the Biſhop ſhould write or dictate either of the Letters of the 20th of April, the Anſwer muſt fall with the Letter. But from hence the Obſervation is natural, and undeniably true; that if Jones, who wrote the Letter to Muſgrave of the 20th of April, could not be the Biſhop; and Illington, to whom Motfield wrote, be the ſame as Jones; then neither Jones nor Illington can denote the Biſhop.

As to the Letter from Digby to Mrs. Weſton, who is interpreted the Biſhop; it was written the 25th of July, N. S. wherein Digby ſays, "I cannot on any reaſonable Grounds complain "of your Silence, becauſe I am inform'd of the "Situation of your Health, and the Concern "your Family are in, by Bankrupts, and Law-"Suits."

It muſt be obſerv'd, that on the 7th of July O. S. G. W. in his Letter to Digby ſays, "I "ſaw Mrs. Weſton yeſterday; ſhe never was "better in her Life than now." It is ſtrange, that Digby the Week following ſhould take Notice of the ill Situation of Mrs. Weſton's Health. 'Tis plain both theſe Letters can't be Genuine, and therefore no Credit can be given to ſuch a Correſpondence.

One Way of fixing the intercepted Correſpondence, and the Cant-Names mentioned therein, upon the Biſhop, is, by the Coincidence of Times, and other Circumſtances; as of his Lordſhip being in Town, and out of Town: And there are ſeveral Miſtakes in them. For in Hatfield's Letter to Muſgrave of the 7th of May, he ſays, Mr. Jones is come to Town only for a Day: If That be to be underſtood of the Biſhop, it is not true; for he came to Town the 5th of May, and did not go out of Town till the 10th.

In the Letter from I. H. to Dixwell, of the 18th of June, 'tis ſaid, 'Mr. H. Rig, and Rep. 'are I hear in the Country.' And 'tis ſaid by Rig is meant the Biſhop: Which cannot be, for the Biſhop was then in Town. So in a Letter to Maiſonneuve, of the 19th of July, 'tis ſaid, 'Rig 'is in the Country." Whereas the Biſhop was then in Town. This is the more obſervable; becauſe the Report, taking notice of the Biſhop's being ill of the Gout, ſays, Page 41. 'This Par-'ticularity, as alſo ſeveral others, which will be 'taken notice of as to the Biſhop's being in Town, 'or in the Country, at the reſpective Times men-'tion'd in the intercepted Letters, have been care-'fully inquir'd into.' And in the next Paragraph, the Report, taking notice of the Letter to Muſgrave of the 7th of May, which ſays Mrs. Jones is come to Town, ſays, 'This agrees with the In-'quiry.' And yet it will plainly appear, that there are ſuch Miſtakes, as to thoſe Times, as I have before mention'd.

I hope I may have leave to obſerve, that theſe Miſtakes eſcaped the Obſervation of the Honourable Committee of the Houſe of Commons; and that tho the Letter of the 7th of May, in the Appendix, ſays, 'Mrs. Jones is come to Town 'only for a Day;' yet in the Report, the Words only for a Day are left out.

All the Circumſtances before mention'd are made uſe of to fix the Names of Jones and Illington upon my Lord Biſhop; and therefore the next Paragraph but one in the Report is very obſervable: Which is this.

'Theſe ſeveral Circumſtances, joined to Ney-'noe's Declaration, that Kelly had told him, the 'Biſhop went ſometimes by the Name of Jones, 'and that Carte had told him, the Biſhop went 'by the Name of Illington, ſhew, that where-'ever Jones and Illington are named in Kelly's 'Correſpondence, the Biſhop of Rocheſter is to 'be underſtood by thoſe Names.'

So that the whole Proof of the Correſpondence, charged to be carry'd on by my Lord Biſhop under the Names of Jones and Illington, is reſolv'd into this; that Neynoe DECLARED that Kelly and Carte TOLD HIM the Biſhop went by thoſe Names.

I beſeech your Lordſhips, Is this Proof? Is this Evidence ſufficient to deprive a Reverend Prelate of all his Eccleſiaſtical Preferments? And to ſend him into perpetual Baniſhment? Do the Lives and Liberties of Engliſhmen ſtand upon ſo weak a Foundation? If they do, I preſume to ſay they are very precarious, and the moſt innocent Man alive cannot ſay he is ſafe.

I beg your Lordſhips Indulgence to obſerve farther, that this heavy Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop is ſupported only by Innuendos: And with what an Eye Innuendos have been always look'd upon in criminal Caſes, many Inſtances may be given.

I ſhall trouble your Lordſhips but with one; which is full to this Purpoſe, and of the greateſt Authority: I mean the Reſolution of your Lordſhips in the Caſe of Sir Samuel Barnardiſton in 1683. He was proſecuted for writing Letters, alledged to be ſeditious, and highly reflecting on the Government, and the Publick Juſtice of the Nation; and was found guilty, and fined 10000 l. He brought a Writ of Error in this moſt Honourable Houſe, and your Lordſhips were pleas'd to reverſe that Judgment; for that the Information being grounded on Letters, which in themſelves were not criminal, but made ſo by Innuendos; your Lordſhips were pleaſed to declare, that Innuendos and forced Conſtructions ought not to be allow'd; for all Accuſations ſhould be plain, and the Crimes aſcertain'd.

Now if it can be ſuppos'd, without any Evidence, that my Lord Biſhop wrote the Letters charged to be written by him; even then this Caſe is the ſame with Sir Samuel Barnardiſton's. For the Letters are not criminal in themſelves; nor can be made ſo but by Innuendos, and ſtrain'd, forc'd Conſtructions. Nay, I preſume to ſay, there is not one Part of the Charge but ſubſiſts purely by Innuendos, and ſtrain'd Conſtructions.

I will trouble your Lordſhips with inſtancing only one Letter; which is that of the 20th of April, written to Mr. Jackſon, and ſubſcribed 1378. With the Innuendos it is thus: 1378, Innuendo a Perſon whoſe proper Name begins with an R, Innuendo the Biſhop of Rocheſter, did write to Mr. Jackſon, Innuendo the Pretender; that, notwithſtanding this Opportunity, Innuendo an Opportunity of raiſing a Rebellion in England at the Time of Elections of Members of Parliament, had elapſed; I, Innuendo the Biſhop, agree with you, Innuendo the Pretender, that another, Innuendo another Opportunity of raiſing a Rebellion in England, may offer before the end of the Year, Innuendo at the breaking up of the Camp. Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to obſerve what a Superfetation of Innuendos (if I may ſo ſay) there muſt be to ſupport this Charge; and without Innuendos no Part of the Charge againſt the Biſhop can be maintain'd: And therefore, I humbly hope that the ſame Reaſons which induced your Lordſhips to reverſe the Judgment againſt Sir Samuel Barnardiſton, will prevail upon you to reject this Bill.

To what I have objected, I imagine it will be anſwered, That your Lordſhips are now acting in your Legiſlative Capacity; and that in your Legiſlative Capacity you are not bound by the Forms of Law: But I humbly ſubmit it, whether you will not think fit to proceed according to the Rules of Law, tho not according to the Forms of it.

Mens Lives, and Properties, are to be try'd and determin'd ſecundum Allegata & Probata; and the Proof in ſuch Caſes muſt be legal Proof. And I apprehend, with great Deference, that when your Lordſhips proceed in your Legiſlative Capacity in other Inſtances, you proceed according to the Rules of Law: As in Bills for enabling Perſons to ſell, or ſettle Eſtates; or for making Rivers navigable. If the Title or Property of any Perſon come in queſtion, your Lordſhips are pleaſed to hold the Parties to ſtrict legal Proof: And why not in Bills of Attainder? Are Bills of Attainder (whereby Mens Lives are forfeited, their Eſtates confiſcated, their Blood corrupted, and their Families undone) of leſs moment than Bills to enable Perſons to ſettle their Eſtates for the benefit of their Families? I humbly apprehend, that your Legiſlative and Judicial Capacities are here ſo united, that they cannot be ſeparated. For a Bill of Attainder is a Condemnation by Parliament; and your Lordſhips always hear and judge whether a Party be Guilty, before you condemn him. Will you then be pleaſed to judge, and determine upon leſs Proof in one Caſe than in another? Can it be conceived that your Lordſhips will not act by the ſame Rule in both your Capacities? or that you will not have an equal Tenderneſs and Regard for the Lives, Liberties, and Eſtates of the Subject in one Capacity, as in the other?

When a Man flies from Juſtice, he gives Judgment againſt himſelf; and when a Perſon accuſed doth by corrupt or indirect Means conceal or convey away the Witneſſes againſt him; then he is the Cauſe, why ſtrict and legal Proof cannot be had: And that may be a Reaſon, why leſs Proof ſhould be admitted. But in Caſes not attended with either of theſe Circumſtances, to ſay that leſs than legal Proof is ſufficient for a Bill of Attainder, is to affirm that PRIVATE OPINION alone, without Proof, is a ſufficient Foundation to paſs a Bill of Attainder. And how harſhly that would ſound in the Ears of Engliſhmen, is humbly ſubmitted to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, By our Law a Judge cannot go according to his own private Opinion; but muſt be govern'd by the Evidence given before him in Court. For the Rule is, Nil refert, quod notum ſit Judici; ſi non notum ſit in Forma Judicii. And if Mens Rights and Liberties were to be determin'd by private Opinion; how precarious would the Lives and Eſtates of Engliſhmen be? The moſt innocent Man could not be ſafe; the wiſeſt Man could not foreſee, where it would end; and England muſt no longer boaſt of the Excellency of her Conſtitution.

It is a Rule, both in Law and Reaſon, that Nemo bis puniri debet pro eodem Delicto: And yet that may happen to be the Biſhop's Caſe. For the Charge in the Bill is general; intending to raiſe a Rebellion, and holding treaſonable Correſpondence in order to bring in foreign Forces: But there is no particular Fact charged upon him. Now if he ſhould be indicted for either of thoſe Species of Treaſon; and particular Overt-Acts of ſuch Treaſon ſhould be alledg'd, as buying Arms, and liſting Men for the Pretender, and the Overt-Acts ſhould be proved by two Witneſſes; he might be condemn'd and executed for it. For he could not plead this Bill in Bar to ſuch Indictment; becauſe the Indictment would not be for the ſame Facts, there being no particular ones charged in the Bill. And yet it may happen (as I ſaid) that my Lord Biſhop may be indicted and try'd for the Treaſon mention'd in this Bill: As in the Caſe of Hampden and Fitzharris, which I lately mention'd. For Mr. Hampden was try'd for meeting and conſulting to raiſe a Rebellion, was fined 40000 l.

40000 l. and was afterwards tried for High-Treaſon for the ſame Fact: And tho he inſiſted on his having been try'd for the ſame Fact, and deſired to plead it; yet the Court would not allow it. And in Fitzharris's Caſe, he was indicted for High-Treaſon, and pleaded an Impeachment; and averr'd, it was for the ſame Fact. But the Plea was overruled: For there being no particular Article, the Averment could not be ſupported; becauſe he could not aver any thing that was out of Record.

I humbly hope your Lordſhips will excuſe me for taking up ſo much of your Time. But the Multifariouſneſs of the Matters of which the Accuſation conſiſts, and the Weight of the Subject, drew me into it. I humbly thank your Lordſhips for your great Indulgence and Patience in hearing me: And if as a Lawyer, thro' my Zeal for my Client's Service, or as an Engliſhman, aſſerting thoſe Laws which I apprehend are the Security of Britiſh Liberties, I have let drop any Expreſſion, which may be thought improper; I moſt humbly beg your Lordſhips Pardon. And if there be a difference between your Legiſlative and Judicial Capacity; I ſubmit it, whether your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to give that Judgment in your Legiſlative Capacity, which the Counſel for the Bill do, in my Apprehenſion, admit you could not give in your Judicial. And therefore, I hope your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to reject this Bill.

Mr. Wynne (his Lordſhip's other Counſel) ſpake next.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

I AM of Counſel for this Reverend Prelate: and however unneceſſary I know Apologies to be before your Lordſhips, who are always ready to hear what the youngeſt and moſt unexperienced Perſon has to offer; yet it becomes me to ſay ſomething for my firſt Appearance at your Lordſhips Bar, in a Matter of the laſt Conſequence; and it was the Deſire of this Reverend Prelate, rather to make his Defenſe by ſuch weak Hands as mine, as if he was perſuaded, that his Cauſe needed not the Aſſiſtance of Art or Experience, in order to move the Paſſions, or to impoſe upon the Reaſon of his Hearers; which he knows to be but an impotent Help to Perſuaſion, in compariſon of Truth and Innocency. He appears before thoſe, who (he hopes) will regard plain Facts and poſitive Law; and Truth, notwithſtanding all the Diſadvantages of an unſkilful Pleader, will, he hopes, at laſt prevail.

For my own part, ſince your Lordſhips have aſſign'd me for his Counſel, I ſhall be under no Apprehenſions of Danger or Diſpleaſure in performing my Duty to him, in humbly offering every thing I think neceſſary for his juſt Defenſe: and I will not doubt, but I ſhall be fully and favourably heard. And tho it is his Lordſhip's Misfortune to be already pre-judg'd in another Place, and to be condemn'd without Doors, by ſome few vulgar miſled Apprehenſions; yet he hopes better Things of you, my Lords: He does not doubt, but that your Lordſhips, who in Matters of leſs Importance proceed with Calmneſs, Juſtice and Prudence, will be careful not to deviate from thoſe Meaſures in a Matter which demands the greateſt Caution and Deliberation: For it is the Caſe, the Reputation, the Liberty, the Fortune, and (I was going to ſay) the Life of a moſt Learned Prelate; becauſe ſome Circumſtances of this Bill are ſo cruel and extreme, that it is little better than if it had affected Life itſelf.

Every one that is a Friend to this Bill, muſt avow, that it is not to be offer'd without an evident and cogent Neceſſity. But, I hope, my Lords, tho the Grounds and Suggeſtions of it were true, and duly proved, yet that there is no ſuch Neceſſity.

In order to diſcover whether there be any ſuch Neceſſity or not, I ſhall conſider the End propoſed by this Bill, and then weigh the Means whereby 'tis hoped to attain that End, and whether this Bill be a Means neceſſary or convenient to attain it.

The End, I hope, is the Security of the Government, and the Execution of Juſtice, and it ought to be purſued by all regular and lawful Means; and therefore, before I ſpeak particularly to the Crimes ſuppoſed in this Bill, or the Proofs which have been offer'd to make them out, I ſhall beg leave to ſay ſomething as to the Manner and Method of this Proceeding. Not that I ſhall preſume to queſtion your Lordſhips Power in ſuch Caſes: But, as on the one hand we muſt admit your Lordſhips may, and have in ſome Caſes exerted your Legiſlative Capacity, in declaring That a Crime which was not ſo before, or by inflicting particular or extraordinary Puniſhment on common and ordinary Crimes; yet, on the other hand, till that is done, I hope I am at Liberty freely to repreſent the Inconveniency, the Injuſtice, and the Imprudence of making ſuch a Declaration, or of paſſing ſuch a Law, in the Caſe now before you. If it ſhould become a Law, his Lordſhip muſt diſpute it no longer, but ſubmit to it as juſt, whatever Hardſhips he may, in the Retirement of his own Heart, conceive introduced upon him by it. But, thanks be to God, this is yet no Law, and that I am at full Liberty to repreſent the Injuſtice and the Unreaſonableneſs of this Bill; and to ſay, this is not a proper Occaſion that needs or calls upon your Lordſhips to exert your Legiſlative Power.

I might here enlarge upon the Injuſtice of all Laws made ex poſt facto, and for one particular Caſe or Perſon, and no other; that they are againſt the Common Law, and the Common Right which every one is entitled to, in the Place or Community where he lives; becauſe Laws, in their Nature, ought to be Rules for the general Order, and Good of Society: and Natural Juſtice would ſurely in all ſuch Caſes ſtop the Precipitancy of your Lordſhips Reſolution, by this Queſtion; Againſt what Law hath he tranſgreſs'd? If he hath tranſgreſs'd any publick known Law, he is undoubtedly ſubject to undergo the Pains or Penalties enacted by it, when the Proof is duly and fully made which that Law requires. But if there is no ſuch Law yet in being, or if there is no ſuch Proof as that Law requires to ſuppoſe him guilty, will your Lordſhips introduce a new Law, or a new Sort of Proof to make him ſo? If theſe Methods are to be taken, the moſt innocent Man is not ſafe, and the wiſeſt Man cannot judge what is an Offence, or in what Degree; what Proof is neceſſary for his Defenſe, nor how he is to be try'd. And in vain does the Legiſlature every Seſſion provide Laws, if a particular Law or a particular Proof is ſtill to be made for every particular Purpoſe, not only contrary to the Tenor of all the former; but ſuch as is not to be a Rule or Law in any other future Caſe whatſoever.

Thus much I am ſure may be juſtly urged in any Place of Judicature in the World, againſt all ſuch Laws in general; but much more as we are Engliſhmen, as we have Laws, which my Lord Bacon calls wiſe and juſt, that give to God, that give to Caſar, that give the Subject, that which belongeth to them. Not like thoſe of other Countries, impoſed upon the Subject at the Will of the Prince, before Probation or Trial, whether they are fit and convenient for the Genius of the People; nor the Production of one Man, or of one Parliament in any one Age, but the Wiſdom and Experience of many Generations,

And I am ſure one of the greateſt Excellencies of this Law, beyond that of other Nations, has been always eſteem'd the common and ordinary Method of Trial. It has been always accounted the Birth-right of an Engliſh Subject to be try'd per Pares, according to the known Courſe of the Law.

And therefore, the better to ſhew the Difference, and to evince the Hardſhip of this extraordinary Proceeding, I ſhall a little conſider the Nature of the ordinary Trial; and tho I might do this in the Language of Magna Charta, and of many eminent antient Writers of the Law, I rather chuſe my Lord Chief Juſtice Hales, that great and good Man, whoſe happy Moderation between the Prerogatives of the Crown, and the juſt Liberties of the Subject, can never be remember'd by Poſterity, without the deepeſt Honour. He ſays [16] it is the beſt Trial in the World, and one of the firſt Principles upon which our Conſtitution is erected. Here a Man has a legal Exception to any one of his Triers, if they have any Dependance upon either of the Parties, are preposſeſs'd or prejudiced before they hear the Evidence. All the Evidence is given openly, in the Preſence of the Judge, Jury, Counſel, and Parties; not in private, before a Commiſſioner or a Clerk, (as in Chancery, or by the Civil Law) where oftentimes a Witneſs delivers that, which he will be aſhamed to teſtify ore tenus, and wherein a crafty Clerk will oftentimes make a Witneſs ſpeak what he really never meant, by dreſſing up his Evidence in his own Terms, Phraſes, and Expreſſions. Or a Man may depoſe in Writing, what the Fear of being falſified, or perhaps a better Recollection wou'd not let him adhere to in open Court, where he has an Opportunity to correct, amend, or explain his Teſtimony.

Beſides this, (ſays that Learned Judge) a Jury muſt all agree in their Verdict, and are not to be concluded by a Majority; and therefore, tho in ſome Caſes, the Law don't poſitively require two, nor one Witneſs, viva voce; yet the Credit of a Verdict is great, where twelve Men on their Oaths unanimouſly agree.

The Counſel on the other ſide may be apt to reply upon me, with the frequent Abuſes and Corruptions of Juries. My Lords, I do agree, that may happen to be the Caſe; or it may happen that one more knowing or over-bearing Man among them, may ſometimes govern all the reſt. But, if the ſame may happen, and often does in every Society or Number of Men, and the beſt regulated Bodies in the World, ſurely that can never be a Reaſon to deprive a Man of his common Right, and to lay aſide a moſt valuable Inſtitution.

I am afraid, my Lords, this little has been too much upon a Point that ſo little needs it: but the Love of one's Country, and its antient legal Conſtitution, is an honeſt Prejudice, which every one is apt to indulge; and the Advantage of this Privilege, every one that hears me, (I doubt not) is in the Heart ſufficiently convinced of, and would boldly inſiſt on it as his Birth-right in any Caſe of his own, where his own Property, his Reputation, his Life, or his own Liberty was in the leaſt concerned.

It is urged by the Counſel for the Bill, and indeed by the Bill itſelf, that this is an extraordinary Caſe, and requires an extraordinary Remedy, where the Offender has taken Care, by ſubtle Contrivances, to keep out of the Verge of the Law, and the Reach of all ordinary Proceedings. But if ſuch a cruel artificial Suggeſtion be allow'd to be a good Reaſon to deprive a Man of the Benefit of the Law, no Man's Life or Liberty is ſafe. The ſame may be ſuggeſted of every Offender, and in every Offence: That a Man endeavours to evade the Puniſhment of the Law. The ſame may be ſaid with more Juſtice of every one that pleads Not Guilty, and inſiſts on his Trial, that he endeavours to evade the Law, becauſe ſuch an Accuſation or ſuch an Indictment is found againſt him. And yet the moſt rigid Caſuiſt never yet maintained, but that any Man (tho he knew himſelf to be a moſt guilty Criminal) might plead Not Guilty, and inſiſt on his Trial.

But if this cruel Artifice is to prevail, and this ſhould be a Reaſon to exert ſuch an extraordinary Proceeding: Wo! be to all Men of Senſe and Ingenuity. Nay, my Lords, if ſuch a Notion is to take Place, the Biſhop is in a much worſe Condition, than if Neynoe were alive, or any other Witneſs would have depoſed, viva voce againſt him, all they would have had them. For even then, his Accuſation or Indictment muſt have been found upon the Oaths of Twelve Men at leaſt, he would have had his legal Trial, and his Challenges. This I ſay upon a Suppoſition that the Gentlemen of the other ſide may not allow his Lordſhip to be a Peer of the Realm; but if they do allow his Right of Peerage before your Lordſhips Bar, and conſequently that he is intitled to a Trial by his Peers, yet ſtill he would have had his legal Exceptions to the Teſtimony of the Witneſſes; there muſt have been two poſitive Witneſſes to the ſame Overt-Act; and his Accuſation muſt have been found by Twelve Men at leaſt upon their Oaths; and after all, if his Lordſhip ſhould have been found Guilty, he might move in Arreſt of Judgment. All which Benefits he is now utterly deprived of, by this Method of Proceeding.

We ſhall be told (I doubt not) by the Counſel for the Bill, that your Lordſhips ſit now in a Judicial Capacity; that you are Judges of the Fact, as well as of the Law. No Man will doubt, but your Lordſhips have a Judicial Capacity, and have at all times moſt worthily exerciſed it; but yet I muſt beg leave to doubt, whether your Lordſhips are now properly acting in that Capacity or not? You have a Power, 'tis true, in this Method of Proceeding to condemn this Reverend Prelate, if Guilty; but not to ſave and acquit, if you are ever ſo well ſatisfy'd of his Innocency: and whether it be your Lordſhips Pleaſure to paſs or reject this Bill, I deſire to know of the Learned Counſel, whether it may be pleaded in Bar of a Proſecution in the Courts below, that he was auterfoits acquit, or auterfoits convict before your Lordſhips; or whether this Proceeding by Bill might be pleaded in Bar, even of an Impeachment for the very ſame Treaſons; or whether your Lordſhips Reſolution on this Bill (whatever it be) would be any legal Eſtopel to any other Bill in a future Seſſion. No, my Lords, I humbly apprehend, it would not be a good Bar or a legal Plea, either at Common Law, or according to any Rule or Uſage of Parliaments; and therefore we hope your Lordſhips will not do that, which after all cannot be a complete or a final Judgment, and by that Means draw this Reverend Prelate into the Danger of a double Trial. Which, I am ſure, is not only contrary to the Rules of Law, but alſo of Natural Juſtice. I have the more Countenance in ſaying this, not only from Hampden's Caſe, but from the known Caſe of Fitz-Harris, who pleaded this very Matter to the Juriſdiction of the Court of King's-Bench, that he was impeach'd for the ſame Crime by the Commons of England: but it was the Opinion of that Court, with the Advice of all the Judges, that he might, notwithſtanding, be try'd there: and in fact, was try'd and condemn'd by the Court of King's-Bench, tho the Impeachment was ſtill depending before your Lordſhips Houſe.

But if your Lordſhips are reſolved to proceed in your Legiſlative Capacity, and my Lord Biſhop muſt, after all, be in Danger of the ordinary Method of Trial; yet ſuffer me to ſay what has been done, in former Times, by former Parliaments, on the like Bills: and how light ſoever other Authorities may ſeem, we hope your Lordſhips will have ſome Regard to your own Uſage and Reſolutions.

There have been too many Inſtances, I confeſs, my Lords; but thoſe, that can be in any Degree juſtify'd, may be reduced to theſe few. They are ſuch as paſs'd againſt Perſons dead, or who fled from Juſtice, and did not render themſelves by the Time appointed; or they have paſs'd againſt ſuch as were in actual Rebellion, in direct Oppoſition to all Methods of Trial, and in Defiance to all Courts of Juſtice; or againſt ſuch whoſe Treaſons were flagrant and undeniable, but their Perſons above the reach of inferior Courts and Commiſſions. Thoſe few Sacrifices to the Heat and Neceſſity of the Times have been moſt of them revers'd with Infamy and Deteſtation, when Men were cool, and at Liberty to hearken to the Voice of Law and Reaſon, and began to conſider they had only prepared Shackles for themſelves. Thoſe few melancholy Inſtances, procured without due Trial by an Exceſs of Prerogative, of Perſons that have been forth-coming, principally becauſe it was the Will of a Prince, are not to be mention'd without Horror and Deteſtation. Such as thoſe, ſays my Lord Coke [17], auferat oblivio ſi poteſt, ſi non, utcunque tegat ſilentium. Let ſuch groſs Breaches and Violations of the ſacred and unalterable Rules of Juſtice be forgot, if it be poſſible; or at leaſt draw a Veil over them, and let them be buried in perpetual Silence.

But in all ſober regular Times, a free Trial in the ordinary Courſe of Law has ſeldom been denied, even where the Facts have been ſo notorious as (one would think) almoſt to need no Trial, and ſo evident as to need no Proof; as the Regicides, except ſuch as fled from Juſtice, were admitted to Trial, no leſs than Twenty Nine before one Commiſſion of Oyer, and every one heard with Patience in the ordinary Courſe. Even Felton, that ſtabb'd a Prime Miniſter in the Execution of a High Commiſſion, tho he confeſs'd the Fact, both before the Council and Court of King's-Bench, and juſtify'd it as a publick Service to the Nation, in the moſt daring and impious Manner, was brought to Trial, without ſuperſeding any of the ordinary Methods and Circumſtances of Juſtice. Indeed where ſome flagrant Crimes have been legally prov'd and determin'd in the Courts below, Parliaments have ſometimes thought fit to add to, or heighten the Degrees of Puniſhments. It was ſo reſolved in the Caſe of the Gunpowder Plotters 5 November, that they were at firſt to be try'd at Law, and then the Parliament (if need be) to add a Confirmation to it. Nay, that Reſolution went farther; it ſays they were not competent Judges of it, before it was found in the Courts below.

I might mention the Opinion of Judge Doddridge, the Mirror of Juſtice, Lord Chief Baron Atkins, &c. who ſay the Parliament is a ſupreme Court of Oyer, and that the proper Subject of their Oyer is ſuch Offences for which Right cannot otherwiſe be had, and to deal with Delinquents too high for the ordinary Courts. And, as I am before your Lordſhips Bar, I am very proper to mention the Reſolution of your Lordſhips Predeceſſors, in the Caſe of Fitz-Harris, who (as I before mention'd) was impeach'd by the Commons of High-Treaſon; they refuſed to take him out of the Hands of ordinary Juſtice, and directed him to be proceeded againſt according to the Courſe of the Common Law.

And what Opinion ſubſequent Parliaments have had of my Lord Strafford's Bill of Attainder, beſt appears from the Words of the Act of Reverſal, by ordering all the Records and Proceedings relating to it to be cancell'd and deſtroy'd, that no Remains of ſo evil and unjuſt a Precedent might be viſible in after Ages, or brought into Example to any one's Prejudice. But even in that deteſtable Inſtance, ſuch Informations and Evidence were not admitted, the Witneſſes were all examin'd, viva voce, upon Oath, and he was firſt adjudged Guilty, by way of Impeachment at the Bar of the Lords, before there was any Order for a Bill. The very ſame Method was obſerv'd in the Caſe of Archbiſhop Laud, and Articles fully proved againſt him, as they thought. If it had not been ſo, even that Houſe of Commons, as bad as they were, and as thirſty as they were after the Blood of thoſe Noble Perſons, probably would not have order'd thoſe Bills. But yet this latter Inſtance of Archbiſhop Laud, never had the Royal Aſſent: and 'tis well known in Hiſtory, what deſperate Meaſures were made uſe of to induce the Lords to paſs it; and at laſt I think there were but ſeven of your Lordſhips whole Houſe, that were preſent when it was paſs'd. But if this Bill ſhould paſs, we muſt no longer blame and condemn thoſe Inſtances; for this will, in effect, re-enact them, and many others, which the Wiſdom of former Parliaments have revers'd with Marks of Infamy and Deteſtation.

How much more is there to be ſaid of Sir John Fenwick's Caſe? he had been indicted upon the Evidence of two poſitive Witneſſes: There had been ſeveral preceding Trials, at Law, by which it manifeſtly appear'd that he was equally concern'd with thoſe that were found Guilty. Sir John Fenwick had likewiſe withdrawn himſelf from Juſtice, and was retaken; (a Circumſtance always urged as a ſtrong Preſumption of Guilt.) He had protracted his Trial by Offers of Diſcovery, the Reaſon of which afterwards appeared to be, that one of the King's Witneſſes might withdraw himſelf beyond Sea; and altho that Witneſs was gone, yet his Evidence not only remained in Writing ſign'd, and upon Oath, but was atteſted and confirm'd by ſome of the Grand-Jury themſelves that found the Bill, and by others of the Petty-Jury, before whom that Witneſs had given the very ſame Evidence. There was a Proof likewiſe that he had attempted to corrupt the remaining Witneſs, as well as ſome of the Jury. Theſe were Circumſtances upon which that Caſe was founded; no Man can ſay, but there was a reaſonable Evidence, tho not ſtrictly legal; one full and poſitive Witneſs, and many ſtrong undeniable Circumſtances; and yet the Oppoſition, which that had in both Houſes, was very great. Whether the Reaſons that prevail'd for the paſſing of it were ſufficient, becomes me not to enquire: Since it is ſtill a Law, I muſt preſume them juſt.

But is there any thing, my Lords, like that, in the Caſe now before your Lordſhips? Has there been any Attempt to withdraw from Juſtice? and yet that Honourable Committee have been pleaſed to obſerve, his Lordſhip had Notice that he was to be apprehended ſome conſiderable Time before. Has there been any preceding Trial, in which my Lord Biſhop's Name was mention'd as an Agent, much leſs (as this Bill ſuggeſts) a principal Manager and Director in the Conſpiracy? Or, in that one Trial which hath been, has any thing appeared to derive the leaſt Suſpicion of Guilt upon him? Can any one ſay he has uſed any Methods or Artifices to avoid or protract his Trial in the ordinary Courſe of Law? Has he not on the contrary (and as one of the ſtrongeſt Proofs and Convictions of Innocency) ſought and petition'd to be tried? Yes, my Lords, he has applied in all Courts, and in all Places, in the moſt earneſt and legal manner, to be brought to Trial? Has this Reverend Prelate uſed any indirect Meaſures to corrupt or withdraw a Witneſs? And yet Mr. Kelly, (who is the only Perſon ſuppos'd capable of teſtifying againſt him, 'tis well known, had his full Liberty, even after his Lordſhip's Apprehenſion, but wou'd not hazard his Recognizance by one Day's Non-appearance. No, my Lords, nothing of that kind has been attempted to be prov'd, nor ſo much as inſinuated in this Caſe; nor is there here before your Lordſhips any one poſitive Witneſs of any kind: Nor is there the Sanction of any one Oath here, or any where elſe, in any one material Point againſt his Lordſhip. What need therefore, or what Reaſon can there be for this Bill? Surely your Lordſhips will never pronounce a Judgment that ſhall affect any Man's Life, Liberty, or Fortune, without ſome Oath, and on Circumſtances ſo widely different in every reſpect from thoſe of Sir John Fenwick.

And if this Caſe bears Proportion not Similitude with that of Sir John Fenwick; I am ſure it has much leſs, or rather none at all, with any of thoſe before mention'd. For we hope, after ſo long and full a Diſcovery of the Conſpiracy, and thoſe many juſt Methods of Preparation againſt it, the Danger cannot now be ſo great or cogent, as to require ſo precipitate a Reſolution. His Perſon, your Lordſhips ſee, is ſafe and forthcoming, and the Courts of Law in their uſual and open Courſe; and at this Time filled with ſuch learned and reſolute Judges and Miniſters of Juſtice, that they are equal and able to deal with the moſt bold and daring Offender.

There can be leſs Reaſon therefore, none at all we hope, for your Lordſhips at this Time to exert ſuch an extraordinary Method of proceeding.

But there is this further Objection againſt proceeding by Bill, that it makes not only your Lordſhips pronounce Judgment againſt one of your own Members, and a very terrible one too; but it makes the King himſelf, without hearing one Word of the Defenſe, in Perſon, pronounce a Judgment upon his Subject, which his own gracious Temper muſt be averſe to; which the Common Law therefore has wiſely left to be pronounced by his Juſtices, even in thoſe Courts where he is always ſuppoſed to be preſent. But in this inſtance, there is ſomething which muſt be ſtill more ungrateful to him; in that it is to exclude a Branch of Prerogative which his Majeſty moſt delights in, and it muſt be ſome Surprize to every good Subject to find his Royal Judgment ſo highly miſtruſted.

There is another Thing, which, I perſuade myſelf, your Lordſhips will fully conſider; that if this Method of Proceeding by Bill be encourag'd and grow familiar, it will put an End to one conſiderable Branch of Judicature, which your Lordſhips were heretofore ſo juſtly jealous of, as not to admit at any time the leaſt Competition. The Lower Houſe will hardly care to appear any more before your Lordſhips as Accuſers or Proſecutors, when they can ſo eaſily partake in your Judicial Capacity. And every ſuch Bill (eſpecially againſt a Member of this Houſe) is a direct Infringement and Diminution of that high and valuable Privilege, and will open a Door to ſome other Miſchiefs to the Peerage: which I had much rather your Lordſhips wou'd ſuggeſt to yourſelves, than I expreſs. It has been always doubted without Doors, whether your Lordſhips could begin ſuch a Bill againſt a Commoner; but I think it may be more juſtly doubted, whether the Lower Houſe can begin ſuch a Bill againſt any one of your Lordſhips; and, if this Bill ſhould have no other Conſequence, it will eſtabliſh this ſo far, as to bear no Queſtion hereafter. My Lords, I need not ſay, how much more proper it would have been, for the Lower Houſe to have left this Matter intire to your Lordſhips; becauſe it has been ſo often reſolv'd by your Lordſhips Predeceſſors, that the Houſe of Commons have no Power of Judicature or Coercion againſt any one, but in Matters concerning that Houſe: Whereas this is a Caſe of Peerage, the Puniſhment, and the Excluſion of a Member of this Houſe. There is an Inſtance on your Lordſhips Journals, where the Lord Purbeck voluntarily ſurrendred his Title and Dignity of Viſcount to the King by Fine, and yet your Lordſhips una-nimouſly revers'd that Judgment, and declared, that no Place could judge of, or intermeddle with Dignities or Rights of Peerage, but your Lordſhips own Houſe.

And thoſe my Lords of that Reverend Bench, will ſurely conſider what a fatal Blow this Bill will give to the Diſcipline and Polity of the Church of England. They have more than ordinary Reaſon to be jealous of increaſing ſuch Precedents, and of introducing Methods of depriving Biſhops and Deans, hardly known to former Ages. The antient Canons have already preſcrib'd Methods of judging, cenſuring, and depoſing Biſhops, and the Caſes when and where thoſe Methods are fit to be exercis'd. I don't ſay the Parliament cannot do this, or any thing elſe which they think proper; but the Metropolitan, their Lordſhips know, is intruſted with this Power over his Suffragans, or a Provincial Synod. And 'tis plain, the Law of England takes notice of no other Power, that can regularly deprive. For to Mention but this Inſtance, if an Iſſue ſhould be join'd, whether a Biſhop be depriv'd or not, the Court where ſuch Iſſue ſhould ariſe, could only write to the Archbiſhop to certify. And to prove this Aſſertion, I will not name Biſhop Stillingfleet, or any of thoſe great Eccleſiaſtical Authorities, (ſince poſſibly they may be excepted againſt, as Perſons who have too much Intereſt in the Caſe to be impartial) but it is ſo laid down by my [18] Lord Chief Baron Atkins, in his great Argument of Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſions, and by my Lord Chief Juſtice Holt, and the Court of King's-Bench, in the Caſe of Dr. Watſon, Biſhop of St. Davids.

All Precedents, my Lords, will increaſe; and the Scorn and Contempt of Libertines againſt your Lordſhips ſacred Order is too great, to drop or to forget a Precedent ſo grateful and pleaſing to them as this will be. Every one knows the Deſtruction of the ſmaller religious Houſes only made way for that of the greater. A Time has been when their Lordſhips Predeceſſors were all excluded and ſequeſtred; and it has been attempted, even ſince the Reſtoration, to take away Deans and Chapters. I am far from apprehending any ſuch thing at preſent, and I hope it will never enter into the Heart of any Man. But, my Lords, I confeſs I thought as little at this Time of ſuch a Bill as is now before you, to deprive a Biſhop and Dean at once, not only of all his Dignities and Benefices, but from the Exerciſe of any Part of his holy Office and Function: And I will ſay, that if this Bill ſhould paſs, and by any of their Lordſhips Aſſent, ſuch a Deſign will be rendred more eaſy and familiar, and much more unpitied, by all Mankind.

Give me leave, my Lords, next to obſerve, with what Caution and Moderation other Parliaments have proceeded, even in thoſe Caſes where they have thought proper to exerciſe their Legiſlative Capacity. I paſs over the Statute 7 W. c. 19. for Impriſonment of Sir Thomas Coke, &c. and many other ſuch Caſes, which were too great and intricate for the ordinary Courſe of Law, but yet too low and inconſiderable to enter into this Compariſon. But the Statute 8 W. c. 5. may be named, I am ſure, with that now before you, for the Impriſonment of Couuter, &c. concern'd in the Aſſaſſination Plot, againſt all whom there was ſome Poſitive Evidence upon Oath. Tho the Zeal of that Parliament can never be queſtion'd from an Act ſo full of Gratitude, and in ſuch ſtrong Terms and Accents of Loyalty to the King, yet they did not at once, and at one ſingle Stroke, cut them off from the Land of the Living, and utterly deprive them of all the Neceſſaries of Life. The firſt Step that Parliament took, was to paſs an Act for the Detainment of them for the Space of one Year only, not to the Forfeiture and Deprivation of all they were worth, or to the Excluſion of his Majeſty's Mercy, but even to leave a diſcretionary Power of Bailing within that Time, to any ſix of the Privy-Council, if they judged proper. Their further Obſtinacy and Impenitency occaſioning another Act, 9 W. c. 4. to detain them a Year longer, it was ſtill under the ſame Exception. At the End of that Term another Act was made, impowering the King to detain them during his Pleaſure, 10. W. c. 11. After theſe, two other Acts paſſed, impowering the late Queen and his preſent Majeſty to detain them. What the particular Reaſon of theſe Alterations were, I cannot take upon me to determine, becauſe the Acts themſelves are wholly ſilent; but, my Lords, ſuch were the prudent and moderate Steps taken by former Parliaments, even in that bold and wicked Conſpiracy.

I may alſo juſtly take Notice of the Prudence and Clemency of the laſt Parliament, when there was ſo loud and ſo general a Cry for Juſtice, and when the Neceſſity of the Time ſeemed to require a more ſpeedy and extraordinary Degree of Puniſhment than the Common Law was acquainted with: but with what Difficulty, with what ſlow Paces, and with how many tender Circumſtances did that Bill paſs? Your Lordſhips will eaſily imagine, that the Perſons I here ſpeak of are the late Directors of the South-Sea Company.

It would ill become me (my Lords) if I had Inclination, to inſult the Diſtreſſes, or to aggravate any of thoſe Gentlemen's Misfortunes; but the Service of the Reverend Prelate now under Conſideration, requires me juſt to mention what a State of Confuſion they had reduced the Kingdom to: How many Thouſands have felt, and ſtill feel the pernicious Effects of that Scheme? Tho their Crimes had no particular Appellation, or determinate Puniſhment in our Law, yet the [19] Civil, and the Laws of other Countries could have told us, That Crimen Peculatus, the Robbery of the publick Money, was ſuch an infamous Tranſgreſſion, That the Puniſhment of it was Death, both in the Principal and Acceſſaries. How different and how mild was the Puniſhment inflicted by the late Parliament, in compariſon of that, I need not mention; and every one knows, how tenderly and ſparingly that Law has ſince been executed upon them, and how much they ſtill enjoy of the Spoils and Plunders of the Nation.

Let us not then follow every Precedent that has been, but the juſt and prudent Precedents of moderate Times, and of good and peaceable Reigns. Let us not be ambitious to ſurpaſs the Proceedings of violent and arbitrary Men, which we or our Poſterity may have Cauſe to repent of hereafter; but let us imitate ſuch only as are agreeable to the Law and Conſtitution, ſuch as are grounded upon true Reaſon, and the Principles of exact Juſtice.

Having thus ſpoken as to the Method of theſe Proceedings in general, and ſhown (in ſome meaſure, I hope) that they are contrary to the publick Wiſdom, contrary to the known Rules of Law, and the common Right of the Subject, I ſhall, with your Lordſhips Favour, next examine the Foundations and Suggeſtions of this particular Bill. As for thoſe general Matters and Allegations with which it is introduced, and upon which the Counſel for the Bill have ſpent ſo much Time, there is no Neceſſity, as we conceive, to anſwer to. We are here before your Lordſhips only as Counſel for this Reverend Prelate, one ſingle ſuppoſed Conſpirator; and it would ill become us in the leaſt to controvert, that there has been a Conſpiracy formed and carried on by ſome Perſons abroad and by others at home, after it has been ſo ſolemnly reſolved by both Houſes of Parliament. Nor can we deny, but that Mr. Layer has been Tried, Convicted, and Attainted of it: But we are yet to ſeek, how thoſe Things have any Relation to the Caſe now before your Lordſhips; or how that unhappy Gentleman's Caſe comes to be connected and made Part of my Lord Biſhop's, as it is by this Bill. We may juſtly appeal to every one that heard or read that Trial, whether this Reverend Prelate's Name is ſo much as mention'd in any one Line of it; whether there are any Grounds to think, from any of that Gentleman's Papers or Examinations, that his Lordſhip was privy to, or in the leaſt concerned or acquainted with his Perſon, or his Intentions: And I dare ſay, his Lordſhip is as much amazed at the Raſhneſs and Folly of his Schemes, as he deteſts the Wickedneſs of them. Notwithſtanding which, it is his Misfortune to be charged in this Bill as a principal Actor and Director in the framing and carrying on of thoſe very Schemes and Deſigns for which that Gentleman has been Convicted. And as to the Cyphers and Papers of Plunket, I am as much at a Loſs to imagine, upon what Grounds they ſhould be given in Evidence againſt the Biſhop, ſince 'tis not ſo much as ſuggeſted in the Bill; nor is there any thing thro'out the Report or Appendix, that in the leaſt charges his Lordſhip with any Intercourſe or Correſpondence with him.

It is ſtrange, my Lords, that Perſons Thoughts and Intentions, ſo widely diſtant in all other Reſpects, ſhould yet center in ſuch unnatural Projects, and wild Undertakings, without ſome previous Diſcourſe, ſome Conſultations, or Acquaintance one with the other; and yet as ſtrange and unaccountable as it is, this Reverend Prelate is charged in the very ſame manner by this Bill, with conſulting and endeavouring to raiſe an Inſurrection, to procure a Foreign Force to invade the Kingdom, and Correſponding with the Pretender, and Perſons employ'd by him, knowing them to be ſo employ'd. And if theſe Facts, my Lords, had been duly and legally proved, I ſhould have very little to ſay in his Defenſe, but humbly intreat the Mercy and Compaſſion of this Honourable Houſe; for they are Offences in themſelves ſo great, that on the one hand they are not capable of Aggravation, nor on the other of Excuſe or Diminution, by any thing I can ſay. But if the Facts have not been proved in the Whole nor in Part, the bare Affirmation or Allegation of them is only Brutum fulmen, and does his Lordſhip no more Harm, than any other innocent Man, whoſe Misfortune it is to fall under an unjuſt Accuſation. Or if thoſe Circumſtances which have been proved, are not Criminal in themſelves, they ſhall not, we hope, by Inferences and Deductions, be heightned into Crimes; and the Number or Complication of them, ſhall never make them exceed their Nature. And, my Lords, we hope, that notwithſtanding all that has been affirmed, alledged, or proved, this Reverend Prelate can ſtill ſay, not only in the Form of Law, but boldly and with a ſafe Conſcience, and upon an impartial and ſerious Recollection ſay, That he is Not Guilty of any one of the Charges contained in the Bill: That he is not conſcious to himſelf of any one treaſonable or irreverent Expreſſion, or of any one Degree of Offence committed by him, with reſpect to any of thoſe Charges. He can ſtill ſay, that he has not acted in direct Violation of his Oaths and Obligations, nor to the Scandal of Religion or his Holy Function. I am ſure, my Lords, I ſhould not take upon me to ſay this for his Lordſhip, or any Man alive, unleſs I thought we had a full and poſitive Anſwer to every thing that has been ſaid, unleſs I was verily perſuaded we had a ſufficient and a legal Proof to encounter all that has been offered on the other Side; or unleſs my Inſtructions told me, that many Things in the Courſe of their Evidence are utterly falſe and groundleſs; falſe I ſay, as we ſhall prove (if my Inſtructions are true) by the fulleſt Proof, and the moſt ſatisfactory Evidence that is poſſible in the Caſe; by ſuch Arguments and Reaſonings, as we think are clear and undeniable; by ſome Witneſſes we never ſaw nor heard of before, conſequently the more credible and impartial; by others, whom I am ſure we had no Opportunity to lead or inſtruct: and all (as I am informed) glad, that it is conſiſtent with the Rules of your Lordſhips Houſe, to receive their Teſtimony upon Oath. In ſhort, every Circumſtance, every Part of the Evidence produced againſt us, your Lordſhips, in the End, we hope, will find, turn ſtrongly for us.

There is one thing which I take for granted, from the Nature of the Evidence that has been offer'd, That it is admitted as fully by the Counſel for the Bill (as if they had ſaid ſo in expreſs Terms) that there is no legal Evidence againſt his Lordſhip in all they have offer'd; or elſe this extraordinary Method of Proceeding, and this new ſort of Evidence had never been ſet up. Nay, I am ſure, it is a ſort of Force upon thoſe Learned Gentlemen, ſo well verſed in Methods and Notions of Law, to maintain ſo many groſs Paradoxes, which have not the leaſt Colour of legal, or even a reaſonable Evidence, and would never be allowed, they well know, in any Court of Law or Equity. And tho your Lordſhips have been pleaſed to permit thoſe Papers and Letters to be read, your Lordſhips did not (as I apprehend) finally declare or determine them to be Evidence; but were willing to hear all Things, and afterwards judge how far it was reaſonable or fitting to admit them as Ingredients in your Lordſhips Judgments. And whatever Opinion your Lordſhips might be of on the two former Bills, as we are Strangers to them, ſo we hope we are not precluded from offering any thing farther, why they ought not to be allowed in this Caſe. If it be your Lordſhips Pleaſure at laſt to adhere to that Opinion, or to reſolve the like in this Caſe, we muſt ſubmit.

If there is any thing certain in Law, or agreeable to Reaſon, it is this, That in all Criminal Charges, the Evidence ought to be clear and poſitive; and that the higher and more heinous the Nature of the Charge is, the more clear and undeniable the Evidence ought to be by which a Man is convicted. Now, I beſeech your Lordſhips to conſider at one View (as far as it is poſſible in ſuch various and perplex'd Facts) the Methods made uſe of to prove his Lordſhip Guilty, and what they have offer'd to your Lordſhips under the Name of Evidence. Where Words have been capable, and ſometimes where they have not been capable, of two Senſes, an arbitrary and invidious Interpretation has been put upon them. Where Words have been plain and proper for the Occaſion, and which conſidered ſeparately by themſelves, it was impoſſible to put criminal Gloſs upon, the Writer is ſuppoſed to have ſome myſterious Meaning or double Entendre; or elſe they are complicated and thrown together with thoſe which will infer ſome criminal Meaning. In other Letters the Names and Words relative to Men, are ſuppoſed to be uſed for thoſe of Women, and the proper and uſual Appellation of Women, for thoſe of Men; and becauſe one fictitious Name will not anſwer all they would have it, the Names are often ſhifted, one and the ſame Perſon is ſuppoſed to paſs under ſeven or eight different Denominations: and often two or three Names in the ſame Letter, within the Compaſs of two Lines one to the other, are urged to ſtand for the ſame Perſon. Some Letters which are writ of another, and ſpeaking in direct Terms of a third Perſon, they would have to mean the Writer himſelf, tho as often without any Name, Date, Subſcription or Superſcription at all. Books of Accompt, Manuſcripts, and common Mercantile Terms, which ſeem proper for the Perſon and the Occaſion of the Correſpondence; and the Name of Stocks, which every one knows the true Meaning of, and carries all the Appearance of Reality, are very particular and exact in the current Prices at that time, by a new kind of Metaphor are to be taken in an ill Senſe. Others which are only to be inform'd of the Diſtemper of a Friend, the Variations which happen in it, and the Opinion of Doctors upon it, by a ſtrange and arbitrary Conſtruction are applied to explain very different Purpoſes: and as if they were ſuſpicious even of their own Suſpicions, and diſtruſtful of theſe Explanations, they call in Aid ſeveral disjointed Fragments, Extracts, and Scraps of Papers, which no Man but themſelves can tell what to make of; and when there happen to be ſome Words which cannot be reconciled with ſuch a Conſtruction, or the Uſes which they would make of them, they are totally omitted, and we are told they are not material, or not yet decypher'd, or not legible in the Original, but your Lordſhips and the World muſt intend them to mean ſomething Criminal.

My Lords, if ſuch foreign Suppoſitions, Gloſſes, and Intendments; ſuch unnatural Conſtructions, falſe Inferences and Innuendos, are to be admitted as Evidence, and deſerve the Name of Proof, I muſt confeſs, they have given you ſome. If the Whimſies and Conjectures of Decypherers, the Hearſays and Reports of third, fourth, and fifth Perſons are to take place in your judicial Proceedings, inſtead of that plain, honeſt, and poſitive Proof, which the Law requires; or if the Number of Facts and the Variety of Circumſtances could make them alter or exceed their Nature, I muſt confeſs, they have offered ſome Things worthy of your Lordſhips Conſideration.

But if it were your Lordſhips Pleaſure to conſtrue Things according to the moſt natural plain Senſe and Import of the Words, as others would have underſtood them, and in ſuch a Senſe as the Writer probably meant them, or in that juſt manner which your Lordſhips have hitherto done on criminal Proſecutions, no one can ſay they have ſhewn one Degree of legal or reaſonable Evidence, to prove any one Suggeſtion in the Bill. This I moſt humbly aſſert, and I think no one can diſprove my Aſſertion.

Thus far in general of the Proofs that have been offered; but I ſhall, under your Lordſhips Favour, ſpeak now more particularly to them, and ſhall be ſo far from abridging or ſliding over any thing that has been ſaid, that I am willing every thing thoſe learned Gentlemen for the Bill have been pleaſed to offer, or that Honourrble Committee have obſerved in their Report, ſhoud have its full weight, and be put in the ſtrongeſt Light againſt us.

It has been obſerved, that there were three ſeveral Methods and Times fixed for the Execution of this intended Conſpiracy.

The firſt was to have procured a Regular Body of foreign Forces to invade the Kingdom, at the time of the late Elections (which were from the middle of March to the middle of April 1722.)

But have they ſhew'd your Lordſhips any Evidence, or even one Paſſage in the Report of that Honourable Committee, that particularly charges his Lordſhip with being privy to any one of theſe three Deſigns thus generally and roundly affirmed? He is not charg'd with being privy to either of the three Memorials to the Regent for Forces. The only Paſſage that can be pretended to contain any Imputation of that kind, is in the Letter ſign'd 1387 to Jackſon, which, they ſay, there is reaſon to believe was from my Lord Biſhop to the Pretender: but this we hope in the Courſe of our Evidence effectually to diſprove.

The ſecond Deſign was to have made an Attempt at the time it was believed his Majeſty would go abroad; but all that is inſinuated in relation to his Lordſhip, is contained in two or three obſcure Paſſages relating to one Jones, in Letters ſaid to have paſſed between Dillon, or his Secretary, and Mr. Kelly: which Paſſages being ſomething ambiguous, are interpreted in an ill Meaning, by Hearſays from Neynoe and Pancier, and Plunket's Cypher; but cannot, without the greateſt Abſurdity, be thought to relate to his Lordſhip.

Two of theſe Paſſages [9] relate to Remittances of Money, which they inſinuate the Biſhop was to furniſh; but it amounts in the whole to no more than the bear Hearſay of one Man, and an arbitrary Interpretation of ſome Expreſſions in the Letters of two others, (to either of which his Lordship has not in the least been ptov'd privy;) and the Whole depends upon a Supposition, that Jones here and elsewhere in the Correspondence means him; which depends again upon another Supposition, that the Bishop dictated those three Letters of the 20th of April, one of which is signed Jones; a Supposition which we hope likewise to prove absolutely false, and by that means shake the Foundation of the whole Charge.

Lordſhip

The other Passage [21] is in a Letter from Dillon's Secretary to Kelly, about Jones's fitting and providing himself with Saddles; which by the same Methods is explained to mean Soldiers and Regiments, which his Lordship is supposed to have undertaken to procure: and if the Words are to be taken in that Sense, and applied to him, he must likewise be supposed to have undertaken to be at the Head of them; which, considering his Lordship's Function, Age, and Infirmities, is so absurd and ridiculous, that instead of spending more of your Lordships time in answering of it, I shall only make use of it hereafter, as one Instance (among many others) to shew, how much they are mistaken in affirming, that wherever Jones is named, his Lordship is to be understood.

The third and last Design, tho I must confess the most enormous, if it were true, because Part of it was the Seizure of his Majesty's Person, was to have been put in Execution at the breaking up of the Camp. But, I am sure, there is not one the least Hint thro'out all this voluminous Affair, that his Lordship was concern'd or privy to that.

And therefore 'tis surprizing to think upon what Grounds his Lordship can be (as he is in the Preamble of the Bill) charg'd with having been deeply concern'd in forming and directing this Conspiracy; which, as your Lordships have heard, consisted of those three several Designs. The Counsel, indeed, for the Bill have endeavour'd by divers Methods and Reasonings, by some little Circumstances, and seeming Probabilities, to charge upon his Lordship in general such a Correspondence: And they may all be reduc'd to these four Heads:

1. Hearsays.

2. The three Letters said to be dictated by his Lordship, and wrote by Kelly to Lord Marr, Dillon, and the Pretender.

3. Two Letters said to be wrote to the Bishop.

4. The Co-incidences of Circumstances, Times, and Names, in the intercepted Correspondence, to induce a Belief of the before-mention'd Hearsays, and supposed Facts.

To all which I shall endeavour to give some Answers.

But before I enter upon these Particulars, I shall beg leave to observe to your Lordships, That if such Evidence is to be countenanced, it will be in the Power of any two Men, the one in England, the other beyond Sea, getting an Account of the Circumstances and Motions of a third Person, by an artificial intercepted Correspondence, to raise what Suspicions of him they please; and yet he be all the while innocent and ignorant of what is doing. Whether that is the Case here, I shall afterwards submit to your Lordships Judgments.

But it is very remarkable, that in all the intercepted Correspondence to and fro, there are no Footsteps or Descriptions which any ways point out to, or of whom they are written, but those alone which are supposed to relate to his Lordship; and in them, as the Counsel observe, things are said and done in such a manner, and with such particular Circumstances, as lead directly to him, and him only. And this being so contrary to the Caution and Reserve practised in all other Instances, carries in it some manifest Marks of Fraud and Contrivance.

This Remark I humbly apprehend to be the stronger, because there has been no Proof of any particular Meetings or Consultations with other Persons, towards carrying on these Designs. And how a Man can conspire with himself, I know not, except that it is barely alledg'd he was a Member of the Burford Club; the Falsity of which Assertion that Honourable Committee themselves seem so sensible of, and by that Indulgence and Enlargement which one of those Noble Persons (tho said to be the chief of them) has since met with, is now so well understood, as to need no manner of Refutation.

I may also as justly observe, that there is no one Witness against this Reverend Prelate of any one criminal Act or Expression, from the Time of his Majesty's Accession to the Throne, tho one of the Counsel (as your Lordships may remember) was very particular about the Manner of his passing of the 10th of June, which the Coachman gave them an Account of for four Years together; and tho all his Papers were seiz'd, not one Letter, or Paper, under his own Hand, produced of a criminal Nature, or pretended to have been seen or intercepted. Not any one Letter intercepted that is pretended to have been written to him, much less any prov'd to have been receiv'd by him, the Matter of which appears to be Treasonable, or any ways Criminal. My Lords, I must own a great Consequence is drawn by that Honourable Committee, because a great Quantity of Letters and Papers were found dated before the Year 1712. This very Objection was made in the Accusation of his Lordship's worthy Predecessor, and a slight Answer satisfy'd his Examinants; and the plain Reason is, that his Lordship at that Time had a settled Correspondence with many eminent Men on Matters of Learning, which he esteemed so valuable as to preserve; but since the finishing of those Controversies, he had less occasion to write, and his Lordship's Merits having call'd him up to a more high and busy Station, he had less Oportunity to write; and he that writes little will receive but little. From that Year therefore (they justly observe) few of any Consequence were found, and even those few, (if no other than what are printed, and as yet produc'd) we beg leave to say, are of no Consequence at all, to support the Inference drawn from them.

The first, I think, is from a great Lady; but so general and uncertain, that it does by no means warrant the Conclusion drawn from it; for it does not so much as appear to have been a Letter, or what it was that was enclos'd. And I beseech your Lordships, what more can be inferr'd from Captain Halsted's Letter, [22] the Contents of which is no more, than that a Neighbour, as

Captain

Captain Halſted was to the Biſhop, deſires Leave to dine with his Lordſhip on a Thurſday, which was his publick Day, in Company of 20 other People? I muſt confeſs they have laid a Streſs upon the Character of the Man in their Opening; but nothing more has been prov'd, than that he was in a Ship by ſome Nature different from his own. Another Letter that was ſaid to be found among his Lordſhip's Papers, was that directed to Dubois. But this (my Lords) I ſhall beg leave to reſerve for a more proper Occaſion.

I ſhall now conſider the four ſeveral Charges againſt the Biſhop: And the Firſt ariſes from Neynoe and Pancier's Informations, all mere Hearſays; ſome from living, and ſome from a dead Perſon; but poſitively and expreſly denied by the living Perſons, from whom ſuch Informations are ſuppoſed to have come,

All that Pancier's Informations [23] ſay, relating to this Reverend Prelate, is, That one Skeen told him, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter had the principal Direction of the Conſpiracy; and that 200000 l. had been rais'd and put into his Management. This Skeen, it ſeems, is ſtill in Cuſtody, and your Lordſhips will hear how far he will ſupport this Charge.

Tho the very Accuſation itſelf we beg leave to call abſurd and incredible; that ſuch a Sum of Money as 200000 l. could be rais'd and depoſited in one Man's Hands, and not yet traced up to ſome of the Contributors, or to the Hand where it was depoſited, eſpecially when it is chargd upon a Perſon not uſed to deal in Merchandizes, or Remittances. Tho the Counſel for the Bill have ſlid over this, yet being often repeated in the Report, as if there had been ſome Weight in it, I thought myſelf oblig'd to take Notice of it, tho it is ſo incredible, I confeſs, that it is ſcarce worth removing.

Of Neynoe's Informations, your Lordſhips may obſerve there are Four, but none of them ſworn to nor ſigned; and it was expreſly reſolved, in Lord Audley's Caſe, [24] by all the Judges of England, that no Examination without Oath ought to be read except of the Party himſelf that is tried. They are all either of a Date ſubſequent to his Lordſhip's Commitment, (and therefore till then thought [25] inconſiderable, and not worth reducing into Writing,) or elſe they are of no Date at all. One of the Two without a Date appears manifeſtly to have been taken after he was ſeiz'd, and brought up from Deal in September, which ſufficiently ſhews that juſt Diſtruſt there was at that Time of his Credit; that on the 27th of September, was on the Day before he drown'd himſelf; and both, when he is known to have been under the greateſt Terrors and Apprehenſions, in that he was not able to make good what appears by the Paper (mark'd E. 11. and found afterwards in his Pocket) to have been undertaken by him, or required of him. It is not ſaid, as to one of his Examinations, [26] before whom it was taken: Another of them, and the only one they now think fit to make Uſe of, is an Extract only from three other Papers, and ſaid to contain the Subſtance of them; but the Papers themſelves, out of which it was extracted, do no where appear. And there are ſome Particulars in the Report [27] of that Honourable Committee, which he is ſaid to have confeſs'd, which do not appear in any one of theſe Examinations, and are of ſuch a Nature as to affect the Credit of all he ſaid, and (if produced) would, we doubt not, in other Reſpects entirely blaſt the Credit of his Teſtimony. And, my Lords, if the Examination of a Man is thus taken to pieces, the Antecedents and the Conſequents left out, Treaſon (and what not) may be made and inferred from the moſt innocent Things and Expreſſions.

But his Examinations, even as they lie in the Appendix, are full of Inconſiſtencies and Abſurdities: Inconſiſtencies, I mean, not only with Pancier's and the Depoſitions of other Perſons, but even with themſelves. For Pancier ſays, little paſs'd in Writing in the Conduct of the whole Affair: Neynoe ſays, there were many Bundles of Letters that Mr. Kelly brought with him from France, and which he had ſeen him write at ſeveral Times. But yet they are much more inconſiſtent with themſelves; for inſtance, Neynoe ſays, in his Examination, mark'd E. 7. that he had ſeen ſeveral Letters written by Kelly, and ſent to him from Paris, and other Parts, but they never contain'd any thing material: And yet in E. 8. he ſays, that he had ſeen ſeveral Cyphers of Kelly's, and ſeen him make uſe of them; and that Kelly with great Freedom acknowledged they were for carrying on the Correſpondence with the Pretender's Agents. Whereas it is utterly incredible that a Man, who had really been ſo communicative in his Diſcourſe, and of his Cyphers, ſhould yet be ſo reſerv'd as to hide from him any thing material in his Letters. In the very ſame Examination (he ſays) he was well acquainted with one Watſon, i. e. the late Earl Mariſhall, and lay ſeveral Nights with him; but after all his Intimacy, at laſt it comes out, that he did not know really who he was. There are ſome other Inconſiſtencies, which have been already taken notice of by Sir Conſtantine, which I ſhall not repeat.

But, my Lords, if the Perſons and Credit of Neynoe and Pancier were unexceptionable, yet what they ſay is only Hearſay, or mere Affirmation: And was ever that allow'd as Evidence in any material Point by any Law, or in any Court in the World? 'Tis expreſly reſolv'd in the Trials of Langhorn and Lord Ruſſel to be no Evidence; and it is the firſt Time it ever receiv'd ſo much Countenance as to be read in judicial Proceedings; and I dare ſay, there is no ſuch Practice in the Court of Inquiſitions abroad. Even common Fame and Reputation is but of little Weight in any Caſe that I know of. It may, my Lords, be a ſufficient Ground for an Officer of the Peace, in ſome few Caſes, to arreſt a Perſon, or for a vigilant Miniſtry to make Enquiries, i. e. to accuſe or apprehend; but was never yet allow'd to be a Guide in judicial Proceedings, or to condemn any Man in any Criminal Caſe whatever. But even when the Commons (in the Caſe of the Duke of Buckingham, 1 Car. I.) had declar'd, that common Fame was a good Ground of Enquiry, it was complain'd of, and the Commons afterwards receded from it, and proceeded upon the Examination of Witneſſes, and other Evidences, and in every Article of their Accuſation the particular Facts are expreſs'd. Much leſs will your Lordſhips allow the Hearſay of one ſingle Man, and only Extracts of that Hearſay, to be of any Weight, nay, to be of more Weight and Authority now he is dead, than if he were living: for if he were living, and could only depoſe by Hear-ſay, no one ſurely can ſay it would be admitted as Evidence; but ſince he is dead, and we have no Opportunity of croſs-examining of him, why ought not his Lordſhip to have the Advantage of it, as was reſolv'd in the Caſe of the [28] King againſt Pain? Or like the known Caſe of a Man dying in Execution, the Law is ſatisfied, and his Creditor is without Remedy? And it cannot be deny'd, but if one of our Witneſſes had died, and a Perſon had taken Minutes of what he could ſay, we ſhould not have had the Benefit of his Teſtimony; and where there is the ſame Reaſon, there ought in Juſtice to be the ſame Law and Conſtruction. And yet this is the Foundation and Support of the whole Charge againſt his Lordſhip. It is upon this Man's Examination ſingly that it is affirm'd, among other notorious Untruths, That the Pretender rely'd more upon Advices from the Biſhop, than from any other Perſons. But this, and whatever elſe is in them, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, amounts to no more than this, That Neynoe was heard to ſay, what he heard Kelly ſay, what Kelly muſt have heard ſome other Perſons ſay, what they had heard the Pretender ſay, what neither they, nor any one elſe, ever had Reaſon to ſay.

But, my Lords, there is ſtill ſomething more ſtrange in what is now attempted; for the Perſons of whom 'tis pretended they heard all this, and into whoſe Teſtimony it muſt all be reſolv'd, are now both living, and are ſo far from ſupporting what 'tis pretended they have heard from them, that they abſolutely deny and contradict every Word of it. One of them has already done it (if my Inſtructions are true) in the moſt ſolemn Manner at your Lordſhips Bar, and the other is now ready to do the ſame. And Neynoe was ſo conſcious to himſelf of the Falſity of what he had ſaid, that he loſt his Life to avoid the Puniſhment that might otherwiſe have fallen on him, (for his Flight, my Lords, can admit of no other Senſe or Conſtruction.) He could not apprehend himſelf in Danger, if what he had ſaid was true; but on the contrary, had reaſon to expect Rewards, if he could make out the Truth of his Information. Charity forbids me now, my Lords, to ſay any more of him, unleſs it be thought requiſite to prove the Falſity of his Information by his own free and voluntary Confeſſion, often repeated and confirm'd to Strangers and indifferent Perſons. And (if my Inſtructions are true) we have thoſe that will ſpeak moſt fully to it.

This is the firſt and the principal Part of their Proof; and if we take away this Foundation, all the mighty Superſtructure raiſed upon it muſt fall to the Ground, and all their corroborative Proofs and concurrent Circumſtances muſt come to nothing.

The ſecond Head of Accuſation againſt his Lordſhip, is, from three Letters, ſuppoſed to be dictated by him, of the 20th of April. The firſt to Chivers, interpreted Dillon, ſign'd by the Name of Jones; the ſecond to Muſgrave, interpreted Mar, ſign'd Illington; a third to Jackſon, explain'd to mean the Pretender, ſign'd 1378, and ſometimes 'tis printed 1387; and therefore which of theſe two is right I cannot tell.

Before I ſpeak of the Letters themſelves, I ſhall mention one Word as to the Manner of their Conveyance: They are ſaid to be enclos'd in a Packet to one Gordon of Boulogne, in a Letter from Kelly himſelf, ſent by the ordinary Poſt, and ſign'd with a Name, which they ſay he moſt uſually ſign'd and went by. This is ſo improbable, that out of eight or ten Names they are pleaſed to give him, he could bethink himſelf at that Time of no other Name to ſign a Letter enclo-ſing three of the utmoſt Conſequence; and is ſo inconſiſtent with that Caution and Subtlety all along inſinuated in this Correſpondence, that it almoſt needs no Confutation. But yet (if my Inſtructions are true) Mr. Gordon, to whom they are ſaid to have been directed, and the only indifferent Perſon in the Caſe, and can be under no ſort of Influence from hence, has atteſted upon his Oath, that there was no ſuch Letter, or Packet, ever came to his Hands.

And ſuppoſing theſe Letters were ſent, as they ſuppoſe, to the Perſons they ſuppoſe, and dictated by the Perſons they ſuppoſe; is there one Paſſage in them of ſuch a criminal Import, as would be ſufficient to found an Indictment at Law? If there is not, they are not to be made criminal by Arguments, Innuendos, and Implications. The Caſe of Sir Samuel Barnadiſton, already mention'd by Sir Conſtantine, is expreſly in Print; and the Reaſon given for the Reverſal of that Judgment (as appears by your own Journals) is, becauſe the Information was grounded upon Letters, which in themſelves were not criminal, but made ſo by Innuendos, and forc'd Conſtructions. There is Crosby's Caſe to the ſame Purpoſe, before the Court of King's Bench, in the Year 1695, who was indicted of Treaſon; and the Overt-Acts laid in the Indictment, were for inviting the French King to invade the Kingdom, and by ſending Letters and Inſtructions, how and where to make the Deſcent. Tho the Court thought his Hand-writing was prov'd, and the Matter of the Papers of a very odd and ſuſpicious Nature, and the French King frequently mention'd in them, and the Indictment ſuppoſed them to be contriv'd for to invite him over; yet they held it not Treaſon.

And the chief Thing that gives any Ground of Suſpicion, in this Caſe, is, the Perſon to whom they are ſuppoſed to be directed: but I muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips, that there has been no Proof, that either Chivers and Muſgrave, or Jackſon, are the very Perſons ſuppos'd, or that his Lordſhip was privy to the Writing of one, or the other of them; nor are they capable of Proof, as we hope immediately to make appear.

However, for the preſent, ſuppoſing as they have ſuppos'd, that Chivers and Muſgrave mean Dillon and Mar, and that ſuch Letters were wrote to them by his Lordſhip without any Diſguiſe, (unleſs the Matter of them, as I before ſaid, were plainly criminal) or unleſs your Lordſhips will ſuppoſe (as they ſuppoſe) ſomething criminal contain'd in the Words not decypher'd; and unleſs it could have been prov'd, that the Perſons writing or dictating theſe Letters, knew them to be the Pretender's Agents, and as ſuch addreſs'd to them; I don't know (my Lords) how it could be conſtrued a treaſonable or criminal Correſpondence, either within the Letter or Intention of Stat. 14 W. 3. c. 3. or any other Law whatſoever.

[28] 5 Mod. Rep. 161.

For tho the late Lord Mar is an attainted Perſon, it can't be denied but he is ſtill in many Senſes a Subject of England, and is no more diveſted of his natural Allegiance, than a baniſh'd, or an out-law'd Man: and tho he appear'd in open Arms and Rebellion againſt his Majeſty, he was not thought ſo dreadful a Man, as to have a Correſpondence with him made Treaſon or Felony; but that was a peculiar Favour, reſerved for this Reverend Prelate and his Friends. My Lords, I would not be underſtood to mean, as if the moſt innocent Correſpondence with a Perſon under ſuch Circumſtances, was prudent or convenient; but I think I may affirm (even from the Clauſe of this Bill) it would not of itſelf have been criminal. But (according to my Inſtructions) this Reverend Prelate was little known to that Lord, and never had any Friendſhip or Acquaintance with him while in England, and cannot be ſuppoſed to have contracted ſuch a Friendſhip ſince he was abroad.

That Dillon was an Agent of the Pretender's, nothing appears antecedent to theſe Letters: Nor did Mar at that Time appear to be one of his Agents, when it was ſo well known (as that Honourable Committee obſerve) that he was at that Time ſubſiſted by a Penſion from the Court of England. This Penſion indeed, is ſaid to be ſtopt laſt Auguſt; but the Letter to him of the 20th of April (by whomſoever wrote) was ſome Months before.

Indeed, if Jackſon had been proved to mean the Pretender, the Writing to him would be High-Treaſon plainly within the Statute: but that the Pretender is not, and cannot be underſtood by that Name, we hope to make appear fully, before we have done, even from the Lights that Honourable Committee have afforded us.

I ſhall next conſider the Nature of the Proofs to induce your Lordſhips Belief, that theſe Letters were dictated by my Lord Biſhop: And the firſt they offer, is, Becauſe the Matter of them agrees with his Lordſhip's Circumſtances at that Time; i. e. his being ill of the Gout, and the approaching Death of his Lady; which (they ſay) is morally impoſſible ſhould ſuit ſo exactly to any one Man elſe. Theſe two Circumſtances muſt be allow'd to be agreeable to thoſe which his Lordſhip was then under: But one would think (my Lords) they are Circumſtances ſo melancholy in themſelves, that they might have been ſpared, eſpecially conſidering the little Uſe or Advantage that can really be made of them. But theſe Circumſtances were no Secrets; every one that knew his Lordſhip, muſt likewiſe know them; and whoever wrote theſe Letters with a Deſign to have them intercepted, and imputed to him, (as we hope to ſhew the Caſe really was) would certainly mention ſuch Matters or Circumſtances in them, as might be naturally thought to deſcribe him. Or if they were written without his Knowledge, (as they will be clearly proved to have been) it is no wonder, if the Writer, who perſonated his Lordſhip, ſhould inſert all that was proper to faſten the Suſpicion he intended on him.

Another Proof that they were dictated by his Lordſhip, they ſay, is, from the Subſcription of the Names Jones, Illington, and the N° 1378, which are all affirmed to denote his Lordſhip: And the Reaſon why that Number belongs to him, is, becauſe the Decypherer has found that Number to denote the proper Name or Title of a Perſon beginning with the Letter R. If this is his real Opinion, muſt that needs be the Biſhop? Is there no body elſe, whoſe Name or Title begins with the ſame Letter?

But, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, it ſeems impoſſible to affirm even thus much with any Degree of Certainty, and it muſt be only Matter of mere Conjecture. Dr. Wallis, who is allow'd to be the Father of the Science, (ſuch as it is) and was the Wonder and Envy of all Foreigners, directly owns, that the Whole was built upon Conjectures; and he that had the beſt Gueſs, was the beſt Artiſt. Such, my Lords, is the Science of Decyphering. And from ſuch uncertain and conjectural Premiſes, what certain Concluſion can poſſibly be drawn? And 'tis plain, Mr. Willes is not ſo infallible as he pretends to be, by that Number of Paſſages not yet decypher'd.

When we took our Objection firſt againſt the Nature of this new ſort of Evidence, the Counſel for the Bill were pleaſed to cite a Statute in Q. Eliz. Time, wherein they ſaid the Word Cypher is mention'd. I have ſince look'd for that Statute, but could find nothing about it; and, perhaps, may be miſtaken in the Statute which they mean. But, my Lords, I am ſure they did not mention any particular Trial, where it was ever heard of, or allow'd as Evidence. I rather believe, that, according to the Notions of thoſe Times, (for ſoon after the Statute was made againſt Witches) if any Decypherers had appear'd then as Evidence, they might have been in more Danger than the Criminal.

But if there are any certain Rules, or any reaſonable Methods in Decyphering, I am ſure 'tis highly improbable, that Perſons ſo cunning and wary, as theſe are all along repreſented to be, ſhould be guilty of ſuch a fatal Overſight, as juſt to ſign with ſuch Numbers, that all, it ſeems, who underſtand Cyphers, muſt neceſſarily know to be intended for the Initial Letter of their Names. It would, my Lords, in my humble Opinion, have been more conſiſtent with that Care and Caution, to have made thoſe Numbers ſtand for quite contrary Letters, and thoſe Letters to have been expreſs'd by quite contrary Numbers; and there is no doubt, but they might have made any others ſignify the ſame thing. However, ſince the Decypherer has not ſhew'd us by what Methods he has arrived at this Concluſion, 'tis impoſſible for us, by any poſitive or direct Evidence, to confute it: But 'tis ſufficient for us, to deny on the one hand, what he has on the other hand affirm'd, without telling us the Reaſons of it.

That the Names of Jones and Illington belong to his Lordſhip, is endeavoured to be proved by ſome Paſſages in ſubſequent Letters, and by refining on the Matter of them, which they think is applicable to his Lordſhip only.

I have already mentioned Two of thoſe Inſtances, viz. his Lordſhip's own Indiſpoſition, and the Death of his Lady, which are likewiſe mentioned in the ſubſequent Letters, in order to faſten the Imputation intended, yet deeper on him. There is a Third, which relates to the Preſent of a Dog.

That such a Dog was sent does indeed appear; but that his Lordship had received it, or saw it, or had any Letter or Message about it, has not been proved, and he positively denies it; and to whom, or from whom it was really sent, Mr. Kelly can best determine, and his Lordship must refer himself to what he has always affirmed in his Examination; and (if I am rightly inform'd) since re-affirm'd at your Lordships Bar, that he gave it to Mrs. Barnes, and designed it for her from the first, and for her only.

My Lords, I should apologize for taking Notice of such minute and low Circumstances; but it is the Evidence and Nature of the Proof made use of against us. I should rather have expected, that ingenious Gentleman (the Decypherer) would have shewn, by some Rules of his Art, that the whole Story of the Dog had been a Fable or Fiction, and explain'd it to something that was reasonable and probable, which I am sure this is not, to suppose (as the Letters read to your Lordships do suppose) Musgrave, i. e. Mar, in one Part of the World, General Dillon in another [29], widely distant one from the other, and a learned Prelate, to be in such Tribulation and Concern for a little Dog; which no way suits the Characters of any one of the Persons to whom it is applied; much less the Circumstances of this Learned Prelate, who had at that time a much nearer Concern upon him, from the Death of his Wife, and was himself in such great Disorder and Weakness of Body. The speaking therefore of this Present, backwards and forwards, with such particular Circumstances, and the Report of it so industriously spread many Months before my Lord Bishop's Apprehension, (as some of your Lordships cannot but remember) is absurd and ridiculous upon all other Suppositions, but upon the Design of fastning something on his Lordship, the Point all along in their View.

If the Writer of these Letters had been really and truly informed of his Lordship's Circumstances, he might, perhaps more properly have affirm'd it of his Lady; which 'tis plain, the Writer was not, because he speaks of her as Living 11 Days after she was Dead. And how ignorant of them the Writer really was, appears by another Passage in that very Letter; where he says, [30] 'Mr. Jones is come to Town for a Day only, 'May 7th.' Whereas his Lordship had been in Town Two Days, and staid Three more, as appears even by their own Evidence, Lawson and Wood.

By these your Lordships may see, how many forced Inferences and Constructions, and what a Train of Absurdities and Suppositions are necessary to support one poor, and (if true) yet inconsiderable Assertion, when once we depart from the sure and known Rules of Law!

A Third Way of proving these Letters to be the Bishop's, is from the Hand-writing, which is supposed to be Kelly's, and he is supposed to have been his Lordship's Secretary in these Matters: Both which Suppositions are destitute of any proper or satisfactory Proof.

The first is attempted to be supported by the Testimony of the Clerks of the Post-Office. But before I speak to the Testimony which they have given, I must beg leave to offer one Word as to their manner of obtaining it; and shall endeavour not to transgress your Lordships late Resolution: And when I mention any Words of that Act of Parliament, it is only to shew the cautious Measures the Legislature took even in imparting this Power to them, and the just Apprehensions they had of the Abuses and ill Consequences that might attend it. My Lords, I am so far from endeavouring to bring them in danger of a Penalty, as the Counsel were pleased to object, that I am willing to suppose those Clerks had proper Warrants at that Time, and for that particular Opening and Detaining. But that is all which the Act gives, and the Words of it are fully satisfied by such a Construction, without going farther, and extending the Words of the Act to that which was not in the least within the Intention or Purview of it. It don't appear to me, my Lords, I confess, how they are impower'd to take Copies (for all such Acts which are in Restraint of Trade and Commerce, are to be strictly and literally construed:) But I am utterly at a Loss to know, from what Words of the Act it can be inferr'd, that such Copies shall be received as Evidence in Courts of Judicature; and not only against the Writer himself, but against other Persons too.

A private Act of Parliament (tho printed in Rastal and other authentick Collections of Statutes) has been disallow'd, when it has not been examined with the Record. But, my Lords, I don't know that a Copy of any Thing was ever allow'd as Evidence, but what was made by a proper Sworn Officer, known in Law, and where every one may have Access to it; and therefore, if false, may be disproved by the other Side. But is there the same Reason here? My Lords, can the Party ever have an Opportunity to disprove it, if falsly copied, when the Original is sent forward? Or, if it were still in their Possession, have we any Power to procure a Sight of the Original? or to have a Copy of that Copy? And therefore, we hope your Lordships will not regard that Part of the Evidence, if it were material. But to consider also, my Lords, what it is they have deposed of these Copies; That the Originals were written in the same Hand with some Papers shewed them; and which, they were told, were Mr. Kelly's Hand-writing. Your Lordships, I doubt not, observe the Time when they deposed this first, viz. the 24th of August, and afterwards the first of January last; i. e. The first of these Depositions four Months, the other eight Months, after they had seen the Originals of the 20th of April: For, they were forwarded by the Post, and the Clerks only took Copies of them, and did not detain any one Original for a Specimen till their first Deposition; and surely that was a little of the latest: So that it rests singly upon the Memory of the Clerks for four or eight Months. I think St. James says, That a Man may even behold his own Face in a Glass, but he is no sooner gone, but he straitway forgetteth what manner of Man he was: And it is much more impossible for any one so exactly and nicely to remember all the little Strokes and Dashes of the Pen, by which the Sameness or Diversity of Hands can only be made out.

And all Malore swears, is, That he believes it to be Kelly's Hand-writing; and 'tis remarkable, that his Deposition is but in January last, and he left Mrs. Barnes's Service in May, so that he could not have ſeen him write ſince that Time. He don't ſay, he ever read any of his Writing, or at moſt the Superſcription of a Letter: He might, perhaps, ſee him write at ſome Diſtance, as he came in and out of the Room; but ſurely, that cannot be ſufficient to form a Judgment of a Man's Hand-writing; and I am ſure the Improbability is much greater after nine Months Time. And Hutchins the Meſſenger, from ſeeing the Superſcription of a Letter to the Secretary of State, has likewiſe, I think, taken upon him to ſwear the ſame thing.

But ſuppoſing theſe Perſons had ſeen Mr. Kelly write frequently, and had, within a more reaſonable Diſtance, ſwore it to be like his Hand, will any one ſay, That it is a ſufficient, or even a reaſonable Proof, in any Criminal Caſe? But becauſe Mr. Kelly is all along affirmed to have acted in theſe Matters as his Lordſhip's Secretary, I muſt beg your Lordſhips Patience to conſider, How far that Doctrine of Similitude of Hands has prevailed.

Colonel Sidney's Caſe was the firſt wherein it was ever admitted as a Proof in a Criminal Caſe; but that Judgment was afterwards reverſed by Parliament, as manifeſtly unjuſt. In Lady Car's Caſe, Sid. Rep. 419. which was only an Information of Perjury, yet a Letter under her own Hand was poſitively denied to be Evidence; tho a Witneſs ſwore he believed it to be hers. I muſt own, my Lords, this Caſe at the late Trial of Mr. Layer, was not only denied to be Law, but all Men defy'd to make common Senſe of it: But, with the utmoſt Deference to that Learned Gentleman that ſaid ſo, I beg Leave to mention the Words of Sir J. Hawles upon that Caſe, who was of a different Opinion. 'At that Time, 'ſays he, when the Caſe of Lady Car was ad-'judged, beſides Twiſden and Keyling, Two very 'eminent Judges, there ſat in that Court Sir 'Wad. Windham, whom all will own to have 'been the Second beſt Judge who ſat in Weſt-'minſter-Hall ſince the Reſtoration; and if it is 'not Evidence in Miſdemeanour, much leſs, ſays 'he, in Treaſon.' Which Inference, beſides the Reaſon of the Thing itſelf, is ſupported by the Authority of Lord Coke.

In my Lord Preſton's Caſe, his Hand-writing was proved by Three Witneſſes, that had belonged to him while in the Secretary's Office, and muſt neceſſarily have ſeen him write a thouſand Times: But that was not all; for thoſe Papers were ſeized on him, ſealed with his own Seal, as he was going to France in the Heat of War, contrary to an Act of Parliament; which at that Time made it Treaſon.

In the Trial of the Seven Biſhops, the ſame Queſtion aroſe, Whether Similitude of Hands was a Proof in a Criminal Matter? and it was not admitted.

In Francia's Trial, before all the Judges at the Old-Baily, it is poſitively laid down by the Chief Baron, and not contradicted by any others, That it was no Proof or Evidence of itſelf; and the Letter in that Caſe would not have been admitted, but that it was found by his Bedſide, and a Copy of the very ſame Letter enter'd in his Pocket Book, which he had owned and explained to ſome Lords of the Council.

In Crosby's Caſe, the Hand-writing was ſworn to by Three poſitive Witneſſes, and owned in one of the Papers by the Priſoner himſelf; yet Lord Chief Juſtice Holt and the Court held it no Evidence, Becauſe one Hand, ſays he, may be like another, and Preſumptions ſhall never take Place in Treaſons.

In the late Caſe of Mr. Layer, 'tis well known, that beſides the Proof of his own Hand-writing, the Treaſonable Papers were deliver'd by his own Hand to the Witneſs; and 'twas upon that Ground only, they were permitted to be read againſt him. Beſides this, he had ſaid that before the Lords of the Council, which the Court thought amounted to a full Acknowledgment that it was his Writing. But even all this, my Lords, was made uſe of againſt him but as concurrent Evidence, becauſe there were Two poſitive Witneſſes, viva voce, againſt him, as to the other Overt-Acts.

I will mention to your Lordſhips ſome Foreign concurrent Authorities upon this Point, to ſhew, that the Reaſon and Equity of this Doctrine has been uniform and univerſal, That Similitude or Compariſon of Hands is not a ſufficient Proof of it. There is a famous Caſe of Jean Millard, in a Book called, Le Journal du Palais. He had lived 40 Years from his Wife, and then returned and reclaimed her, after ſhe was marry'd to another. One of his Methods made uſe of to prove him to be the ſame Perſon, was, the Hand-writing of Letters that had formerly paſſed between them: Which occaſion'd this Queſtion before all the famous Judicatures of France, 'Whether the Teſ-'timony of skilful Notaries, who fully depoſed 'of the Similitude of the Hands, was a ſufficient 'Proof in this Caſe?' and it was univerſally denied. And yet this, my Lords, was a Caſe highly favour'd in all Laws; but more highly in thoſe Places, where Marriage is reputed as a Sacrament, and in favour of which they will often admit even the Party's own Oath.

Codex Fabrianus, Lib. 4. Tit. 14. Def. 71. ſays, 'A Proof by Compariſon of Hands, is a very 'dangerous Proof: Idque in cauſis civilibus duntax-'at, ſed in criminalibus, in quibus periculum majus 'verſatur, aut capitis, aut exiſtimationis, non item.'

Voet, an eminent Modern Civilian, Lib. 22. Tom. 4. Sect. 11. to the very ſame Purpoſe. And ſo does Cujacius in his Commentary on the Novels 73. 'The Romans, ſays he, never allow'd it, but 'when no other Proof could be had. And in 'latter Times, when Forgeries became more fre-'quent, they would not allow of it at all, unleſs 'the Writing had been acknowledged by the Par-'ty, or proved by Two Witneſſes who ſaw him 'write it.'

And then it was neceſſary to bring both into Court, that the Judges themſelves might make the Compariſon, and not leave the Witneſſes to be the only Judges of it.

But it was never known, and I may defy all the Writers of Law to ſhew me one Inſtance, that any Evidence of the Similitude of Hands (which can only be made out by Compariſon) was admitted, but where the Papers pretended to be written in the ſame Hand, were produced and compared: Which is ſo far from being the preſent Caſe, that even the atteſting Clerks, who are the only Witneſſes in the Caſe, never had an Opportunity of comparing the Original Letter ſtopp'd in Auguſt laſt, with any one of the three Original Letters dated April 20. or with any of the intermediate Letters, which they affirm to have been written in the same Hand.

And if it be consider'd, how much more difficult it is to distinguish the Hand of one writing in Figures (which stand single one from another) from the Hand of one writing in Words at length (which are variously connected and combined) your Lordships will never give them the least Degree of Credit.

But at once to put an End to this Evidence (if my Instructions are true) it has already appear'd to your Lordships, upon Mr. Kelly's Bill, That the only Original Letter of the twentieth of August, stopt as a Sample at the Post-Office, and the only Ground of affirming these Three to have been his, was not his Hand-writing; and if need be, we have the same and stronger Evidence to produce. Upon the whole therefore, I think I may affirm, That there is no legal or reasonable Ground to infer those Letters to have been wrote by Kelly.

And surely, my Lords, it was incumbent on them to prove, as well as to affirm, that they were wrote by his Lordship's Direction, before they can affect him; even tho the Writer (whoever he was) had presumed to have signed them with his Lordship's own Name and proper Appellation. I beseech your Lordships, how does it in the least appear, that Mr. Kelly, or Mr. Carte, (as is afterwards upon no better Grounds suggested) was employ'd by his Lordship to carry on that Correspondence? It has, I confess, been frequently said at your Lordships Bar, as well as by that Honourable Committee, but like other Charges, without any Shadow of Proof; unless it be an obscure Passage in a Letter of Chitwell from abroad, to one Williams here, D. 27. which says, They had a Story in France of Weston*'s Clerk being laid up for Debt:* Which, as I shall afterwards shew, could not possibly mean his Lordship. There is another Passage also in the Letter to Dubois, from whence the same Inference is made. What unknown Person that Dubois is don't appear, or whether it is a real or fictitious Name; for all their Lists and Cyphers afford nothing like it. The Committee are pleased to suppose it a Letter to the Bishop, and received by him from Abroad; and from thence infer, he used to receive Letters directed to him by fictitious Names. The Counsel for the Bill suppose it a Letter from himself to himself, because the Hand-writing, they say, (or rather the Letter e) is something like his Lordship's. It is not signed by any one, and dated only the sixteenth of December without any Year; and tho that Honourable Committee are pleased to affix, in their Observations on it, 1721. because Johnson, they say, was about that Time at Paris, yet for what appears from the Letter itself, it might be written before his Majesty's Accession, or before the several Acts of Grace that have been; and if it had any Criminal Meaning, 'tis improbable his Lordship would have mentioned the Hand of Conveyance at length; and much more improbable, that he should have destroyed all his other Letters (as the Committee are pleased to insinuate) and to preserve this only, which is of no Consequence, but to furnish Evidence against himself, and to explain the Thing most wanted. Another Proof that it is his Letter, is from a broken Seal, which, they say, is made by the same Seal as that seized on his Servant at the Tower. But consider, my Lords, how many Similitudes we are at last come to in this one Attempt, Similitude of Hands, Similitude of Figures, Similitude of Characters, and Similitude of Seals!

That Similitude of Hand-writing is no Proof, I have shewn by a Variety of the best Authorities: much less, the Similitude of one Letter in the Alphabet; that is, I dare say, a Conceit perfectly new. And 'tis well known, Artists are capable of counterfeiting any Man's Hand or Seal in such a Manner, that even the Person whose Hand or Seal it is, shall not be able to distinguish it from his own: And your Lordships yesterday saw an ample Specimen of it.

It is upon these Grounds, my Lords, that Kelly hath been affirmed to have been his Lordship's Secretary in these Matters; but there is not the least Charge or Pretence of his having writ any other Letters of any kind for the Bishop, but these Three only, and not one thro'out the whole Correspondence charg'd to have been written by Carte, (tho he is in general charged as another Manager of this Correspondence.) This, my Lords, we must insist, ought to have had the fullest Proof, and the most undeniable Evidence: For it is the Gist of the Offence, 'tis the Foundation of the Statute 14 W. III. c. 3. and 'tis the particular Suggestion of this Bill. 'Tis possible some such Letter might be wrote by Kelly or Carte to the Persons they are address'd to, without the Bishop's Privity or Direction; 'tis not so uncommon a thing to pretend Acquaintance with Persons of Distinction, or to make use of their Name and Authority, to give themselves a greater Degree of Credit with their Correspondents.

If this may be so, and ought now to be presumed so, since no Man has proved it otherwise; then no Man surely ought to suffer by the Act of another, or to be punished for another Man's Fault.

I believe no one will think it any Reflection to hear many of your Lordships Names in these Cyphers, and afterwards to find a frequent Mention of them in the Correspondence; or to find his Majesty's own Name in Plunket's Cypher, under the Disguise of Hawkesby, and Page 62. of the Report, Compliments from the Pretender and his Wife to one Hawkesby. No Man, I say, will apply these, or many other Names of Persons of Honour mentioned in them, to the Persons themselves, or imagine those Letters were really wrote by their Privity or Consent. By the same Rule of Justice, and by a Parity of Reason, my Lord Bishop's, Name may be presum'd to have been made use of, without his Privity or Consent; and if there is any certain Rule or Position in Law, it is this, That all Presumption ought to be in favour of Innocency.

And to shew the little Intimacy there was between his Lordship and Mr. Kelly, (if Rig means his Lordship, as they suppose, or that Letter E. 64. was from Kelly, as they also suppose) it will be sufficient to remind your Lordships of one part of it, where the Writer says,—'That Rig and one Skin had been together; 'but the Result of their Meeting he knew no'thing of. Rig. had fixed his Suspicion some'where, tho I cannot find out the Place; but 'you will hear it from Skin, to whom, it's probable,

'bable, he may have communicated his Senti-'ments that way.' That is, my Lords, if I underſtand the Meaning of thoſe Words, that Kelly, the ſuppoſed Secretary on all theſe Occaſions, knew nothing of the Matters, or at leaſt much leſs than Skin, whom Kelly had but juſt before introduc'd into Rig's Acquaintance.

There is another Letter which has likewiſe been read, E. 47. (if it is to be underſtood to be Mr. Kelly's, as they ſuppoſe, and Rig is to mean his Lordſhip; tho we are far from admitting the one or the other) which we deſire to make uſe of, and amounts to a full and direct Confeſſion, that the Writer (whoever he is) had nothing in his Power or Knowledge to charge him with. I have the more Countenance, my Lords, to repeat the Words of this Letter, becauſe that Honourable Committee have let it paſs without Exception, Fol. 59. of the Report: Wherein the Writer vows, 'He never heard of 'the Cant Names of Jones and Illington, or who 'was meant by them: That ſome Perſons in 'whoſe Power it was to do for him, had ſhewed 'no Concern at all for his Misfortunes; that it 'was well he had no Secrets to reveal, ſince 'ſuch Uſage might provoke a paſſionate Man.' And all the World is ſince convinced he had not, ſince no Perſon ſeemed to be apprehenſive that he could do them any Miſchief. My Lords, I ſay, if this Letter is to be underſtood as from that Gentleman, we think we are intitled to have the Benefit of his open and candid Declaration.

But however, my Lords, if we ſhould not be allowed to make this Uſe of it, yet (if my Inſtructions are true) Mr. Kelly fully aſſerted this himſelf at your Lordſhips Bar; and even without it, we ſhall be able to make appear moſt plainly, in the Courſe of our Evidence, that Kelly did not, and could not write theſe Three Letters from his Lordſhip's Mouth, or by his Lordſhip's Direction.

The Date of all Three is 20 April; when this Reverend Prelate (as has been already mentioned to your Lordſhips) was deprived of the Uſe of both Hand and Foot: had for a great while been confined to his Room, under the greateſt Weakneſs and Diſorder, when his Lady lay in the next Room, on her Death-bed.

Theſe, my Lords, and other remarkable Circumſtances in his Family, which diſtinguiſh this particular Period of Time, as on the one hand, they have given the Writer of theſe fictitious Letters ſome Advantage towards fixing them on the Biſhop; ſo, on the other hand, they afford his Lordſhip a like Advantage (in the moſt providential Manner, I may ſay) towards clearing himſelf from the Imputation of them. Becauſe his Servants then attending him, are able to recollect what paſſed on that Occaſion, and to be very poſitive and particular in their Evidence concerning it.

His Lordſhip happened then to have Three Men-Servants actually attending on him, and ſome one of theſe always, both Day and Night, either preſent with him in the Room, or waiting in the Paſſage at his Chamber-Door; and the Weather being warm, and the Room cloſe, the Door was generally wide open: It was then this Reverend Prelate's Misfortune, that he was not able, without their Help, to ſtir, or even to lift up what he eat or drank to his Mouth. Beſides theſe, there were Two Women-Servants, which conſtantly attended his Lady in her Room, which is next adjoining, and came frequently to him (once or twice an Hour) every Day with Accounts how ſhe did, the Biſhop himſelf being diſabled (for ſeveral Days before her Death) to go out of his Room.

And all theſe five Servants will depoſe, That for 14 or 15 Days before his Lady's Death, no Stranger whatever viſited his Lordſhip, much leſs ſtayed there any Time with him. This (my Lords) the Women-Servants will affirm, as far as their frequent ſeeing of him gave them Opportunity to make theſe Obſervations. His Coachman (tho now Witneſs againſt him) has conſtantly affirmed the ſame thing, both below as well as before your Lordſhips. But the three Men (one of which was always in the Room Day and Night, as I before obſerved) can be moſt full and peremptory in their Teſtimony. So that the Biſhop could not poſſibly dictate theſe Letters, either to Mr. Kelly, or to any Body elſe, without the Privity and Obſervation of ſome of them.

This being a Negative, it is impoſſible to be more fully proved in any Caſe; and nothing but the remarkable Circumſtances that happened at that time, to which the Writer of thoſe Letters unluckily pinned them down, could have help'd us to ſo ſtrong and undeniable a Proof of it.

Whether Mr. Kelly was ever acquainted or viſited his Lordſhip (indeed I am not inſtructed) their Evidence [31], I am ſure, has proved nothing like it, nor is it material, much leſs criminal. But as to the particular time (12 April) when Mr. Kelly is ſuppoſed to have told Mrs. Barnes, and ſhe is ſuppoſed to have told Mrs. Levet, that his Lordſhip ſent his Coach for Kelly, we ſhall expreſly prove the contrary: and beſides that it is only Hearſay of Mrs. Levet from Mrs. Barnes who denies it, and his Lordſhip's Diſability at that time to receive Company; I ſay (my Lords) beſides theſe Circumſtances, it is remarkable that the Coachman, and the Baker (who it ſeems was directed to keep a Diary of every Body that came, and of all that happened in his Lordſhip's Family) ſay not one word of this remarkable Incident, in either of their Depoſitions. The Coachman has denied that he ever fetch'd Mr. Kelly in his Lordſhip's Coach ſince he lived with his Lordſhip, or ever was at Kelly's Lodgings, or that he ever ſaw him or Mr. Carte in his Lifetime; and ſurely their Silence (if there were nothing elſe in the Caſe) is ſufficient to infer, that he was not there at that time: And all Mrs. Kay and Malone ſwear is no more, than that they don't remember Kelly lay at Mrs. Barnes's that Thurſday or Friday (the firſt only ſpeaks in her printed Depoſition of a Thurſday or Friday about the middle of April.) And how is it poſſible they ſhould remember the time ſo exactly, for neither of them belonged immediately to Kelly, but were only Servants to Mrs. Barnes, who had other Lodgers in her Houſe? They did not even make theſe Affidavits till the 6th of February laſt; and 'tis no eaſy Matter to remember ſuch an inconſiderable Circumſtance of a Lodger (ten Months together) unleſs they likewise had been instructed before-hand to keep Diaries of Mr. Kelly's Motions.

The Third General Charge against my Lord Bishop, is [32] the receiving of Letters from Abroad relating to this Conspiracy.

Two Instances only of this Kind have been [33] produced. The first from Motfield (interpreted Mar) 11th of May, addressed to Illington.

The other from Digby (supposed to be Dillon) 14th of July, addressed to Mrs. Weston. Neither of which (do they pretend to say) came to his Lordship's Hands, or if they had, that there is one criminal Word contained in them, and consequently could not be (as I before proved) a treasonable Correspondence, within the Letter or Intent of any Law.

That of Motfield's is a mere Letter of Friendship, and (if from Lord Mar, as they suppose) is to a Person with whom he never had either Friendship or Acquaintance; but really seems designed for no other Purpose but to fix upon his Lordship the Letter directed to Musgrave of the 20th of April, (for the same reason interpreted Mar) the Receipt of which is there acknowledged; and in his words of Condolence there is something, (which, 'tis said, points out his Lordship's Character and Function) tho in my humble Apprehension, no more applicable to his Lordship, either as a Bishop or a Clergyman, than to any other Person; especially if it be considered (as it really is) the Style of a Letter of Compliment. But if the Letter itself, to which this is pretended to be an Answer, should prove to be a mere Fiction, the Answer to it (tho it were Criminal) must fall with it, as a part of the same Contrivance.

And as to the Letter from Digby to Weston, tho that Hon. Committee seem to lay some Stress upon it, by printing it at length in their Report, yet there is nothing in it that can affect any Man criminally, but his Lordship not at all; because the Passage in it, relating to his Health, and the Concerns of his Family, cannot possibly be applied to him. It implies, that he was then in a very ill State of Health (July 25.) and his Family in great Disorder; whereas his Lordship (I can speak it, my Lords, upon my own Knowledge, as well as the Testimony of several Clergy of his Diocese, and others) was then perfectly well, and able to transact all the ordinary Business of his Diocese and Deanery, and had been so for above two Months, having myself the Honour at that time to be concerned with his Lordship in a very tedious and intricate Enquiry; and the Disorder in his Family (if it means the Death of his Lady, for that or nothing is meant by it) had been over a much longer space of Time.

Nor is it probable that such a Mistake should be made by the Person (whom the Name of Digby is supposed to denote) if what the Report p. 39. and the Appendix D. 32 and 29. informs us, be true, that two Letters had some time before been written to Digby, or his Secretary; the one (July 4) assuring, Weston was never better in his Life, the other (14 July) affirming he was then perfectly well. But it is still more improbable, if your Lordships will consider what that Hon. Committee have justly observed, in the very same Leaf, that the Professions of these two Correspondents were so foreign and different, as to lay no sort of Foundation for Intimacy or Intercourse between them: and the natural and only Conclusion (we think) from hence, is, that the Letters on this Head, either from this or the other side of the Water, cannot be genuine; and that no fair or regular Correspondent could be guilty of such gross Mistakes.

And of both these Letters from Motfield and Digby, your Lordships have (I doubt not) observed, that there is no pretence of Proof concerning the Hands in which they are written; which surely would have been more requisite, than the Application of feigned Names, to ascertain them. Otherwise any one who was acquainted with such Names might write Letters from the other Side, as coming from the Persons designed by those Names, which they themselves were ignorant of.

And as the Receipt of these Letters by his Lordship has not been proved, so there is not any Insinuation or Pretence that he ever answered them, tho they both bear Date long before his Lordship's Commitment.

This part of the Scheme therefore for charging his Lordship with a foreign Correspondence under fictitious Names, was not so artfully contrived as the former; and seems, by so many grosser Mistakes, to have proceeded from some Body that had a much worse Intelligence concerning his Lordship's Affairs.

I shall here beg leave to take Notice of the Letter taken from one of his Lordship's Servants in the Tower, on which the learned Counsel have laid such great Stress, because there were no Professions of his Innocency in it. If there had been, I suppose they would not have been much regarded. Why therefore should it be any Argument against him, because there is no such thing? Matters are at a very low Ebb, when such Trifles are relied on. But there is another Reason. The Letter I suppose to have been intended for some near or intimate Friends, and to such Persons there was no need of making such a Profession. They knew (whoever they were) and were before sufficiently persuaded of his Lordship's Innocency, and that it was impossible he should be guilty of what is laid to his Charge. And by what has already appeared to your Lordships, I may say, this Reverend Prelate had no need of making such an Apology, and that the Persuasions of his Friends were not ill-grounded.

The Fourth Head, to which the Charge against his Lordship may be reduced, is the Coincidence of Circumstances, Times, and feigned Names in the intercepted Correspondence, to induce your Lordships Belief of the before mentioned Hearsays and supposed Facts, that his Lordship, and he only, is meant by that Correspondence.

And the chief Observation about the Coincidence of Times and Circumstances relates to the three Letters of April 20. his Lordship's Illness, and the Death of his Lady, and the Present of the Dog, about the ſame time. All which have already been accounted for, either as Truths publickly known, turned by ignorant or malicious Correſpondents to ill Purpoſes, or as abſolute Falſities, as will appear to your Lordſhips by our Evidence.

1. As to the Article of Times, of his Lordſhip's coming and going, it muſt be own'd, the Penmen of theſe Letters are ſometimes right; but they are as often wrong, and the Miſtakes are of more Conſequence to deſtroy what is inferred from them, than the real Agreements, in point of Time, are, or can be, to eſtabliſh it. There is no doubt, but the Correſpondents on this Side (whoever they were, and whether out of Malice or Vanity) apprized themſelves as well as they could of his Lordſhip's Motions, in order to give a colour of Probability to what they ſaid of him; and yet it happens, that out of ſeven Inſtances occurring in theſe Letters, and referred to in the Report, three of them (if not four) are plain and groſs Miſtakes: two only are true in all their Circumſtances; and of the other two, it may be doubted whether they anſwer the Truth in every reſpect, or not.

Firſt, As to the two doubtful Inſtances, one is 49 pag. Rep. D. 29. where June 14. G. W. writes to Quitwell, Mr. Weſton is in the Country, I ſaw him two Days ago. If theſe Words mean, that he ſaw him two Days ago in the Country, (which is the moſt obvious Senſe of them) then the Aſſertion is falſe; for his Lordſhip came to Town June 12. as appeared yeſterday by the Coachman's Book: but if they mean, I ſaw him two Days ago in Town, then the Aſſertion may be true.

The other Inſtance is Report 51, 52. D. 14. ſomebody writes July 26. to Maiſonneuve, that Rig and Skin had been lately together, and that Rig went into the Country the Day after. Now by Depoſitions D. 48. it appears, the Biſhop went out of Town July 21. they muſt have met therefore on the 20th, which don't well anſwer the Word lately, which one would think imported 6 or 7 Days more. And therefore theſe two Inſtances we ſet aſide, as neither plainly true nor plainly falſe. The three next are manifeſt Miſtakes.

In Hatfield's Letter to Muſgrave May 7. it's ſaid, [34] Mr. Jones is come to Town only for a Day, and yet (if Jones means the Biſhop) he had been in Town two Days, and ſtay'd in Town three days longer; for he came 5*th May*, and returned 10*th May*, as appears by Lawſon and Wood's Examination.

So in a Letter of J. H. to Dixwell, June 12. it's ſaid, Rig (ſuppoſed to mean the Biſhop) is I hear in the Country; whereas his Lordſhip was at Weſtminſter June 18 and 19, as appears by the Coachman's Books.

In a Letter to Maiſonneuve, July 19. F. 59. Rig is again ſaid to be in the Country, whereas his Lordſhip was at Weſtminſter that very Day, and continued there till the 21*ſt*, as appears by the ſame printed Depoſitions.

And the Miſtakes in theſe three Inſtances are the more remarkable, becauſe they all affirm his Lordſhip to be in the Country, when he poſitively was not; whereas it was ten to one, but that even mere Gueſſes had been true, at a Time of Year that every one almoſt is in the Country, and his Lordſhip was really ten Days in the Country, to one that he was in Town, during the whole Summer.

But, My Lords, I muſt with ſome Regret take notice, that none of theſe Miſtakes are acknowledged in the Report of that Honourable Committee, tho all the Letters and Paſſages are tranſcribed in it, particularly that of the 7th of May, E. 42. Theſe Words are inſerted in the Report, page 41. [Mr. Jones is come to Town] but the following Words [only for a Day] are omitted; and yet the Section concludes, that it agrees with the Enquiry made at that Time; which indeed it does (as far as it is there quoted) tho not with the Appen. E. 42.

What Enquiry of this kind was then made, and with what Views, we cannot ſay, unleſs we may ſuppoſe it to be made by his Neighbour Lawſon. If it was, 'tis ſtrange that he could not depoſe from his own Knowledge and Obſervations in May, but only as to what he had heard and was told by Wood, his Lordſhip's Coachman, ſo lately as the 19th of February laſt. I would reconcile this if it be poſſible: and the moſt natural Inference I can draw from it is, that Lawſon (or whoever that Inquirer was) had pretended to take ſome Account of his own at the Time mentioned by the Committee, which, upon Compariſon with that of the Coachman's, he found to be manifeſtly falſe and erroneous, and therefore would not produce or depend upon that: but we hope his Teſtimony can receive no Advantage from ſuch a Conduct. And upon the whole it appears, that tho more Induſtry has been employed on the Article of Enquiry, yet as many Miſtakes have been made in it, as in any other.

And as for the Coachman's Book, after all it cannot be entirely relied on; becauſe the Entries made in his Book can only relate (as we apprehend) to the Charges of Turnpikes and Ferryings, or ſuch other Matters for which he was accountable. He had no reaſon to take Notice in ſuch an Account, when his Lordſhip was in the Coach, when Not; and your Lordſhips have heard, cannot be poſitive on that Head. And therefore how exact ſoever his Accounts may be, in reſpect to thoſe little Diſburſments, they can add no Weight to the Obſervation drawn from them by that Honourable Committee; and tho great Streſs has been laid on them, (with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips) they amount to no more, than that ſome Perſons on this ſide the Water, writing to ſome on the other ſide, are ſuppoſed to mention his Lordſhip, ſometimes as in Town, or in the Country: and from thence 'tis inferr'd, that they had frequent Acceſs to him, and conſequently the Matter of their Correſpondence is imputed to him.

Had theſe Correſpondents been exact, my Lords, in all their Accounts of his Motions, ſurely no ſuch Concluſions could have been reaſonably made: but as they are oftner wrong than right, it follows, they were not ſo well acquainted with his Lordſhip or his Circumſtances, as (to ſerve their evil Purpoſes) they have pretended to be.

Having thus ſpoken as to the Circumſtances of Times, (which are thrown in to induce a Belief, that his Lordſhip was meant by that Correſpon-dence) I shall next offer something as to the Cant Names: And tho it has been already observ'd to your Lordships in various Instances, that the Names of Jones, Illington, and Weston, could not possibly belong to him; yet give me leave (my Lords) to say further, that Jones is not only a very common Name (for in one Society, I think, I remember no less than sixteen of the Name at once) but that Name is manifestly applied to very different Persons, even in the Papers contained in the Appendix. In Plunket's Cypher Jones denotes the Germans: Twelve or Fourteen times it is supposed to denote the Duke of Norfolk, in three other Places to denote Sir W. Ellis; and even in the Letters imputed to Kelly, there are [85] Passages (besides those already mentioned to your Lordships) which cannot with any Reason or Probability be applied to his Lordship: For instance, D. 23. Jones and Illington are within the Compass of two Lines plainly distinguished, as two different Persons, and therefore both cannot be apply'd to his Lordship. And in the same Letter as well as a preceding Letter, D. 13. Jones is mentioned as having undertaken to do something for a Boy at Eaton; where it is well known his Lordship has no Influence of Acquaintance, and if he had interested himself there on any such Account, it would easily have been discovered. And this, my Lords, is one strong Instance, to shew the Ignorance of the Writer, even in some of his Lordship's most notorious Circumstances.

A great deal of Pains has likewise been taken, by the help of divers Suppositions and Reasonings, to prove that Rig denotes his Lordship. However, I shall take Notice but of one, in the Letter to Gerrard, which is said to be Sir J. D'Obryan, Report 49. E. 47. where something is said of Rig, highly improper, and absolutely false, if to be understood of the Bishop. An Account is said to be given of the Difficulty Kelly had to get Bail, and it is added — Your old Friend Rig indeed offered all that could be expected of the Poor Man. (If my Instructions are true) D'Obryan is a Name his Lordship never heard of before, nor had the least Concern in procuring Kelly's Bail, nor knows to this Day who they are; the only Words applicable to him in this Passage, are those of Poor Man; and his Lordship permits me to say, that he is really such, poor both in Body and Purse, and as poor as his Enemies almost can make him: and tho he may have Reason (if your Lordships should pass this Bill with all the Severities intended by it) to be heartily sorry he is so, and that he has neglected those Opportunities of enriching himself, which others would have laid hold of; yet he gives me leave, my Lords, to say, he is not ashamed of that Poverty, because free from all unjust Acquisitions, and unworthy Compliances. But that he was a poor Man at that Time, i. e. unable to procure Bail, (which is the Sense that Writer means it in) cannot with any Decency or Justice be applied to one of his Lordship's Interest and Station, if he had concerned himself in it.

Give me leave (my Lords) to take Notice of another Mistake of that Honourable Committee in the very same Letter; I mean, a Passage cited from it which is not in it, to prove that Rig and his Lordship are the same Persons; which I should have omitted, but that it breaks at once the Chain of Reasoning there made use of. The Words are, how far this late Affair may affect him (Rig) I cannot tell, and E. 47. is cited for them. Now E. 47. gives an Account of Kelly's Examination promiscuously with other Matters, and was written June 11th; but the Letter where the Words really are, is E. 49. of the 18th of June (near a Month after Kelly's Examination.) Nor is there a Word in that about the Dog; but it might be proper to confound these two Letters, and connect these two Particulars, in order to make out, that Rig and his Lordship are the same, tho they have really no Relation one to the other.

We might add, my Lords, many gross Errors in the Application of Names: but if your Lordships are satisfied with the Justice of those already mentioned, (as I hope your Lordships are) there will be no need to regard the rest; for tho they have some little Coincidences of Time, yet they are dashed with so many Inconsistencies, and so many Falsities, that no fair Correspondent could be guilty of. But there is one which of all others bears hardest upon this Reverend Prelate, the most Criminal in the Matter of it, and from which he is most deeply concerned to clear himself; i. e. the Letter of April 20th, which has been over and over affirmed by that Honourable Committee, as well as by the Counsel for the Bill, to be a Letter to the Pretender. If that be so, and had been proved by any Degree of Evidence, to have been dictated by his Lordship, we should have been utterly at a Loss what to have said, in a Case that would have been so fully within the Letter of the Law. Part of it, my Lords, we have already shewn to have been charged on his Lordship without the least Proof or shadow of Evidence, the other Part of the Charge we hope now to prove equally groundless and false.

That the Letter address'd to Jackson was not to the Pretender (whomever else it may mean) we think, appears clearly from the Words of it, our Circumstance on this Side; a Phrase not only used by all Writers, but is the constant usual Style throughout all the Papers in the Appendix, in contradistinction to France, which is the other Side, but never to Italy, as the Case must be here, if Jackson means the Pretender. The Instances in the Appendix are almost infinite.

Another Reason, why we think the Name of Lackson cannot reasonably be supposed to denote the Pretender, is from E. 30. where there is mention of dividing Clinton's Money between Medley and Jackson, i. e. says the Rep. p. 54. between Ormond and the Pretender. But it is not to be imagined that a Letter written from one devoted to the Pretender's Interest, should place Ormond before him; this is so unlikely, that even the Committee, speaking in their own Persons at the bottom of this very Page, slide naturally into the other Way of placing the Words, the Pretender and Ormond. Besides this, my Lords, there are so many Familiarities [to mention but one, all such pretending People] in the Letter itself, that it could never come from any one (as I before said) devoted to that Interest, at least not to the Pretender himself, but to some Equal or rather to some Inferior. Jackson therefore must mean somebody elſe, ſomebody in France, and not the Pretender in Italy; and on this ſuppoſition, every Word, and Phraſe of that Letter is better accounted for, than on any other.

The Committee of that Hon. Houſe below have been pleaſed alſo to obſerve, p. 45, 46. that Jackſon appears from other Letters to be the ſame as Malcolm, (which they ſay means the Pretender) and for this Reaſon, becauſe [p. 54. E. 30] Clinton's Money is to be divided between Medley and Jackſon. And pag. 56. ſomebody hopes Clinton has ſent Malcolm half Money; which proves indeed, that either Medley or Jackſon means Malcolm, but which, may be ſtill a Queſtion, as much as it was before.

That Malcolm means the Pretender, 'tis proved, becauſe application is made to Malcolm, in a Letter from Scotland, for a Patent, and for Power to raiſe a Regiment Rep. pag. 45, 75. But with Submiſſion to that Honourable Committee, neither of theſe Inſtances prove that Aſſertion; ſince the moſt natural Way of applying in ſuch Caſes, is to Perſons employed under the Principal, and not immediately to the Fountain Head itſelf: and if the late Duke of Ormond was to have come over laſt Summer to head the Scots, and they daily ſent preſſing Meſſages to that Effect, (as Mr. Stanhope writes from Madrid, Rep. p. 75.) who more proper to be applied to by a Scots Man on both theſe Occaſions? Malcolm therefore (with ſubmiſſion to the Committee) more naturally means the late Duke of Ormond.

I may add to this, my Lords, that in the Cypher inſerted among the Scotch Papers, I. 14 Davis and Lloyd (not Malcolm) is ſaid to be the Name and Deſignation of the Pretender.

I hope we may be allowed to argue in this Manner, from one Cypher to another, becauſe the ſame Method has been made uſe of againſt us, upon this very Article, both by that Honourable Committee, and the Counſel for the Bill: for the only Colour there is for interpreting Jackſon to be the Pretender, is taken from Plunket's Cypher, in which (as it is printed) Jackſon is ſet over againſt the Name of the Pretender, and from the Titling to the Draught of a Letter of Plunket's to Jackſon, C. 41. and admitting this Letter to have been ſo entitled by himſelf, (which has not yet been proved) yet it does not follow, (as I obſerved) that becauſe a Letter addreſs'd to one at Rome by Plunket under the Name of Jackſon ſignified the Pretender, that another Letter directed to one of that Name in France, by a quite different Perſon, ſhould likewiſe neceſſarily ſignify the Pretender. This, my Lords, I beg leave to ſay, is no certain or natural Conſequence: but it is moſt certain, that that Draught (whomſoever it was intended to) was not written upon that Cypher which the Committee referr'd to, in order to have it thought to have been written for the Pretender; for there is but one only of the many Cant Names in the whole Letter, which is to be found in that Cypher. But if your Lordſhips will be pleas'd to conſider that Cypher a little farther, it will appear, that the very Perſons ſuppoſed to be concerned in dictating this Letter to Jackſon, were utterly ſtrangers to the Correſpondence; for it conſiſts of a hundred and fifty Names, and no Man can find above four that are in this Cypher, or in all that voluminous Correſpondence attributed to Kelly; nor any of thoſe four ever uſed in the Letters ſuppoſed to be writ to Kelly; but in thoſe only ſuppoſed to be written to him from abroad.

The Name of Jackſon is not once in all that Correſpondence applied to the Pretender: and tho there be a hundred proper Occaſions of mentioning him, it is always under ſome other Appellation. And Plunket himſelf, in his Examination C. 73. Sect. 14. (when he could not poſſibly know the Tendency of the Queſtion) not only ſays poſitively, that he never writ to any Perſon by the Name of Jackſon, and does not know who is meant by it, but it is alſo remarkable (my Lords) that in all the Letters ſaid to be written by him upon that Cypher (after it was formed) he never once ſtiles the Pretender Jackſon, but either Joſeph or Jephſon.

The firſt of theſe Letters is in May 1721, and therefore that Honourable Committee have with great Exactneſs placed this Cypher immediately before it, as ſuppoſing it about that Time framed; for all the preceding Letters are manifeſtly written upon another Cypher. Now this Letter of the 20th of April, ſuppoſed to be dictated by his Lordſhip, was written before that Cypher of Plunket's was framed, and conſequently could not take a Name from a Cypher which then had no Exiſtence.

There is another Obſervation of that Honourable Committee, which I beg leave to take Notice of. They ſay, that the Cypher made uſe of in this Letter to Jackſon, is the ſame made uſe of in the Letters from the late Duke of Ormond's Agents, and in Letters to Dennis Kelly; and yet the Pretender has ſome other Names in ſuch Letters, but in none of them ever once ſtiled Jackſon. How comes it then, my Lords, that he ſhould be ſtiled ſo once, in this one Letter, and never before, nor after, by that Writer or by any other?

We have been the longer, my Lords, in removing this Imputation, becauſe of all others it is the hardeſt and moſt unjuſt upon this Reverend Prelate; and upon the whole, we hope, it is fully and effectually done, (notwithſtanding the Difficulties we had of proving a Negative) and even from thoſe Lights and Materials the Committee themſelves have afforded us: and if we had had an Opportunity of inſpecting the Originals, we doubt not, we ſhould have been able to have proved much better, that Jackſon (to whom this Letter of the 20th of April was directed) could not poſſibly mean the Pretender.

And if that be the Caſe, as it certainly is, and it appears farther by the Evidence which we ſhall produce, that theſe three Letters of April 20. were not, and could not poſſibly be dictated by the Biſhop, the Foundation of the whole Charge is deſtroyed, and conſequently, all the Superſtructure muſt fall to the Ground. Nay, I will venture to affirm, that it is impoſſible for them to form any Scheme to prove the Biſhop wrote theſe Letters, but what is, and will be actually diſproved and falſified, by ſome Part of their own Evidence.

Having thus, my Lords, gone thro' every Part of the Charge, I muſt crave your Lordſhips Patience, yet to ſpeak to two Things, which have been much inſiſted on by the Counſel for the Bill. That when your Lordſhips proceed in a Legiſlative Capacity, you are not to be guided by the Rules and Niceties of Law, and therefore that we are not in this Caſe to expect an Evidence ſtrictly legal. The other thing was, that at this time of Day circumſtantial Evidence is ſufficient, in a

Charge

Charge of High-Treaſon, as the Caſe now before you is. This (my Lords) we have heard fully and often repeated, as it were to anticipate us in this Objection, which they themſelves know to be ſo juſtly founded.

I have ſo far acted in Complaiſance to them, as to argue chiefly on the Facts and Circumſtances themſelves, and under the very ſame Lights they have preſented them to us, and hope (my Lords) our Inferences from them have been more juſt, our Conſtruction more natural, and our Probabilities much greater than theirs; and even in that View (conſidered abſtractedly from what the Common Law, and the Common Juſtice of the Realm requires) I hope we have fully ſhewn to your Lordſhips Satisfaction, and to the Conviction of every reaſonable or impartial Perſon, that there are no Grounds for what is ſuggeſted in the Bill; and that all that hear me may juſtly wonder, how this Reverend Prelate comes to be charged (as he is in the Preamble of the Bill) with being deeply concerned in forming, directing, and carrying on a Conſpiracy; when it has not been proved, that he entred into any one Conſultation concerning any one Meaſure, gave any one Direction, that he has done any one criminal Act, written, dictated, or received any one criminal Letter: and if we ſhould wave inſiſting on an Evidence ſtrictly legal, or a Proof according to the known Rules of Law; give me leave to ſay, my Lords, becauſe it is true, there has not been a reaſonable Evidence.

But yet, my Lords, I ſhall always inſiſt, both as an Engliſhman, and as Counſel to this Reverend Prelate, that there ought to be a legal Evidence in theſe, as well as in any other Criminal Proceedings. If there is any Difference, it is in this only, that as there are certainly many greater Inconveniences to the Subject in this Method of Proceeding, there ought to be a ſtronger Proof, and a Conviction more ſtrictly legal. I will always hope, your Lordſhips will expect a Proof in ſuch heavy Charges, agreeable to the Laws of the Land, and the Rules and Reſolutions of other Judicatures. I am far from thinking your Lordſhips are circumſcribed by the Forms of inferior Courts, becauſe they are in their own Nature diſcretionary, and the Courts themſelves often vary and depart from them. But the fundamental Maxims of Law, the unalterable Meaſures of Juſtice, and the poſitive Directions of an Act of Parliament, are of another Nature; they are binding every where, to all Perſons and Authorities, (as long as they continue Laws) the King himſelf not excepted. I ſhould beg Pardon, for carrying my Aſſertion ſo far, but that I am taught by the Bill of Rights that the King himſelf is bound by the Law, that it is not in his Power to alter, ſuſpend, or diſpenſe with Laws. But if the Doctrine of the Counſel for the Bill is true, and every one at Liberty to follow the Dictates of his own Judgment, and what Rules he pleaſes; what Confuſions, Uncertainties, and Arbitrarineſs muſt that introduce in all Proceedings! Private Opinion will too often be a Pretence to exerciſe private Malice, Revenge, or Ambition.

I might appeal to every one that hears me, whether he has not at ſome Time or other, believed ſome things, as ſtrongly as he did at firſt this Reverend Prelate to be guilty of what was ſuggeſted againſt him, and has afterwards found himſelf miſtaken? What is more common than for Men that agree in the ſame Notions of Morality, to deduce different Concluſions and Applications from them? (even where Intereſt or Partiality do not intervene;) and therefore the Wiſdom of the Law of England has been, to determine general Notions of Juſtice and Right by particular Rules and Applications, in order to ſettle that Variety and Inconſtancy, which without ſome eſtabliſhed Rule muſt neceſſarily follow. Where then ſhall we go for true and proper Notions of Law or Equity, but to thoſe great Oracles and Fountains, my Lords the Judges? What better Guide or more certain Rule, can any one of your Lordſhips propoſe to himſelf, than the conſtant and uniform Judgment of thoſe, whom the Conſtitution of this Kingdom have made the proper Diſpenſers of Juſtice, and the Interpreters of Law?

'Tis your Lordſhips peculiar Advantage, to be continually aſſiſted by ſome of my Lords the Judges; and we hope in this Inſtance (if any Doubt can at laſt remain) your Lordſhips will hear their Opinion, with the ſame Deference and Candor as in former Caſes. Let it never be ſaid, my Lords, that you, who are the ſupreme Oyer of the Kingdom, whoſe Judgments and Reſolutions are Laws to other Courts, and ought to be an Example to all others, in the Juſtice and Equity of your Proceedings, that your Lordſhips will not regard the ſolemn Judgment of the Judges, or the Uſages of former Parliaments: and let it not be ſaid, that becauſe other Courts are bound by a Law, to require ſuch and ſuch Circumſtances to infer an Offence, or ſuch a Proof before they condemn a Man, that you (my Lords) will follow your own private Opinion, make what you pleaſe to be an Offence, without any Evidence at all, but upon mere Hearſays, Conjectures, and Suppoſitions. Who can read that melancholy Caſe without Concern, which my Lord Coke has in his 3d. Inſtit. of an Uncle that was condemned and executed for the ſuppoſed Death of his Niece, merely upon a Train of Preſumptions and circumſtantial Evidence; or Harriſon's Caſe within Memory, where the Father and Mother both ſuffered upon Preſumption for a ſuppoſed Murder? And with what Shame and Remorſe did that haſty Judge ſee himſelf convicted by the Perſon returning from beyond Sea? And every one almoſt remembers the Charge of Treaſon againſt this Reverend Prelate's Predeceſſor. If ſuch a Bill had been thought on, or much ſtronger Evidence had been received, it might have paſs'd before the Truth could have appeared. But happy was it for that innocent Prelate, that a quite contrary Method was taken, and his Accuſers brought Face to Face to him, by which he quickly diſcovered the Villany of thoſe Miſcreants. Private Opinion or Perſuaſion therefore is ſuch a Poſition, that every honeſt Man ought to diſclaim in theſe Caſes; and the greater the Crime is, in which he is to judge, the ſtronger Proof he ought to require: and when one adheres ſtrictly to Juſtice, and goes according to the Allegata & Probata, by the beſt Rules and Reaſons of Law; whatever Miſtakes, Miſinformations, or falſe Evidence may happen in the Caſe, he can never have Cauſe to repent, and neither the preſent Age nor Poſterity can blame him.

It was formerly a Queſtion, whether the Star-Chamber was bound by the Rules and Reſolutions of other Courts: And the many Exceſſes, and extravagant Opinions in this Reſpect was the Reaſon that antient Court was laid aſide. And it has been as great a Queſtion, whether the Court of Chancery was to be guided by Rules and Precedents. But the better Opinion has always been, that a Judge in Equity ought to regard the Rules and Reſolutions that have been in like Caſes; unleſs he is reſolved to make Decrees totally arbitrary.

For tho Equity and Reaſon, in itſelf, is the ſame all the World over, and nothing can alter the proper and intrinſick Notions of it; yet, as the Matters about which it is converſant, are repreſented in different Circumſtances, and, like Streams of Water, will receive ſome little Tincture from the Soil thro' which it runs, and there is ſomething in every Man's Temper that will ſlide into his beſt formed Notions; it ſhews the Neceſſity of ſome fix'd and eſtabliſh'd Rules, at all Times, and in all Places of Judicature. And therefore, in that high Court of Equity, tho the Rigor of the Common Law is in ſome reſpects ſoftned, yet there is nothing more known, than that it is not to be impeach'd in any of its eſſential and fundamental Points.

I hope your Lordſhips will pardon me, if I mention an Authority or two of great Name, that expreſly ſay, the High Court of Parliament is likewiſe bound by the Rules of Law. Lord Chief Juſtice Holt ſays, The Authority of Parliament, is from the [16] Law; and as it is circumſcribed by Law, ſo it may be exceeded; and if they do exceed their legal Bounds and Authority, their Acts are wrongful, and cannot be juſtified any more than the Acts of private Men. I might add to this, the Opinions of Vaughan, Hale, and Hobart, to the ſame purpoſe; that the Rules of Law ought to guide in paſſing of Acts of Parliament, as well as in the ordinary Courſe of Judicature. But when I mention the Senſe of a living Authority, that has filled the higheſt Stations in the Law, and ſo great an Ornament to your Lordſhips Houſe, and whoſe Merits have been ſo lately diſtinguiſhed by new Honours, I need cite no more. It was in a Caſe, where the ſame Doctrine was advanced (that the Parliament was not bound to conform to the Rules and Proceedings of other Courts:) In anſwer to which, that noble Lord with great Truth obſerved, that thoſe Rules were not to be Patterns to them, only becauſe they were Rules of thoſe Courts, but becauſe they were Reaſon, and Reaſon approved of by long Experience, and they obtain there as Rules for that Cauſe; and I hope (ſays he) that is a Cauſe why the Houſe ſhould imitate them, as much as Weſtminſter-Hall; or elſe how can they be ſaid to go according to Reaſon, or Juſtice, when they go beſide, or tranſgreſs thoſe Rules?

Beſides theſe great Authorities, there have been Times, when Parliaments have thought themſelves bound by the common Rules and Proceedings of Law, and Parliaments that were very tender and ſenſible of their own Power, in other Reſpects. Not to mention ſeveral antient Acts of Reverſal, becauſe Judgments given in Parliament were not pronounced according to the known Laws; there is the Act for the Attainder of the Earl of March, becauſe he had been inſtrumental in procuring the Attainder of another Lord, under pretence of a Letter, which (the Record expreſly ſays) was no Evidence. And the Record for reverſing the Attainder of Roger Mortimer, 28 E. 3. Sir Thomas Haxley, &c. is expreſly declared to be, becauſe they were attainted contrary to the good Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm. And not only the Lawyers and the Hiſtories of thoſe Times condemn them as groſly contrary to Law and Juſtice, but the Stat. 1 E. 6. cap. 12. is directly levelled at them. For it recites that thoſe Proceedings were terrible and extreme, introduced for particular Policies and Purpoſes, repeals ſeveral Statutes that had been enacted in the preceding Reigns; and that there might be no more ſuch for the future, reduces all Treaſons to the antient Standard of the 25 E. 3. and goes on and enacts, That no Perſon or Perſons (i. e. my Lords, as I humbly apprehend no manner of Perſons, in no manner of Place, Court, or Method) ſhall be convicted for any Offence of Treaſons, Petit Treaſons, Miſpriſions, for which the Offender ſhall in any wiſe ſuffer any Pains of Death, Impriſonment, Loſs of Goods, or the like, unleſs accuſed by the Teſtimony of two lawful and ſufficient Witneſſes. The Stat. 5 E. 6. cap. 11. goes further, and ſays, There ſhall not only be two Witneſſes, but thoſe two Witneſſes ſhall be produced in Perſon before the Party, and ſhall before his Face maintain and avow what they have to ſay. The Words of this Stat. as well as the former, are as general as they can be, without any Exception of Place or Proceeding.

But notwithſtanding theſe two Statutes, there was ſtill Occaſion for the Stat. 7 W. 3. to aſcertain Treaſons, and to regulate the Method of Trials. For there had been ſeveral tender complaiſant Laws introduced by the pretended Zeal of Miniſters, with a peculiar Eye to the Prince on the Throne; which tho others could not apprehend the Juſtice or Neceſſity of, yet on theſe Laws there had been many unreaſonable Penalties, undue and irregular Proſecutions, in the preceding Reigns, and which Sir Jo. Hawles remarks as one of the great and immediate Cauſes of the Revolution. And to ſhew the Reſentment of the Nation on theſe Proceedings, they were all reverſed by particular Acts of Parliament; and to prevent the ſame for the future, that glorious Statute was made of the 7 W. 3. cap. 3. That Perſons accuſed as Offenders ſhould be juſtly and equally try'd, and not debarr'd of all juſt and equal Means for the Defenſe of their Innocency. And whoever caſts his Eye over the preceding Trials, will find every Clauſe of that Statute as it were a particular Proviſion againſt the Miſchiefs that had been, and to prevent the like for the Time to come.

I do admit (my Lords) there is a Proviſo in the End of that Statute; (that it ſhall not extend to any Impeachments or Proceedings in Parliament) and therefore I don't mention it as a Rule to Parliamentary Proceedings in all Reſpects, as it is to inferior Courts. But ſurely the Reaſon and Juſtice of that Act ought to be a Guide, as far as it is conſiſtent with the Nature of your Lordſhips Proceedings. And inaſmuch as it was the Senſe of the whole Legiſlature, and the united Voice of the Nation at that Time, and on a dear-bought Experience, it is ſurely ſo far worthy of your Lordſhips Imitation. It can never be conſiſtent with publick Wiſdom, to run again into the ſame Miſchief from which we are ſo happily reſcued, or to ſplit on the very ſame Rocks, on which many of your Lordſhips noble Anceſtors have periſh'd.

Lordſhips

And it can never be (with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips better Judgments) a natural or a reaſonable Conſtruction of that Proviſo, to enlarge the Proceedings of Parliament, or to give a greater Latitude than ever they had before. And to remind your Lordſhips how the Uſage of Parliament was preceding this Statute, I need mention but two or three Inſtances out of many. Lord Delamere's Caſe in King James's Time, 1685, where there was one poſitive Witneſs and a ſtrong circumſtantial Evidence; and yet your Lordſhips Predeceſſors thought that not ſufficient to find him guilty. The Lord Stamford's Caſe in the very ſame Year, where there was alſo one Witneſs, and ſtrong Circumſtances, and he was in the like manner acquitted. In the Caſe of the Earl of Pemb." 1677. for Blaſphemy and Abuſe of the Sacrament, your Lordſhips Predeceſſors declared, That the ſingle Teſtimony of a Commoner, tho on Oath, was no ſufficient Evidence againſt a Peer denying the Fact upon his Honour; and upon that addreſs'd his Majeſty that he might be releaſed from his Impriſonment.

And, as I humbly apprehend, your Lordſhips have thought fit to admit ſome of the Regulations of that Act into your Proceedings, ſuch of them (as I before ſaid) as are agreeable and conſiſtent with the Nature of your Proceedings. Your Lordſhips have been pleaſed to allow Counſel to a Priſoner in Treaſon, to ſpeak to Matters of Fact as well as Law: You allow a Copy of the Charge againſt him; you require the Witneſs for him to be upon Oath, as well as againſt him; neither will your Lordſhips admit Evidence of a Fact not in the Charge. And ſurely (my Lords) there is as much Reaſon, and as much Equity to require (as that Statute requires in the Courts below) the Teſtimony of two lawful and ſufficient Witneſſes. Nay, my Lords, I hope the Reaſon is much ſtronger, becauſe (altho your Lordſhips ſhould conſider your ſelves as unreſtrained by the Stat. 7 Will.) yet it is poſitively requir'd by both the Statutes of Ed. 6. which are general and without Exception, (as I before obſerv'd) and becauſe it is agreeable to the Uſage of Parliament (as I have likewiſe ſhewn) from that Time even down to the Stat. 7 Will. And if your Lordſhips are not enlarged by the Statute of King William, and the Statutes of Edw. 6. are ſtill Laws, give me leave (my Lords) to ſay, it can never be juſt or lawful to take away any Man's Life or Liberty on leſs Evidence than what thoſe Statutes require, in any Place, or by any Method whatſoever. Becauſe I am taught by Caſuiſts, that every juſt Law is a Rule of Conſcience, whether divine or human; and no Man can ſay, his Conſcience is void of Offence towards God or Man, unleſs he acts according to the Laws of the one Sort, as well as of the other.

And if your Lordſhips will give me leave to ſtep once more out of the Verge of my own Profeſſion, I will mention a Word out of the Civil Law conformable to this: That is a Law (my Lords) in ſome Degree receiv'd by all Nations, as a Scheme of the greateſt Equity and Juſtice. The Number of Witneſſes by that [17] Law, ought to be two at leaſt, to make a full Proof, and free from all Exceptions, both as to their Perſon and to their Depoſition. The Teſtimony of a ſingle Witneſs is of no Validity, unleſs where other Circumſtances concur; and it was not the Manner of the Romans to condemn any Man, before that he, which is accuſed, have his Accuſers Face to Face. And this (my Lords) is not only the dead Letter of the Code and the Dig. but the learned Groenw. in his Notes upon theſe Laws, ſays, It is the general Policy, and obtains at this Day in moſt Parts of the World. I do own that there are many Caſes that happen with us in the Courts below, where the Teſtimony of two Witneſſes is not required; but then, my Lords, it is, when the Trial is by Jury, that is, when twelve Men, coming from the Party's own Neighbourhood, and conſequently muſt be ſuppoſed to know ſomething of the Fact upon their own Knowledge, find a Verdict upon their Oaths. But I need not ſay, that even in a Trial by Jury, if it is a Caſe of High-Treaſon, like this now before your Lordſhips, there muſt be two Witneſſes, and nothing leſs can warrant the Verdict. And ſurely, my Lords, it is a Practice founded on Reaſon; not becauſe this or that Law, or this or that Court requires it, but becauſe 'tis abſolutely neceſſary for the Diſcovery of Truth, and for the forming of a right Judgment, whether what is ſwore be true or falſe. One Witneſs may miſtake, or be perjured, and yet happen to be conſiſtent with himſelf; but when there are two ſeparately examined, the Truth is much more eaſily found out: And tho a Criminal may now and then eſcape for want of ſuch a Proof, yet that would be a far leſs Evil, than to truſt ſo much, in Caſes ſo Penal, to Circumſtances and Preſumption, and to the Malice and Miſtakes of one Perſon.

But if, notwithſtanding the Opinion of the greateſt Lawyers both Engliſh and Foreign, your own uniform Uſage and Reſolution, and the Reaſon of the Thing itſelf, your Lordſhips are reſolved, in this one Inſtance, to follow every one his own private and particular Conſcience; let every one hearken to that ſtill Voice within him with an honeſt Attention, unto thoſe ſecret Whiſperings, with Temper and Moderation. Let no Man be ſway'd by Hopes, over-rul'd by Fears, or tranſported by Zeal beyond the Bounds of Juſtice, and thro' this Reverend Prelate's Side give a Wound to himſelf or Poſterity, which may never be cured. Conſider, my Lords, if not for his, yet for your own Sakes, the Circumſtances, the Probabilities, and Evidence on both Sides, with an unbiaſs'd Conſcience, and by the Meaſures of Law and Juſtice. For tho ſome Proceedings may ſeem convenient to certain Times and Occaſions, yet unleſs they agree with the Law, with Reaſon, and with Juſtice, no Man ought to think he has any Power to conſent.

There is a noble Inſtance on Record of the Lord Digby, and worthy of every one's Imitation. He had been, my Lords, one of the moſt violent Managers in the Impeachment of the Lord Strafford; and yet when that Proceeding was waved, and a Bill of Attainder brought in, he ſpoke as violently againſt it: Tho he was ſtill of Opinion (he ſaid) that that Lord was the ſame dangerous Miniſter, and great Apoſtate to the Commonwealth, who muſt not expect to be pardoned in this World, till he was diſpatched to another; yet he had rather loſe his Hand than put it to that Diſpatch. He put them in mind of the Difference between Proſecutors and Judges, and how unbecoming that Fervor was in them, now they were Judges, which perhaps might be commendable in them as Proſecutors: That when he gave his Conſent to the Accuſation, he was aſſured, his Crimes would have been fully and legally proved, which if they had, he cou'd have condemn'd him with Innocency, as he had proſecuted him with Earneſtneſs; but as the Caſe then appear'd, no Man could ſatisfy his Conſcience in the doing of it. The Parliament, 'tis true, had a Judicial and a Legiſlative Capacity; the Meaſure of the one ought to be legally juſt, the other political and prudential: but theſe two Capacities were not to be confounded in Judgment; they were not to piece up (ſays he) the Want of Legality by Matters of Convenience, to the Ruin of a Man, by a Law made ex poſteriori.

What can I ſay more? For it muſt appear to your Lordſhips by this Time, that this Proceeding is contrary to the fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, contrary to Publick Wiſdom, and unjuſt in itſelf: That the Reaſons and Suggeſtions upon which it is grounded have not been proved with any Colour of legal Evidence, or with any Degree of Proof or Probability, which ought to ſatisfy the Conſcience of an honeſt, reaſonable Man. But if the Matters, which I have humbly laid before your Lordſhips, have not all the Weight, which I hope they have; or if I have omitted any Thing that is material or neceſſary for this Reverend Prelate's Defenſe, Your Lordſhips, I hope as Judges, and (conſequently in ſome meaſure of Counſel for the Priſoner) will, from your own Obſervation, ſupply it. Or if I have laid them before your Lordſhips in an improper Light, or a leſs effectual Manner than others might have done; yet the Caſe itſelf will ſpeak better and more ſtrongly than any Words or Expreſſions of mine can do. It is the Cauſe, the Fortune, and the Liberty of a moſt Reverend and Learned Prelate, who is to be ſtrip'd and torn from thoſe Dignities and Preferments which his own high Merits juſtly called him to, and which he has ever ſince adorned with the greateſt Luſtre. Upon what ſlender and inſufficient Grounds, Your Lordſhips have already heard; and I was going to ſay, without Precedent: but I muſt own there have been Inſtances of Deprivation, ſome in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and ſome others ſince the Revolution. But yet they were upon a general Law, then in being, and an Incapacity voluntarily incurr'd by thoſe Prelates, after the full Knowledge and Publication of thoſe Laws, by refuſing to give that Security to the Government, which at thoſe Times was abſolutely neceſſary. And tho they were peremptory in the laſt Degree, and their Example might have produced worſe Conſequences than it did; yet their Puniſhment went no further. But this is a particular Law, to be introduced for this particular Prelate, ſubſequent to the ſuppoſed Offence, and which is not thought fit to be enacted as a Law for any other Perſon hereafter; and I wiſh, my Lords, I could ſay, this Act went no further. But this Reverend Prelate is likewiſe to be deprived, not of his Life indeed, but of all the Conveniences and Comforts of it, of the Commerce of his Friends and Relations, and of all that is valuable to an Engliſhman. He is to be doom'd to the Curſe of Cain, and to be turn'd out of his native Country, full of Age and Infirmities, to the Cruelty of Strangers and Foreigners, and even beyond the reach of his Majeſty's moſt extenſive Goodneſs.

But if your Lordſhips ſhould paſs this Bill, he will ſtill have, I doubt not, the Peace of his own Mind, and this comfortable Reflection, which no Man can take from him; That he ſhares the Fate of the greateſt and moſt honeſt Stateſman of the laſt Century: tho in this Inſtance alſo 'tis his Lordſhip's Misfortune to be very much diſtinguiſh'd. For he, tho innocent, was afraid of the Violence of the Times, and withdrew from Proſecution. But this Reverend Prelate has been all along forthcoming, and, as it were, fearful of nothing, and conſcious of nothing but his own Innocence, has ſought in all Places to be brought to Trial. That noble Lord's Crimes (or at leaſt his Accuſation) were going to be proved in a proper Parliamentary Manner by Numbers of Perſons. But this Reverend Prelate is to be involved by Implications, Inferences, Conſtructions, and the Conjectures of Decypherers, in Crimes, which he is here ready to deny, and of which no Man accuſes him.

I would not be underſtood, my Lords, by any Thing I have offered in relation to the particular Penalties, as if I thought any one Suggeſtion of the Bill had been duly proved, ſo as to deſerve this or that Part of the Penalties; tho I muſt ſay, they are all ſo extraordinary in their Nature, as to deſerve your Lordſhips Attention. And I doubt not, but your Lordſhips in your Goodneſs will conſider what is already paſſed, the Length and Cloſeneſs of the Impriſonment, which this Reverend Prelate has already ſuffer'd as a ſuppoſed Criminal. Priſons before Conviction are only for the ſafe Cuſtody of a Man, and not for Puniſhment; but his Impriſonment has not been ſo: which (if my Inſtructions are true) has been attended with ſuch unheard of Barbarities, and ſuch diſtinguiſhing Severities, as are a Shame and Reproach to every civiliz'd Nation. The Caſe of Colledge every one has thought hard and barbarous; but 'tis this Reverend Prelate's Misfortune to be diſtinguiſhed in this alſo, as well as in every Thing elſe: For that Caſe was before the Law allowed Counſel or Sollicitors to aſſiſt a Priſoner in his Defenſe, but now they are allowed by Law, and were actually and duly aſſigned to my Lord Biſhop; and yet part of his Defenſe, and part of his Evidence torn and taken from him. So that, all theſe Things conſidered, his Lordſhip cannot eſcape without being a very great Sufferer, tho your Lordſhips ſhould utterly reject this Bill.

Your Lordſhips will alſo conſider the Infirmities of Body, under which that great and noble Mind even now labours before you; which have render'd him almoſt uncapable of attending his Defenſe. Your Lordſhips will alſo conſider the Grief and Vexation it muſt be to appear as a Criminal before this Honourable Houſe, where he has ſo long ſat as a Judge, and under the Suſpicion of thoſe Crimes which are laid to his Charge; and how grievous it is for one of his Lordſhip's Character and Function, to be tax'd with Breaches of of his Duty to God and Man, of Scandal to Religion, of Designs of overthrowing Church and State, in favour of Popery; who happens to be the only Clergyman in England, that ever thought it worth his while to draw his Pen in Defense of Martin Luther, the great Instrument of our Reformation from Popery; and who has, upon all other Occasions, appear'd the most strenuous Assertor of it. I might add much more of his Lordship's personal Merits, and of those high Abilities so eminently conspicuous in him; but that I know it is some kind of Violence to his Lordship to hear even thus much mention'd.

Yet suffer me to say, That if these Suggestions should be carried into a Law, without any Degree of Evidence or Probability, but rather (as your Lordships will immediately hear) against the strongest Evidence and Probabilities that are possible of the contrary: I say, if this Bill should pass on such Circumstances, whatever the present Age may think, his Case will be a standing Mark of Reproach to it, and he will be the Wonder and the Pity of all succeeding Generations.

I shall add to your Lordships Trouble but one Word more, in behalf of myself: That your Lordships will pardon any Warmth of Temper, any unguarded Word or Expression that I may have been guilty of in the Course of this long Defense, in a Case, which every Englishman naturally considers as his own, and therefore will, in some measure, warm the most even Temper. And that this Learned (and whom I will now call Innocent) Prelate, will accept those little Services I have been able to perform, and will pardon the many Failings, which I may already have been guilty of, in his necessary and most just Defense.

After the Bishop's Counsel had done speaking, the Bishop produc'd several Witnesses to be examin'd, and on Saturday May 11. Sir Constantine Phipps made a short Recapitulation of the Evidence, as follows.

My Lords,

WE have done with our Evidence; and hope we have fully answer'd every Part of the Charge contain'd in the Bill, and apprehend there is no one Circumstance left unanswer'd. Particularly, that we have totally destroy'd the Credit of Neynoe's Hearsay Evidence: For when the Improbabilities, Inconsistencies, and Contradictions of his Examinations are consider'd, and the Testimony of the Witnesses is duly weighed; no Person can give the least Credit to what He hath said, without offering the greatest Violence imaginable to his Reason.

And it is wonderful, that the Counsel for the Bill should insist he should be credited in any Thing: When we have proved, he had the Confidence to declare, that a Right Honourable Person had endeavour'd to persuade Him to accuse Persons of Quality of Things He knew nothing of.

Hath he not said that, when he was to be examin'd, That Right Honourable Person had him first in private, and told Him, what Questions would be ask'd Him, and what Answers He should give? Did he not say, that the very same Gentleman gave Him five Questions, or Enquiries, and told Him what he should reply to each of them? Hath He not said, that refusing to give Evidence, He was threatned with Newgate; and that Thereupon He gave Them Informations against my Lord Bishop and Others? Nay, had He not the Impudence to say, that the same Right Honourable Person offer'd Him 2000 l. 500 l. per annum, and a Place, to accuse the protesting Lords, the Earl of Orrery, and This Reverend Prelate? And that being ask'd whether He knew any Thing of the Plot, He swore No, nor Any body else: But that he knew of two other Plots, viz. One of Mr. Walpole against the Protesting Lords; the Other of Himself upon Mr. Walpole, to get 2000 l. of Him. Nay, it is proved He declared that the same Gentleman press'd Him so hard to accuse some Persons, that He had it once in his Mind to take up That Right Honourable Person's Sword, and run him thro' with it; and so make an End of the Plot.

These are Things which have been proved upon Neynoe: And all these Things being consider'd, I believe the Counsel for the Bill will readily agree with me, that no Credit ought to be given to one Word He has said: And if His Evidence be laid aside, the greatest Part of the Charge against my Lord Bishop falls to the Ground.

My Lords, The Evidence Mr. Lewis gave was very material. For he shew'd your Lordships, that Brockett, who was of the Post-Office, was so skilful in counterfeiting Hands and Seals; that he wrote the Superscription of a Letter, and took the Impression of a Seal, and seal'd it again; and did it so well, and gave it such a Lustre, that Mr. Lewis could not distinguish it from the Original.

The Engravers likewise said, they could take off the Impressions of Seals so well, that they could not be distinguish'd: Nay, tho the Wax were broken, yet if no Part of the Wax were lost, it might be done.

Your Lordships observe how the Engravers themselves were mistaken in relation to some Impressions, which were produced to them: And You farther observe, that the Seal in question was a Cicero's Head, which all the Engravers agree to be a very common one; and they had many of them: So that no Objection can be made against my Lord on account of That Seal. Nay, one of the Engravers said, it appear'd to him that the Seals of the two Letters were not the same. As to the Dog; there is Mr. Crawford's Certificate, and Birmingham's Affidavit.

As to Mrs. Barnes's Evidence; she hath found out now, That there were Two Dogs, tho nobody else ever heard of Two. She said, the First was for the Bishop of Rochester. Now it is plain, the First was sent in March; and it was His Leg that was broken: And Birmingham swears, and Mr. Kelly solemnly affirms, that it was for Mrs. Barnes, and not for the Bishop.

As to the Three Letters of the 20th of April, we have proved it impossible that the Bishop should write, or dictate, those Letters to Mr. Kelly. And your Lordships take Notice, how the Butler came to observe those Letters could not be written by the Bishop; and the Servants, tho under Confinement, and not permitted to see any Body, agree in their Evidence. There is Gordon's Affidavit that he never had such a Packquet: And James Talbot was here in Town the 29th of April.

Thus, your Lordships observe that a Bill of the most extraordinary Nature that ever was seen, hath been supported by the most extraordinary Evidence, that ever was heard: And we hope, we have set the dark Passages, of which the Charge is compounded, in such a Light, that every One may may plainly ſee the Right Reverend Prelate is not guilty of any One Offence charged againſt him.

Mr. Wynne ſpoke next.

My Lords,

I Shall beg your Patience to cloſe our Defence with an Obſervation or two on the Evidence that has been given by my Lord Biſhop: and I need take up the leſs of your Lordſhips Time, becauſe our Witneſſes have fully anſwered all I opened, and in many Things have exceeded my Inſtructions.

And for your Lordſhips clearer Apprehenſion of ſo many various and perplex'd Facts, I ſhall juſt recapitulate what I humbly conceive to have been the Subſtance of the Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop, and, as briefly as I can, ſtate the Evidence, which we have produced in order to falſify and diſprove it.

The firſt and chief Accuſation againſt his Lordſhip, was founded on the Informations of Philip Neynoe, and therefore the firſt Part of our Proof was as to his Credit. Your Lordſhips, I doubt not, remember the Purport of his Information read againſt us, and the many groſs Abſurdities and Inconſiſtencies in his other Informations read by us; and likewiſe how fully they have been all diſproved, and the Credit of them entirely blaſted, even from Neynoe's own Confeſſion, ſeveral Times repeated, and confirmed by three unexceptionable Witneſſes.

Your Lordſhips have fully heard of the Terrors and Apprehenſions he was continually under; becauſe (as he himſelf expreſs'd it) he had given falſe Information againſt this Reverend Prelate, and ſo many other innocent Perſons. Your Lordſhips have heard the Inducements he had to give thoſe Informations, and how often he had declared his Intentions to eſcape, in order to avoid the Puniſhment which he apprehended moſt juſtly due to him, becauſe he could not make out the Truth of them.

Two of thoſe Witneſſes (Bingly and Skeene) are ſtill in Cuſtody, and deſtitute almoſt of all the Neceſſaries of Life: I ſay, my Lords, they are ſtill in cloſe and ſtrict Cuſtody, and conſequently there could have been no Opportunity to lead or inſtruct them in what they ſhould ſay, or ſo much as to be apprized before-hand (which ſurely would have been a reaſonable Liberty) whether they could ſay any thing material or not; and we are only beholden to thoſe Lights which the Report of that Honourable Committee has afforded us: And all three of theſe Witneſſes utterly unknown to my Lord Biſhop, both in Perſon and Reputation, as well as his Lordſhip is unknown to them. They have not converſed together for ſeveral Months, but yet are perfectly conſiſtent with themſelves, and entirely ſupported and confirmed by each other. And all three declare, they had very early told, and frequently repeated this Account of Neynoe to their Fellow-Priſoners and Acquaintance, as long as they were permitted to have Acceſs to them. Mr. Skeene being ask'd in relation to the Diſcourſe between him and Captain Pancier, as in the printed Depoſition of Pancier, App. D. 1. has denied on his Oath every Word of it. He ſays indeed, that Captain Pancier us'd all his Endeavours by Treats and Entertainments to induce him to ſuppor this Informations; but that he never gave him, nor could give him Grounds to ſay any ſuch Thing of him.

We have ſhewn your Lordſhips, that Mr. Stewart in particular was ſo far from patching up, or contriving Evidence (as was objected to him by the Counſel for the Bill) after he had ſeen the Report and Appendix, that he had given this whole Account to ſeveral Perſons long before. For he ſays, the Things which Neynoe told him were ſo ſurprizing, that he could not ſtifle them in his own Breaſt. Tho your Lordſhips, I doubt not, obſerved with what Difficulty and Modeſty he was brought to ſpeak out in this publick Manner, where his Evidence ſeem'd to reflect on a great and Honourable Perſon.

Two of theſe Perſons have likewiſe been produced to your Lordſhips. To one of whom (Mr. Gordon) he told theſe Matters ſome Days even before Neynoe's Death; and to Mr. Kynaſton ſome conſiderable Time before the Meeting of the Parliament: and we could have called others to the ſame purpoſe, but that we were unwilling to give your Lordſhips further Trouble in a Matter which already had, as we thought, the fulleſt, the moſt ſatisfactory, and conſiſtent Evidence that could be.

The ſecond Head of Accuſation againſt this Reverend Prelate, was upon account of the three Letters of the 20th of April. The two firſt we before obſerved to your Lordſhips not to be criminal, if really deſign'd for and addreſſed to the Perſons ſuppoſed. The third we have likewiſe ſhewn by various Circumſtances and Reaſonings, could not poſſibly be addreſs'd to the Pretender, whoever wrote it, or whomſoever elſe it might be wrote to.

And the Evidence offer'd to prove them to have been dictated or wrote by my Lord Biſhop, was firſt by the Subſcription of the common Name of Jones, which they would have to denote his Lordſhip. As to this, I doubt not, your Lordſhips remember, that even in the Cyphers and Letters that have been read, the Name of Jones is manifeſtly applied (as the Committee themſelves have obſerv'd) to many different Perſons; ſometimes to one, and ſometimes to another, as the Circumſtances there mentioned ſeem'd to give Occaſion; but cannot once in any Place, with Reaſon or Juſtice be applied to my Lord Biſhop.

The next Proof that has been offer'd to your Lordſhips, to prove theſe Letters to have been dictated or wrote by the Biſhop's Privity, is, from the ill State of Health, the Death of his Lady, and the Preſent of a Dog; Circumſtances, which they ſay, are applicable to the Biſhop, and to him only.

That his Lordſhip did not, nor could poſſibly write or dictate theſe three Letters, we have laid before your Lordſhips ſuch a Proof, as the like hardly ever was before: and 'tis impoſſible, in my humble Apprehenſion, for a Negative to be more fully proved in any Caſe. Your Lordſhips have heard the great Weakneſs and Inability of this Reverend Prelate at that very Time for all manner of Buſineſs and Converſation. No leſs than ſix, if not ſeven of his Servants, have ſpoken fully and poſitively to it, That his Lordſhip was not able, without their Help, to ſtir, turn in his Bed, or even to perform the common and ordinary Offices of Life. One would think, my Lords, ſuch melancholy Circumſtances, in themſelves, ſufficient to guard any Man from Suſpicion.

But the Witneſſes have gone much further; for they have told your Lordſhips, that no Stranger approached the Biſhop's Room all that Time; nor had any one been for a conſiderable Time before and after the 20th of April under his Roof. Even ſome of thoſe Perſons that uſually were with my Lord Biſhop at other times (as his Son, his Chaplain, and his Son's Tutor) happened then all to be abſent at the Election of Weſtminſter School.

One of thoſe Servants, who happens to be a Priſoner with his Lordſhip in the Tower, being aſked, whether my Lord Biſhop had not put him in mind of theſe Circumſtances, told your Lordſhips, that it was entirely his own Recollection, by caſually taking up the Report, after my Lord Biſhop was gone to Bed, and dipping on that Part of it, in which his Lordſhip is charged with having writ theſe three Letters. Upon which, the next Day (he ſaid) talking to his Fellow-Servant, and he agreeing to the very ſame Circumſtances, they acquainted the Biſhop with what they had read, and how they could, from their own Knowledge and Remembrance, falſify and diſprove that Circumſtance.

I muſt likewiſe crave leave to obſerve to your Lordſhips, that four or five of theſe Servants that have ſpoke to theſe particular Facts and Times, are ſtill in Cuſtody, under ſeparate Meſſengers, without any Opportunity to converſe together, and were hardly to be found by my Lord Biſhop, when he had need of their Evidence; and yet every one of them have been perfectly conſiſtent with themſelves, and one with the other, and all equally poſitive.

The Biſhop's Coachman, your Lordſhips, I doubt not, remember, tho now under another Influence, and called as Witneſs againſt his Maſter, confirmed what they ſaid, and was as poſitive and peremptory in his Teſtimony concerning this Matter, as far as the Nature of his Employment gave him an Opportunity to make ſuch Obſervations. And upon the whole, I may now, with more Reaſon, and with greater Confidence, repeat my former Aſſertion, that it is impoſſible for them even to deviſe or frame any Scheme to prove his Lordſhip to have wrote, or dictated theſe three Letters, but what will be actually diſproved and falſified by ſome Part of the Evidence.

Another Reaſon, by which 'tis proved that his Lordſhip wrote theſe three Letters, was, from the Subſcription of the Number 1378, to the Letter addreſſed to Jackſon. Which Number Mr. Willes (a Decypherer) ſays, denotes the proper Name or Title of a Perſon beginning with the Letter R. The little Time we have had to enquire into this Aſſertion, and your Lordſhips not permitting ſome Queſtions, put by us to the Decypherer, to be anſwered, won't enable us flatly to diſprove it. But with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, it ſeems impoſſible to affirm even thus much, with any degree of Certainty, and it muſt be (as I before obſerved to your Lordſhips) Matter of Conjecture only; and it appears manifeſtly to your Lordſhips, by ſeveral Paſſages occurring up and down in this Correſpondence, not yet decyphered, that either the Art is not ſo infallible, or that Mr. Willes is not ſo great an Artiſt as he pretends to be.

But, my Lords, admitting ſuch a Number in this Cypher does really denote a Perſon's Name, or Title, beginning with the Letter R. what a ſtrange and uncertain Proof is that, to fix a Charge of High-Treaſon on the Biſhop, when there are other Perſons, Names, and Titles, found like his, and many others which begin with the very ſame Letter; and this not to be admitted as Evidence in a minute or inconſiderable Circumſtance, but in the very Giſt of the ſuppoſed Offence, in the principal Foundation of the Charge, in the only Letter that is criminal, and which is to magnify and improve the reſt into High-Treaſon?

Another way of proving theſe Letters to have been dictated by the Biſhop, was, becauſe another, ſuppoſed to be an Anſwer to this, mentions the Preſent of a Dog. I need not here repeat what Mr. Kelly himſelf has conſtantly ſaid in his Examination, becauſe your Lordſhips, I doubt not, remember what Mrs. Barnes ſaid; that Mr. Kelly indeed ſometimes told her of another Dog that was for the Biſhop, but that ſhe always apprehended that Dog, which ſhe had in her Poſſeſſion, was deſigned for her, and never heard of any other Dog that did come from France: She owns, that ſhe never received any one Meſſage from the Biſhop about it, but ſtill kept it, when it was recovered, as her own, as long as it lived; and tho his Lordſhip never had, nor loved a Dog in his Life, yet it would have been natural, and good Manners to the Perſon that ſent it, eſpecially if ſo conſiderable a Perſon as is ſuppoſed, to have made now and then ſome little Enquiry about it, if my Lord Biſhop had really known any thing of the Dog.

But we have ſhewn your Lordſhips by the ſolemn Atteſtation of Mr. Birmingham, the French Surgeon, that he was the Perſon who gave this Dog (in March 22.) to Mr. Kelly, for Madam Barnes, of whom he had received Civilities in London, and for no other Perſon, nor with any other Intent. He likewiſe ſays, that he never received any ſuch thing as a Dog, or Meſſage from Lord Marr, (as alledged in the Report) never had any the leaſt Thought of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, or his Lady, much leſs of making either the one or the other (to both of which he was utterly unknown) any ſuch Preſent.

Your Lordſhips obſerve this to have been a ſolemn notarial Act upon Oath, of a Perſon not only reputed, but atteſted likewiſe by the Lord of the Seigneury, to have been a legal Notary, and to have exercis'd his Office as ſuch for ſome time. That the Teſtimony of ſuch a Perſon beyond Sea is a good and unexceptionable Proof in every Caſe, I need not ſay; or that it has been often allow'd here, where no other is to be had, nor any other [38] Method to have the Benefit of a Man's Teſtimony that is beyond Sea. And our Witneſs has told your Lordſhips that he has frequently tranſlated ſuch Inſtruments: That he believes it to be the Notary's Hand-writing, and the publick Seal of his Office. I need not, my Lords, have ſaid thus much; for in all Events it muſt ſurely have been of more Weight in your Lordſhips Judgments, than the Extract of an Information given by a Perſon, infamous in his Character, abſurd and inconſiſtent in all he ſaid, and without being ſigned or ſworn to, even by that Perſon.

[38] 2 Rolls Rep. 346. Law of Evid. 3.

But yet this Affidavit of Mr. Birmingham has the more Credit, becauſe his Majeſty's own Reſident at Paris (Mr. Crawford) has been pleas'd to examine him about this Matter, (being employ'd by him in his Profeſſion as a Surgeon) and he has confirm'd the ſame Account to him, which has been likewiſe tranſmitted, and read to your Lordſhips.

Another way of proving my Lord Biſhop to have been concerned in theſe Letters, was from the Hand-writing, which is ſuppos'd to have been Kelly's, and he is ſuppoſed to have been his Lordſhip's Secretary in theſe Matters. But both theſe Allegations, we think, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, are ſtill utterly deſtitute of any proper or ſatisfactory Proof.

I before obſerv'd to your Lordſhips, that the firſt time the Clerks of the Poſt-Office have made any Depoſition about the Similitude of the Hand-writing, was four and eight Months after they had ſeen the Original Letters; which is a little of the lateſt ſo exactly to remember all the little Strokes and Turnings of a Pen, by which the Identity or Diverſity of a Hand can only be made out. That Malone, the Footman of Mrs. Barnes, was never called upon for his Teſtimony till January laſt, that is, nine Months after he had ſeen any of Kelly's Writing, and conſequently not then very able (if ever he was) to form a Judgment of it.

I have already obſerved to your Lordſhips, that this was the firſt, and the only Inſtance, that any Evidence of the Similitude of Hands was ever admitted, but where the Papers pretended to be in the ſame Hand were produced and compared in Court; which is ſo far from being the preſent Caſe, that the Clerks of the Poſt-Office never had any Opportunity of comparing the Original of the 20th of Auguſt, with any one of the three Originals of the 20th of April, or with any one of the intermediate Letters which they affirm to have been in the ſame Hand: ſo that they are made the abſolute and ultimate Judges of this Matter, without any Poſſibility on our Side of detecting any caſual or wilful Miſtake.

And I would not again repeat an Obſervation I have before made to your Lordſhips, that a great Part of theſe Letters are in Figures, and how much more difficult it is to diſtinguiſh the Hand of one writing in Figures, from Words and Syllables in length; becauſe we have ſhewn your Lordſhips, by three poſitive Witneſſes (well acquainted with Mr. Kelly's Writing, one of them above 20 Years, and his School-fellow) that the only original Letter of the 20th of Auguſt, ſtop'd at the Poſt-Office, as a Sample to the reſt, (and which is the only Foundation upon which thoſe Clerks have affirmed theſe three Letters to have been Kelly's Writing) really and in fact, was not his, nor like it. This, my Lords, we have fully proved by three Witneſſes; and as a Demonſtration of what they ſaid, they ſhew'd your Lordſhips, among a Variety of Papers produced to them at your Bar, that they could at once diſtinguiſh which was Kelly's Hand, which was any thing like it, and which was not.

We have likewiſe produced to your Lordſhips, the ſolemn Atteſtation, on Oath, of [39] Alexander Gordon Junior, the Son, Banker at Boulogne, that no ſuch Packet of Letters ever came to his Hands, as mentioned by the Counſel for the Bill; and conſequently he could not deliver any ſuch to Talbot, (who, they ſay, called for them at Boulogne.) He farther depoſes, That he never had any Buſineſs or Intercourſe with Kelly or Johnſon, nor ever had acquaintance with any Perſon ſo called, in his whole Life.

And we have proved to your Lordſhips, that James Talbot, the tall black Man, [40] deſcribed in the Letter printed in the Appendix, and who is ſuppoſed to have been the Perſon that called upon Alexander Gordon at Boulogne for this Packet, was ſo far from doing it, at the Time ſuppoſed, that he was at London that very Day, as appears by the unexceptionable Teſtimony of Edward Crofton, his Shoemaker, and by the Entries of his Shop-book, to whom he accidentally paid a Bill upon that very Day, at his Houſe in London.

We have likewiſe ſhewn your Lordſhips by two Witneſſes, Mrs. Kilborn, and her Maid Anne Ellis, that Mr. Kelly was at her Houſe in London, on the 20th of April, (the very Day upon which my Lord Biſhop is ſuppoſed to have dictated theſe Letters to him) and by a great Variety of Evidence, impoſſible to eſcape any one's Memory, that my Lord Biſhop was ill in Bed, at Bromley in Kent: and Quod non datur actio indiſtans, is an Axiom of Reaſon as well as of Philoſophy.

And I muſt humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that it has not yet, in the leaſt, appeared by any Shadow of Evidence, that Mr. Kelly ever was employed by my Lord Biſhop to carry on a Correſpondence; that he wrote any one Letter for the Biſhop, upon that, or upon any other Occaſion whatſoever.

That Paſſage in the Letter to Weſton, that ſeems to give countenance to ſuch a Suppoſition, the learned Counſel for the Bill told us yeſterday they had waved, and were angry that we ſhould offer to diſprove that which they had not proved. But, with Submiſſion to your Lordſhips, tho they have been pleaſed to wave that Part of the Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop, yet as it makes no ſmall or inconſiderable Appearance in the Report of that Honourable Houſe, and will be ſo handed down to Poſterity; we thought it proper to give an Anſwer to it; and, we hope, it has been to your Lordſhips Satisfaction and ſtill in your Memory.

The next thing was the Letter to Dubois, and I confeſs myſelf at ſome Loſs to know for what Purpoſe that was read in Evidence to your Lordſhips; for the Counſel for the Bill have not, as yet, made any particular and direct Uſe or Application of that Piece of Evidence, and therefore I ſhall ſubmit it to your Lordſhips upon the Obſervations I before made on it.

There was indeed ſome of your Lordſhips Time ſpent in comparing the Seal of that Letter, with that which happen'd to be taken on my Lord Biſhop's Servant at the Tower: if it was intended as any Proof, I cannot at preſent judge; however, we thought it proper to follow them in the Courſe and Manner of their Proof, and your Lordſhips yeſterday have fully heard the Danger and Uncertainty of admitting ſuch a Proof. Firſt, you have had ſome Account from Mr. Eraſmus Lewis

[40] Append. E. 26.

of the known Practice of one Brockett, who was able to counterfeit any Man's Hand or Seal, in ſuch a manner that even the Perſon (whoſe Hand or Seal it was) ſhould not be able to diſtinguiſh it from his own.

Then we produced to your Lordſhips two Seal-gravers, who fully atteſted the ſame thing. Mr. Atkins ſaid, That he himſelf could make ſuch an Impreſſion, ſo as not to be diſtinguiſh'd by an Artiſt, and give it the very ſame Luſtre. That he could even take an Impreſſion from a broken Seal, and tho there would at firſt neceſſarily be ſome little Flaw in it, yet he ſaid he could mend it, and then make ſuch an Impreſſion from it, that even an Artiſt could not diſcover it from the Original.

Mr. Johnſon, another eminent Seal-graver, likewiſe told your Lordſhips, that he could do the ſame thing: In particular, That he had once ſuch an Impreſſion taken in Paſte by one Mr. Wiſembergh, and from that he made another Impreſſion, ſo perfect and exact, that Mr. Wiſembergh himſelf could not diſtinguiſh one from the other: But as to the Seals of theſe two Letters, he doubted very much whether they were made by the ſame Seal or not; and from ſome little Strokes in the Head, that were very viſible to any one, tho not ſo eaſy to be expreſſed, he rather inclin'd to believe, that they could not be made from one and the ſame Seal.

And when your Lordſhips were pleaſed to enquire of them, How ſuch a thing was practicable? They did not cover themſelves (as their Decypherer did) by ſaying, It would diſcover the Secrets of their Art, but frankly told your Lordſhips the very Manner and Method of doing it.

Their own Seal-graver, Mr. Chriſtian, owned, That this might be done, altho he had never done it: And in the Experiment made on Mr. Raulus, their other Seal-graver, he was once plainly in the wrong, as well as once in the right. And it manifeſtly appears from every one of their Teſtimonies, that this Practice of taking Impreſſions is very eaſy. And, as one of my Noble Lords informed the Houſe, his Footman could do it as well as any of them; and, as your Lordſhips yeſterday obſerved, even to deceive Mr. Raulus himſelf, who, they ſay, is ſo great an Artiſt. And therefore, my Lords, it is a moſt dangerous ſort of Proof, and too uncertain at the beſt, to receive any judicial Countenance in a criminal Matter.

So that I muſt humbly inſiſt, that this Part of the Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop has not been proved any better than the former; and that when your Lordſhips do conſider the Evidence that has been given on the one Side as well as on the other, as to this particular Charge, we hope you will be of Opinion, that there is no juſt or reaſonable Ground to preſume, that theſe Three Letters were wrote by Mr. Kelly, and much leſs that they were dictated by my Lord Biſhop.

The next general Charge againſt this Reverend Prelate, was, the Receiving of two Letters from abroad, in relation to this Conſpiracy. The Counſel indeed for the Bill have waved the Letter ſigned Digby, addreſs'd to Weſton, and (as I apprehended from them laſt Night) did not now pretend to prove any Thing concerning the Biſhop, under the Name of Weſton.

Neither have they as yet pretended to prove, that the other Letter from Motfield to Illington ever came to his Lordſhip's Hands, or in whoſe Hand-writing it was wrote; tho if it were the Lord Marr's (as it is ſuppoſed) many of your Lordſhips muſt have been well acquainted with it. Nor has it been yet ſaid, that my Lord Biſhop ever returned any Anſwer to it.

And as we have now proved (and fully too, we apprehend) the Letters of the 20th of April, to which this is ſuppoſed to have been an Anſwer, to be a mere Fiction, or Impoſition upon the Biſhop; this, which is deſigned as an Anſwer to it, muſt likewiſe fall to the Ground, as Part of the ſame Contrivance.

The next and laſt general Charge ariſes from the Coincidencies of Times and Names in the intercepted Correſpondence, the more readily to induce your Lordſhips Belief, that my Lord Biſhop was really meant by that Correſpondence.

Some of them I accounted for before, as Truths publickly known, but turned by ignorant and malicious Correſpondents to ill Purpoſes, or elſe as abſolute Falſities, and manifeſt Miſtakes.

We have ſhown your Lordſhips by various Reaſons, that the fictitious Names ſuppoſed to denote my Lord Biſhop, cannot be applicable to him, with any Colour, Truth, or Decency; that there is a great Doubt to be made, whether many others of thoſe fictitious Names were really intended for the Perſons ſuppoſed to be denoted by them: and eſpecially, that Jackſon, to whom the Letter of the 20th of April is addreſſed, we have proved by various Arguments, and even from thoſe Lights the Committee have afforded us, could not poſſibly mean the Pretender, whomſoever elſe it may mean; and conſequently that that Letter (if it were wrote by Kelly, and dictated by the Biſhop) cannot be High-Treaſon.

And as to the Articles of Times, and the Accounts of my Lord Biſhop's coming and going, it muſt be owned, they are ſometimes right, but as often wrong.

There is no doubt, but the Correſpondents on this Side the Water, whoever they were, whether out of Malice or Vanity, or out of any other Inducement, appriz'd themſelves as well as they could, of the Biſhop's Motions to and fro, in order to give the better Colour or Probability to what they ſaid of him. But yet it has happen'd, unluckily to them, as your Lordſhips have heard, that out of Six or Seven Inſtances occurring in theſe Letters, Two only are true; Two of them may be doubted whether true or falſe, becauſe ambiguouſly expreſſed; but Three of them are groſs Miſtakes, as appears even by the Accounts of their own Witneſſes.

And the Miſtakes are the more remarkable, becauſe they all affirm the Biſhop to have been in the Country, when he poſitively was not: whereas it was ten to one, but that the mere Gueſſes of a Stranger, at that time of the Year, had been true; and the rather, becauſe his Lordſhip was really in the Country ten Days to one that he was in Town, all laſt Summer.

There is another Thing remains for me yet to ſpeak to, and that is the Intimacy of my Lord Biſhop with Mr. Kelly; which was likewiſe thrown in to ſwell the Number of Circumſtances, and as another weighty Argument to induce your Lordſhips Belief of the foregoing Matters.

But has any thing appeared to your Lordſhips like it, even upon their own Evidence? Firſt, a Chairman is brought to tell your Lordſhips that he carry'd Mr. Kelly to the Deanery Three or Four Times about four Years ago, but the Biſhop was not once at home. And a Porter ſays, he carry'd Two Letters from Kelly to the Biſhop; one of them about Chriſtmas laſt was Twelvemonth, and the other Letter ſome time before that; but received no Anſwer in Writing, nor Meſſage, but only his Service to Mr. Kelly. But there is one extraordinary Circumſtance, which ſhows him, I confeſs, to be a very willing Evidence, tho not ſo very likely and credible; that is, that this Porter, dirty as he muſt be in the midſt of Winter, deliver'd his Meſſage to the Biſhop in his Bed-Chamber.

And Malone, the Perſon that uſually attended Mr. Kelly, and went on his Errands, was aſked to the ſame Purpoſe; and one might have expected that he ſhould have given ſome Account of it, and had been often employed on Errands to and from the Deanery: But I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Memory whether he did not ſay, that he never was at the Deanery in his Life-time, nor did know to this Day where it ſtood.

Mrs. Kilborn, with whom Mr. Kelly had lodged a conſiderable Time, ſays, ſhe remembers a Meſſage once came to Kelly from the Biſhop; but poſitively denies that my Lord Biſhop's Coach ever came to fetch Mr. Kelly at her Houſe, as that Honourable Committee have been pleaſed to affirm in their Report. And I appeal to your Lordſhips Memory, whether Mrs. Barnes, whom the Counſel for the Bill think ſo credible a Witneſs in ſome other reſpects, and with whom it muſt be confeſs'd Kelly frequently lodged, was not equally poſitive in this Matter, and that ſhe did not believe there could be any Friendſhip or Intercourſe between the Biſhop and Mr. Kelly without her knowing of it.

Thus the ſuppoſed Intimacy and great Acquaintance between my Lord Biſhop and Mr. Kelly ſtand upon their own Evidence. And I beſeech your Lordſhips to conſider, what ſort or degree of Proof all this can poſſibly amount to. But we have ſhown your Lordſhips the direct contrary, by no leſs than ten Witneſſes, Servants to my Lord Biſhop, ſome or other of which were always with him, whether he was in Town or in the Country, and every one of them has lived with his Lordſhip above two Years; and they ſay, as it were with one Voice, that they don't remember any ſuch Perſon or Name as Kelly or Johnſon coming to the Houſe; as they muſt have remember'd him, they ſay, if he had been frequent in his Viſits or Meſſages: and ſome of them ſay, they uſually wrote down the Names of thoſe that did come; and the Coachman in particular, who has liv'd four Years with his Lordſhip, and appears now as Evidence againſt the Biſhop, and therefore cannot be ſuppos'd partial to him in his Teſtimony, is yet as poſitive and peremptory, that he never ſaw Mr. Kelly, or Johnſon, at his Maſter's Houſe, in all his Time. And being carry'd to the Tower by a Meſſenger, to ſee if he could recollect his Face, then frankly own'd, he had never ſeen his Face before. And being aſk'd how he could pretend to know all Perſons that came to the Houſe, whoſe Buſineſs was at the Stables? He told your Lordſhips, that he was as often in the Houſe, us'd to wait at Table when Company was there; and that let him come which way he would, he ſhould have ſeen him coming or going, or have heard of him in the Family, if he was a Perſon that had frequented his Maſter's Houſe.

Some of the other Servants likewiſe ſpoke as fully to theſe Circumſtances.

We have likewiſe ſhewn your Lordſhips by Mr. Pope, who has been for theſe two or three laſt Years, the moſt conſtant Companion of his Lordſhip's Hours; two or three Days, he ſays, almoſt in every Week, and an Hour or two almoſt in every of thoſe Days: That his Lordſhip generally ſat in one Room, which I think was his Bed-Chamber; that he was admitted to him at all Hours, and into all Companies, and never found the Diſcourſe change at his coming in: That his Lordſhip never in the leaſt diſcover'd any Thoughts or Intentions like thoſe now charged upon him; but had heard occaſionally many Things drop from the Biſhop, of a Tendency directly contrary. And to this we might have called many others, if it were neceſſary.

We were likewiſe ready to lay before your Lordſhips, ſeveral laborious and intricate Searches, ſeveral Publick Buildings, and Controverſies in Matters of Literature with different Perſons, which my Lord Biſhop was engaged in laſt Summer; and would have been a full Employment for ſome Mens whole Lives: But your Lordſhips did not think it neceſſary; being (as we hope) fully ſatisfied and convinced of my Lord Biſhop's Innocency, by that Variety of Proof which we had before made.

There are, my Lords, ſome other Obſervations that might be made: but have been, I doubt not, already much better taken notice of by the Learned Gentleman that ſpoke before me: And I think this is the Subſtance and Purport of the Evidence that has been hitherto offer'd on both Sides.

What the Iſſue or Succeſs of this long Hearing may be, I know not; That is in your Lordſhips Pleaſure only to determine; to Acquit, or to Condemn: But I hope you will ſay, We find in him no Fault at all.

The Proof which has been againſt the Biſhop, (if it can deſerve that Name) has neither been ſuch as is reaſonable in itſelf, nor agreeable to the known Rules and Proceedings of Law; but chiefly by Probabilities, Circumſtances, Conjectures and Suppoſitions: Whereas we have encounter'd and diſprov'd even them, by far greater Probabilities, much ſtronger Circumſtances, and alſo by ſuch Evidence, as would be convincing and ſufficient in any Court of Law or Equity within the Kingdom.

And, upon the whole, I hope I may venture to affirm, That there does not now remain the leaſt Suſpicion of the Charge brought againſt the Biſhop; not even a Suſpicion of a Suſpicion of High-Treaſon; not one probable Probability, or one preſumptive Preſumption: I mean, That there is not now remaining before your Lordſhips, the leaſt Degree of Probability, or the very loweſt ſort of Preſumption that is known in Law: And therefore, ſhall humbly conclude with the ſame Prayer Sir Conſtantine Phipps has made before me, That your Lordſhips will reject this Bill.

The

The Biſhop then ſpoke in his own Defenſe, as follows:

My Lords,

I Have been under a very long and cloſe Confinement, and have been treated with ſuch Severity, and ſo great Indignity, as I believe no Priſoner in the Tower of my Age, and Function, and Rank, ever was. By which Means, what Strength and Uſe of my Limbs I had when I was firſt committed in Auguſt laſt, is now ſo far declined, that I am very unfit to make my Defenſe againſt a Bill of ſuch an extraordinary Nature.

The great Weakneſs of Body and Mind under which I labour, ſuch Uſage, ſuch Hardſhips, ſuch Inſults, as I have undergone, might have broken a more reſolute Spirit and much ſtronger Conſtitution than falls to my Share.

Your Lordſhips were pleaſed to permit me to appear before the Houſe of Commons, if I thought fit, leſt my Silence ſhould be turned to my Diſadvantage; as, in fact, the Counſel for the Bill have done their utmoſt towards it.

I ſhould not have thought to decline any Occaſion of juſtifying myſelf; but I crave leave to tell your Lordſhips ſome Reaſons why I did not appear there, and make uſe of the Leave your Lordſhips gave me.

After ſeven Months of cloſe Impriſonment, I was not a little ſurprized when I heard, that on the 11th of March, by the Houſe of Commons, it was thus reſolved, 'That it appears to this 'Houſe, that Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, 'was principally concerned in forming, di'recting, and carrying on a deteſtable Conſpi'racy, &c.'

Upon duly weighing which Reſolution, and the Copy of the Bill, I found not any thing charged in the Bill, but what was fully contain'd and previouſly reſolved in this Vote; and therefore whatſoever ſhould have been offered on my behalf to that Houſe, would have been an expreſs Contradiction to it. And what Hopes I could have of Succeſs in ſuch an Attempt, I need not ſay: What they ſent me was the Preamble of the Bill only, which they could not alter, conſiſtent with what they had reſolved.

The Bill itſelf was to inflict Pains and Penalties, which followed; but there was no room to object againſt any of thoſe which they had not then declared; they have ſince been added, and ſent up to your Lordſhips in like manner, without any Oath made, or any criminal Act proved againſt me by any living Witneſs. And is a Perſon thus ſentenced below, to be deprived of all his Preferments, and his very Function, and to be a perpetual Exile, and to be render'd incapable of any Office and Employment? To be one whom no Man muſt correſpond with by Letters, Meſſages, or otherwiſe? And, my Lords, one who is a Biſhop of the Church of England, and a Lord of Parliament?

It is the firſt Inſtance wherein a Member of this Houſe hath been ſo treated and prejudged, and (as I have once before ſaid to your Lordſhips) I pray God it may be the laſt, and that ſuch Precedents in this Kingdom may not be multiplied in After-Times.

My Counſel have amply done their Part, by arguing the Points of Law, by explaining and enforcing the Evidence, and ſhewing the little Colour, Appearance and Shadow of Proofs againſt me, (permit me to call them ſo) by anſwering what hath been offer'd againſt me, and by ſetting out the Conſequence which ſuch a Bill, founded and carry'd on in ſuch a manner, and which enacts ſuch ſevere Penalties, muſt and will be attended with.

Yet it becomes me to ſay ſomething for myſelf, leſt my Silence be conſtrued Conſciouſneſs of Guilt, or, at leaſt, an Unwillingneſs to enter into Matters of ſo dark and perplex'd, ſo nice and tender a Nature; as if I was not able, or did not care to clear and explain myſelf, and rather choſe to leave it to the Management of others: I thank God, I am under no ſuch Reſtraint, and can ſpeak to your Lordſhips on this Subject with great freedom and plainneſs.

But before I proceed, I beg leave that I may repreſent to your Lordſhips ſome particular Hardſhips under which I have laboured.

The firſt is, reading Extracts of anonymous Letters, without ſuffering any other Parts of the ſame Letters, tho relating to the ſame Subject, to be read. ——Another is, ——Excuſing the Decypherers from anſwering Queſtions aſked by me, and which I thought neceſſary for my Defenſe, leſt they ſhould reveal their Art. ——The next is, not ſuffering me to be anſwered by the Clerks of the Poſt-Office, leſt the Secrets of that Office ſhould be diſcovered. Another was, not ſuffering a Perſon, who had been at leaſt ten Years out of the Secretary's Office, to anſwer any Queſtions, which came to his Knowledge by being ſome Years in that Office.

Another is, reading Examinations neither dated, ſigned, nor ſworn to.

Another is, reading Letters ſuppoſed to be Criminal, writ in another Man's Hand, and ſuppoſed to be dictated by me, without offering any Proof that I either dictated them, or was privy to them.

Another is, not allowing me Copies of the Decypher'd Letters, tho petition'd for, till the Trial was ſo far advanced, and I ſo employed and weakned by it, that I had not ſufficient time to conſider them. Another is, not allowing me to read out of the Collection of Papers before the Houſe any part of them, in order to diſcharge myſelf, but what hath been read by Clerks.—— And all this in a Proceeding where the Counſel for the Bill profeſs they have no legal Evidence, and that they are not to be confined to the Rules of any Court of Law or Equity; tho as often as it is for their Service, they conſtantly ſhelter themſelves under it.

My Lords, theſe are the Hardſhips which I previouſly mention, and humbly lay before your Lordſhips.

By your Lordſhips Leave, I proceed now to make that Defenſe, as well as I am able to make it in the Condition of Health I am now in; humbly praying your Lordſhips, if I find myſelf in any degree ſinking under it, that you will indulge me, and allow me a little time to go on.

The general Charge of the Bill is, That I have been deeply concerned in forming, directing, and carrying on a wicked and deteſtable Conſpiracy, and was a principal Actor therein.

The Charge is divided into two Heads:

Firſt, That I traiterouſly conſulted and correſponded with divers Perſons to raiſe an Inſurrection, &c. in this Kingdom, to procure foreign Forces to invade it, &c.

Secondly, That I traiterouſly correſponded with the ſame intent with Perſons employed, &c. But neither part of this Charge hath been made good by the Counſel for the Bill, nor have they proved, nor attempted to prove me at one Conſultation; nor is there any thing tends towards ſuch a Proof, except the exploded Story of the Burford Club, and two or three Hearſay Informations which were mentioned of my Lord Strafford, Lord North and Grey, Lord Orrery, and Sir Henry Goring, ſaid to be concerned in the Management of this Affair. I have met all theſe Lords, I own it, but at different Times; and upon the beſt Recollection I can make, I never was in all my Life with any three of them at once, unleſs perhaps about ſome general Matters depending in Parliament. The Earl of Strafford hath viſited me, and I have, when in Health, dined with him once at his Houſe. At my Lord North's Table I have not eat: Tho I have great Honour for him, yet I never had any Intimacy with him, eſpecially ſince the Affair of the Dormitory, wherein he appeared ſo againſt me, that I certainly had loſt the Cauſe, had not his Affairs call'd him to Holland.

Lawſon had ſworn, that this Lord did often viſit me at Bromley; but in truth he never was there above twice or thrice in all his life-time.

I have not been once theſe two Years with Lord Orrery on any Buſineſs whatſoever; we twice dined together at the Houſe of a Perſon, whoſe Name if I ſhould mention, your Lordſhips would not think there was any harm at all in dining there. Sir Henry Goring I never ſaw in all my life, till he ſaw me at St. James's, and he was but once at Bromley; and the Occaſion of his coming to me, was his placing four Sons at Weſtminſter-School, and intending to breed up ſome of them to the Goſpel: The laſt Time I ſaw Sir Harry Goring, was about twelve Months ago, when I promiſed to bring down one of his Sons to be upon the Foundation; and I ſhall be ſorry if I can't be as good as my Word.

Your Lordſhips will excuſe me for being ſo particular, when you conſider how dangerous the Charge is, and how fit it is to clear the Perſons charged, from ſuch miſchievous Correſpondence; eſpecially ſince it is with theſe, and theſe only, that I have been ſpeaking of, and it is inſinuated that I have held Conſultations with, to forward the Conſpiracy.

The firſt is an Intent, and indeed a Conſpiracy, without a Conſultation. But how hath that too been made good? Your Lordſhips will obſerve, that there is not one Overt-Act, or Circumſtance of Time or Place, mentioned, proved, or alledged. I have not therefore conſulted or conſpired at Home.

The next, and the only material Part of the Charge, is, correſponding abroad with the Pretender, &c.

A high and heinous Accuſation, ſtrongly aſſerted, much inſiſted upon; but how maintained, is the Queſtion.

The true State of this part of my Charge, as well and as fully as I can recollect, is this, (I will not in any degree diſſemble before you:) 1ſt, That I did the 20th of April, 1722. dictate three Letters to Mr. Dillon, the late Lord Marr, and to the Pretender himſelf, under the feigned Names of Chivers, Muſgrave, and Jackſon; to which Letters the Names of Jones, Illington, and 1378, were, by my Direction, ſubſcribed.

Secondly, That afterwards two Letters, in anſwer to theſe two ſent to Marr and Dillon, one dated May the 11th, and the other July the 25th, under the feigned Names of Motfield and Digby, were intercepted.

Thirdly, That there is certain intercepted Correſpondence between the Pretender's Agents abroad and Kelly here, carry'd on by him; and that I was at the Head of it, and am anſwerable for what it contains.

This is the Subſtance of my Charge; all other particular Circumſtances are made uſe of, as they thought would give Light and Strength to one or other of thoſe Articles.

As to the firſt of theſe Points, that I did dictate theſe Letters.

That it could not be poſſible that I dictated theſe Letters, hath been made out to your Lordſhips by ſuch a Concurrence of Evidence, ſo clear, ſo full, and legal, as I perſuade myſelf can have left no Doubt remaining upon any candid and indifferent Perſon: A plain Matter of Fact, ſupported by ſuch Teſtimony, cannot be overthrown by little Gueſſes and conſequential Surmiſes.

My Lords, I was under the known Difficulty of proving a Negative, which in many Caſes is not to be done; but it ſo happens in this Caſe, that peculiar Circumſtances attend it as to the point of Time. My being diſabled in my Chamber, and attended before and after that time by ſome of my Servants, and receiving frequent Meſſages from others: The agreeing Teſtimony of my Servants, that no Stranger came near me about that time, and for ſome time before and after; and the full Evidence of the School at Weſtminſter, hath enabled my ſeveral Servants to recollect the Time, and to furniſh ſuch a Proof of my Innocence in this matter, as is not to be miſtaken, and ſhews the Clearneſs of the Impoſſibility of it.

The Clerks of the Poſt-Office ſwear, they believe theſe three Letters to have been in the Hand-writing of Mr. Kelly, my ſuppoſed Amanuenſis. Your Lordſhips will remember, that their Oaths were at four Months diſtance from the time of ſeeing thoſe Letters; during the whole Series of which time, it never hath appeared that they have compared one Original with another, and the only Original, as a Specimen, hath been proved, at your Lordſhips Bar, not to be the Hand-writing of Mr. Kelly: And be pleaſed to remember, the very Suppoſition of Mr. Kelly's being my Secretary, or any ways intimate with me, hath been fully ſworn to be falſe.

If it be ſaid, who then writ theſe Letters, and with what View were they writ? The Anſwer to this is obvious: My being here at your Lordſhips Bar ſufficiently explains it. It is enough to prove that I did not write or dictate them, and I have proved it abundantly. Let but any momentous Part of the Charge againſt me be made out with half the Evidence, and I will ſubmit without any Diſpute. Eight or nine ſuch Witneſſes would have borne down the Evidence of one or two that had ſworn: But where there is none on the one Side, but all on the other Side who appear, and that give direct poſitive Evidence, can your Lordſhips deliberate a Moment for the Reaſon of giving your Judgment, which in doubtful Caſes ought always to lean to the doubtful Side? And ſo taking this Point as it ſtands, there is an End of the whole matter; for all other Inſinuations, feigned Names, and obſcure Paſſages in Letters, depending upon this, muſt fall together.

As to the other Part of the Accuſation, where it is ſaid the Letter to Jackſon was a Letter to the Pretender, I have nothing to do with it; he that writ the Letter, when known, will beſt be able, and moſt concerned, to diſprove it.

Since this Objection carries a very odd Sound, I ſhall briefly ſhew your Lordſhips how that ſtands. Jackſon, in a Cypher of Plunket's, is ſaid to denote the Pretender: That Cypher conſiſts of one hundred and fifty Names, of which not one is uſed in any of the Letters attributed to Mr. Kelly; three or four of theſe Names are uſed by Perſons ſuppoſed to have writ to Mr. Kelly from abroad, but not one of them is uſed by him; nor doth Jackſon ever, in his part of the Correſpondence, ſtand for the Pretender, but he is always under other Appellations: Nay, Plunket himſelf, in all his Letters writ in decyphered Names, never ſtiles the Pretender Jackſon, but either Joſeph or Jephſon.——Why ſhould a Name, uſed in Kelly's Correſpondence, be explained by Plunket's Cypher, when Kelly appears to be no ways acquainted with him, and Plunket himſelf did never dictate to him? I forbear Repetition; I only add, that at this Rate, there is nothing that may not be proved.

The Letter to Dubois there is little ſaid of, becauſe there is no uſe made of it; it is charged in the Report as a Letter which I had received from abroad. The Tables are now turned, and I myſelf deſigned to have ſent this Letter to a feigned Correſpondent, but kept it among my Papers under my Seal: For what end? the Letter itſelf is an errant Deluſion: Why, to furniſh Proof, which is much wanted, of my receiving Letters that were directed Jones and Illington; and it is very ſtrange, that I, who am repreſented as being ſo very cautious, ſhould be ſo negligent in this, and preſerve ſomething that is of no uſe, and yet might hurt me ſo much, when diſcover'd.

It is abſurd to think, that I ſhould by that means mention the Name of my Correſpondent, and mention the Name of Johnſon, which the Committee of the Lower Houſe obſerve was conſtantly with me.

I know not what farther can be ſaid for this Matter, till the Counſel have further explain'd it, and ſhew'd what uſe they make of this Letter, which hath given your Lordſhips ſo much Trouble, and which I own I do not comprehend.

Here is ſtill a fifth Letter, which I have acknowledg'd to be my Hand; that which was taken on my Servant. Mr. Reeves hath made ſome uncharitable Obſervations upon it, which, for ought I know, may be allow'd as the Form of Law in the Ordinary Courts; but, I am ſure, in a Court of Equity, the moſt favourable Conſtruction ought to take Place. I have taken Minutes of his Obſervations, and I think they are theſe: He obſerves that the Biſhop doth not in his Letter inſiſt on his Innocence in general, but conſiders only what Evidence doth affect him.

It comes out, at laſt, for whom my Letter was deſigned, and I think That an Anſwer to Mr. Reeves's firſt Obſervation, and I ſhall explain it no further. He obſerves next, tho I clear myſelf from the Knowledge of Layer, Neynoe, &c. there I ſay nothing of Kelly.

The Gentleman I deſigned the Letter for, knows it was in anſwer to one wrote to me about Layer, and will ſwear it himſelf, if there was room for it.

The third Obſervation is, where ſpeaking of myſelf, I ſay, 'If I cannot ward the Blow, I 'muſt be a Priſoner ſome Years without Remedy:' from which he is pleas'd to infer, not in that good-natur'd way he generally did, my Meaning muſt be, that I was conſcious of Guilt.

I apprehended an Impeachment would have been lodged and never proſecuted, as in the Caſe of my Lord Danby and the Earl of Oxford; and then I ſhould have lain without Trial, and without Bread.

The ſecond Article of my Charge, is the two Letters from Marr and Dillon, under the feigned Names of Motfield and Digby, which were intercepted.

One of theſe they have dropt.

That I received them, is not pretended; both Letters, tho without a criminal Expreſſion or Word of Buſineſs in either of them, would yet have affected me in ſome degree, if received by me, and I was the Perſon as is ſuppoſed to have writ the Letters to which they are Anſwers. That I uſed to have any Correſpondence, is that proved? Is not one and the ſame neceſſary in order to aſcertain the Charge?

Any Man that pleaſes may write to me, and take thoſe Names upon him; I am not to anſwer for that, unleſs I have appeared to receive them, and kept up the Correſpondence.

The Letter from Motfield, dated the 11th of May, cannot be reaſonably thought to have been wrote with any other View than that of being intercepted, and of fixing upon me the Letter of April 20th.

This Letter is committed to the common Poſt-Office, and ſent upon this Errand; one may doubt who writ it, but one cannot doubt with what Deſign it was writ: your Lordſhips Wiſdom will ſee thro' thoſe malicious Diſguiſes, and not make me account for Letters which have been banded to and fro, between unknown Correſpondents, on a Deſign to raiſe a Suſpicion of a third Perſon, altogether a Stranger to what is writ. And here I deſire that the Obſervation made by one of my Counſel may not be forgot; that is, All the intercepted Letters from abroad, mention Perſons that lay hid under ſecret Names, and are diſcover'd by doing of ſuch Deeds, and by ſuch Circumſtances as will faſten thoſe Names upon them: Tho the Committee were not at a Gueſs, yet they were often at a Loſs.

In my Caſe the fictitious Names applied to me are often attended with ſuch Deſcriptions and Circumſtances, as very naturally lead thoſe that offer theſe Letters to fix them on me. The Writers of them uſe all their Art not to diſguiſe, but to open the thing, and ſeem to be in pain leſt they ſhould not be well enough underſtood.

This being contrary to the Method of Reſerves in all other Caſes, ſmells ſtrong of a malicious Deſign.

The Letter of July 25th, from Digby to Weſton, is not well contrived as it ſhould have been; yet I am to be underſtood by it, becauſe of the Circumſtances I was then under, which the Writer was appriſed of.

Theſe are the only two Inſtances of Letters ſuppoſed to be writ from abroad: They are not conſiſtent: Shall they affect me in ſo high a manner?

It remains to be conſidered in the third place, whether there was a ſupported Correſpondence between the Pretender and his Agents, and Mr. Kelly here? Whether I was at the Head of it, and am juſtly to anſwer for it? Mr. Kelly, I hear, hath owned at your Bar, and declared, which I alſo declare, I never knew a Line of any Letter he writ to Foreign Parts.

I meddle not with what concerns him any further than when it may affect me.

The chief Part is the Preſent of the Dog; the Account of that is in a Letter to Hatfield, dated May 5. not ſigned; in which are theſe Words, The little Dog was ſent ten Days ago, and ordered to be delivered to you: but there is no Intimation in this, or any other Letter from abroad, that this Preſent was intended for me.

In two Letters from hence, by whom writ it doth not appear, ſomebody is meant under the different Names of Mr. Jones and Mr. Illington, in ſuch manner as deſigned for the ſame Perſon; but the Circumſtances are neither applicable to my ſelf or my Wife, or me particularly. The Letter dated May 7th, from Hatfield to Muſgrave, being five Days after the Burial of my Wife, cannot mean her; and being but five days after, it can as little mean me: So that the Writer of this Letter muſt either have known nothing of my Family-Affairs, or if he did, muſt diſſemble his Knowledge of them, to raiſe a Suſpicion; and in either Caſe what he ſays is not to be regarded. The Surgeon and Mr. Kelly only knew any thing of this matter, and they can beſt clear it.

Mrs. Barnes, ſhe varies, and ſometimes the Dog is for me, and ſometimes for her.

As for myſelf, I never asked for, received, or ſaw this Preſent, nor know any thing of it, but from common Fame; nor have I, to this Day, had any Meſſage or Letter whatſoever concerning it. The End of this Deſign ſeems to be, to point me out by the Name of Jones, and Illington, ſubſcribed to the Letters of April 20th, by uſing them again in relation to this Preſent.

And perhaps they are not much in the wrong to think, that one intercepted Dog ſhould be of as much uſe as Ten intercepted Letters. Both Contrivances then muſt have ſucceeded, had I not been able to prove that thoſe Letters were not writ with my Order or Knowledge; and therefore the Uſe of thoſe Names, in ſubſequent Letters, is a Continuance of the Fraud, and this obviouſly runs thro' the whole of the Correſpondence: For whereever the Name of Jones and Illington are, they are uſed in applying them to me, becauſe they are the ſame.

Theſe Points have not only been deny'd, but diſprov'd with all Manner of Credence and Clearneſs.

My Counſel have ſhew'd, that all theſe ſuſpicious Correſpondencies are to the laſt Degree abſurd to apply to me, and no one would apply them: That I could not order the Letters of the 20th of April, to which the Names of Jones, &c. are ſubſcrib'd, I think is plain, and then the Evidence falls or depends upon it.

As to the Journeys to and from Bromley, where the Priſoner Kelly had frequent Acceſs to me, and therefore I might probably dictate thoſe Letters, the Counſel for the Bill have not open'd themſelves on that Head; but your Lordſhips have heard it made out, and becauſe it is material I ſhall repeat it.

(Here Wood's Examination was read.)

By all theſe Accounts, nothing could have been eaſier for the Perſons themſelves to manage here, than getting an Account of my Neighbours, in order to render the Contrivance more plauſible.

That Mr. Kelly is no Stranger to me I own; but that he is in any Degree intimate with me, or frequently ſaw me, I deny. And what Evidence is there from them to the contrary; or how is this ſolemn Denial at your Bar contradicted?

The Chairman ſays, He carry'd him twice or thrice to the Deanery, three or four Years ago; and this Brown, the Chairman, he ſwears, he carry'd me once in three or four Years Time. I believe he may. The Porter he ſays, that he brought a Letter and ſome Stockings from Kelly to me. The Foundation of this Story is true, for Mr. Kelly uſed to furniſh me with Beaver Stockings, and Gloves: not but that the Circumſtance of the Porter coming up to my Bed-chamber at that dirty Time of the Year, is very extraordinary; and even this Evidence owns, he was never ſent by me to him.

Now, on the other Side, there is the Evidence of almoſt all my Servants, who have, upon Oath, atteſted, that they do not know either the Name or the Face of Mr. Kelly, which could not poſſibly be, did he uſe frequently to reſort to me. Such a ſlight Acquaintance as I had with him, could not be any Temptation to enter into Secrets with him, of ſuch a dangerous Conſequence as theſe are, which the Report inſinuates to have paſs'd between us: However, Suſpicion is not now the Buſineſs. They that prove ſome Things may be allow'd to ſuppoſe more; they that prove nothing, have no Right to indulge their Suſpicions and Conjectures to the Ruin of any Man: Twenty Probabilities, allow'd to be ſuch, are not equal to any one Matter of Fact, well atteſted; it may ſtrengthen the Fact, but cannot ſupport it. They cannot be Evidence themſelves, becauſe one Probability may be ſet againſt another.

I uſe this Diſtinction between Evidence in Law, and reaſonable Evidence, becauſe the Counſel for the Bill have aſſerted ſomething like it.

I own I always thought the Publick Law of the State, the Publick Reaſon of the State; and whatever it is in another Country, yet in this Country, no Evidence can be reaſonable that is not legal. But I ask, What ſort of Evidence, either in Reaſon or Law, is brought againſt me? How am I prov'd to conſult and correſpond, to raiſe an Inſurrection againſt his Majeſty and his Kingdom, and to procure a foreign Force to invade the ſame in favour of the Pretender?

How am I prov'd, in the ſecond Place, to have correſponded with the ſame Pretender, and with Perſons employ'd by him? Is one Article of theſe Charges made out againſt me with any

Colour

Colour of Reaſon? Suppoſitions without Proof, Suppoſitions diſprov'd, and ſhew'd to be vain, and unjuſt.

If the Proof in theſe Caſes wants Strength, can the Hearſay of Neynoe ſupply the want of Proof, and render it valid, ſince Neynoe pretends, for aught that appears, not to have known any thing of me? He only heard Kelly ſay ſo, and Mr. Kelly denies it; and there is, I think, no Reaſon why ſuch a dead Evidence ſhould affect me, or Kelly himſelf, much leſs me thro' him. Was Neynoe alive, and Kelly dead, and incapable of contradicting what Neynoe ſaid, I believe what Neynoe ſaid would not be of any Weight; beſides, what Neynoe dead ſays, and Kelly now alive denies, ought not to have any Force.

Concerning Hearſay Evidence in general, and concerning the due Regard to it, I humbly deſire your Lordſhips, that a Paſſage may be read out of Sir John Fenwick's Bill of Attainder. (The wholePreamble read.)

My Lords, I humby deſir'd to have this read, becauſe I thought it would take away a Diſtinction between Legal and Parliamentary Evidence; that what was not Legal might be Parliamentary. I believe here is a Condemnation of him by Parliament; therefore, I think, the Condemnation of him muſt be by Parliamentary Evidence. It is recited in this Act, as one of the Inducements that mov'd the King, Lords, and Commons to paſs that Act, that Sir John Fenwick had contriv'd and fram'd ſeveral Papers, &c. only by Hearſay.

Shall that be accepted in this Parliament for Evidence, which is declar'd the only Motive of attainting a Man in another? If it was judg'd hard in Sir John Fenwick's Caſe to charge a Man by Hearſay, can the being thus charg'd be any Proof againſt me? Sure the Houſe of Commons in 96, that brought that in, would have ſo thought, nor would thoſe of your Lordſhips conſented here, or elſewhere, to have paſs'd it.

As for thoſe that did not conſent, I will venture to ſay, I am exceedingly puzzled to know why they did not oppoſe Sir John Fenwick, but favour'd his Caſe, and are yet againſt me. Is the Guilt objected to me, if prov'd, in any Meaſure like his? Or is there any Compariſon between the Proof againſt him and me?

As to the Paper and Information given in by Neynoe, and printed in the Appendix, it is plain he was drawn in to have ſworn backward or forward, to have affirm'd or deny'd any thing. He knew a certain Lord of the Council, that gave me Notice of my being taken up ſome Days before it happen'd. He knew what Uſe and Purpoſe the Proteſts of your Lordſhips were chiefly deſign'd for and calculated; and it appears by his Paper that was taken in his Pocket after his Death, that he had undertaken to give a poſitive Account, and deſign'd either to ask or receive ſuch a Sum of Money.

'Tis ſaid he was the late Earl Mariſhall's Bedfellow for ſeveral Months, and had drawn up Heads for Memorials to be deliver'd to the Regent; but he had kept no Copies of theſe Heads, or foul Draughts which would have ſhewn whether they were given in to promote it, or diſcover it; in either caſe the Evidence of being then employ'd, would have been of Service: but they have not been able to produce a Line of ſuch Heads or Memorials, yet the Report of the Houſe of Commons, upon the Baſis of theſe Memorials, builds the whole Fabrick. He knew that I went under the Names of Jones and Illington, and undoubtedly he knew Mr. Dubois: If the Scheme of writing that Letter myſelf had been ſeen, he would have found out a Reaſon for the Correſpondence; and 500 l. would have made him affirm, That he carry'd the Letter himſelf. He knew the Pretender's particular Opinion of me, or of any Body elſe, and that he rely'd on Advices from me: How did he know that? He told him ſo. Who told him? It is not ſuppos'd Mr. Kelly had it from himſelf, but from Perſons of high Eſtate, and that were near the Pretender.

Let me ſpeak, my Lords, as always I hope I ſhall, with that Modeſty as becomes Juſtice, but yet with Freedom, to you.

Hath nothing been open'd to you concerning this Man's Character, and his ſecret Tranſactions? Is it poſſible to believe this Pretender to Secrecy could have had, or ſhall he ſtill have any Degree of Weight, that threw away his Life, rather than venture to ſtand to the Truth of what he ſaid before his Death, and then he could have been contradicted, or Pangs of Conſcience might have made him unſay what he had ſaid? But a dead Man can retract nothing; what he hath writ, he hath writ: The Accuſation muſt ſtand juſt as it did, ſo far as it concerns him; and we are depriv'd of the Advantage, which Truth and Remorſe once extorted, and would have again extorted from him. However, I would have been glad to have had all that ever this Wretch ſaid; and would hope that by comparing of the ſeveral Stories, which he ſeveral Times told, ſome Light might have been gain'd, which is now wanted: —— Particularly by the Knowledge of what he ſaid freely and voluntarily, when he was in good humour, and before his rough Uſage, on his Return from Rome, had frighted him; but I think we have the Evidence only of a few of the laſt Days of his Life, all the preceding Time is blank. He underwent frequent Examinations, but they were not, it ſeems, ſo maturely weighed and digeſted as to be thought worth the committing to writing: but he is gone to his Place, and hath anſwer'd for what he hath ſaid at another Tribunal. I deſire not to diſturb his Aſhes, farther than what is neceſſary for my Defenſe.

Your Lordſhips will obſerve firſt, the Inconſiſtency of ſome Part of the Charge. Secondly, the Improbability of it. The Report takes Notice of three ſeveral Periods, or Stages of Time, when, by Conſequence of ſome Informations from the Regent, the Deſign did not take Place: The firſt was, during the Election; the 2d was, the King's going to Hanover; and the third was, the breaking up of the Camp. There is not the leaſt Hint as to the laſt of theſe three Deſigns, in any of the Papers; tho in the Recital of the Bill it is mention'd as the third Part of the Plot, and the moſt deteſtable Part of the Deſign, to lay violent Hands on his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs.

There is not the leaſt Colour of Proof, as to the firſt Part of the Conſpiracy, which was to take place at the Election; their only Reaſon for that, is from a Paſſage, where it is ſaid, that the preſent Opportunity is elaps'd, that is, the Opportunity of the Election.

I ſhall recite the Paſſage, as it lies in the intercepted Letter, and make ſome Reflections on it: Notwithſtanding the Opportunity is elaps'd, (ſays the Writer to Jackſon) I agree with you, another may offer before the End of the Year, tho not perhaps every Way ſo favourable.

The Committee ſuppoſe this Letter to be from Kelly, and dictated by me; and they ſuppoſe the Words to refer to the time of the Election, and from thoſe Suppoſitions infer that I knew ſomething of it. On the contrary, I ſhall, on the two firſt Suppoſitions ſhew the Impoſſibility of it; if this was a Letter from me, or from any other Perſon, dictated by me to the Pretender, I muſt write as in Anſwer to ſome Letter ſent from them to me, in repeating the Expreſſion; and his Opinion in the Letter muſt have been founded on Intelligence before receiv'd: This Intelligence, conſidering the Diſtance between London and Rome, muſt have been communicated two Months, if not longer, before the Date of this Letter; if we go back two Months, and talk of the Election being elaps'd, it was not begun; conſequently that Opportunity in the Letter could not poſſibly mean the Time of the Election; and if ſo, it is impoſſible that it ſhould be a Letter to the Pretender, that can conſiſt with the Charge of the Perſon's writing in April 1720.

If it be a Letter writ in good Earneſt, it appears they had given over all Thoughts at that Time: I agree with you, ſays he, another may offer before the End of the Year: and yet he finds ſome Words in a Letter writ ten Days after, wherein, under the Name of Jones, I am made to be deeply concern'd in a Conſpiracy.

How can this be conſiſtent, if I writ and directed that Letter, and was engag'd in the ſecond Part of the Conſpiracy?

Both cannot be true, both may be falſe; and I hope I have ſatisfy'd your Lordſhips, that as I did not dictate the one, ſo I was no ways concern'd in the other.

Can any one believe, that under the ſad Circumſtance of being afflicted by the Death of my Wife, I ſhould be concern'd in an Affair of this dangerous Nature? Was that a Time to provide for a Stranger? And for a Man, unleſs under the Power of Prejudice, to believe ſuch an Improbability, or that I had ſuch a Conjecture? I forbear former Inſtances.

I ſhall now conſider the Improbability, as well as Inconſiſtency of the Charge brought againſt me without poſitive Proof. You will allow me to anſwer the Indictment in the ſame Manner as it is laid.

Is it probable that if I were engag'd in any ſuch Deſign, no Footſteps ſhould be ſeen of any Correſpondence I had with the late Duke of Ormond, to whom, of all Perſons abroad, I was beſt known, and to whom I had the greateſt Regard, and ſtill have all the Regard that is conſiſtent with my Duty to my King and Country?

Is it probable that I would chooſe rather to engage in ſuch Deſign with Mr. Dillon, a Military Man I never ſaw, and with the Earl of Marr, whom I never convers'd with except when he was Secretary of State?

Did I not know, what all the World thinks, that he had left the Pretender ſeveral Years, and had a Penſion abroad? Is this a Seaſon for me to enter into Conferences with him about reſtoring the Pretender; and do this not by Meſſages but by Letters, not ſent by Meſſengers but by the common Poſt? That by thus writing to him by the Poſt, I ſhould adviſe him after the ſame manner to write to me, and by theſe Means furniſh Opportunities towards detecting the Perſons, and bringing myſelf into Danger? How doth that conſiſt with the Caution and Secrecy which are ſaid to belong to me? Muſt not I have been raſh to have laid myſelf open in ſuch a Manner? This is an inconſiſtent Scheme, the other a bold Aſſertion. Is it probable, when attending the ſick Bed of my Wife, and expecting her Death, not daily but hourly, that I ſhould enter into Negotiations of this kind?

There was no need of Diſpatching any of thoſe three Letters, merely to excuſe my not writing: The Circumſtances of my Family had been a ſufficient Apology, and more effectual.

Is it probable, that when I was carrying on publick Buildings of various kinds at Weſtminſter, and Bromley, conſulting all the Books from the Weſtminſter Foundation, engaging in a Correſpondence with learned Men, about ſettling an Important Point of Divinity; that at that very Time, I ſhould be carrying on a Conſpiracy? Thoſe that entertain ſuch Thoughts without Reaſon, may alſo condemn me without Argument.

Is it probable, that I ſhould meet, and conſult, in order to carry on and forward this Correſpondence with no Body, and no where?

That I, who always liv'd at Home, and except at Dinner-Time, never ſtirr'd out of my Chamber; receiv'd all Perſons that viſited me, and was deny'd to none, ſhould have an Opportunity to be ſo engag'd? And if I had, that none of my Domeſticks and Friends ſhould ever obſerve any Appearance of any ſuch Thing? No Evidence among my Papers, tho they were all ſeiz'd at both my Houſes, and confining all my Servants, but one now, for about 10 or 11 Weeks, ſearching him twice in the Tower, and ſearching myſelf, nothing of Conſequence appears, nor is there any one living Witneſs that charges me with any thing that is really true.

Is it probable, that I ſhould form and direct a Conſpiracy, and carry it on with any Succeſs, that am not us'd to Arms, which I am no more acquainted with, than with the Perſons employ'd on thoſe Occaſions? My Way of Life hath not led me to converſe with ſuch Men and ſuch Matters, except on the Occaſion of meeting in Parliament; but in a Council of War I never was. Have I yet in any Inſtance of my Life meddled remarkably out of my own Sphere, in Affairs foreign to my Buſineſs or Character? I might have been thought to have been too active in my proper Station and Buſineſs; but I was never charg'd with War, nor any ways inform'd in the Art of it.

Is it juſt, that Perſons concern'd in the Military Way, ſhould be puniſh'd without any Proof?

And muſt I, whoſe Way of Life is ſet at the greateſt Diſtance from ſuch Perſons, and from the very Suſpicion of being concern'd with them, ſuffer all the Pains and Penalties, ſhort of Death, which the Parliament can inflict, for a ſuppos'd I know not what, and what I don't to this Day apprehend?

Here

Here is a Plot of a Year or two standing, to subvert the Government with an arm'd Force, an Invasion from Abroad, an Insurrection at Home; just when ripe for Execution it is discover'd: and 12 Months after the Contrivance of this Scheme, no Consultation appears, no Men Corresponding together, no Provision of Money, Arms, or Officers ——not a Man in Arms —— And yet the poor Bishop has done all this.

Layer and Plunket carry on a Treasonable Correspondence: They go to Rome and receive Directions from the Pretender himself, to promote his Cause——It does no where appear that the Bishop has the least Share in, or is any way privy to, their Practices—And yet the Bishop has done all, He is principally concern'd in forming, directing, and carrying on this Detestable Conspiracy.

What could tempt me to step thus out of my Way? Was it Ambition, and a Desire of climbing into a higher Station in the Church? There is not a Man in my Office farther remov'd from this than I am; I have a hundred Times said, and sincerely resolv'd, I would have been nothing more than I was, at a Time when I little thought of being any thing before; and I could give an Instance of this Kind if I thought proper.

Was Money my Aim? I always despis'd it, too much perhaps, considering what occasion I am now like to have for it: for out of a poor Bishoprick of 500 l. per Annum, I have laid out no less than Two Thousand Pounds, towards Repairs of the Church and Episcopal Palace; nor did I take one Shilling for Dilapidations. The rest of my little Income has been spent as is necessary, as I am a Bishop. Nor do I repent of those Expences now, (tho since my long Confinement I have not receiv'd the least Part of the Income of my Deanery) not doubting in the least, but that God who hath liberally provided for me hitherto, will still do it, and on his good Providence I securely rely.

Was I influenc'd by any Dislike of the Establish'd Religion, and secretly inclin'd towards a Church of greater Pomp and Power? I have, my Lords, ever since I knew what Popery was, oppos'd it; and the better I knew it, the more I dislik'd it.

I begun my Study in Divinity, when the Popish Controversy grew hot about that immortal Book of Tillotson's, when he undertook the Defense of the Protestant Cause in general; and as such I esteem'd him above all.

You will pardon me, my Lords, if I mention one thing.

Thirty Years ago, I writ in Defense of Martin Luther, and have preach'd, and writ to that Purpose from my Infancy; and whatever happens to me, I will suffer any thing, and will, by God's Grace, burn at the Stake, rather than depart from any material Point of the Protestant Religion, as profess'd in the Church of England.

Once more: Can I be suppos'd to favour Arbitrary Power? The whole Tenor of my Life hath been otherwise: I was always a Friend of the Liberty of the Subject, and to the best of my Power constantly maintain'd it: I may have been thought mistaken in the Measures I took to support it.

It matters not by what Party I was called, so my Actions are uniform.

To return to the Point: The Charge brought against me in the Manner it is brought, is improbable: If I could be guilty of it, I must have acted under a Spirit of Infatuation; yet I have never been thought an Idiot or a Madman.

My Lords, as to the Pains and Penalties contain'd in this Bill, they are great and grievous, beyond Example in their Nature and Direction.

I am here, my Lords, and have been expecting an immediate Trial. I have, my Lords, declin'd no Impeachment. The Correspondence with the Earl of Clarendon, was made Treason, but with me it is only Felony. He was allow'd the Conversation of his Children, by the expres Words of the Act: Mine are not so much as to write, so as to be sent to me.

What is most particular in my Case I will repeat distinctly, that my Reverend Brethren may hear it. I am render'd incapable of using or exercising any Office, Function, Authority, or Power Ecclesiastical, not only in his Majesty's Dominions, but any where else. Very hard! That such Spiritual Power as is not deriv'd from Men, but God himself, should be taken from me!

And I am not only deprived of all Offices, Dignities, and Benefices Ecclesiastical, and for ever banish'd the Realm, but likewise precluded from the Benefit of Royal Clemency, and made utterly incapable of any Pardon by his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors.

My Lords, I insist on my Innocence, that I am not guilty; and if I am not prov'd so, your Lordships will thus judge; if otherwise, I persuade myself I shall find some Degree of Mercy.

You will not strip a Man of his Substance, and then send him where he cannot subsist; you will not send him among Strangers, and then hinder others from performing Humanity to him; you will not give him less time to order his Affairs and depart the Kingdom, than the Bill hath taken in passing thro' both Houses.

The Great Man, I last mention'd, carry'd a great Fortune with him into foreign Parts, and had the Languages; was well acquainted abroad: The Reverse of all this is my Case; I indeed am like him in nothing but his Innocency, and his Punishment. It is in no Man's Power to make us differ in the one, but it is in your Lordships Power to make us differ widely in the other, and I hope your Lordships will do it.

But to sum up the Arguments: It hath been frequently observ'd, that the higher the Crimes are, the fuller the Proofs ought to be. Here is a Charge of High-Treason brought against me, with no Evidence at all.

My Lords, pardon me, what is not Evidence at Law, can never be made so by any Power on Earth: for the Law that requir'd the Evidence, is as much the Law of the Land, as that which declares the Crime.

It is equally unjust to declare any Proof legal, because of my Prosecution: As extraordinary would it be, to declare the Acts themselves, ex post facto.

Never was there a Charge of so high a Nature, and so weakly prov'd.

A Person dead, so that there is not an Opportunity to falsify him by contradicting him, a Charge not supported by any one Evidence, nor by any one Proof of any Thing that hath been writ or receiv'd by me, nor even by any one criminal Word prov'd to have been spoken by me: but by intercepted Letters and Correspondence, in which appears not the least Certainty.

Some of thoſe Letters, ſhown to Perſons, with a Deſign to faſten ſomething on them; others writ in Cyphers, and fictitious Names, throwing out dark and abſtruſe Hints of what Perſons went by thoſe Names, ſometimes true and ſometimes doubtful, and often falſe, who continue all the while Strangers to the whole Tranſaction, and never make the Diſcovery, till they feel and find it advancing itſelf towards them: My Lords, this is my Caſe, in ſhort.

I have a hard Task to prove my Innocency: Shall I ſtand convicted before your Lordſhips on ſuch an Evidence as this? The Hearſay of an Hearſay; a Party dead, and that deny'd what he ſaid; by ſtrange and obſcure Paſſages, and fictitious Names in Letters, by the Conjecture of Decypherers, without any Opportunity given me of examining and looking into the Decyphering; by the Depoſitions of Poſt-Office Clerks about the Similitude of Hands; their Depoſitions made at diſtant Times, and without comparing any one of the Originals, by a ſtrange Interpretation of them: for nothing more, I am perſuaded, can be made of the Arguments, than what is call'd the intercepted Correſpondence.

Shall I, my Lords, be depriv'd of all that is dear to me, and in the Circumſtances I am in, ſcarce able to bear up, and by ſuch an Evidence as would not be admitted in any other Cauſe or any other Court; and would hardly affect a Jew in the Inquiſition of Spain?

And ſhall it be receiv'd againſt a Biſhop of this Church, and a Member of this Houſe? God forbid. Give me leave to make mention of a Text in Holy Writ: Againſt an Elder receive not an Accuſation, but before two or three Witneſſes. It is not ſaid, Condemn him not upon an Accuſation, &c. but receive it not: I am ſomething more than an Elder; and ſhall an Accuſation againſt me be countenanced, without any one Inſtance of Proof to ſupport it?

This is not directly Matter of Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution: There you read, one Witneſs ſhould not riſe up againſt an Elder; but here, at the Mouth of two Witneſſes, or three Witneſſes, ſhall the Matter be eſtabliſh'd: And as this Rule was tranſlated into the State of the Church, People always thought fit to allow it.

Shall I be the firſt Biſhop in this Church, condemn'd upon Conjecture, on fictitious Names and obſcure Paſſages in Letters, inſtead of two or three Witneſſes?

Will not others endeavour to make the ſame Precedent, and deſire the ſame Influence of it to ſucceeding Ages; and even concur in ſuch an Act, in order to render me incapable of uſing or exerciſing any Power or Authority, &c. Is this good Divinity, or good Policy?

As to the Juſtice of the Legiſlature, in ſome Reſpects it hath a greater Power than the Sovereign Legiſlator of the Univerſe: For he can do nothing unjuſt. But tho there are no Limits to be ſet to a Parliament, yet they are generally thought to reſtrain themſelves, to guide their Proceedings in Criminal Caſes, according to the known Law.

The Parliament may order a Criminal to be tortur'd: Who can ſay they cannot? But they never did, nor never will, I hope; becauſe Torture, tho uſed in other Countries, is not known here.

Is it not torturing, to inflict Pains and Penalties on Perſons only ſuſpected of Guilt, not plainly prov'd guilty? Is it not much unlike it. The Parliament may, if they pleaſe, as well upon Bills of perpetual Impriſonment, as upon Bills of perpetual Exile, reſerve to the Crown a Power to determine the one as well as the other. They have reſerv'd it in the former Caſe, but have not reſerv'd it here in the other. The Law knows nothing of ſuch abſolute perpetual Impriſonments.

The Parliament may, in like manner condemn a Man on a Charge of Accumulated and Conſtructive Treaſon. They did ſo in the Caſe of the great Lord Strafford, and that by Accumulated and Conſtructive Proof of ſuch Treaſon; that is, by Proofs ſo interpreted, as plainly to communicate Light and Strength to each other, and ſo to have all the Force, without the Formality of Evidence. Was ſuch Proof ever admitted by any one to deprive his Fellow-Subject of his Fortune, of his Eſtate, his Friends, and Country, and ſend him in his old Age, without Language or Hope, without Employment to get the Neceſſaries of Life, to ſtarve? I ſay again, God forbid.

My Ruin is not of that Moment to any Number of Men, to make it worth their while to violate, or even to ſeem to violate their Conſtitution in any Degree, which they ought to preſerve againſt any Attempts whatſoever.

But where once ſuch extraordinary Steps as theſe are taken, and we depart from the fixed Rules and Forms of Juſtice, and try untrodden Paths, no Man knows where this ſhall ſtop.

Tho I am worthy of no regard, tho whatſoever is done to me may, for that Reaſon, be look'd upon to be juſt; yet your Lordſhips will have ſome regard to your own laſting Intereſt, and that of Poſterity.

This is a Proceeding with which the Conſtitution is not acquainted; which, under the Pretence of ſupporting it, will at laſt effectually deſtroy it.

For God's ſake lay aſide theſe extraordinary Proceedings; ſet not up theſe new and dangerous Precedents; I, for my part, will voluntarily and chearfully go into perpetual Baniſhment, and pleaſe myſelf that I am, in ſome meaſure, the Occaſion of putting a Stop to ſuch Precedents, and doing ſome Good to my Country, and will live, where-ever I am, praying for its Proſperity; and do, with the Word of Father Paul to the State of Venice, ſay Eſto perpetuo: It is not my departing from it I am concern'd for; let me depart, and let my Country be fix'd upon the immovable Foundation of Law and Juſtice, and ſtand for ever.

I have, my Lords, taken up much of your Lordſhips Time, yet I muſt beg your Attention a little longer.

Some part of my Charge hath been diſproved by direct and full Evidence, particularly that of writing the Letters of the 20th of April, or that I knew who wrote them; which I utterly deny that I ever did, or as yet do know. Other Parts of the Charge there are, which are not capable of ſuch Diſproof, nor indeed require it; there I reſt. But my Lords, there is a Way allow'd of vindicating myſelf, it is generally Negative; that is, by proteſting and declaring my Innocence to your Lordſhips, in the moſt deliberate, ſerious, and ſolemn Manner; and appealing to God, the Searcher of Hearts, as to the Truth of what I ſay, as I do it in what follows. I am charg'd in the Report with directing a Correſpondence to Mr. Kelly; but I ſolemnly deny that I ever, directly or indirectly, ſaw a ſingle Line of any of their Letters till I met with them in Print. Nor was the Contents of any of them communicated to me. I do in the next place deny, that I was ever privy to any Memorial to be drawn up to be deliver'd to the Regent. Nor was I ever acquainted with any Attempt to be made on the King's going to Hannover, or at the Time of the Election. Nor did I hear the leaſt Rumour of Plot to take place after the breaking up of the Camp, till ſome Time after Mr. Layer's Commitment. I do with the ſame Solemnity declare, that I never collected, remitted, receiv'd, or aſk'd any Money of any Man, to facilitate theſe Deſigns; nor was I ever acquainted with, or had any Remittances whatſoever, from any of thoſe Perſons. I never drew any Declaration, Minutes, or Paper, in the Name of the Pretender, as is expreſly charg'd upon me. And I never knew of any Commiſſion iſſu'd, Preparation of Arms, Officers, or Soldiers, or the Methods taken to procure any, in order to raiſe an Inſurrection in theſe Kingdoms. All this I declare to be true, and will ſo declare to the laſt Gaſp of my Breath.

And I am ſure, the further your Lordſhips examine into this Affair, the more you will be convinc'd of my Innocency. Theſe contain all the Capital Articles of which I am accuſed, in the Report of the Houſe of Commons.

Had the Charge been as fully prov'd as aſcertain'd, it had been vain to make Proteſtations of my Innocency, tho never ſo ſolemn.

But as the Charge is only ſupported by the ſlighteſt Probabilities, and which cannot be diſprov'd in any Inſtance, without proving a Negative; allow the ſolemn Aſſeverations of a Man in behalf of his own Innocence to have their due Weight, and I ask no more, than that may have as much Influence with your Lordſhips as they have Truth.

If on any Account there ſhall ſtill be thought by your Lordſhips to be any ſeeming Strength in the Proofs againſt me: If by your Lordſhips Judgments, ſpringing from unknown Motives, I ſhall be thought to be guilty; if for any Reaſons, or Neceſſity of State, of the Wiſdom and Juſtice of which I am no competent Judge; if your Lordſhips ſhall proceed to paſs this Bill againſt me, God's Will be done: Naked came I out of my Mother's Womb, and Naked ſhall I return; and whether he gives or takes away, bleſſed be the Name of the Lord.

May 13. was appointed for the Reply of the Counſel for the Bill, who were Mr. Reeve, and Mr. Wearg: Mr. Reeve ſpake as follows.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

TO permit me to offer ſomething, by way of Reply to the Arguments that have been made uſe of, and the Evidence that hath been given, in Behalf of the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

My Lords, I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with entering far into the Arguments ſo much inſiſted on by the other Side, concerning the Power of the Parliament to paſs Bills of Attainder.

They have been ſpoken of by the Counſel of the other Side, as inconſiſtent with our Conſtitution; Bills of Pains and Penalties, and Bills of Attainder, have been treated by them as unknown to our Conſtitution, unleſs in a few Inſtances, which afterwards have been condemned.

And yet they have mentioned the Caſe of Sir John Fenwick, which is a Precedent of a Perſon attainted without legal Evidence, tho he were forth-coming and ameſnable to Juſtice, and his Attainder remains ſtill unreverſed. And as to Bills of Pains and Penalties, they ſhould, before they inveigh'd ſo much againſt them, have conſider'd, that two ſuch Bills have now already paſſed your Lordſhips Houſe; and the Bills againſt Counter, Bernardi, and others, and againſt the late South-Sea Directors, are Precedents of Bills of this Kind.

They have mention'd many Inſtances, where Perſons have been proſecuted according to the known Rules of Law, and the Parliament did not think fit to interpoſe. And doubtleſs, my Lords, generally ſpeaking, where Evidence is to be had and to be produced, and the Perſons are forth-coming, it is right to proceed according to the known Rules of Law, in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice.

But where Conſpirators are carrying on their Deſigns with Art, and contriving to ſhelter themſelves from thoſe known Rules of Law; we apprehend, my Lords, the ordinary Proſecutions at Law will be no Argument againſt the Legiſlature's making uſe of their Authority, when the Circumſtances of the Caſe, the Preſervation of the publick Peace, and the Safety of the Conſtitution, require it.

But I beg leave to mention one Inſtance, in which they are miſtaken: They have ſaid, that in the Caſe of the Regicides (that horrid and deteſtable Treaſon!) they were all proſecuted according to the ordinary Courſe of Law; but if they had look'd into the Acts of Parliament, they would have found, that ſome of them were puniſh'd by Bills of Pains and Penalties. The Lord Monſon and others, who ſat as Judges in the pretended High Court of Juſtice, were reſerv'd by two Acts of Parliament that paſs'd, to have Pains and Penalties inflicted upon them; and tho there was Evidence in that Caſe to have attainted them according to the ordinary Courſe of Law, the Parliament did proceed to puniſh them by Pains and Penalties, and they were not try'd according to the ordinary Courſe of Law.

This I beg leave to obſerve to your Lordſhips, in relation to the Power and Uſage of Parliaments, in paſſing Bills of this Kind.

My Lords, in the next place I beg leave to take Notice, that the Obſervations that have been made, and the Evidence that hath been given by them, as to Facts mention'd in the Report and Appendix, concerning which we have given no Evidence at all, ought to be laid out of this Caſe, as foreign to the Matter before your Lordſhips. The Matters we have given in Evidence, it was proper for them to anſwer; but they have gone into the Report and Appendix, in order to diſprove Facts mention'd there, tho we gave no Evidence concerning them; and we humbly apprehend, it is not neceſſary for us to follow them as to thoſe Facts; for if we maintain the Charge we have given, it doth not concern us to make good every Article in the Report and Appendix, relating to this Reverend Prelate now before your Lordſhips.

My Lords, we muſt admit the Evidence produced to charge the Reverend Prelate at your Lordſhips

Lordſhips Bar, is not all of it Evidence ſtrictly legal againſt him, if he was to be try'd according to the ordinary Courſe of Juſtice in Weſtminſter-Hall. But, my Lords, we humbly apprehend you are not tied to the Rules of Weſtminſter-Hall; for if your Lordſhips are ſatisfied that the Facts proved, laying them all together, do conclude the Reverend Prelate at the Bar guilty, notwithſtanding they do not amount to Evidence according to the ordinary Rules of Weſtminſter-Hall, your Lordſhips will be of Opinion, that it is fit he ſhould be puniſh'd.

My Lords, the Evidence that hath been given by us, as to Facts committed by the Biſhop of Rocheſter, hath been chiefly from three Letters, dated the 20th of April, 1722; each of theſe was written in the Hand of Mr. Kelly, and dictated by my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter.

My Lords, theſe Letters are writ, ſome Part in Cyphers, and ſome Part not; they are ſign'd by the Names of T. Jones, T. Illington, and the Figures 1378. My Lords, if theſe three Letters are proved, to your Lordſhips Satisfaction, to be the Letters of my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, we humbly apprehend they do prove all the Allegations in the Bill, which my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter hath been pleaſed to call upon us to ſhew that he hath been guilty of. They do contain, as we ſay, and as plainly appears from the Letters themſelves, Matters relating to conſulting and conſpiring to invite a foreign Force into this Kingdom for an Invaſion, and to promote an Inſurrection. And if the Name of Jackſon is the Name by which the Pretender is ſignified, that Letter will prove the other Part of the Bill, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter hath held Correſpondence with the Pretender himſelf.

My Lords, I beg leave to obſerve upon the Word Jackſon: It hath been inſiſted upon, that tho it is contain'd in Plunket's Cypher, yet Jackſon may ſignify in Mr. Plunket's Cypher one thing, and in theſe Letters another; and theſe Letters are contrived in Figures, and not thoſe Cant Words and Names, as in Mr. Plunket's; but ſo far they go, to admit that in Plunket's Cypher the Name of Jackſon ſtands for the Pretender.

My Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was pleaſed to obſerve, that in all the Correſpondence between Mr. Kelly and the Perſons with whom he correſponded abroad, there is no Name contain'd in Mr. Plunket's Cypher, which Kelly hath made uſe of in any of his Letters, but this.

My Lords, it appears to your Lordſhips, that in the Correſpondence between Mr. Kelly and the Perſons abroad, ſeveral other Names, mention'd in Plunket's Cypher, have been uſed: and it is not material, whether theſe Names are contain'd in the Letters writ by Kelly himſelf, or in thoſe of his Correſpondents writing to him. When his Correſpondents write to him, in anſwer to his Letters, they uſe ſeveral other of the Names which are contain'd in Plunket's Cypher; which, my Lords, we humbly apprehend is the ſame Thing as to this Purpoſe, as if they were uſed in Mr. Kelly's Letters; for he muſt be preſumed to know the Meaning of thoſe fictitious Names, when they are contain'd in Letters that come in anſwer to Letters from him, in the Correſpondence which he carries on; and we humbly apprehend, my Lords, that is as ſtrong an Evidence, as if they had been contain'd in the Letters writ by Kelly himſelf. Therefore, my Lords, I beg leave to take notice of ſeveral Names that are in Mr. Plunket's Cypher, and uſed by Mr. Kelly's Correſpondents, in their Letters to him.

There is the Name of Xoland, which ſtands for Wogan; the Name of Lane, which ſtands for Lord Marr; the Name of Cane, which ſtands for Dillon; and the Name of Howell, for Glaſcock. My Lords, all theſe Names are in Mr. Plunket's Cypher, and made uſe of in the Letters that paſs'd between Mr. Kelly and his Correſpondents.

My Lords, I ſhall beg leave to ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, when, among Perſons concerned in carrying on the ſame Conſpiracy, Cyphers are made uſe of, and in the Cyphers of ſome of the Conſpirators, the Names comprized in Letters writ by others of the Conſpirators are contain'd, whether it is not a reaſonable Evidence, that thoſe fictitious Names contain'd in the Cyphers of one of the Conſpirators, and made uſe of in the Letters of the other, ſignify the ſame Perſons; unleſs there is ſomething to diſtinguiſh the Caſe, and ſhew that the ſame Names are made uſe of to denote ſeveral Perſons.

My Lords, we humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that it is plain from the Evidence we have given, that theſe three Letters are writ by the ſame Hand; and by the Circumſtances in the Letters, they appear to be dictated by one and the very ſame Perſon. Therefore, my Lords, the Enquiry will be, who is the Perſon deſcribed by the Names of T. Jones, T. Illington, and the Figures 1378: for if we have proved the Biſhop of Rocheſter to be denoted in this Correſpondence by the Names Jones and Illington, and that theſe Letters were written by Kelly, and dictated by Jones and Illington, then the Biſhop of Rocheſter is the Perſon by whom theſe Letters were dictated.

This will appear to your Lordſhips from other Facts contained in Letters intercepted in this Correſpondence; Facts that, all of them together, can relate to no Perſon but the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

The Circumſtances of the Biſhop and his Family, are exactly deſcribed in the three Letters of the 20th of April; and thoſe Circumſtances plainly ſhew, that all the three Letters were dictated by the ſame Perſon, and that the Figures 1378 denote the ſame Perſon that Jones and Illington do.

My Lords, there are ſeveral other Facts contain'd in the intercepted Letters, that denote Jones and Illington to be the Biſhop of Rocheſter. One of them is, the Fact relating to a Dog ſent over to Mr. Kelly, which appears, by the Evidence given, to have been deſign'd for the Biſhop of Rocheſter: Therefore in the Letter mark'd E. 32. (that is, a Letter to Mr. Kelly by the Name of Hatfield, and directed to Mr. Hatfield, under Mr. Anthony Saunders's Cover, which is one of the Perſons deſcribed in the Liſt of Directions taken in Kelly's Pocket-Book) the Letter mentions the little Dog was ſent ten Days ago, and order'd to be deliver'd to you. &c.—My Lords, afterwards Mr. Kelly by a Letter dated the 30th of April 1722, E. 35. (it is a Letter from J.H. one of Mr. Kelly's Names, to Howell, and which have been proved to be Mr. Kelly's Hand-writing) ſays, I received the Preſent ſent by the young Lady, but in ſuch a bad Condition, that I am afraid he will never do well; for he had a Leg broken in his Journey, which is ſtill very very bad with him; however, I will take all the Care imaginable of him, and inform Mr. Jones ſoon of it, to whom, I know, any thing from that Quarter will be very acceptable.

My Lords, it appears by this Letter of Mr. Kelly's, that this Dog, that is there mention'd, was not a Dog for Mr. Kelly himſelf, but for Mr. Jones; a Dog for a Perſon denoted and underſtood by the fictitious Name of Jones: So that if the Evidence that hath been given of this Dog being deſign'd for the Biſhop of Rocheſter, is true; then it follows that Mr. Jones, mention'd in this Letter of Kelly's, denotes the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

There is another Letter relating to this Dog, E. 42: there is mention'd the Concern Mrs. Illington was in for poor Harlequin; Mrs. Illington is in great Tribulation for poor Harlequin, who is in a bad Way, having ſlipped his Leg again before it was thoroughly well; however, his Obligations to the Lady are as great as if he had come ſafe, which he deſires you to let her know.

My Lords, this ſhews that Jones and Illington are the ſame Perſons. It appears by the former Letter, that the Preſent was for Mr. Jones, and he ſhould ſoon know of it; this Letter ſays, that Mrs. Illington is in great Tribulation, &c. However his Obligations to the Lady are as great, &c. Tho in the firſt Part of the Letter it is Mrs. Illington, in the latter Part it is HIS Obligations to the Lady are as great as if he had come ſafe, which HE deſires you to let her know. That ſhews, that the Perſon in the former Letter, deſcribed by the Name of Jones, is in this Letter deſcribed by Illington, and conſequently Jones and Illington are the ſame Perſon.

My Lords, the next Circumſtance obſervable in theſe Letters, the intercepted Correſpondence between Mr. Kelly and his Friends abroad, is the Letter dated the 30th of April 1722, E. 35. which ſays, Mrs. Jones died laſt Week, and when the Days of Mourning are over, he will, I hope, be fit for Buſineſs.

My Lords, it hath been given in Evidence, that the Biſhop's Lady, his own Witneſſes as well as ours, have given an Account, that the Biſhop's Lady died the 26th of April: This Letter is dated the 30th of the ſame April, conſequently this ſuits exactly with the Biſhop's Circumſtances as to his Lady being dead.

My Lords, that Jones and Illington are the ſame, appears likewiſe by the Anſwer given to this Letter, dated the 20th of May, 1722, E. 43. which ſays, Mrs. Chivers gives you her kind Service, and prays you will condole in his Name on the Death of Mrs. Illington. My Lords, this Letter is in anſwer to that of the 30th of April, for it begins, Yours of the 30th of April, which ſhould have come by laſt Poſt, is come to hand; and this Letter condoles on the Death of Mrs. Illington, whereas the Letter of the 30th of April gave an Account that Mrs. Jones was dead. So that Jones and Illington appear by theſe Letters to denote the ſame Perſon.

My Lords, theſe are Letters writ by Correſpondents, concern'd, one with another, in carrying on this Conſpiracy. It hath been objected, on the behalf of my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, that he is not concern'd in writing of theſe Letters, nor did any of them come to his Hands, nor were they writ by his Directions, but that they paſſed between Mr. Kelly and his Correſpondents abroad.

Your Lordſhips, we hope, will be of Opinion, in a Correſpondence of this Nature, (unleſs they ſhew ſomething to induce your Lordſhips to believe, that there hath been a malicious Deſign in the Parties between whom theſe Letters paſs'd, to denote the Biſhop of Rocheſter, in order to charge him) that theſe are Facts, which amount to a certain Proof who the Perſon is, that uſed to go by the Names of Jones and Illington.

Your Lordſhips obſerve how the Matter ſtands: Mr. Jones and Illington is a Perſon deſcribed, by the Letters of the 20th of April, to be in great Pain himſelf, to be in melancholy Circumſtances in other Reſpects: He appears by the Evidence at that Time to have been ill of the Gout, his Lady appears to have been ill, and dying; Mrs. Jones and Mr. Illington is a Perſon to whom a Dog was ſent, and it appears by the Evidence, that this Dog was deſign'd for the Biſhop of Rocheſter. Mrs. Jones, in one Letter 'tis ſaid, died laſt Week; and in another Letter they condole the Death of Mrs. Illington: and it appears the Biſhop's Lady died the Week before the 30th of April.

My Lords, there are other Circumſtances, which I ſhould mention, in relation to the Times when the Biſhop was in London, and when in the Country; which, we apprehend, is an additional Proof who was meant by the Names of Jones and Illington. Therefore in Letter E. 41. a. Kelly ſays, Mr. Illington is now in Town, and preſents his kind Service to you; he is glad to hear you received his Letters by Crow, and wiſhes his next may be more to your Satisfaction.

This Letter is dated the 7th of May; there it is ſaid, Mr. Jones is now in Town: It appears, by the Examination of Wood the Coachman, that on the 7th of May my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was in Town.

There is another Letter dated the 7th of May 1722, directed to Muſgrave, E. 42. which I beg leave to make ſome Obſervations on. There it is ſaid, I had the Favour of yours, which I communicated to Mr. Jones, who is come to Town only for a Day.

My Lords, this Letter ſhews, that the Perſon denoted by the Name of Jones was come to Town. But they object, that this Letter cannot be apply'd to denote the Biſhop of Rocheſter, becauſe it appears by the Depoſition of Wood, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter ſtaid in Town till the 10th of May; ſo conſequently he did not come to Town only for a Day, and conſequently can't be the Perſon meant in that Letter.

My Lords, as to that it appears, that the Fact concerning Mr. Jones, applying it to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, of his being come to Town, is true; as to the Biſhop's being come to Town only for a Day, that is not Matter of Fact, but of the Apprehenſion of the Writer; He apprehended he was only come to Town for a Day, but he might be miſtaken in that; but the Fact of his being come to Town is true, the Apprehenſion of the Writer that he came only for a Day, is falſe. But we muſt ſubmit it to your Lordſhips; the Apprehenſion of the Writer is not ſufficient to avoid the Truth of the Fact contain'd in that Letter, when we have proved that my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was in Town on the Day when Mr. Jones is mention'd to have been in Town in that Letter.

Another Letter dated Thurſday the 10th of May 1722, E. 44. ſays, Illington is gone to the Country,

Country, and ſent me Word he would be in Town on Tueſday Night, when he hath deſired to ſee me at a particular Hour, by which I conclude it may be about Buſineſs; and the Tueſday following that Tueſday happen'd to be the 15th of May. Another Letter E. 45. and dated the 14th of May, 1722, ſays, Mr. Jones is ſtill in the Country, but he hath ſent me Word he will be in Town to-morrow. My Lords, upon the Examination of the Coachman Wood, it doth appear, that the Biſhop of Rochеſter was out of Town the 10th of May, out of Town the 14th of May, but that he came to Town the 15th of May, which is the Day mention'd in theſe Letters that he had promiſed to come to Town: So that here are additional Circumſtances, all agreeing to prove that the Biſhop of Rocheſter was denoted by the Names of Jones and Illington. My Lords, we muſt ſubmit it, that this is not probable conjectural Evidence only, as has been objected.

Theſe Letters contain Facts, and the Conſequence from them is, that Jones and Illington is the Biſhop of Rocheſter, in whom all theſe Facts agree. It is almoſt morally impoſſible, that all theſe Facts ſhould agree in the Caſe of any other Perſon, as they do in the Caſe of the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

It hath been argued, as to the Letters of the 20th of April; Was he the only Perſon that was in Pain and melancholy Circumſtances at that Time? A great many might be ſo. They go thro' the Particulars of his being in Town and in the Country; a great many Perſons might be in Town and in the Country on thoſe Days beſides him. It is true, it might be ſo. Was there no body whoſe Lady died the Week before the 30th of April, but the Biſhop of Rocheſter? Certainly, there are a great many to whom that Circumſtance may be applied. But, my Lords, taking the Circumſtances together, they cannot all of them concur in the Caſe of any other Perſon, as they do in the Caſe of my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter.

It may not be improper here to take Notice of ſome other of the intercepted Letters, that have been given in Evidence to your Lordſhips, which mention the Names of Jones and Illington.

In Mr. Kelly's Letters, giving an Account of his being taken up, and his Examination before the Council, he takes Notice of his being examined concerning the Perſons that were meant by ſeveral fictitious Names, and, among the reſt, Jones and Illington, who, he ſays, are chiefly ſtruck at. This is to give an Intimation to his Correſpondents abroad, that there had been a Diſcovery, that the fictitious Names, concerning which he had been examined, were made uſe of in their Correſpondence.

My Lords, he comes afterwards and writes a Letter, after ſuch Time as he was bail'd (he was taken the 19th of May, and bail'd the 7th of June) wherein he ſays, it is abſolutely neceſſary now, that there ſhould be a new Book of Accounts; ſays he, they muſt uſe no more their preſent Book of Accounts, ſince thoſe, who have got Part, may have got the Whole.

My Lords, we humbly ſubmit it, that he having given an Account of his being examined concerning thoſe ſeveral fictitious Names, after when he comes and ſays it is abſolutely neceſſary to have a new Book of Accounts, it is a plain owning of Kelly by this Letter, that the Names inquired after were the Names made uſe of in the Correſpondence, and therefore he ſays, it is neceſſary to have a new Book of Accounts; that is, other Cyphers and fictitious Names, by which to carry on their Correſpondence: He owns they have got Part, and fears they may have got the Whole.

From that Time the Names of Jones and Illington are no more met with in the Correſpondence that follows. We have gone no farther in our Evidence to fix any other Names to mean the Biſhop of Rocheſter, but only the Names of Jones and Illington. But there are other Names, which, in the Letters that follow, probably are deſign'd to mean the Biſhop of Rocheſter; but they will be out of the Caſe, becauſe we have given no Evidence concerning them: and the plain Reaſon why Jones and Illington are not made uſe of any longer, is, becauſe it appears on the Examination of Mr. Kelly, that thoſe Names were mentioned: therefore they were afraid, by making uſe of thoſe Names, the Correſpondence might be diſcover'd, and it might prejudice the Perſons who went by thoſe fictitious Names.

My Lords, this is the Subſtance of the Letters, writ to and from Mr. Kelly and his Correſpondents, concerning the Perſon that goes by the Names of Jones and Illington.

Tho my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter inſiſts, that he is not proved to be the Perſon concern'd in writing theſe Letters, and that he had no Notice of them, and therefore they ought not to be look'd upon as Evidence againſt him; my Lords, we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, in a Correſpondence of this Nature, when we purſue Facts and Circumſtances that are ſtated and ariſe from the intercepted Letters, which when they come to be apply'd together, are a plain Indication of the Perſon that is meant by them; when theſe Circumſtances and Facts can fit none but the Biſhop of Rocheſter; we hope, tho it is not legal Evidence in Weſtminſter-Hall, yet it is ſatisfactory Evidence to induce your Lordſhips to believe and be convinced, that no Perſon can be denoted by theſe Names but the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

My Lords, this is a Matter that the Biſhop of Rocheſter could not, with all his Care, be aware of; he takes Care that the Letters of the 20th of April are in Cyphers, and not writ with his own Hand; fictitious Names are made uſe of, and he thinks he ſhall be ſheltered by this Means from being found out to be the Perſon. The other Facts could not be ſuppoſed would come out to explain the Perſon.

But, my Lords, very often there is a Providence in detecting Things of this Nature; and where the greateſt Caution and Care is uſed, Circumſtances (that human Prudence could not guard againſt) are ſo ſtrong and convincing, that they diſcover ſuch ſecret Correſpondence, and plainly prove who is the Perſon carrying it on.

Some Texts of Scripture have been cited on the other Side, my Lords, I beg leave to uſe one on this Occaſion; and that is, Curſe not the King, no, not in thy Thought, for a Bird of the Air ſhall carry the Voice, and that which hath Wings ſhall tell the Matter.

In theſe treaſonable Conſpiracies and Correſpondences againſt the King and Government, (notwithſtanding they are carried on ſo ſecretly, that that the Conſpirators think nothing can diſcover them) there happen ſometimes, thro' Providence, ſuch Circumſtances which the Perſons cannot be aware of, that bring thoſe things of Darkneſs to Light: and we hope this may be an Example, that may deter any Perſon from going in the moſt ſecret and concealed Way to engage in any thing of this Nature.

My Lords, there is a Matter I ſhall beg leave to mention to your Lordſhips, becauſe my Lord Biſhop hath inſinuated as if I made hard and harſh Application of the Letter taken upon his Servant. My Lords, he ſays that the Conſtruction I put upon that Letter was not a natural but an ill-natur'd Explication. The Letter mentions an Impeachment, and ſays the Biſhop in the Letter, if the Impeachment cannot be ſtopt, I am Priſoner for ſome Years without Remedy.

My Lords, I did obſerve to your Lordſhips on that Expreſſion in the Letter, that it ſeem'd to import a Senſe of my Lord Biſhop's Guilt, becauſe he ſaid he was unavoidably a Priſoner for ſome Years. My Lord Biſhop ſays, this is by no means a natural but a forc'd and ill-natur'd Explication; for in that Place he meant no more than if an Impeachment were lodged, it would not be proſecuted, but made uſe of only that he might be detained a Priſoner for ſome Years.

My Lords, I muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips, which is the moſt genuine and natural Interpretation, that which I put upon the Words, or that which my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter doth; which ſo highly reflects on the Honour and Juſtice of your Lordſhips and the Houſe of Commons.

My Lords, I ſhall beg leave in the next Place to take Notice of the Evidence that hath been given on the behalf of my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, and to conſider, whether that is ſufficient Evidence to ſatisfy your Lordſhips of his Innocence.

My Lords, we did read the Examination of Mr. Neynoe, one of his Examinations, and the laſt that was taken; they on the other Side called for three other Examinations, of which the laſt Examination, which we read, was an Abſtract; they read them all, and, my Lords, the Examination which we read, was conſiſtent with three other Examinations, with relation to my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter: and I muſt own that the Charge, in the Examination of Neynoe, upon my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, is only Hearſay from Kelly; that Mr. Kelly did tell Neynoe, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter held Correſpondence with the Pretender and his Agents; and that he was employed by the Biſhop in writing for him, and carrying on the ſaid Correſpondences: So far, my Lords, it is Hearſay, what Mr. Kelly told Neynoe. Now, as to Mr. Kelly himſelf, it did affect him, by charging that he had confeſs'd to Neynoe, that he did carry on ſuch a Correſpondence: but as to my Lord Biſhop, it cannot affect him but as Hearſay; and we muſt agree that if there was nothing elſe in the Caſe but this, all the Arguments made uſe of againſt ſuch Evidence would be of great Weight.

My Lords, I can't ſay that this Charge from Neynoe's Examination is of Weight to charge the Biſhop of Rocheſter, ſo as to condemn him. My Lords, they have urged that if this Charge is not to be believed, all comes to nothing: This, ſay they, is the Foundation, and if Neynoe's Examination is not ſufficient to affect the Biſhop of Rocheſter, then all the ſubſequent Evidence falls to the Ground.

My Lords, I beg leave to obſerve firſt, that if we had not Neynoe's Examination, the Proof againſt my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter is as ſtrong without it as with it; it is certainly Evidence of the Conſpiracy in general, but as to the Biſhop it is only a Circumſtance, to ſhew that another Man had ſaid of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, that he was carrying on a Correſpondence with the Pretender, &c.

But, my Lords, taking the Examination of Neynoe out of the Caſe, and conſidering the other Facts mention'd and prov'd to your Lordſhips, there is no Occaſion of Neynoe's Examination; whether Neynoe's Examination be falſe or true, is not material: There is ſufficient to prove the Biſhop of Rocheſter guilty, for they can't deſtroy the other Facts and Circumſtances; and as long as they ſubſiſt, they prove the Biſhop of Rocheſter to be the Perſon concerned in carrying on this Correſpondence.

My Lords, I beg leave to obſerve in Neynoe's Examination, there is ſomething more than Hearſay, there is a Fact in it, and we are able to ſupport that Fact by other Evidence. Neynoe ſays, that he hath gone ſeveral Times with Kelly to the Biſhop of Rocheſter's, and hath ſtaid a conſiderable Time for him. My Lords, we ſhall prove by another Witneſs, that Neynoe about that Time came ſeveral Times to a Houſe, where he ſaid he waited for a Friend of his that was gone to the Biſhop of Rocheſter's, and he ſtaid and waited for him three or four Times, for an Hour, and an Hour and an half together. This will confirm what Neynoe ſaid in that reſpect to be true.

They ſay there are ſeveral Improbabilities contained in Neynoe's Examination, and Inconſiſtencies; as to the Improbabilities, ſome of them are mentioned as if there was great Weight in them. That ſo much inſiſted on by my Lord Biſhop himſelf, is, that Neynoe ſays, he was employed to write Memorials, and the laſt he wrote was in December, and that was to deſire the Regent of France to furniſh a Body of 5000 Men, to come and invade theſe Kingdoms: The Obſervation made by the Biſhop of Rocheſter is, Where are theſe Memorials? Why did he not keep Copies of them? For he was at that Time concerned in a Deſign to ſerve himſelf one way or other; if he deſigned to betray thoſe Perſons he correſponded with, it would have been of Service to have kept thoſe Memorials, to have delivered them to the Government: If, on the other ſide, he had kept to his Friends, it would have been proper to have kept them, in order to create a Confidence in him, and to ſhew the Part he had in the Conſpiracy. Theſe Obſervations can have no Weight, when your Lordſhips come to conſider this was in December, and there was never any Application by him to make any Diſcovery of this Conſpiracy till July following. As to the Service it might be to keep them with reſpect to his Party, my Lords, we humbly apprehend that, conſidering him as a Man engaged in a Correſpondence of this kind, a Memorial of this Nature drawn up by him can be of no Uſe, but to detect himſelf and injure his Party, if he happens to be taken up, and ſuch a Memorial found upon him; therefore it was neceſſary to deſtroy it.

My Lords, there is another thing mentioned with relation to Watſon, and the Improbability of his being the Earl Mareſchal; but Neynoe does not ſay that he was the Earl Mareſchal, but ſays, there was one Henry Watſon, which he took to be a fictitious Name, and does not know who he really was, but he took him to be the Earl Mareſchal, and he gave him the Heads to draw up theſe Memorials.

My Lords, we apprehend it is not material, who Watſon was; he is a Perſon that employed Neynoe to write theſe Memorials, and he might be the Earl Mareſchal: Neynoe ſays he took him to be ſo. Say they, if it was the Earl Mareſchal, why ſhould he lie ſeveral Nights with Neynoe? this, ſay they, is very improbable. If it was him, he was to conceal himſelf, and take the fitteſt Place for that Purpoſe; therefore converſing with Neynoe, and not owning himſelf who he was, is not improbable. It is probable he would not diſcover himſelf to every Perſon; and tho Neynoe was a Perſon engaged in the Conſpiracy, if Neynoe did not know him to be the Earl Mareſchal, it might not be proper for him to diſcover himſelf to Neynoe.

My Lords, I think theſe are the principal Things objected; there are ſome other little Matters, but I think dwelling on ſuch Objections as theſe, is but miſpending your Lordſhips Time.

My Lords, that which we humbly inſiſt upon is, whether Neynoe's Examination is an Examination to be credited or not credited? We agree it is only Hearſay, as to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and if we had not other Matter, it would not be ſufficient; ſo that we humbly apprehend it's being true or falſe won't affect this Caſe. If your Lordſhips are of Opinion 'tis falſe, there is ſufficient Evidence againſt the Biſhop of Rocheſter without it.

My Lords, in the next Place they have produced in Evidence ſeveral Perſons that come and give your Lordſhips an Account of Neynoe's Confeſſions to them. There is one Mr. Bingley, Mr. Steward and Mr. Skeene, and two other Perſons, that give an Account of what Mr. Skeene and Steward had told them Mr. Neynoe had ſaid.

Bingley by his Evidence would have it believed, that Neynoe had told him, he was employed by ſome Perſon in Power, to fix ſeveral things upon ſeveral Perſons that they were innocent of; that he had ſaid ſeveral things that were falſe, and had impoſed upon a great Man he had made Application to, and had got great Sums of Money out of him.

My Lords, I don't know how far they would carry this; for by what hath been inſiſted upon by my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, and his Counſel, it ſhould ſeem as if they were labouring to ſhew from theſe Perſons, that they have call'd to be examin'd, that all the Letters relating to this Correſpondence, the Letters of the 20th of April, and ſubſequent Letters, that relate to the particular Facts, that denote Jones and Illington to be my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, were contrived between Neynoe and ſome other Perſons, in order to charge my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter with being concern'd in this Conſpiracy. This ſeems to be what they are labouring at by this Evidence.

My Lords, as to Neynoe's being a Perſon employ'd in writing theſe Letters of the 20th of April, or any ſubſequent Letters, in Manner as is ſuggeſted, we ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips that it's impoſſible to be true; we ſhall ſhew that the Letters of the 20th of April, and all the other Letters that mention the Facts which denote the Biſhop of Rocheſter, were all intercepted and in the Hands of the Government, before ſuch Time as it was known among the Miniſtry that there was ſuch a Perſon as Neynoe: For Neynoe made Application to the Honourable Perſon mentioned by their Witneſſes, ſubſequent to all this Correſpondence, when theſe Letters were in the Hands of the Government, as a Perſon that could make Diſcoveries to the Government. Therefore that Inſinuation muſt vaniſh, that Neynoe was employ'd to forge Letters, which contain Facts under the Names of Jones and Illington, to charge the Biſhop of Rocheſter; and that even thoſe Letters of the 20th of April were forged by him.

My Lords, we ſhall go into the Character of Mr. Bingley, who hath, at your Lordſhips Bar, owned, that he hath been whipt, pilloried, and impriſoned: and as he hath taken his Degrees, as he owned at your Lordſhips Bar, conſequently he hath taken the Oaths.

As to the Character of Mr. Skeene, he hath likewiſe been produced as a Witneſs, and he carries his Evidence farther than the Evidence of Mr. Bingley; for whereas Mr. Bingley ſays, that Neynoe confeſſed he had impoſed upon that Honourable Perſon, and had mention'd things that were falſe, yet he could not ſay that after the Time of his Examinations, after Neynoe was brought from Dover to Town, he had confeſs'd to him that what he had ſaid on thoſe Examinations was falſe: But Skeene ſays, that after his Examinations he own'd that they were falſe. The laſt Examination was the 27th of September, and he was drown'd that Night; but as to the Examinations before the 27th of September, and out of which that is collected, Mr. Skeene ſays, Neynoe ſaid to him, that they were falſe.

My Lords, as to Mr. Skeene, we ſhall ſhew what ſort of a Man he is, a Man attainted of High-Treaſon; and tho he is pardoned, as to his having his Life and Liberty given him, he is in all reſpects an attainted Perſon: He was tried and condemned in the County of Surry, for being concerned in the Preſton Rebellion, and conſequently a Man of no Credit. And as to what he and Steward ſwear, relating to a Converſation with Neynoe, when in Cuſtody, we ſhall ſhew they never were together after the firſt Night, when they ſupp'd together. He was aſked, whether it was the firſt Night that he had this Converſation with Neynoe, and he did not pretend he had any Converſation of this Nature with Neynoe the firſt Night; and if it was not the firſt Night, we ſhall ſhew it could not be afterwards, for Neynoe was kept in a Room by himſelf, Skeene and Steward by themſelves in a Room underneath; and therefore this ſeems to be a Story contrived between Skeene and Steward.

We ſhall ſhew it could not be poſſible for them to converſe together, for Skeene and Steward were locked up in their Room; Neynoe was lock'd up in his Room ſeparate and apart from theirs; ſo that they could never have Correſpondence with him, nor come near him.

Another thing is ſworn by one of them, about a Meſſage ſent to him by Neynoe, and a Paper, while they were in Cuſtody of the Meſſenger; and he ſays, this Paper was brought to him by the Meſſenger's Maid from Neynoe, and that this Paper contain'd a Juſtification of my Lord Orrery, expreſſing that he knew nothing of my Lord Orrery, but what he had ſaid of him was utterly falſe; that the Meſſenger finding he had ſome Paper, he, to conceal this Paper, burnt it. But that the Maid came to him with ſuch a Meſſage or Paper is falſe; the Maid never did, nor did the Meſſenger know of the Paper, as we ſhall prove to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, when we have proved this, we humbly apprehend we have taken off any Credit that could be given to what theſe People have ſaid, if they have ſaid any thing material. My Lords, before I leave this Head, I beg leave to obſerve another thing as to Skeene. He, upon his Examination concerning a Diſcourſe with Pancier, denies it intirely; but ſays, that what Pancier hath inform'd in relation to him, is falſe. We ſhall call Pancier, who will inform your Lordſhips, that Skeene hath own'd that he was privy to this Conſpiracy, and knew who were concern'd in it.

I own there are ſeveral noble Perſons named to be concern'd; that there is no Reaſon to ſay, from what Skeene may have ſaid of them, that they are guilty: But ſuch as he may have uſed the Names of great Perſons deſignedly, to keep up the Spirit of their Party, by telling them ſuch and ſuch Perſons were concerned: and if there is no other Evidence but what ſuch a Perſon hath ſaid, the noble Perſons mentioned will not be affected by it.

My Lords, there is another Head I ſhall beg leave to mention, and what they have inſiſted upon under this Suppoſition; that they would have it taken that there was a Deſign to forge Letters, in order to charge my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, and ſeveral other Perſons. Say they, it was eaſy to get Information of ſuch Circumſtances relating to the Biſhop and his Family, as are mentioned in the intercepted Letters, and then to write ſuch Letters, with a Deſign falſly to charge the Biſhop with having been concerned in carrying on a treaſonable Correſpondence. Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to conſider who this Charge muſt fall upon, of forging the Letters of the 20th of April, or the Letters that ſhew Jones and Illington to be the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

My Lords, we have proved them all to be Mr. Kelly's own Hand-writing, or Letters that have come in Anſwer to them. They have objected we have not given ſufficient Proof of Kelly's Hand: Say they, it is proved by Clerks of the Poſt-Office, who never had compared one original Letter with another, but at laſt they ſtop an original Letter, dated the 20th of Auguſt, after the Correſpondence had been carried on ſeveral Months; and then come and ſwear that the original Letters, that were forwarded, were of the ſame Hand-writing with that of the 20th of Auguſt. Can this be looked upon as ſufficient Proof? But we ſubmit it, their Evidence is much ſtronger than if they had only compared one Letter with another; for they not only had theſe Letters come every Week, but they were employ'd every time theſe Letters came, to copy them; ſo that the Hand-writing of theſe Letters muſt, by the conſtant ſtopping of theſe Letters, and their copying of them, be ſo imprinted on their Memory, that they are much better Judges of the Hand than if they had two of theſe Letters to have only compared them together: And the Hand-writing was ſo well known to them, that they could, as they have inform'd your Lordſhips, when any of theſe Letters came, diſtinguiſh them by the Hand-writing of the Superſcriptions, before they had open'd them, and they never were miſtaken. And this, we humbly apprehend, is as ſatisfactory an Evidence as can be given, that theſe Letters were the Hand-writing of Mr. Kelly, provided the Letter of the 20th of Auguſt, which I ſhall take Notice of by and by, is ſufficiently proved to be of his Hand-writing.

Taking it then, my Lords, that theſe Letters are the Hand-writing of Mr. Kelly, and of his Correſpondents in anſwer to them, I don't find that my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter hath charged Mr. Kelly with having any Malice to him. And if he had no Malice to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, what ſhould induce him to write thoſe Letters, on purpoſe to charge the Biſhop of Rocheſter with being concerned in this Conſpiracy?

My Lords, we humbly apprehend the Pretence of theſe Letters being forg'd, muſt inſinuate, that Kelly, a vile Fellow, intending to charge the Biſhop of Rocheſter with being concern'd in this Conſpiracy, and make him liable to forfeit every thing that was dear to him, hath contrived Letters containing Circumſtances, in order to fix him to be the Perſon denoted by the Names of Jones and Illington; he hath written Letters, and by Combination received others in anſwer to them, for this Purpoſe; and by theſe wicked and malicious Practices, hath furniſhed this Evidence againſt the Biſhop, who is an innocent Man.

My Lords, this is the Subſtance of the Defenſe on this Head; and whether your Lordſhips will believe this, we muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips. Your Lordſhips have had Kelly before you, and by his Behaviour have had no Reaſon to think that he had any Malice againſt my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, or any Deſign or Intention to prejudice him.

My Lords, the next Part of the Evidence I ſhall beg leave to obſerve, is a Part very conſiderable, and is ſo far from being a Defenſe, that the Defenſe attempted, hath confirm'd and ſtrengthen'd the Evidence againſt my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter; that is, with relation to the Letter taken among my Lord Biſhop's Papers, directed to Dubois; a Letter, which, they obſerve, don't contain any Treaſon, or is of any treaſonable Import; but it ſeems to be a Letter of Indifference, and I believe, as ſuch, it was not taken care to be deſtroy'd, as it would have been, had there been any Apprehenſion that Uſe would have been made of it, as now, againſt the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

My Lords, the Uſe we make of it is, to ſhew that Mr. Johnſon, or Mr. Kelly, was a Perſon employed by my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter in writing Letters for him. My Lords, your Lordſhips will obſerve by the Letter, he ſays, I have heard nothing from you ſince the Letter I had about two Months ago by Mr. Johnſon, to which I immediately in his Hand returned my Anſwer.

My Lords, if this is the Biſhop of Rocheſter's Letter, either in his own Hand, or his Letter writ by another Perſon, it plainly proves what we infer from it, that Johnſon, i. e. Kelly, writ for the Biſhop. Your Lordſhips will obſerve, it is a Letter writ in a Hand which no Man writes, a ſtiff Hand almoſt like Print; and it is plain that it is writ to diſguiſe the Hand of the Writer, whoever he was. At the latter End of the Letter, when the Perſon that writ it comes to be tired and off of his Guard, there are ſeveral Letters which compared with the Writing of my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, and what is own'd to be his, appear to be his writing. In the Date of the Letter, which is December, the D you frequently find in the Biſhop's Hand-writing; your Lordſhips obſerve the Letter E that frequently occurs in the Biſhop's writing; and your Lordſhips by comparing that with the Letter produced, will find that they exactly agree.

Whether or no your Lordſhips won't think it, on thoſe Circumſtances, to be the writing of my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter in a diſguiſed Hand, we muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips. But, my Lords, ſuppoſe it was not his Hand-writing, here is Evidence that it was his Letter; and that is evident, becauſe it is under his Seal, it is ſealed with his own Seal, a Seal that he had in his Cuſtody, and made Uſe of no longer ago than the 26th of February laſt: I think that is the Day a Letter was taken from his Servant. That we humbly apprehend, my Lords, will plainly ſhew it is the Biſhop's Letter, becauſe it was ſealed with his Seal, and the ſame Seal is made Uſe of by the Biſhop, on the Letter that was taken upon his Servant in February laſt.

My Lords, this Matter hath been controverted by my Lord Biſhop. He hath call'd Engravers, who believe Seals may be counterfeited, and Impreſſions may be taken off the Wax, and another Impreſſion made, ſo as to make it difficult to know which is which. They were a little looſe in anſwering the Queſtion, Whether or no, if the Seal, from whence the Impreſſion was to be taken, was broken in the Middle, it could be done. But one ſaid, the Seal might be mended, and it might paſs unobſerved, but I find it is extremely difficult. But they did ſay, Seals may be ſo counterfeited, that it may be difficult to diſcover one from the other. My Lords, this is to inſinuate, that after ſuch Time as the Letter was taken upon my Lord Biſhop's Servant, the Perſon in whoſe Cuſtody this other Letter of Dubois was (which is proved to have been taken the 24th of Aug. amongſt the Biſhop's Papers) hath cauſed an Impreſſion to be taken off the Seal with which the Letter to Dubois was ſeal'd, (the Wax broken in two as it was) in order to fix it upon the Letter that was taken upon my Lord Biſhop's Servant, ſo as to prove the Letter to Dubois to be the Biſhop's Letter. Who is this to be fixed upon? Neynoe was gone; I don't know, unleſs upon the Committee of the Houſe of Commons: for the Biſhop's Letter was taken on his Servant the 26th of February, the Committee of the Houſe of Commons made their Report on the 1ſt of March, and the Letter to Dubois had long before the 26th of February been in Cuſtody of that Committee. And yet while this Letter is in Cuſtody of a Committee of the Houſe of Commons, they will have it, here, is an Impreſſion taken off a broken Seal, and put on this other Letter, in order to ſhew that theſe are Letters of the ſame Perſon. Who can believe this to be the Caſe?

An Obſervation hath been made, that truly the Committee of the Houſe of Commons have not made any Obſervation of this Kind, with relation to this Letter to Dubois, that it is the Biſhop's Letter: which is true; for they had not this Matter relating to the Identity of the Seals, under their Conſideration; but this is a new Diſcovery made ſince: And therefore, my Lords, they apprehended that this was a Letter directed to the Biſhop by the Name of Dubois, it being found amongſt his Papers; and nothing to the contrary did appear, till after they had made their Report.

My Lords, there are other Things your Lordſhips would have expected to have had an Account of, in Anſwer to this Evidence. Here is a Letter found among my Lord Biſhop's Papers; conſequently ſo far we apprehend that this Evidence is a legal Evidence againſt the Biſhop, as being a Letter found in his Cuſtody; this Letter is directed to Dubois, and mentions the Hand of Johnſon. Doth my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter give any Account who Dubois is? who this Johnſon is? how this Letter came there? No, my Lords, none at all. Doth his Lordſhip give you any Account of the Seal? and hath his Lordſhip ſaid that the Seal, that ſealed the Letter taken on his Servant, he hath not? or that the Letter was not ſealed with his Seal, or that he did not ſeal it himſelf? His Lordſhip did not ſay one Word to that Purpoſe, or make any Denial of the Matter, nor give your Lordſhips any Account who Dubois and Johnſon were; nothing at all, but hath left it to your Lordſhips on that Foot: That the Letter to Dubois had an Impreſſion taken off, after it was in the Cuſtody of the Committee of the Houſe of Commons, and that Impreſſion made uſe of on the other Letter: and that this is another Part of the Contrivance, in order to charge my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter with being concern'd in this Conſpiracy.

My Lords, as to the Seal's being the ſame on the two Letters, we humbly apprehend, the Evidence given on the other Side hath ſtrengthened ours. We have produced two Engravers, one of them they own to be the top Engraver of England, Mr. Chriſtian; he gave your Lordſhips an Account, that he verily believed theſe two Impreſſions to be taken off from the ſame Seal. Mr. Rollus ſaid the ſame thing, and that he had uſed the Art long, and could judge. They made no Endeavours on the other Side to try the Skill of Mr. Chriſtian: but as to Mr. Rollus, they hoped they ſhould be able to puzzle him; and therefore have produced ſix ſeveral Impreſſions made on Wax by Seals to try his Art; and after he had look'd upon them, he gives you ſuch an Account, that I believe your Lordſhips are ſatisfied that he is a Man of Skill and Art, and that, if theſe Impreſſions had been taken off, as they would inſinuate they were, he muſt have diſcover'd it.

My Lords, here is an Artiſt brought to make this Experiment on Rollus, to try his Skill; yet notwithſtanding all the Art hath been made uſe of in the Caſe, that could be, the Man was able not only to diſtinguiſh how many Seals the Impreſſions were made with, but alſo to give an Account that they were caſt Seals, and not grav'd Seals, that made thoſe Impreſſions.

This,

This, my Lords, will have ſuch a Weight with your Lordſhips, that we hope your Lordſhips will believe his Evidence is true; and if it is true, what Anſwer hath been given it, your Lordſhips have heard. Whether therefore any ſatisfactory Anſwer hath been given, to an Evidence ſo ſtrong and convincing of Johnſon's being employ'd in writing Letters for the Biſhop of Rocheſter, we muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, the next Evidence they went upon was in relation to the Dog. Say they, we will ſhew that this Dog was not for the Biſhop of Rocheſter, or any other Perſon but Mrs. Barnes. As to that, my Lords, I beg leave to remind your Lordſhips of the Evidence given by Mrs. Barnes, that Mr. Kelly told her it was for the Biſhop of Rocheſter. It is a little improbable, if the Dog had been for Mrs. Barnes, that he ſhould come and deliver it to her, and tell her 'tis for the Biſhop of Rocheſter. But it appears by Mrs. Barnes, that another Dog was deſigned for her, and that this Dog was for the Biſhop of Rocheſter. They have read in Evidence a Certificate, ſign'd by Mr. Birmingham, and likewiſe an Affidavit, that there was in the Month of March a Dog deliver'd to Kelly in France for Mrs. Barnes. That, my Lords, muſt be another Dog, and not this, which we ſay was for the Biſhop of Rocheſter; for this was not deliver'd to Mr. Kelly in France, but was ſent over to him after he was in England, as appears by the Letters; and after he had receiv'd it, he writes, that he would inform Mr. Jones ſoon of it, to whom any thing from that Quarter would be very acceptable. So that, my Lords, if there was another Dog, and by Mr. Kelly deſign'd for Mrs. Barnes, we humbly apprehend it cannot be applied to this; for this Dog was deſign'd for Mr. Jones, and Mrs. Barnes ſays, that is the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

My Lords, the next Evidence given by them is in relation to the Letters of the 20th of April. They have endeavour'd to prove that, as to my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, it is impoſſible that theſe Letters could be written or dictated by him. He came to Town the 11th, and went to Bromley again the 12th of April; he had a Fit of the Gout ſoon after; had Servants that conſtantly attended him, more than one; and theſe Servants give an Account, that no Perſon whatſoever came near him, or could be employ'd by him to write thoſe Letters.

My Lords, I beg leave to obſerve, firſt, That as to the applying their Evidence to the Writing of thoſe Letters on the 20th of April, it is very poſſible that the Letters were writ on another Day than when they bear Date: Therefore if they prove, that it was impoſſible that theſe Letters ſhould be writ or dictated by the Biſhop of Rocheſter on the Day they bear Date, yet they might be writ on another Day, and it is very probable they were.

Your Lordſhips will obſerve, that theſe Letters are in Cyphers; and, I believe, where a Perſon dictates a Letter to another, he doth not reduce the Letter into Cyphers as it is dictated, but he firſt writes it out in Words at length, and afterwards puts it into Cyphers, and when it is proper to ſend it, then is the Time to date it; and if it be left with the Perſon that puts it into Cyphers to ſend, as probably it was in this Caſe, it is left to him to date it when he pleaſeth: So that if they ſhould have ſhewn, that upon the 20th of April the Biſhop was incapable of dictating or writing, it is no concluſive Anſwer to the Charge againſt the Biſhop as to theſe Letters.

Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to obſerve, that upon the 11th of April the Biſhop of Rocheſter came to Town, on the 12th he went into the Country; notwithſtanding what they have attempted to prove as to the Times that Kelly was in Town, and the Biſhop was in the Country, yet upon the 11th and 12th they were both in Town; for Kelly came to Town from France the 11th, and the Biſhop came to Town the 11th from Bromley.

When the Servants came to be examin'd, what time of the Day the Biſhop came to Town on the 11th, they could not give any Account of that: When they were aſked, what time of Day it was when he went out of Town on the 12th, they could give no Account of that.

There hath been no Account given to your Lordſhips who was with the Biſhop of Rocheſter the 11th and 12th when he was in Town, or where my Lord Biſhop was at that Time: So that, my Lords, it is poſſible, from theſe Circumſtances, that theſe Letters might be writ when the Biſhop was in Town, and Kelly was in Town.

But ſuppoſe it ſhould not be ſo; the Queſtion is, whether they could not be writ at Bromley. On the 12th of April Mr. Kelly was at Mrs. Barnes's, he did not lie at home that Night; on the 13th he did not lie at home; on the 14th he came, and went to his old Lodgings at Mrs. Kilbourne's. Theſe two Nights, it doth not appear where he was; he might have been at Bromley, it is but an Hour's Ride. As to the Servants, ſay they, they ſhould have remember'd his ſetting up his Horſe;—He might ſet up his Horſe at an Inn, and go privately to my Lord Biſhop.

Notwithſtanding my Lord Biſhop was ill, and tho he ſhould have proved to your Lordſhips Satisfaction, that after he was ſo, he did not, nor could admit of Company, yet we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips that it is no Anſwer; for he was not very bad till he had been in the Country two or three Days, and theſe Letters might be dictated or written in thoſe two or three Days before he was ſo ill.

My Lords, I beg leave to obſerve, what the Servants have ſworn. Here is Grant, that is my Lord's Butler, he ſays, that my Lord Biſhop went the 12th of April to Bromley, and he attended him there till the 21ſt, and on the 21ſt he was ſent to Town upon ſome Matters relating to the Weſtminſter-Election; and another Servant about him gives an Account, that two or three Days after my Lord Biſhop came down, he was taken ſo ill in his Hands and Feet, as not to be able to help himſelf.——Theſe are two or three Days beyond the Time that Kelly was out of his Lodging, which was the 12th and 13th, (and theſe two or three Days muſt be the 14th and 15th) it may be my Lord Biſhop was ſo diſabled indeed as he ſays; he ſays he is almoſt certain that no Stranger was with the Biſhop; but he ſays the Apothecary or the Miniſter might be with him in his Illneſs, tho he did not ſee them himſelf. If it is poſſible for the Apothecary or the Miniſter to be with him, and he not ſee them, why is it not as poſſible that Mr. Kelly might be there, and he not ſee him there?

The next Witneſs that is called only ſpeaks to the 18th and 19th; when Grant came to the Election, another Servant was ſent for, and he went, and he ſays my Lord Biſhop was very ill. Samuel Smale gives an Account of my Lord Biſhop's Illneſs, and his attending him.

My Lords, they have brought all the Servants of the Houſe, the very Stable-Boy, to prove that my Lord Biſhop could not ſee any body without their Knowledge; even the Nurſe that attended his Lady when ſhe was dying. The Servants that were waiting upon his Lady ſwear, That it was impoſſible any body could come to my Lord Biſhop, and they not know it; and they are as poſitive, in relation to any body's coming to my Lord Biſhop, as the Servants that immediately attended him.

But, my Lords, there is a Matter, which we ſhall offer in Evidence, that entirely deſtroys this Evidence of my Lord Biſhop's being ſo ill, that he could not move Hand or Foot, and of his not being in a Capacity of dictating Letters: that he did actually ſend a Letter the 21ſt of April to a Perſon in Town; and this very Grant, that hath given this Account to your Lordſhips, brought up the Letter to Town on the 21ſt of April. We have this to give your Lordſhips in Evidence; then what is the Evidence of all thoſe Servants, who ſwear that it is impoſſible theſe Letters ſhould be writ on the 20th of April, and that no body was admitted to come to him in order to write theſe Letters.

My Lords, as to the Evidence that hath been given, in relation to Kelly's Hand-writing, they have called Witneſſes to diſprove the Evidence on our Side, who, looking upon the Letter of the 20th of Auguſt, ſwear they do not believe it to be Kelly's Hand-writing. Our Witneſſes do believe it; their Witneſſes do not believe it to be his Hand-writing, and ſay that it is not like it.

There are ſeveral Letters ſhown them, tho in a leſs Hand, that are agreed to be Kelly's Hand-writing; and your Lordſhips may judge, by looking on them, whether they are not of the ſame Hand with the Letter of the 20th of Auguſt; tho the Character is ſomething leſs, we humbly apprehend they will appear ſo to be. Beſides, there are thoſe Circumſtances relating to the Hand-writing of Mr. Kelly, that put it beyond all Diſpute that it is his Hand, and that is the Anſwers he hath received to thoſe Letters which we charge to be written by him. We have traced him from Place to Place, where the Letters that came in anſwer to his Letters, were directed; to Mr. Andrews at the Dog and Duck, there Kelly employ'd a Perſon to take them up, and they were deliver'd to him; and at Burton's Coffee-houſe Kelly took up the Letters that were directed thither, in anſwer to thoſe Letters that were of his Hand-writing: So there is not only the Evidence of Witneſſes, that knew his Hand, and believe it to be his Hand, but here is the Anſwers to them actually taken up by Kelly himſelf: and that we humbly apprehend is ſo ſtrong an Evidence, joined with the other, that, when one or two Witneſſes come and ſay they do not believe it to be his Hand-writing, their Teſtimony ſhall not overthrow it.

My Lords, there is another Piece of Evidence given by them, relating to the Letters of the 20th of April, which were incloſed in a Packet ſent to Boulogne; the Packet is directed to Mr. Alexander Gordon Banker, at Boulogne: they have produced a Certificate from Boulogne upon Oath, wherein it is ſaid, that he is no Banker, and denies that he received any Packet from Kelly, or that he knew him: This is a Certificate, and prov'd by a Perſon who believes it to be ſo. Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to obſerve what this Paper is, and that it is brought here by a Perſon that knows nothing of its being ſworn, but ſays, he is uſed to Tranſactions of this kind, and he believes it to be a Certificate from Boulogne.

My Lords, we ſhall produce a Gentleman, who was at Boulogne at the Time that the printed Report and Appendix of the Houſe of Commons came there, and he was at Mr. Gordon's Houſe, when they were diſcourſing about this Matter; and what they then ſaid, we humbly ſubmit will be believed; for what they then ſaid was ſpoken as of an indifferent Thing, and they did not then ſee it could be of any conſequence to diſguiſe the Truth. Mr. William Gordon the Father ſaid, that he was at Paris when this Packet is ſuppoſed to have come: but Mr. Alexander Gordon the Son own'd that he was at home, and that this Packet came to him, but, ſaid he, what was in it I know not, but I delivered it as is mentioned in the Appendix.

My Lords, there is another Piece of Evidence they have given, with relation to James Talbot, to whom the Packet was delivered at Boulogne. Here is a Witneſs produced to prove that he was in Town the 29th of April 1722. and he could not be miſtaken, becauſe he had paid him Money, and he had entred it in his Book. The Evidence goes no farther than to prove, that one James Talbot, that was a tall black Man, was then in Town; but it doth not appear that this was the Perſon mentioned to have taken this Packet at Boulogne, and carry'd it to Paris: So that their Proof, as to this Matter, is inſufficient.

But we ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips, from an Account we have here from Mr. Crawford, his Majeſty's Reſident at Paris, that this James Talbot came to Paris that very Day, as he is mentioned to have brought thoſe Letters to Paris, and was actually there at that time: and that we humbly apprehend will be a full Anſwer to them, and take away any ground of Suppoſition, that the Evidence they have given concerning James Talbot, can be apply'd to that James Talbot who received the Packet at Boulogne.

As to the Evidence relating to Mr. Kelly's being in Town the 20th of April, we humbly apprehend from what hath been ſaid, it is not material whether he was there or not; but they have not proved it, for Mrs. Kilbourne and her Maid, the two Witneſſes produced by them for this Purpoſe, ſay that he came to Mrs. Kilbourne's Houſe the latter end of April, they believe the 20th, but they are not poſitive as to the Day. If he had been at Mrs. Kilbourne's the 20th of April, it is no Anſwer at all to our Evidence, and the ſtrong Circumſtances there are to induce a Belief, that the Letters might be dated at another time than really they were written.

My Lords, another Evidence is Mr. Pope, a Gentleman of Learning, with whom my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter uſed to converſe; and he gives you an Account that he knew nothing of this Conſpiracy, that the Biſhop never open'd his Mouth to him about it, nor acquainted him with it; that he was frequently with him, and their Diſcourſe was only about Matters of Literature.

No doubt my Lord Biſhop hath converſed with Perſons on different Subjects, to whom he would communicate nothing of an Affair of this Nature.

My Lords, upon the whole Matter we muſt ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether we have not made out the Charge againſt my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, to your Lordſhips Satisfaction, if not by legal Evidence, yet by Evidence that will ſatisfy and convince any Perſon that will conſider it.

My Lords, a great deal of Regard is due to the Character and Function of the Reverend Prelate at the Bar: but if my Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter hath departed from his Character and Function, and hath gone and engaged in a traiterous Conſpiracy, and been guilty of Treaſon towards his King, and Perjury towards his God, we humbly apprehend, if this be proved, that his Character and Function are ſo far from being a Mitigation, that they are a great Aggravation of his Crime. We ſhall ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, to do what your Lordſhips think is conſiſtent with Juſtice and Equity.

Mr. Wearg ſpoke next.

My Lords,

IT muſt be admitted, that the Revered Prelate at the Bar, has made his Defenſe with the utmoſt force and beauty of Eloquence.

Was I capable of anſwering it in the like manner, which I own I am not, yet I ſhould not think myſelf at liberty to do it, under the preſent Circumſtances.

For, tho it may be excuſable, in a Perſon upon his Defenſe, to make uſe of that powerful Inſtrument of Error and Deceit, which always impoſes upon the Reaſon, and miſguides the Judgment in proportion as it affects the Paſſions; yet, I can't think the ſame Methods juſtifiable in a Perſon employ'd to carry on the Proſecution.

I ſhall therefore examine the Force of what has been offer'd on behalf of the Reverend Prelate, ſtripp'd of the Ornaments and Colours of Rhetorick.

I ſhall, in the firſt place, conſider that Catalogue of Hardſhips, which his Lordſhip has complain'd of.

1. The firſt Complaint was that of Severities and Indignities offer'd him during his Confinement: but the Subject of this Complaint not ariſing from any of the Proceedings before your Lordſhips, I can give it no other anſwer, than by ſaying, that I am very credibly inform'd 'tis a Complaint without foundation.

2. Reading Extracts of Letters was the next Hardſhip complain'd of by his Lordſhip, and repreſented as if they were read as Evidence againſt him; when it was declared by the Counſel for the Bill, that they were only read upon the general part of the Bill, and did not affect his Lordſhip.

3. The third Hardſhip was, excuſing the Decypherers from anſwering ſuch Queſtions propoſed by his Lordſhip, as tended to a Diſcovery of their Art; that is, in other words, refuſing to do an Act which muſt prejudice another Perſon, and could be of no ſervice to his Lordſhip: for the Truth of what they teſtified, depended upon the Skill and Integrity of the Decypherers, and not upon the Method of coming at that Skill, which they could not diſcloſe in ſo publick a manner, without doing a manifeſt Prejudice to themſelves, which no Witneſs is ever compell'd to do.

4. The next Hardſhip is of the like nature, the not ſuffering the Clerks of the Poſt-Office to be examin'd, as to the Method and Authority by which they open'd Letters, by which they might have been ſubjected to the ſevere Penalties of the Statute 9 Annæ, if they had not exactly purſued the Methods preſcribed by that Statute. But his Lordſhip's Innocence could not poſſibly have been manifeſted by it; for are the Letters leſs criminal, if the Perſon who ſtopped them did not punctually purſue the Directions of that Statute? It would be thought a ſtrange Defenſe in a common Offender, if inſtead of proving his Innocence at his Trial, he ſhould object that he was taken without a proper Warrant; which, if true, don't make him the leſs criminal.

5. The fifth Hardſhip was refuſing to let Mr. Lewis declare any thing that came to his Knowledge by his being employ'd in the Secretaries Office ſome Years ago. This Hardſhip could be added only to fill up the Catalogue of Complaints, ſince, notwithſtanding your Lordſhips Order, Mr. Lewis did declare what he was call'd for, tho he afterwards own'd, that he came to the Knowledge of it by being employ'd in that Office.

6. The ſixth Hardſhip was in reading an Examination not dated, ſign'd, or ſworn. But I apprehend the Counſel for the Bill have more reaſon to complain of Hardſhips of this ſort, in reading Papers on behalf of his Lordſhip, as Examinations ſign'd and ſworn, without ever proving that they were ſign'd or ſworn to, or that any ſuch Perſons were ever examin'd; whereas the Examination hinted at in the Biſhop's Complaint, was read as an Examination, or rather Confeſſion of a Perſon ſince dead, not ſign'd nor ſworn to, and fairly left to your Lordſhips, to have ſuch Weight as the nature of the Evidence deſerved.

7. The next Hardſhip, viz. that of reading Letters wrote by another Perſon, without Proof that they were wrote with the Prelate's Privity, is begging the Queſtion upon the whole Proceeding. For whether there was Proof of their being wrote with his Privity or not, is the Subject of the preſent Inquiry.

8, 9. The two laſt Hardſhips complain'd of, ſeem to be calculated for Perſons without Doors, who are Strangers to what paſs'd at your Lordſhips Bar, That he was denied a Copy of the Letters in Cypher until the Trial was ſo far advanced that he could not make the proper uſe of thoſe Copies. Will any one who reads this Complaint in his Lordſhip's Speech imagine, that after he had a Copy of thoſe Letters, he had twice as much time for his Decypherers to peruſe them as he himſelf deſired?

Or will a Perſon who ſhall read the next Complaint in his Lordſhip's Speech, That he was refuſed to read any of the Papers contain'd in the Trunk that had not been read by the Counſel for the Bill, ever be perſuaded that his Lordſhip read the three firſt Examinations of Neynoe, that had not been read by the Counſel, the Papers taken in Neynoe's Pocket, the Certificate of the Surgeon return'd by Mr. Crawford, neither of which had been read by the Counſel for the Bill; That his Lordſhip was expreſly told, he was at liberty to read read any Paper in the Trunk he ſhould think neceſſary to his Defenſe; and was only refuſed reading one Paper, becauſe he own'd it was for no other purpoſe, but to raiſe an Objection to a Matter which had not been inſiſted on by the Counſel for the Bill, that he might anſwer the Objection which he himſelf ſhould raiſe?

Theſe things will ſeem incredible to one who ſhall read this Catalogue of Complaints in his Lordſhip's Speech; and yet theſe are ſome of thoſe Complaints, which with the Aſſiſtance of a warm and maſterly Style, drew Tears from ſome of your Lordſhips Eyes: ——

But when ſtripp'd of that falſe Beauty, and examined by the ſure and unerring Rules of Reaſon, appear to be without Foundation; and to have been made without that ſtrict Regard to Truth, which, I preſume by ſome Part of his Lordſhip's Speech, he would be thought always to have.

From theſe Complaints his Lordſhip proceeds to ſupport ſome of the Objections taken by his Counſel to the Bill.

And one of the firſt Objections is of the ſame nature with ſome of the Hardſhips that have been complain'd of; that is, it might be an Objection, did it not want the Foundation of Truth.

The Objection I mean is, that it is a Bill ex poſt facto: Your Lordſhips have heard a great deal ſaid upon the Hardſhips of Bills ex poſt facto.

We have been call'd upon to ſhew againſt what Law he has offended: it has been ſaid, If he has not offended againſt any Law, will you make a Law in his Caſe, which will not be a Law in the Caſe of any other Man? This is a ſurprizing Objection.

The Notion I always had of a Law ex poſt facto was, where a Fact was made criminal by a Law, which was not ſo at the time that Fact was committed.

But is that the preſent Caſe? Was it no Offence, before this Bill was brought in, to correſpond with the Pretender and his Agents, in order to ſubvert our Conſtitution?

Are we to be call'd upon to ſhew againſt what Law this is an Offence?

Or to have a Complaint made, that in puniſhing a Man for ſuch an Offence, you are making a Law in his Caſe, that will not be a Law in the Caſe of any other Perſon?

I hope it will be a Law in the Caſe of every Man that equally deſerves it.

But his Lordſhip is ſenſible of this Anſwer, and therefore gives it a very artful Turn, by applying it, not to the Fact, but to the Evidence. His Lordſhip ſeems to argue, that accumulative Evidence is as unreaſonable as accumulative Treaſon; and objects that Proofs which communicate Light and Strength to each other, have only the Formality, without the Force of Evidence.

This Objection is deſtructive of all Proof that is not Mathematical; for all other Proof muſt neceſſarily be what he calls accumulative.

That is, it conſiſts of a variety of Facts and Circumſtances laid together, ſufficient to induce a Belief, which any of them ſingly would not do. This is the very Principle upon which the Trial of every Matter of Fact, not capable of a Demonſtration, does and muſt proceed.

Your Lordſhips in the next place have heard a ſtring of Objections, that have been repeated againſt each of the Bills.

That a Subject of England ought to be tried according to the Laws of England and Magna Charta:

To be convicted by legal Evidence:

And that Diſtinction between Legal and Parliamentary Evidence is abſurd.

All theſe Poſitions I agree to;

But at the ſame time I muſt affirm, that this is a Trial agreeable to the Laws of England and Magna Charta; and that a Proceeding of this Nature is as neceſſary a part of our Conſtitution, as the Eſtabliſhment of the ordinary Courts in Weſtminſter-Hall.

The difference between Parliamentary and Legal Evidence, taken in the general Senſe of the word Legal, is improper.

And I affirm, the Evidence which has been offered in ſupport of this Bill, is legal Evidence.

What is legal Evidence, depends upon the Nature of the Inquiry, and the Judicature before which the Inquiry is made.

Depoſitions in writing are not legal Evidence in a Court of Law, bnt they are legal Evidence in a Court of Equity.

Upon an Indictment for Felony, or any other Miſdemeanour, one ſingle poſitive Witneſs, or Circumſtances only without any poſitive Witneſs to the Fact, is legal Evidence.

But upon an Indictment for Treaſon, the Law requiring two Witneſſes in the Courts below, one Witneſs, or Circumſtances, is not legal Evidence.

In Parliamentary Enquiries, which are excepted out of that Act and not reſtrained by any other, every thing is legal Evidence which may properly tend to a Diſcovery of the Truth.

I can't think myſelf at liberty at this time of day, to mention what fell from the other ſide againſt the Power of the Parliament in general, and the rather becauſe the next Objection which they relied upon was introduced with an admiſſion of that Power.

But they ſay it ought never to be exerciſed but in Caſes of Neceſſity; and inſtance particularly in the Bill againſt the South-Sea Directors, as a Caſe of that Nature. Is there any Compariſon between the Offence of thoſe Men, and of one who has endeavoured to ſubvert our whole Conſtitution, to deſtroy our Religion, our Liberty, and every thing that is valuable?

When we reflect that theſe Endeavours have been conſtantly carrying on ever ſince the happy Eſtabliſhment of the Proteſtant Succeſſion;

That the many Diſcoveries of their Plots, the many Examples of publick Juſtice, have had no other Effect, than to make them more ſubtle and cunning how to avoid the common Forms of the Law:

Theſe Reflections ſhew the Neceſſity of ſuch a Proceeding, to convince the World, according to your Lordſhips Report, that as Artifice and Diſguiſe don't leſſen the Danger to the Publick, nor mitigate the Guilt of the Offender, ſo neither ought they to protect him from Puniſhment.

The next Objection was addreſſed chiefly to one part of your Lordſhips, who were told that no civil Power upon Earth could deprive a Biſhop of the Exerciſe of his holy Function, but that muſt be done by another Judicature; and therefore it was obſerv'd by one of the Counſel, that wherever Iſſue is join'd in the Common Law Courts, whether Biſhop or no, the Court where ſuch Iſſue is depending, muſt write to the Metropolitan to try it, according to the Law of the Church.

Whether an Act of Parliament can deprive a Biſhop, ſo as to make the Acts done by him afterwards invalid, is a Controverſy not proper at this time; but it will be admitted on all hands, that an Act of Parliament may reſtrain a Biſhop from the Exerciſe of his Function within any part of this Kingdom, ſo as to make the Exerciſe of it Criminal in him, or in any that aſſiſts him. And I believe if this Bill ſhould paſs into a Law, and there ſhould be a queſtion whether his Lordſhip was afterwards Biſhop of Rocheſter, the Courts of Law, upon producing the Act of Parliament, would hardly think it neceſſary to trouble the Metropolitan.

His Lordſhip has been pleaſed to ſay, that this is the firſt Inſtance where a Member of this Houſe has been judged in another.

I wonder that his Lordſhip, who is ſo great a Maſter of our Engliſh Conſtitution, ſhould have forgot the Caſe of one of his Predeceſſors in the See of Rocheſter, in the Reign of Henry VIII. againſt whom a Bill was brought in the Houſe of Commons, inflicting ſevere Pains and Penalties, which paſſed in that Houſe, and afterwards received the Approbation of this, and the Royal Aſſent.

They have cloſed their Objections to the Bill, with a very pathetick Admonition againſt the Conſequences of it.

They ſay the wiſeſt Man can't foreſee, nor the moſt innocent Man declare himſelf ſafe from the Conſequences of this Bill.

That a wiſe Man ſhould not be able to foreſee what will happen hereafter, is not very ſtrange;

But he muſt be a very wiſe Man indeed, in my poor Opinion, who can foreſee any danger to Innocence from the Proceedings upon this Bill. Your Lordſhips have attended with the utmoſt Patience, for ſeven Days together, to the Proofs for and againſt this Bill; and have given the Perſon accuſed all the Opportunities, afforded him all the Aſſiſtance poſſible, to make out his Innocence.

And whoever ſhall uſe this Precedent as a handle for Oppreſſion and Injuſtice, would certainly be guilty of the ſame Oppreſſion and Injuſtice without this Precedent.

The next Part of their Defenſe, conſiſted in Obſervations upon the Evidence for the Bill.

They raiſe great Triumph from Neynoe's Examination, which they would repreſent as the Foundation of the whole Charge, or offered as ſuch by the Counſel for the Bill.

But if it was, they have been ſo far from weakening, that they have added ſtrength to that Foundation.

As to the Inconſiſtencies in it, they are not Neynoe's, but Kelly's. As to the Tale they have told, that at the very time when he was deluding a great Man with Confeſſions, either to get Money out of him, or to find an opportunity of making his Eſcape, he ſhould declare to Skeene and to Steward that what he had confeſſed was falſe; I ſay, as this is improbable in itſelf, ſo it appears by our Evidence to be a mere Fiction of their own, without any poſſibility of being true.

It appears to be an Attempt, by a parcel of deſperate People engaged in the ſame Intereſt, to weaken Neynoe's Evidence, whom they looked upon as a Betrayer of their Cauſe and Party.

From the Evidence of Neynoe they proceed to the other Evidence.

And here they tell your Lordſhips that we have ſupported the Bill by Innuendo's, Arbitrary and Invidious Interpretations; that when a Woman is named, it means a Man; that two different Names ſignify the ſame Perſon; that Books of Account, and mercantile Terms, by a new kind of Metaphor, are taken in an ill Senſe: and all this aſſiſted with the Whimſies and Conjectures of Decypherers.

Theſe are pretty ſounding Expreſſions; but, when conſider'd, are nothing but Sound.

Is it an arbitrary Interpretation, when a Letter ſays, I ſaw Mrs. Illington, He is in great Tribulation for poor Harlequin, but his Obligations are the ſame, which he deſires may be made known, to apply this to a Man? When two Letters are wrote by the ſame Perſon, but ſign'd by different Names, to apply thoſe two Names to that Perſon?

When Letters give a Caution not to write any more, till new Books of Account can be ſettled and ſent over by ſafe Hands;

Becauſe thoſe who have got part may by the ſame means have got the whole:

To expreſs a doubt whether they have been betray'd by falſe Friends, or an open Enemy:

To talk of having Wine, but wanting Barrels; of the abſence of the King and Court, as affording a proper opportunity of ſending over and ſelling their Wine:

A Man muſt have laid aſide his Reaſon, that can think this the Language of Perſons really dealing in a mercantile way: 'Tis the plain and common Cant of a treaſonable Correſpondence.

They next object to the unreaſonableneſs of applying the Circumſtances which relate to Jones and Illington, to the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

Was no body elſe beſides the Biſhop out of Town? Was he the only Man that had the Gout, or who loſt his Lady at that time?

Were theſe Queſtions to be asked ſingly, they might be anſwer'd, that there were other Perſons in the like Circumſtances.

But then the Anſwers would be nothing to the Purpoſe.

The only Queſtion applicable to the preſent Caſe would be, Is there no other Perſon who was in Town on the ſeventh of May, out of Town on the tenth and fourteenth, in Town on the fifteenth; whoſe Wife died the Week before the thirtieth of April, he himſelf then ill of the Gout; to whom a Dog was ſent from France of the name of Harlequin, that broke its Leg, and was brought to Mrs. Barnes, by Mr. Kelly, in order to be cured?

Theſe are the Circumſtances of Jones and Illington, and they are every one prov'd true of the Biſhop of Rocheſter; and I believe your Lordſhips can hardly think they are ſo of any other Perſon.

They ſaid they ſhould falſify ſeveral of theſe Facts; but they have only ſaid it.

In the Papers they have produc'd from the Surgeon concerning the Dog, he contradicts himſelf.

In the firſt he ſays, he gave Mr. Kelly a Dog for his own uſe, to diſpoſe of as he pleaſed;

In the ſecond he ſays, he gave it for Mrs. Barnes:

But Mrs. Barnes tells you, that the Dog deſign'd for the Biſhop was in her Cuſtody, when the other given by the Surgeon was expected over.

Their Attempt to diſprove the Circumſtances of being in Town, has met with as little Succeſs.

In a Letter of the ſeventh of May, 'tis ſaid Mr. Illington is come to Town for a day only:

We ſhewed that the Biſhop was in Town upon that day; they anſwer us by ſaying, he ſtay'd in Town two Days after.

Does this diſprove his being in Town upon the ſeventh? or does it weaken the Proof of his being then in Town, becauſe he alter'd his mind, and ſtaid two Days longer than perhaps he at firſt intended?

This is the only Attempt they made to diſprove any of the Circumſtances relating to Mr. Jones and Illington. As to the other Inſtances which they pretend to diſprove, they relate to Weſton and Rig, and were not mention'd by the Counſel for the Bill.

They next object to the Method of proving the Similitude of Hands, and obſerve that the original Letter prov'd to be Mr. Kelly's, and the three Letters applied to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, are dated at four Months diſtance; and how is it poſſible, that the Clerks of the Poſt-Office ſhould be able to ſwear upon their Memories that they are of the ſame Hand-writing?

This is not a fair Repreſentation of the Evidence: For the Clerks told your Lordſhips that there was not any one Poſt, during all that time, which did not bring ſome Letter in the ſame Hand, all which they copied, and had by that means contracted a perfect Idea of the Hand; ſo that they did not ſwear from Memory, but from a Knowledge gain'd by Experience, and many conſtant repeated Obſervations upon the ſame Hand.

There have been ſome other Objections made, that are ſcarce worth taking notice of.

'Tis ſaid Mrs. Illington is in great Tribulation for poor Harlequin, which Kelly could never ſay of the Biſhop of Rocheſter.

Surely there is nothing in this;

'Tis an Expreſſion that might be uſed of a Man of the graveſt Character in a Letter of this ſort, to the Author of ſuch a Preſent.

Mrs. Illington is mentioned eleven Days after the Biſhop's Lady was dead. This is the Inſtance where 'tis ſaid Mrs. Illington is in great Tribulation for poor Harlequin, but his Obligation is the ſame, which he deſires may be made known.

That Jones is mentioned in other Cyphers for other Perſons, as in one for the Duke of Norfolk, in Plunket's for a different Perſon.

But does it therefore follow that in Kelly's he can't mean the Biſhop of Rocheſter?

It certainly does not.

And they ſeem to be convinced that the Biſhop is too well deſcribed in this Correſpondence, under the Names of Jones and Illington, to doubt whether he is meant by them.

And therefore they endeavour to give it another Turn, by ſaying this may be a malicious Contrivance of ſome Perſons, who have inform'd themſelves of his Lordſhip's Motions, and the Circumſtances of himſelf and Family: And to make this the more probable, they ſay that Jones and Illington are the only Perſons mentioned in this Correſpondence of Mr. Kelly's, with Circumſtances of this Nature.

One would not imagine the Perſons who made this Objection, had ſo often heard the Letters read.

E. 41. 'Tis ſaid Hore is laid up with his old Diſtemper, Hobbert is pretty well recovered.

E. 45. Mr. Hore is laid up, and ſo is Jemiſon with the Gout.

E. 49. Rep. is ſaid to be in the Country.

E. 59. Ho. and Den. are ſaid to be gone into the Country.

E. 62. Nic. W. is now in Town, he is well as to Health.

E. 64. Trotter is ſaid to be out of Town the next Morning.

E. 69. Den. is ſaid to come to Town, Rep. and Ho. to be in the Country.

E. 73. C. Saunders is well, and with a Friend in the Country.

Theſe are all Inſtances where the ſame Circumſtances are mentioned of other Perſons, that are mentioned of Jones and Illington.

If Jones and Illington are oftneſt mentioned, it is becauſe he was the principal Perſon in this Correſpondence.

But this malicious Contrivance muſt be carry'd on by Mr. Kelly: for

It has been proved that the Letters were wrote in his Hand, that the Anſwers were addreſſed according to his Directions;

That he received the Letters ſo directed.

I believe your Lordſhips have no Suſpicion that Mr. Kelly bore an Ill-Will towards the Biſhop:

I am ſure there has been no Proof of it, nor of any malicious Contrivance againſt him.

But, my Lords, this is the common trite Excuſe of every petty Offender.

Your Lordſhips can ſcarce read a Trial, where the Defendant don't complain that it is all a malicious Contrivance of his Enemies.

I heard this very thing warmly inſiſted upon a few Terms ago, at another Bar, and with as much Proof, by a Perſon concern'd in a Part of this Conſpiracy, who has ſince been attainted and own'd his Guilt.

But we have gone ſtill further, we have ſhewn that Kelly was an Acquaintance of the Biſhop of Rocheſter's.

Which is indeed acknowledged, without any ſatisfactory Account given, for what Purpoſe his Lordſhip ſhould contract an Acquaintance with a young Fellow that has deſerted his Orders, and is a profeſs'd Nonjuror.

Your Lordſhips, I preſume, from the Behaviour of Mr. Kelly, can hardly be perſuaded that he had no other Employment under the Biſhop than to furniſh him with Beaver-Stockings, which the Biſhop owns to have received from him as a Preſent.

But we have proved by the ſtrongeſt Evidence that can be, by a Letter under his Lordſhip's Seal, and I may venture to ſay (from the Obſervations that have been made from the Letter itſelf) under his Hand, that Johnſon, i. e. Kelly, is the Perſon in whoſe Hand the Biſhop returns his Anſwers. No Account is given of this Letter, by whom it was wrote, nor to whom, nor how it came among his Lordſhip's Papers.

All that is ſaid in anſwer to it is, that 'tis poſſible Seals may be counterfeited, or there may be be ſeveral Impreſſions of the ſame Seals: but is there any Proof of this?

It appears that the Impreſſion on the firſt Letter was broke when ſeized; that it was in the Hands of the Committee of the Houſe of Commons before the ſecond Letter was taken; which makes it impoſſible to imagine an Impreſſion ſhould be taken off the firſt to put upon the ſecond.

But his Lordſhip is pleaſed to aſk, Is it agreeable to the Cunning with which he is charged, to keep ſuch a Letter by him on purpoſe, as it were, to furniſh his Adverſaries with Evidence?

No, my Lords, neither do I imagine his Lordſhip knew he had it by him.

It was found amongſt his Papers, and, no doubt of it, was left there accidentally; and 'tis by ſuch little Accidents that the moſt cunning Men are detected: there is no Danger of their committing greater Overſights.

His Lordſhip is pleaſed to obſerve, that at firſt the Houſe of Commons repreſented this Letter as a Letter wrote to him; but now 'tis diſcovered to be wrote by him: It is ſo, and very plainly, and his Lordſhip may thank himſelf for the Diſcovery; and the not diſcovering it ſooner is ſurely no Objection to the Truth of it when diſcovered.

It may be urged, and has been inſinuated, that if Mr. Johnſon is the Perſon in whoſe hand the Biſhop returns his Anſwers, yet how does it appear that theſe particular Letters which are applied to the Biſhop, were wrote by his Directions?

If it appears that Johnſon is the Perſon in whoſe Hand he writes, and that theſe Letters are of the Hand-writing of Johnſon, ſigned by that Name, which denotes the Biſhop in the Correſpondence, this will be thought a reaſonable Proof that they were wrote with his Privity.

But they ſaid they ſhould prove it impoſſible that theſe three Letters ſhould be wrote with the Privity of the Biſhop; for they bear Date the 20th of April, whereas the Biſhop came to Town the 11th, went to Bromley the 12th, and within two or three Days after was taken ſo ill with the Gout, that he had neither the uſe of his Hands or Feet, and had a Servant always attending him, who will prove that no Stranger came near him all that time.

If this had been made out, it would not be a Proof that the Letters were not dictated by him; for both Kelly and the Biſhop were in Town upon the 11th and 12th, and the Biſhop was not confined at Bromley upon the 13th and 14th, when Mr. Kelly was out of Town, and probably at Bromley. And tho the Letters bear Date upon the 20th of April, yet 'tis not to be imagined, that they were wrote upon that Day; for it requires a good deal of time to reduce three Letters into Cyphers; and the Method generally uſed, where Letters are to be ſent in Cyphers, is, to write them in common Hand firſt, and then reduce them to Cyphers after: ſo that it's probable the Subſtance of theſe Letters was dictated many Days before they were perfected and ſent.

But the Evidence given by the Biſhop's Servants is not to be regarded.

The firſt Servant, when he had ſworn what he thought was material for the Biſhop, being preſs'd by a noble Lord with a Queſtion relating to the Letter directed to Dubois, refuſed to give any Anſwer, till the Biſhop publickly gave him Leave; tho he was ſworn to ſpeak the whole Truth: which ſhews too great an Attachment to his Maſter's Intereſt, to deſerve much Credit.

He and the ſecond Witneſs did admit, that the Apothecary, or the Miniſter of the Pariſh, might be with the Biſhop without their Knowledge; and if ſo, why not Mr. Kelly, whoſe Viſits required more Secrecy than either of the others?

And I muſt here obſerve, that what the Reverend Prelate inſiſted upon, to add Credit to the Evidence of theſe Witneſſes, is the greateſt Objection to their Teſtimony imaginable.

They tell your Lordſhips, that tho they were with the Biſhop in the Tower, yet he never once ſpoke to them concerning the Matter they had given in Evidence, till they themſelves recollected it upon reading the Report; and finding that the Biſhop was charged with being the Author of three Letters, dated the 20th of April, they immediately recollect that the Biſhop was ill at that time, and they conſtantly about him. This ſeems to be a Story ſcarce credible;

That the Biſhop himſelf, who was ſo nearly concerned, ſhould not, upon reading the Report, recollect the Circumſtances he was under at the time when thoſe Letters bore Date, if the Truth was as they would repreſent it; but that the Servants ſhould firſt recollect this, and ſuggeſt it to their Maſter.

Or if the Biſhop did recollect it, 'tis ſtrange he ſhould not mention it to thoſe Servants, who were preſent with him in the Tower, and the only Perſons, who, as they ſay, were capable of clearing his Innocence.

This had been very natural, and proper under his Circumſtances: and his not ſpeaking to them firſt, could hardly proceed from an unreaſonable Scruple, leſt he ſhould be ſuſpected of laying a byaſs upon them; ſince his Lordſhip has, after he knew they were to be Witneſſes, given each of them a Place under him as Dean of Weſtminſter.

The reſt of the Servants that were called, tho they contradict the firſt, by admitting that two other Gentlemen were at the Biſhop's at Bromley, during the Time in queſtion; yet they plainly ſhew a greater Regard for their Maſter's Intereſt, than for Truth: for tho one of them was but the Helper in the Stable, and another the Nurſe that attended his Lady in her Illneſs, yet they take upon them to ſwear, that they verily believe no Stranger could be with their Maſter in private, but they ſhould have known of it, and that they never knew of Mr. Kelly's being there.

Every body's Obſervation muſt ſuggeſt to them that ſuch a Belief muſt be without Foundation.

The next Arguments uſed on behalf of the Reverend Prelate at the Bar, were raiſed from his unambitious reſigned Temper of Mind, and from the Style of the Letters laid to his Charge, That it's not probable he ſhould uſe ſo indecent an Expreſſion of Perſons he was concern'd with, as to call them pretending unſupported People.

What Weight there is in theſe Arguments, I muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips, who are much better acquainted with his Temper and Style than I can pretend to be.

The laſt thing preſſed by the Reverend Prelate, is a ſolemn Proteſtation, I cannot ſay of Innocence, cence, becauſe it ſeems to me to be conceived in ſuch Terms as not to contradict any part of the Charge inſiſted upon by the Counſel for the Bill:

It is chiefly calculated to anſwer ſome particular Circumſtances of Times, without any Denial of the general Charge, or the leaſt Declaration of Affection or Loyalty towards his preſent Majeſty.

But if his Proteſtations amounted to a direct and poſitive Denial of the Chrrge, they ought not to have any Weight with your Lordſhips, ſince this is a Defenſe equally in the Power of the moſt Guilty as well as the Innocent: a little Proof is better than many Proteſtations.

And I can't help obſerving upon this Head, and I hope his Lordſhip won't impute this Obſervation to Ill-Nature, but a Senſe of my Duty, which obliges me to make all proper Obſervations, That it appears his Lordſhip has not always that ſtrict Regard to Truth, which he ought to have, by the Papers taken upon his Servant at the Tower.

The Nature of the Puniſhment has been much talked of in the Courſe of theſe Proceedings, and great Lamentations made upon it, but ſurely without any Reaſon.

For this Argument ſuppoſes the Party guilty of the Charge, or elſe it's ridiculous to object to the Severity of the Puniſhment.

And I may venture to affirm, this is the mildeſt Puniſhment that ever was inflicted for ſuch an Offence.

His Life is not touched; his Liberty nor Property affected; he is only expelled the Society whoſe Government he diſapproves, and has endeavoured to ſubvert; and is deprived of the publick Employment which that Government had intruſted him with: The Enjoyment of his Life, his private Eſtate, and his Liberty, under any other Government that may be more agreeable, is allowed him.

This is ſcarce to be called a Puniſhment, being nothing more than what was abſolutely neceſſary for the publick Security.

The Commons of Great Britain have done their Part towards providing this Security, and I don't doubt but it will meet with the Concurrence of your Lordſhips.

The Counſel having done, the Lords in a grand Committee went thro' the Bill, and about ten of the Clock at Night, adjourned to Wedneſday, May 15.

Their Lordſhips being then ſat, the aforeſaid Bill was read the third time, and a Motion being made, that the Bill ſhould paſs, it occaſion'd a long Debate, in which the Biſhop of Salisbury ſpoke as follows.

My Lords,

AS I have ſometimes troubled your Lordſhips with what I had to ſay in other Debates, I believe it will be expected that I ſhould ſay ſomething in a Caſe ſo extraordinary as this is; and wherein a Brother Biſhop is ſo nearly concerned. I beg leave to begin with taking Notice of ſome Things that were peculiarly addreſs'd to this Bench, both by the Reverend Prelate, and his Counſel, from the Bar.

The firſt is, That we would conſider how agreeable it may be to the Canons and Diſcipline of the Church, in this extraordinary Manner to deprive a Biſhop of all his Preferments; and to prohibit him the Uſe and Exerciſe of his Function for his Life.

As to this Objection, whatever Influence it may have abroad among ignorant People, when the Speeches come to be printed; yet, as to your Lordſhips, who know our Conſtitution ſo well, I cannot imagine that it can have any Weight or Influence at all. And indeed when I conſider all the Acts of Parliament relating to the Supremacy, that have been made for near two hundred Years; when I conſider the Articles of our Church, our Canons, and the Subſcriptions that the Biſhop himſelf muſt have made, and muſt have required from others, in the Exerciſe of his Function as a Biſhop; when, I ſay, I conſider all theſe things, it is matter of Wonder to me, that ſuch an Objection ſhould be made, either by a Biſhop of the Church of England, or by a Lawyer of the Kingdom of England.

I do not indeed recollect above one Inſtance of a particular Act of Parliament made to deprive a Biſhop; which is, that of Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter; who was ſo deprived in the Time of Henry VIII. But, as to general Acts of Parliament, whereby both Biſhops and Preſbyters have been depriv'd of their Preferments, we have a good Number. Thus, in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, almoſt all the Biſhops of England were ſo depriv'd: And at the Revolution, many were ſo; and all might have been ſo, if they had not comply'd with the Terms of the Act of Parliament: And at the Reſtoration, many hundreds of Preſbyters were depriv'd in the ſame manner. And I conceive that it cannot well be doubted, but that the ſame Authority which can make Laws by which the whole Bench may be depriv'd, may exert itſelf in a particular Caſe, if they have juſt Reaſons for it.

As to the Trial of Biſhops for any Crimes they ſhall be guilty of, we are to conſider the different Nature of the Crimes of which they are accuſed; and the Trial by Law muſt be accordingly. If the Crime be of an Eccleſiaſtical Nature, ſuch as Eccleſiaſtical Courts can take Cognizance of, as Simony, Hereſy, and the like; the Trial regularly muſt be by the Arch-Biſhop of the Province, taking to his Aſſiſtance ſome of his Suffragan Biſhops. But even in this Caſe, if either the Arch-Biſhop ſhall, upon Complaint, neglect to try him; or, if upon Trial he ſhall acquit and abſolve him; the Accuſer may appeal to the King in Chancery: Which Court may appoint a Commiſſion of Delegates, who may, by the Authority of the Crown, judge him, deprive him of his Biſhoprick, prohibit him the Uſe of his Function for his Life (if the Crime deſerve it) tho he were before acquitted by the Arch-Biſhop. But if the Crime be of a Civil Nature, ſuch as Treaſon (which is the Caſe now before us) the Eccleſiaſtical Authority has nothing at all to do with it; and ſhould any Eccleſiaſtical Judge attempt to meddle with it, he would be judg'd to attempt againſt the King's Crown and Dignity, and quickly have his Proceedings ſtop'd, by a Prohibition out of the Temporal Courts. And I would beg leave to obſerve further, that were this Biſhop to be try'd in the common Courſe of Law, for the Crimes whereof he is accuſed in this Bill, it muſt be either by your Lordſhips, as a Member of this Houſe; or by the Judges and a Jury in Weſtminſter-Hall. I would not at preſent ſay which, becauſe it would lead me out of the way: But in this Caſe, if either your Lordſhips, or the Judges below, ſhould paſs Sentence upon him for the Treaſon of which he is here accuſed, that Sentence would, ipſo facto, deprive him of the Biſhoprick: It would alſo make him liable to loſe his Life; but it would not, ipſo facto, take it away, as it would his Biſhoprick: He might notwithſtanding that Sentence live many Years; but from the moment of it, would be no more Biſhop of Rocheſter.

Theſe Things, I humbly conceive, are abundantly ſufficient to anſwer this firſt Difficulty; and therefore I ſhall add no more but this one Obſervation: That the Way that is now taken to deprive him, is the only Way that I know of, wherein the Biſhops can have any Part in the Sentence of Deprivation.

The next Thing that was ſuggeſted from the Bar, particularly to this Bench, was, That we ſhould conſider well what we are doing, and have a care that we do not, by concurring in this Bill, make our Titles to our Biſhopricks precarious.

As to this Admonition, the Anſwer is very eaſy, That it becomes us, as we have the Honour to have Seats in Parliament, to take care to do Juſtice; as, on the one ſide, to the Priſoner, ſo on the other ſide, to our King and Country; and to truſt in God, that in ſo doing we ſhall neither hurt ourſelves, nor our Succeſſors. But, ſo far as juſt Judges may look to Events, the Argument ſeems to me to lie the other way: For, if for want of doing Juſtice againſt Traitors to King George, the Pretender ſhould happen to prevail, (which God avert) the Title of Proteſtant Biſhops is like to be very precarious indeed.

As to the Power of Parliament to paſs Bills of this kind, the Parliament always had it, has frequently exercis'd it, and always muſt have it: it being eſſential to the very Being of the Supreme Power. The Lives and Liberties of every Man in England are ſubject to it: and tho the Exerciſe of this Power may be dangerous to Perſons who will venture upon treaſonable Practices, truſting to their Cunning and Artifice to ſkreen them from the Law; yet I have that Confidence in the Integrity and Juſtice of the Crown, and two Houſes of Parliament, that, ſo long as this Example is followed, of giving a full and fair Hearing to the Perſons accuſed, innocent Men cannot eaſily ſuffer; or, in all Events, that if Corruption or Faction ſhould ever ſo far prevail, that there ſhould be Danger to innocent Perſons, it will be much eaſier to corrupt Witneſſes or Juries, or to find other Methods to deſtroy them, than it will be to prevail upon a Parliament to do it: As I am perſuaded that, in this particular Caſe, had there been any Corruption, ſome other Method would have been found out, more effectually to come at the Perſon concerned than this is like to do.

The laſt Particular that the Biſhop peculiarly addreſs'd to this Bench, was, That we would conſider the Words of St. Paul to Timothy; Againſt an Elder receive not an Accuſation, but before two or three Witneſſes, 1 Tim. 5. 19. The Senſe of which Words his Lordſhip underſtood to be, That an Accuſation ſhould not be ſo much as received againſt an Elder or Preſbyter, and much leſs againſt a Biſhop, but upon the Oaths of two or three Witneſſes.

In Anſwer to this, I beg leave to obſerve, that our Tranſlation renders the Words, not, upon the Oaths; but, before two or three Witneſſes: which ſeems to import a very different Senſe from that his Lordſhip puts upon them. But, not to enter into any critical Examination of the Truth of our Tranſlation, or what the real Senſe of the Words is, I would only make theſe two ſhort Obſervations: Firſt, that the Senſe the Biſhop puts upon them, that an Accuſation againſt a Preſbyter or Biſhop, muſt not be ſo much as receiv'd into Court, but upon the Oaths of two or more Witneſſes, is not practiſed in the Church of England; and, I believe, never was practiſed in any Chriſtian Church whatever.

The ſecond Obſervation I would make, is, That whatever be the Senſe of theſe Words, it regards only the Conduct of a Biſhop towards his Preſbyters; but certainly was never intended to give a Law to the Supreme Power of a Kingdom, in its Proceedings in Caſes of High-Treaſon, againſt any Subject whatſoever.

But the Biſhop urges further, that the Jewiſh Law did require at leaſt two or more Witneſſes in all Judicial Proceedings; and from thence infers, that it ought to be ſo amongſt us.

In Anſwer to this it may be reply'd, That this is a Part of the Judicial Law of the Jews, which was not given to us, and therefore doth not oblige us any more than the reſt of that Law doth; except where the Reaſon of the thing lays an Obligation upon us. But indeed, I am of Opinion, that that Law doth oblige us, ſo far as it was intended to oblige them, and ſo far as it can be adapted to the infinite Variety of Caſes that muſt happen in Judicial Matters. That Law is very ſhort, and therefore muſt leave many Queſtions that may be made about it undetermined: I ſhall at preſent take notice of theſe two only, which may be material to our preſent Diſpute; the firſt is, Whether the Meaning of it be, that all Controverſies and Accuſations whatever, muſt be determined by Witneſſes and no other way? or, Whether upon Suppoſition that the Matter be to be determined ſolely by Witneſſes, and no Light can be brought to it any other way; that then the Witneſſes muſt be at leaſt two? The ſecond is, Whether thoſe Witneſſes muſt ſwear directly to the Fact; for Inſtance, that they ſaw ſuch a Man murder another, or the like; or whether it may not be ſufficient, that they ſwear to ſuch Circumſtances, as infer a ſtrong and violent Preſumption, that ſuch a Fact was committed by ſuch a Perſon?

Theſe things are left undetermined in that ſhort Law of the Jews; but, I humbly conceive, are ſufficiently determined by the Nature of the thing, and by the Laws of all Nations, and particularly of our own. It is true indeed, that in Caſes of High-Treaſon, we have from Political Conſiderations determined, that there muſt be two poſitive Witneſſes, to ſome one or more Overt-Acts of the ſame Treaſon: but, as to all other Crimes, that equally affect the Lives and Eſtates of all the Subjects of England, this is not the Caſe; and Men may by Law loſe their Lives when there is not ſo much as one poſitive Witneſs to the Fact.

I beg leave to explain this in the Words of my Lord Chief Juſtice Coke; 'When a * 1 Inſtit. fol. 6. 'Trial is by Witneſſes, * regularly the 'Affirmative ought to be proved by two or 'three Witneſſes; but when the Trial is by Verdict of 'twelve Men, there the Judgment is not given upon 'Witneſſes, or other kind of Evidences, but upon the 'Verdict; and upon ſuch Evidence as is given to the 'Jury, they give their Verdict; and many times Ju- 'ries, together with other matter, are much induced 'by Preſumptions.' And indeed, if no Man could be convicted of Murder, or Robbery, or other Crimes of that Nature, but by two poſitive Witneſſes that ſaw the Fact done; nothing would be eaſier or ſafer than the Commiſſion of thoſe Crimes; and no Man could have any Security, either for his Perſon or his Eſtate: And therefore, if in Caſes of High-Treaſon our Law requires poſitive Witneſſes, it is not from any moral Neceſſity, or Point of Conſcience; but from political Reaſons, which muſt, and always will be, ſubject to the Judgment of Parliament.

Having now done with what was from the Bar peculiarly applied to this Bench, and having, I hope, given a very plain Anſwer to it, I now beg your Lordſhips leave to proceed more directly to the Bill itſelf. And here, two things are neceſſary to be conſidered, in order to convince your Lordſhips, that it is a Bill fit to be paſſed: The firſt is, the Lawfulneſs of it; the ſecond is, the Prudence or Expediency of it.

As to the Lawfulneſs of it, it will be neceſſary alſo to conſider two things; firſt, Whether your manner of Proceeding in this Bill be Lawful: ſecondly, Whether the Biſhop be really Guilty of the Crimes charg'd upon him.

As to the manner of Proceeding, many things have been objected: That it is by way of Bill, and not a Trial in the Courſe of Law; That Evidence has been admitted, that would not have been admitted in any of our Courts; That theſe Things are contrary to the Liberty of the Subject; That every Subject has a Right to the Laws of his Country; and That he has an Injury done him, if he be denied the Benefit of them. This I take to be the Sum of what has been objected againſt the Juſtice of your Proceedings in this Bill.

In Anſwer to theſe Objections, I beg leave to conſider, firſt, wherein the Liberty of England conſiſts; which is a Point commonly pretty much miſtaken. Many People are apt to imagine, that the Difference betwixt us, and ſome of our neighbouring Countries, is, that they are under Abſolute Power, and we are not; whereas in truth all Countries, that are Supreme within themſelves, have equally an Abſolute Power; and in the Nature of the thing it cannot poſſibly be otherwiſe: No Government can ſubſiſt, if there be not a Power in it to change, to abrogate, to ſuſpend, or diſpenſe with its Laws, as Neceſſity or Conveniency ſhall require; which is what we call Abſolute Power: and therefore, the Difference betwixt one Government and another, does not lie in this, that one has ſuch a Power and the other has not; but lies merely in the Difference of the Hands in which this Power is placed. Where this is placed in one Hand, in the King, we call that an Abſolute Monarchy: Where this is not ſolely in the King, but only as he acts in conjunction with the States of the Kingdom, that we call a Limited Monarchy; and the People that live under ſuch Government, are alled a Free People; becauſe they live under Set Laws, which could not at firſt be made, nor can afterwards be altered or diſpens'd with, but by their own Conſent. However, there is ſtill in ſuch Countries, a Power equally above all their Laws, as there is in the moſt abſolute Monarchy in the World.

What I have ſaid upon this firſt Head, will in a great meaſure explain a ſecond Queſtion: What that Right is, which the Subjects of this Country have to its Laws; which is, in ſhort, a Right to claim the Benefit of them againſt the Crown, or any Court acting under the Crown, till the States of the Kingdom (which are virtually every Man in the Kingdom) think fit to conſent to the Alteration of 'em. The King is indeed Supreme, but his Power is only according to the Laws in being: By them he is bound to act, and if any of his Officers act contrary to 'em, what they do is null and void; and they are puniſhable for it; and the Subjects have a Claim of Right againſt them. But if the King and his People think fit to come to a new Agreement to alter any ſuch Law, there's an end of all Claim of Right in the Subject: the Claim is taken away by their own Conſent; for, as I ſaid before, every Man in the Kingdom virtually conſents to what is done by an Act of Parliament.

And there is an abſolute Neceſſity that there ſhould be ſuch a Power as this in every Country; for the State of human Affairs is ſo changeable, that it does not admit of any Set of unalterable Laws. What is good at one time, may be deſtructive at another; and what is generally good, may, under particular Circumſtances, require a Diſpenſation by a proper Authority. And here, give me leave to obſerve to your Lordſhips, the Difference there is betwixt the eternal Laws of Juſtice and Righteouſneſs, and all poſitive Laws whatever. That as to the firſt, we are made for them, and the nearer we do in all things conform to them, the more noble, and lovely, and excellent Creatures we are: but as to poſitive Laws, they are all made for us; and the more they conform to us, the more they obviate all our Wants and Difficulties, the more they anſwer to all our Neceſſities, the better they are.

As to what is complain'd of, that your Lordſhips have admitted Evidence to be read, that would not have been admitted in the Courts below: I conceive, that acting in the Capacity you now do, you have a full Power to do it, and have not broken any of the general Rules of Juſtice by it. You have let in all the Light that you thought might be proper to give you a full Knowledge of the Matter; and in the Capacity you now act, I cannot but humbly be of Opinion, it was your Duty to do ſo: but in forming of your Judgments, I take for granted, that your Lordſhips will diſtinguiſh, and lay no more Weight upon any thing than it deſerves.

As to the Rules of receiving Evidence in Weſtminſter-Hall, I conceive, that they are no part of natural Juſtice, but only artificial Rules fram'd for Conveniency; and bind no Courts, but as they have agreed to them, and ſo are become the Cuſtoms of the Court. That theſe Rules are no part of natural Juſtice appears from hence, that even among ourſelves they are different in different Courts: That thoſe uſed in our Courts, are very different different from thoſe uſed in other Countries: That they differ here, according to the different Cauſes or Crimes that are to be tried. Nay, they are ſo far from being fundamental Parts of Juſtice, that they muſt require a good deal of Time and Art to form them. And I am perſuaded, that was a Perſon of good natural Senſe, who knows nothing of the Law, aſked his Opinion; he would be apt to think it to be a Part of natural Juſtice, that every Perſon that proſecuted a Cauſe in any Court, ſhould be at Liberty to produce before that Court, whatever he thought material to his Cauſe. And there is no doubt, but that this was the original Way of Proceeding: but that in proceſs of Time, when Courts came to have a good deal of Buſineſs, and they found by Experience, that this Way of laying every thing before 'em, tended to lengthen Cauſes, (which was eſpecially inconvenient where Juries are concerned, who muſt end a Cauſe before they part) theſe Rules were gradually found out; which, tho they may be, for the Reaſons above ſpecified, generally convenient, yet may ſometimes hinder Juſtice, by not ſuffering all the Light to come into Court, that may be material in the Cauſe.

Having ſaid thus much concerning the Juſtice of your Method of Proceeding, I now come to conſider the ſecond and the main Point of Juſtice to be regarded in this Bill; which is, Whether the Biſhop be Guilty, or not, of the treaſonable Practices charg'd upon him in it. And in this I ſhall be the ſhorter, becauſe your Lordſhips have heard the Evidence on both Sides, and all that has been ſaid from the Bar by both Sides upon it; and becauſe, there are many Noble Lords in the Houſe, much abler to lay things of this Nature diſtinctly and clearly before your Lordſhips, than I am.

The Cauſe of Kelly is ſo connected with that of the Biſhop, that I muſt beg leave to ſpeak a few Words to the one, before I proceed to the other. As to Kelly, I would obſerve in the firſt Place, that one ſtrong Preſumption of his Guilt is, that when he was firſt taken up, he reſiſted the Officers; that he ſeized his Sword, and ſome Papers that had been taken away from him; and was reſolute to burn thoſe Papers, tho with the apparent Hazard of his own Life, and being guilty of the Murder of one of the Officers that had ſeized him.

In the next Place, it is prov'd before your Lordſhips, that after he was taken up, the People at his Lodgings burn'd the reſt of his Papers; a plain Evidence, that they who knew his manner of Life and Converſation, ſuſpected that he was Guilty. And this is agreeable to what Neynoe told the Chancellor of the Exchequer; that there was at that time, a general burning of Papers.

Thirdly, Another Preſumption of his Guilt, is, that when he was taken up the ſecond time, he offered ſeveral Sums of Money to the People of the Houſe where he was in Cuſtody, to ſuffer him to eſcape, as appears from their Oaths at the Bar. Theſe things I mention, not as full Proofs of his Guilt, but as ſtrong Preſumptions, that make every thing elſe that is ſworn againſt him very credible.

The chief Evidences of his Guilt, are, a great Number of intercepted Letters, both from him, and to him, containing treaſonable Matters. Thoſe from him, are by ſeveral Witneſſes prov'd to be his Hand-writing, particularly by the Officers of the Poſt-Office, who took them and tranſcribed them. And as to thoſe to him, ſeveral Witneſſes have prov'd, that he gave Orders at ſeveral Publick-Houſes to take them in, when they came from the Poſt; that he himſelf received them from thence, opened, and read them: And it is alſo farther proved, that Anſwers were returned to them in his own Hand-writing. Theſe things all together, I take to be ſuch plain and ſtrong Evidences of his Guilt, that I ſhall trouble your Lordſhips no farther about him.

As to the Perſon concerned in this Bill, tho it be a great Trouble to me, to think that any Biſhop of this Church ſhould be guilty of ſo foul a Crime, as that objected to him; yet I cannot but be of Opinion, that if he be really guilty, the Intereſt of our Church, as well as Juſtice to our King and Country, do require, that he ſhould be convicted and puniſhed. And indeed, I cannot but be humbly of Opinion, that whoever believes Kelly to be guilty, muſt believe the Biſhop to be guilty too.

I ſhall not inſiſt upon what is commonly called Hear-ſay Evidence, tho there be a great deal of it againſt the Biſhop; only muſt obſerve, that the Conduct of a Proteſtant Biſhop muſt have been very odd and unaccountable, if he be innocent, that ſo many Jacobites (as have done in this Caſe) ſhould declare, that they not only eſteemed him to be in the Plot, but to be the chief Conductor of it. It is, however, fit to ſay ſomething as to the Caſe of Neynoe; becauſe the Biſhop and his Counſel have taken up ſo much of your Lordſhips Time, and produced ſo many Witneſſes to prove him a Knave. I did indeed myſelf always think him to be a Knave, and that nothing that he ſaid was to be believed, merely upon his Authority: But on the other ſide, the Teſtimony of the greateſt Knave in the World, may be taken againſt himſelf: and they themſelves have proved, that he was a Jacobite, and thoroughly in that Intereſt, even when he was making ſome Diſcoveries againſt them; and therefore, what he ſays, in that reſpect, bears ſome Weight; as being againſt Perſons whom he favoured, and would hurt as little as poſſible. Some other Things that he had ſaid are alſo confirmed by concurrent Circumſtances, and other Diſcoveries; and theſe may have their Weight, tho he were never ſo great a Knave. One of the Things that he ſaid in his Confeſſion, was, that he frequently went with Kelly to the Biſhop of Rocheſter's, and left him there (as Kelly told him) to write his Letters. This is confirmed by a credible Witneſs at your Bar, who ſwears, that Neynoe uſed to be frequently at his Houſe, and told him, at leaſt three or four times, that he waited there for a ſenſible, ingenious Gentleman, that was gone about Buſineſs to the Biſhop of Rocheſter: He did not indeed tell him his Name; but the thing ſeems to me to look ſtronger than if he had; becauſe it would have looked more like a Piece of Art and Contrivance, to have told the Name of a Man, whom he knew to be gone to the Biſhop about a criminal Correſpondence. I would only beg leave to take notice to your Lordſhips of one thing more relating to Neynoe: the Biſhop's Witneſſes have fully proved, that Neynoe told them, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer had given him ſeveral Sums of Money, to endeavour to get out of Kelly, the Explication of the Cant Names that were uſed in the Correſpondence; dence; and that he had promis'd him much greater Sums, if he would go to France, and get it out of Dillon and the Jacobites there: The Inference from which I take to be very plain, that the Court did not then know, who the Perſons were, that were deſigned by thoſe Cant Names; and that they did believe that Kelly did know, and that Dillon and the Jacobites in France knew too: which effectually and fully confutes that Suggeſtion of the Biſhop, of which he did not bring the leaſt Proof, that the Plot was a Contrivance of Perſons in Power.

The next Thing I would beg leave to take notice of, relating to the Biſhop, is a Letter (taken among his Papers) from a Lady of great Quality; of which the Biſhop, tho it was objected to him by the Counſel for the Bill, has taken no notice; which I conceive he would and ought to have done, had it been poſſible to give any fair Account of it. The Lady * in that Letter tells him, that ſhe ſent ſomething that ſhe had received, ſhe could not tell for whom; but let it be for whom it would, ſhe thought He might be truſted, and that it could not be put into better Hands. A ſtrong Suſpicion this, conſidering all Circumſtances, that here was a Correſpondence by Cant Names, which the Lady did not certainly know, but believed the Biſhop might; or however, that he was in all Events a Perſon to be truſted.

* The Dutcheſs of Ormond.

Another very ſuſpicious Circumſtance againſt the Biſhop, is, the Letters from Captain Halſtead, and what has been proved at your Bar, that this ſame Captain Halſtead, a little before he went in his Ship to fetch over the Duke of Ormond, waited upon the Biſhop, and ſtay'd with him an Hour. This Thing indeed directly proves nothing; but all things conſidered, is very ſuſpicious: and the more ſo, becauſe the Biſhop has given no Account, either of his Acquaintance with him in general, or of the particular Reaſon of that Viſit, at a time that leaves ſo much ground to ſuſpect the worſt.

The next Particular that deſerves your Lordſhips Conſideration, is, the Letter to Dubois, found among the Biſhop's Papers when he was taken up, and found now to be ſealed with the ſame Seal with that Letter taken upon the Biſhop's Servant, which he confeſſeth to be his own Hand-writing. It is not indeed proved, that the Letter to Dubois is the Hand-writing of the Biſhop: but any body that reads it, will eaſily be perſuaded, that it is not the natural and ordinary Way of Writing of any Perſon, but a diſguiſed Hand like a Print; except only ſome few Letters which eſcaped the Care of the Writer, and are very like thoſe of the Biſhop. But after a long Examination, which has taken up a great deal of your Lordſhips Time, it appears plainly, that the Seals are the ſame, and that the one could not be counterfeited from the other; becauſe, the firſt Letter was originally taken with the Seal broken, and was in the Poſſeſſion of the Houſe of Commons when the ſecond Letter was taken upon the Biſhop's Servant. It appears plainly by this Letter to Dubois, that the Perſon who wrote it was in a ſecret and dangerous Correſpondence; that he was an Acquaintaince of Mr. Johnſon, or Kelly; that he received Letters by his Hand, and wrote an Anſwer in his Hand. How far all theſe Circumſtances, taken together, prove the Biſhop to be the Author of this Letter, I muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips Judgment: for my part, I think they do; eſpecially conſidering, that the Biſhop has given no Account of it, which he ought to do by Law, of a Letter of this Nature, plainly proved upon Oath to have been in his Poſſeſſion.

I now beg leave to proceed to that which is the principal Charge againſt the Biſhop, the dictating to Mr. Kelly the Three Letters of the 20th of April; ſign'd, one, by the Name of Jones; another by the Name of Illington; the third by the Figures 1378; which the Decypherers explain by the Letter R. The firſt, directed to Mr. Chivers, or Dillon; the ſecond to Mr. Muſgrave, or Lord Marr; the third, to Mr. Jackſon, or the Pretender.

It may be proper, before I take notice of the Proofs which ſhew that the Biſhop did really dictate theſe Letters, to take notice of an Objection with reſpect to the Time: The Letters are dated the 20th of April, and the Biſhop has produced five or ſix of his Servants, who ſwear, that about that Time he was ſo very ill, that he could not write himſelf; and that he did not ſee any Perſon to whom he could dictate theſe Letters. Now in anſwer to this, it may be replied: That it does not appear, that all the Servants which the Biſhop then had, were produced before your Lordſhips; and you cannot but be ſenſible, that treaſonable Practices are commonly carried on in a very ſecret Way: and it appears, that the Biſhop's Correſpondence with Kelly has been ſo carried on; for tho there is plain Evidence, that they were frequently together, and that they were acquainted is confeſs'd, both by the Biſhop and Kelly; yet, ſcarce any one of the Servants produc'd, would confeſs, that ever they had ſeen Kelly, or ſo much as ever heard of the Name of Johnſon, which was the Name by which he went. In the next place, none of theſe Witneſſes prove, that the Biſhop was ſo bad that he could ſee no Company, till about the 16th or 17th of April; and it's very probable, that the Letters muſt have been dictated ſo long, if not longer, before the 20th on which they are dated; becauſe Kelly was to tranſcribe and put 'em into Cypher, which is a Work of Time and Care; and perhaps after all, they might be deſignedly poſt-dated, that the Biſhop finding himſelf going into a great Fit of the Gout, might have all that to plead which your Lordſhips have heard, if the Matter ſhould ever be called in queſtion.

Upon all theſe Conſiderations, I cannot but think it very clear, that the Biſhop might have dictated theſe Letters: We are now therefore to examine whether he did or no.

The firſt Thing that brought any Light into this Matter, was the ſmall Accident of a Dog being ſent from France, which, by the intercepted Letters appeared to be ſent to one that went by the Names of Jones and Illington. When Mrs. Barnes was examined before the Council, upon Kelly's being taken up, it appears plainly ſhe was upon the Reſerve, and would confeſs nothing that ſhe thought might tend any way to hurt Kelly: but being aſk'd about this little Dog, who it was for, ſhe readily anſwered, that Kelly had told her it was for the Biſhop of Rocheſter; which ſhe has ſince confirm'd by Oath at the Bar of this Houſe. This little Accident, not ſuſpected at the time of the Diſcovery to be of any Consequence, has given Occasion since, to look into so many Circumstances, as plainly bring the matter home to the Bishop. And indeed, if all the Particulars in the intercepted Letters be compared, with those things that are in Proof with respect to the Bishop, I believe your Lordships will be of Opinion, that they cannot all belong to any one Person in the World besides himself. In the first place, since it's proved that Kelly wrote these Letters, the Person who dictated 'em must have been an Acquaintance of Kelly's; it is confess'd on all hands that the Bishop was so. In the next place, it is implyed in one of the intercepted Letters, that the Person that went by the Name of Jones and Illington, was a Clergyman; so far still agrees to the Bishop. Again further: this Person is mention'd in all the intercepted Letters, as a Person of great Consequence and Credit, upon whose advice the Party very much depend: And indeed the very Air and Manner of writing the three Letters, plainly shew, that the Person who wrote 'em, thought himself so; this also agrees with all the other Discoveries about the Bishop. Were there no other Particulars but these, it will be hard to imagine that they could well belong to any other Person. But if we consider further, that this Jones or Illington came to Town such a Day of the Month, went out of Town such another Day of the Month, came back again to Town such another Day, was himself sick at such a time, that his Wife was sick at such another time, and that she died at such a time; all which are in Evidence with respect to the Bishop: if we do, I say, consider all these Circumstances together, it will plainly appear, that they can belong to no other Man in the World but the Bishop.

After this, I humbly apprehend nothing need be said; however I beg leave just to mention something relating to the Letter that was taken upon the Bishop's Servant; by the whole Air of which Letter, it looks as coming from a Person who did not esteem himself to be innocent, but who thought, that nothing could be Legally prov'd against him: and therefore there is not one Word of his Innocence in it, which is the first Thought that must naturally have come into the Head of any one that really was so. He writes wholly with the Air of a Man that had been used to Intrigues; speaks of the Concern that his Friends should have for him and the Cause; discourses largely about the Kind of Evidence that was against him; takes notice in particular what cannot affect him: If (says he) the Narrative * relates chiefly to Neynoe's, Sample's, and Layer's Affairs, so far it cannot affect me; for I never heard of the Names of either of the Three, till after this Plot broke out. It is plain by these Words, that he did not then know what was in the Narrative against him; but he is very sure, that neither Neynoe nor Sample, nor Layer could affect him. Could an innocent Man have thus distinguished, and could not they have affected him as much as any Body else, if he really was innocent? Nothing can affect such a Person but Forgery, and that may come from any Quarter: but in the whole Letter he does not express the least Suspicion of Forgery; and yet, as I said before, this is the first thought that must naturally have come into the Head of an innocent Person, because nothing but Forgery could do him any harm. I would only just beg leave to hint at this one thing more; That as he says, that these three Persons could not affect him, because he never knew 'em; so accordingly they have not affected him, or said any thing of their own Knowledge about him; which is one good Evidence, that what is said against him is not forged but real.

* i.e. Report.

I am afraid that I have troubled your Lordships too long, tho with a very imperfect Representation of the Justice of this Bill; and therefore shall be shorter upon the next Head, which is the Expediency or Prudence of it.

Had there been what we call Legal Evidence against the Party concerned, your Lordships, I take for granted, would not easily have gone to this extraordinary Method of Proceeding: for tho it cannot be doubted but that the Parliament have this Power, whenever they think proper to make use of it; yet, I do agree with other noble Lords, that it is a Power not fit to be used, but where and when the Publick Good requires we should use it, which I humbly conceive is the Case at present. A most dangerous Plot against the Government has been discover'd: a great number of Letters and Papers relating to it have been laid before the two Houses of Parliament: these have been printed and published by Order of both Houses: The Eyes, not only of our own Country, but of all Europe, are upon us, to see what we will do. Tho the Evidence of a Plot in general, be as clear as the Light; and the Evidence against several particular Persons very plain; yet, as our Laws are, it is not what we call Legal Evidence: The Parties concern'd will make no Confession, and we have not the Methods used in all other Countries, to extort Confession from them. What then? Shall we see our King and Country in Danger, and do nothing for them? Shall Conspirators go on with total Impunity, only because they are obstinate, and artificially screen themselves behind the Law? I doubt, my Lords, that if this prove the Case, we shall appear ridiculous in the Eyes of all the World: That our Friends and Enemies both at Home and Abroad will think, that we have no Zeal for the Preservation of our King and Government; and if once they do think so, your Lordships cannot but be all sensible, how this must encourage our Enemies and discourage our Friends, and bring us into that contemptible State, in which no Government was ever long supported.

But a noble Lord has been pleased to observe, that the best way to serve the Government, is to do Popular things, and by that to procure the Love of the People. I perfectly agree in this with the noble Lord, and cannot but be humbly of Opinion, that this Government has done so, as far as it has been able: Our Religion has been preserv'd; Justice has been equally administred to all sorts of People; none of our Rights or Liberties have been invaded; we have liv'd at Peace at home, while many other Countries have suffer'd all the Miseries of War: these are, or I am sure should be esteem'd, Popular things; and if some other things, which might have not been for the Good of the People, have not been done, it has been the Fault of those that complain most, and not of the Government. And if there be Discontents now in the Kingdom, it's plain that the Foundation of 'em was laid long ago, by the Enemies to our preſent Happy Settlement: For I am perſuaded, that the Diſcontents were higher and greater within four Months after the King came to England, and ſhewed themſelves much more, in a number of Rebellious Riots and Tumults, than any thing that appears at preſent; and yet nothing then could be objected to the Government, but that ſome Perſons were not preferred, who both before and ſince have made it too plain that they were not fit to be truſted.

But as it is the Duty of thoſe in Power, to do all the Popular things they can; ſo I muſt beg leave to obſerve, that it is the Duty of all the Subjects (and the greater they are the more it is their Duty) to put the beſt Interpretation upon the Actions of the Government, that things will bear; not to miſrepreſent; not to put falſe Colours upon things; and much more not to invent Lyes and Slanders, and diſperſe 'em up and down the Kingdom, in order to alienate the Affections of the People: Theſe things have been done, and done with great Care and Diligence, and by ſome too, who would take it very ill to be called Jacobites. Theſe are the chief Cauſes of the Diſaffection among us, and indeed of all the real Grievances we labour under. Is the King forc'd to put the Nation to Charges, to keep up a greater Number of Forces than otherwiſe would be needful? It is intirely owing to this Cauſe. Are our Debts not paid? Is our Credit not ſo good as we would be glad to have it? Let this artificial Raiſing of Diſcontents once ceaſe, and theſe things will quickly mend of themſelves. Indeed, were this a time for it, I think it might plainly be proved, that the Debts we labour under had never been contracted, but for this abſurd diſcontented Humour: Nay, it is to this, that we intirely owe the Danger we are in from this very Plot; for it's plain from all the Intelligence we have about it, that it was carried on upon the Confidence, that all diſcontented Perſons were Jacobites: and tho the Conſpirators did in this greately deceive themſelves: yet it's certain that they built their Hopes upon this Foundation.

But it's further ſaid by the ſame noble Lord, that this extraordinary way of Proceedings will not procure Friends to the King; but will rather anger and provoke, and ſo hurt his Intereſt inſtead of helping it.

To this I anſwer, that I do indeed ſuſpect, that many People will be angry; as I hear that the Jacobites thro' the Kingdom are: A plain Evidence this, that they do not think that the Friends of King George are worrying one another; for they would not be angry at that. Thoſe that moſt deſire to deſtroy our Liberties, are become, upon this Occaſion, the great Patrons of Liberty; as indeed they have been in a great meaſure ever ſince the Revolution, when any thing has been propoſed for the Support of the Government. No ſooner were their Schemes of Arbitrary Power in the Time of King James overturn'd, and a new Government ſettled which they did not like; but they, in order to deſtroy it, ſet themſelves againſt every thing that was neceſſary for it's Defenſe, under the Colour of Liberty; that is, they deſired to have their own Hands as looſe as poſſible, to hurt it; and the Hands of the Government as much tied up as poſſible, that it ſhould not be able, either to hurt them, or defend itſelf. Thus at preſent, they clamour againſt the Additional Forces, tho eſtabliſh'd by Parliament; and againſt all Methods, either to diſcover or puniſh the Conſpiracy. And they Judge right in this for their Cauſe; becauſe, if they could have carried theſe Points to their mind, they might then be more free in carrying on their Plots, and with leſs Danger put them in Execution. For theſe Reaſons I take it for granted, that all theſe People will be angry; but I cannot but humbly be of Opinion, that it is much better they ſhould be angry with us for defending ourſelves, than that they ſhould firſt ſneer at us, as Fools for neglecting our Defenſe; and then be able more eaſily to undo us.

As to others, that poſſibly may be diſpleaſ'd at what we are now doing, I would hope, that a little Time and conſideration will ſet 'em right, and convince them, that it is not only juſt, but (all things conſidered) neceſſary to be done; becauſe, if the Parliament do, upon this occaſion, ſhew their Zeal in the Defenſe of the Government, it will animate and give Courage to the Friends of it both at home and abroad. Foreign Powers will be apt to court the Friendſhip of a Prince, at the Head of a mighty Kingdom; if they ſee, that he and his Poſterity are like to continue there: All the Affairs of the Kingdom, which reſpect them, will be manag'd with more Eaſe, with more Honour, and with leſs Expence; and they will be inclin'd, not to foment but to diſcover Plots, if they came to their Knowledge. But on the contrary, if we give 'em any Reaſon to ſuſpect, that we look another way, they will quickly do ſo too, and ſtrive which ſhall be forwardeſt to help the Pretender to involve us in Blood and Ruin. And as to the Subjects at home, I would only obſerve, that all Mankind are apt to ſhew moſt Zeal for a Government, when they think it ſafe, and like to ſtand, and be able to protect them: But to ſuſpect the contrary is a moſt dangerous Temptation to the Fidelity of Subjects, as has been ſeen by the Experience of all Ages. And therefore I hope, that your Lordſhips will, by your Unanimity and Zeal in this matter effectually convince the World, that the Danger does and ſhall lie in oppoſing, and not in defending the preſent Government.

I hope that what I have now been ſaying, has convinc'd your Lordſhips, both of the Juſtice and Prudence of this Bill; give me leave to obſerve, that your Moderation has been very great too, both in giving ſo full and fair a Hearing, and in making the Penalties ſo much leſs than the Crimes deſerve.

It is now above a Year ſince the Plot was firſt diſcovered; a Plot of a moſt deſperate Nature, to ſeize the Perſons of the King and Prince, and to bring in a Popiſh Pretender upon us. The Execution of which, was to be begun by ſeizing the Tower, and attacking the City of London on all ſides; and was thence to ſpread itſelf into all parts of the Kingdom. Lord! what confuſion; what Murders; what Plundering; what burnings muſt this have caus'd? Whatever had been the Iſſue, the very Attempt muſt probably have occaſion'd the Sacking and Burning of this great City: The utter Loſs at once of all publick Credit: the Murder of Infinite Numbers of People: The Aſtoniſhment, and Amazement, and Undoing

Undoing of almost all, but of those vile Wretches who would have had the Plundering of all sides. If it had gone on, how many of the Noble Lords that I now see, would have been before this in their Graves? But I forbear going any further in this Tragical Representation, and desire only to observe, That tho it has been discovered above a Year, how very little of it we yet know: and I do appeal to your Lordships Consideration, who know the State of the World very well, whether there be any Country in it, either Bond or Free, which, had they discover'd but a fifth part of what we know of a Plot of this nature, would not in a Week's time have found means to get to the Bottom of it. However, my Lords, I still commend your Moderation; and do hope, that we shall never find Reason to repent of it, and that this little which is now doing, will be a Warning to Conspirators, not to provoke further the Patience of an injured Nation.

I doubt not but upon this and all other Occasions, your Lordships will be ready to stand by a wise, and a good, and a merciful Prince; and that you will, according to your Oaths, defend him, against all Treasons, and Traitorous Conspiracies whatsoever.

And in the last place, give me leave as a Christian and a Protestant Bishop to hope, you will do your best, that a Popish Pretender may never be set at the Head of this Protestant Church: One, who must think himself bound in Conscience to destroy it; and instead of that pure Religion which we now enjoy, bring in horrible Superstition and Idolatry, Nonsense and Tyranny; attended with all the sad Calamities, which Popish Princes always have brought, and always must bring upon Protestant Countries.

After whom the Duke of Wharton spake as follows.

SOME Words which have fallen from the Reverend Prelate, who spoke last, have made it, in some measure, necessary for me to trouble your Lordships with the Reasons that induced me to differ with him in Opinion, and to give my Negative to the Bill now depending before us.

If I don't misunderstand his Lordship (and if I should mistake his Meaning, I hope he will set me right) he was pleased to say, That Persons without Doors would be apt to cast different Reflections on the particular Behaviour of every Lord this Day: That those who were for the passing of this Bill, would be accused of Malice and Partiality; and those who were of contrary Sentiments, would be branded with Disaffection to the present Happy Establishment.

For my Part, I am far from thinking, that Considerations of this Nature will have the least Weight with any of your Lordships; and am very certain, that every one, who gives his Vote on this important Occasion, has attended, with the greatest Care, to the Evidence that has been given at your Bar, which is the Foundation of this Day's Debate.

The Proofs that have been brought to support the Charge, and the Bishop's Defense, are to be thorowly considered; and when your Lordships proceed according to the Rules of Justice, you will not fear, nor value, any Consequences which may attend the discharging of your Duty.

So far I will venture to affirm, That the best Way to shew our Zeal to his Majesty, and the present Government, is, To act in all Cases, both in our Judicial and Legislative Capacities, with that Honour and Impartiality, as ought to flourish in this great Council of the Nation.

I could have wished the Noble Lords who have given their Reasons for the passing this extraordinary Law, would have entred into the particular Circumstances of this Case, and considered it singly on its own Merits: But instead of speaking on that Head, I cannot but take Notice, That they have wandered from that (which ought to have been their only Consideration) into Learned Discourses on Bills of this Nature in general.

I shall not trouble this House with any Arguments against Attainders. Many Lords, of greater Weight and Abilities than myself, have already spoke fully to this Point in the preceding Debates.

I shall only so far agree with the Reverend Prelate, who spoke before me, That it is proper, that such a Power of punishing by Bill, should be vested in the Legislature, to be exercised on extraordinary Emergencies: But then I must add, If ever that Power is abused: if ever it is employed to destroy innocent Persons, it is evident, That the Lives, Liberties, and Fortunes of every Subject in Britain are in the utmost Danger, and liable to be sacrificed to the Fury of a Party.

It has been admitted, That every Bill of Pains and Penalties is to stand upon its own Bottom; and that the passing of one Act of this Nature, is not to be brought as a Precedent for the supporting of another, unless there be convincing Evidence to inforce each Case. And therefore the proper Consideration now before us, is, Whether the Evidence offer'd against the Unfortunate Prelate, is sufficient to induce your Lordships to believe him Guilty of the heavy Crimes of which he stands accused?

My Lords, I shall take the Liberty of considering the whole Proofs that have been brought on this Occasion, both by way of Charge, Defense, Reply, and Rejoinder; and tho I own myself very unequal to this Task, yet, since no other Lord, who could do it much better, has undertaken it, I think it my Duty as a Peer, and as an Englishman, to lay it before your Lordships in the best Manner I am able.

The Method I shall observe for the more clear Stating of the Case, shall be to lay every Particular Branch of Evidence before you, and to distinguish the several Parts of the Accusation, and consider them separately, to avoid Confusion, and to be the more exact in what I have to offer.

I hope, I shall have your Lordships Indulgence for taking up so much of your Time as this will require: But I assure you, I shall endeavour to be as brief as the Nature of the Thing will admit, and will intrude on your Patience as little as possible.

I must also desire your Lordships will pardon me, if I repeat several Arguments that have been used by the Counsel at the Bar; and if I even mention some Things which fell from me in the Debate on Mr. Kelly's Bill, whose Case is very much interwoven with the present; so that it is almost impossible to avoid it.

Before I go any further, I cannot but ſay, That were theſe Crimes plainly proved againſt the Biſhop of Rocheſter, his Sacred Function and Station in the Church would be Aggravations of his Guilt: But, as this is certain on the one hand, ſo on the other, your Lordſhips will require very clear Demonſtration, before you can think it poſſible for a Biſhop of the Proteſtant Church (who has ſignalized himſelf in Defenſe of the Reformation, and the only one of that Bench where he had lately the Honour of ſitting, that ever wrote in favour of Martin Luther) to ingage in a Conſpiracy for introducing Popery and Arbitrary Power amongſt us.

My Lords, the Counſel for the Bill opened the Charge with acquainting the Houſe, That it was only to be ſupported by producing of decyphered Letters, full of fictitious Names and Cant Words: They were ſo very fair as to confeſs, they had not one living Witneſs that could charge the Biſhop with any thing, nor even ſo much as a Letter under his own Hand; therefore, on the firſt View, this Manner of condemning, on ſuch kind of Evidence, ought to require our utmoſt Caution, leſt we ſhould eſtabliſh a Method, which our Enemies may hereafter take to deſtroy the greateſt and moſt innocent Subject in the Kingdom.

Mr. Wearg cited two Caſes, which he would willingly have us receive as Precedents, to juſtify the admitting of circumſtantial Evidence: The one was, the Caſe of Aſhton, who was condemned on Circumſtances only. But, my Lords, this was before the Treaſon-Act was paſſed, which requires Two Poſitive Witneſſes; and nothing could induce the Legiſlature to paſs that Law, but a thorough Conviction of the Danger that might attend the admitting of any Proofs which were not poſitive or certain.

The ſecond Caſe he cited, was that of Harriſon for the Murder of Dr. Clench; and the Learned Gentleman tells you, that it was the pulling out of a Handkerchief that led to the Diſcovery of that Murder. It is very certain, Circumſtances may lead to the Diſcovery of Evidence; but muſt be well ſupported before they can be converted into convincing Proofs.

The firſt Piece of Evidence that was offered at the Bar, was the Extracts of Letters from abroad, which this Houſe ſeems, in ſome meaſure, to have declared to be immaterial, when they did not ſo much as deſire to ſee Copies of the whole Letters, nor the Originals; and even admitted one to be read which was Anonymous. But it will not be improper to obſerve, that thro' this whole Correſpondence the Biſhop of Rocheſter is not named. And therefore I cannot ſee why they took up our Time with reading Papers quite foreign from this Caſe; eſpecially ſince every Body allows there has been a Conſpiracy, which is the only Fact to be gathered from this Correſpondence.

The next Point which was attempted to be proved, was, That Captain Halſtead went to fetch the late Duke of Ormond, and was at the Deanery with the Biſhop before he imbark'd. There are alſo Two Letters found in the Biſhop's Cloſe-Stool, from this Gentleman to his Lordſhip, which were read, and are only Appointments for Viſits, but mention nothing of this Deſign; and, I think, there was a Coachman, that proved Halſtead was an Hour with him ſome Days before he left London.

This, my Lords, was opened as a Matter of great Importance: But your Lordſhips muſt remember, that the ſuppoſed Deſign of Halſtead's bringing the late Duke of Ormond into England, is only proved by Hearſay. One of the Crew belonging to the Ship in which he went, has depoſed, That it was the Common Report at Bilboa, that Halſtead came there on that Errand.

How far Common Fame is to prevail, I ſubmit: But if this Hearſay were true, is every Perſon who was an Hour with this Gentleman before his Departure, ſuppoſed to be privy to this Project? And what a ſtrain'd Conſtruction is it to inſinuate, the Biſhop of Rocheſter knew of his Intention, becauſe he received a Viſit from Halſtead, who was a Tenant under his Biſhoprick? And this is the more extraordinary, ſince it has not been ſo much as pretended that any Correſpondence has paſſed between the Reverend Prelate and the late Duke.

They then produced Letters directed to one Dumvill, which were decyphered. And Mr. Willes was examined to prove, that they were rightly and juſtly explained.

My Lords, It very well deſerves your Lordſhips Conſideration, how far this kind of Evidence is to be admitted: It has appeared to your Lordſhips by the Oath of Mr. Willes himſelf, that it is an Art which depends upon Conjecture; for this Gentleman has confeſſed, that every Man is liable to a Miſtake in this, as well as in other Sciences. He tells you, that he and his Brother Decypherer varied in One or Two Inſtances: He allows, that the Chaſms, which they were forc'd to leave in thoſe Letters, might alter the Senſe of them. And, therefore I cannot but think, that an Accuſation grounded on ſuch Proofs, is uncertain and precarious.

The Perſon who is the Decypherer is not to be confuted, and what he ſays muſt be taken for granted, becauſe the Key cannot be produced with Safety to the Publick; and, conſequently (if his Conjectures be admitted to be Evidence) our Lives and Fortunes muſt depend on the Skill and Honeſty of Decypherers, who may with Safety impoſe on the Legiſlature, when there are not Means of contradicting them for want of ſeeing their Key.

My Lords, in the Caſe of Coleman, the Key was printed, as has been well obſerved by the Counſel at the Bar; and I am very much ſurprized, that Gentlemen of ſuch Abilities and Integrity, as the Members of the Secret Committee (who, in another Place, were ſo exact as to print the French Originals with the tranſlated Letters, that the World might ſee how juſt and candid the Proſecutors of the Plot were) did not, for the Satisfaction of the Publick, permit us to ſee the Key in Print, on the Truth of which depends ſuch a Chain of Conſequences.

I own myſelf intirely ignorant of this Art: But, as I ſhould be very far from condemning a Man on my own Conjecture, I ſhould much leſs do it on the Conjectures of others.

The greateſt Certainty Humane Reaſon knows, is, a Mathematical Demonſtration; and were I brought to your Lordſhips Bar, to be try'd upon a Propoſition of Sir Iſaac Newton's, which he upon Oath ſhould ſwear to be true, I would appeal to your Lordſhips, whether I ſhould not be unjuſtly unjustly condemned, unless he produced his Demonstration, that I might have the Liberty of enquiring into the Truth of it, from Men of equal Skill?

I cannot think any Man will allow Evidence of this Nature to be good: But if in this Case relating to the decyphered Letters to Dumvill, your Lordships should admit it, there is nothing mentioned in them that can affect the Bishop, neither is he at all nam'd in them, but they are only brought to prove the Conspiracy in general.

The Examinations of Mr. Neynoe are the next Points that are laid before your Lordships: And, indeed, I must do the Gentlemen at the Bar the Justice of saying, That they forbore mentioning any thing of them, when they open'd the Charge.

They were so sensible that such Proofs could not have the least Weight to affect the Bishop, that tho in the Case of Mr. Kelly they were produced against him, as very material to support that Bill, yet they did not think proper to name them against the Bishop; which, I am thorowly persuaded, is owing to what appeared at your Bar by the Examination of Mr. Bingley, and the universal Opinion which every Person seemed to have of the Villany of Mr. Neynoe's Transactions.

My Lords, These Examinations were never signed by the Person, neither was he ever examin'd to them upon Oath: So that were they of Consequence, and he a Person of Credit, they could not be admitted to affect any Person whatsoever, in any Court of Justice or Equity. Idon't mean, That they could not be read according to the strict Rules of Westminster-Hall; which is admitted on all Sides they could not: but I dare affirm, that no Credit can be given to 'em on any Account whatsoever.

The Person was closely confin'd, and consequently in the Hands of the Government; so that he was at that Time under the greatest Apprehensions, which might, in some measure, prevent him from speaking Truth, with that Sincerity and Candour of which every Person ought to be Master, when he is examin'd on Matters of such nice Nature.

Tho these Papers were intirely given up by the Counsel for the Bill, yet the Extract of them was read, and they are the visible Foundation of this Charge; and if they are insignificant, the whole Accusation falls to the Ground: For the whole Proof of the Bishop's Dictating to Mr. Kelly, depends on Mr. Neynoe's bare Affirmation.

The whole of what Neynoe says, or is supposed to say, is, That Mr. Kelly told him he wrote the Bishop's Letters for him: Mr. Kelly denies it, and Mr. Neynoe was so conscious that he had been guilty of many Crimes, that he endeavour'd to withdraw from Justice, and the Providence of God, it is said, intercepted him.

My Lords, If you will consider the Improbabilities of this Evidence, altho it were upon Oath, and signed by him, it cannot be supported. He tells you, That he was intrusted to draw up Memorials to the Regent: yet none of those have been produced: and yet it is apparent the Copies of them might, with Ease, have been obtained, if he had been as thorowly pressed to deliver them, as he was to declare he wrote them.

These Memorials, he says, were wrote by the Order of Mr. Henry Watson, whom he takes to be the late Earl Marishall: And I am certain your Lordships did not think that Fact material, when you came to a Resolution, That the Bishop of Rochester should not be at Liberty to ask, if Enquiry was made of the said Neynoe, or if he gave any Satisfaction to the Lords of the Council, touching that important Fact of Watson's, whom he took to be Earl Marishall, lying with him several Nights.

It was very well observed by a Learned Gentleman at the Bar, That no body can believe the late Earl Marishal would have reposed so great a Confidence in a Person, who was intirely a Stranger to him, and of such little Note; and the Jacobite Party must be in a low Condition, when they make use of such a Creature to write Papers of that Importance.

There is so much Improbability in this and other Points, and so much Contradiction in several Parts of his Examinations, that they appear to me, and must to all reasonable Men, as the Dictates of Fear, and not agreeable to Truth.

He mentions, That the Reverend Prelate (for such I still may call him) had some Favours offer'd him by the Court; but that cannot be true, and must be added to the rest of these Absurdities.

But, my Lords, what in my Opinion clears up all these Matters, and makes it impossible for me to give the least Credit to this, or any other Part of the Charge, are, The several Testimonies of Bingley, Skeene, and Stewart.

I must observe to your Lordships, That the two first Persons, Bingley, and Skeene, are actually now in separate Custodies; and consequently could have no Communication one with another. The Third is at Liberty; but his Testimony is so thorowly supported by Mr. Gordon and Mr. Kynaston, that no Doubt can arise as to the Veracity of it.

These Gentlemen, who are in the Hands of the Government, are under Hopes and Fears; and therefore, it is certain, when they speak a Language, which, perhaps, may be disagreeable to those on whom they at present chiefly depend, it must be the Spirit of Truth that prevails.

Mr. Bingley was before us in the Case of Kelly, and was also examin'd at the Bar of the House of Commons, tho not upon Oath; and tho he has been more severely treated, as he told your Lordships, and more strictly confined since his first Examination, yet he has persisted in his Story: And tho he was so long at your Bar, and so many Questions put to him, yet he never varied in any one Circumstance, but appeared consistent thro' the whole Course of his Behaviour.

I shall not detain your Lordships with recapitulating his whole Evidence, for I did it very fully on a former Occasion. But your Lordships will remember, he told you, Neynoe abounded in Money, which Neynoe said (after he was apprehended at Deal) an Honourable Person (and on this Occasion, I hope, I may name him) Mr. Walpole gave him: and more particularly, he mentions 50 l. which Neynoe said he received the Night before he went to France.

Bingley told your Lordships, That Neynoe had assured him, he used to meet this Honourable Person in the Stable-Yard at Chelsea: And, my Lords, the Errand on which he was going to France, was,

To

To diſcover ſome Secrets relating to Cyphers, which he would have ingaged Bingley to have done for him; and particularly, to get them, if poſſible, out of Mr. Kelly; Which, he ſaid, could he obtain, would be of great Advantage to him.

That Neynoe had declared to him, He would be even with Mr. Kelly, before he was aware of it, or Words to that Effect: and that Mr. Kelly always ſeem'd averſe to any Acquaintance with Mr. Neynoe, of whom he entertained a mean Opinion.

That Neynoe's Father refuſed him Money, which makes it highly probable that his Poverty was the Occaſion of his Villany: and that when he was taken at Deal, he had declared to him, Mr. Walpole expected to find the Plot about him; and ſince Mr. Walpole could not, he muſt make one for him.

Neynoe told Bingley, That this Honourable Perſon had vowed Deſtruction to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, by ſaying, He would pull down the Pride of this Haughty Prelate; which is ſufficient to convince your Lordſhips how little Regard ought to be had to the Hearſay Evidence of ſo falſe a Wretch.

Mr. Bingley ſays, That Part of this Account he had given to the Lords of the Council: and I could have wiſhed, that his Examination (as well as ſome others to the ſame purpoſe, which were taken about the ſame time) had been laid before the Parliament.

Mr. Skeene, who is alſo in Cuſtody, has depoſed, That he lay in the ſame Houſe with Neynoe, and had ſome Converſations with him.

That Neynoe had told him, What he had ſaid of the Biſhop of Rocheſter was intirely falſe. And,

That Mr. Walpole had offer'd him a conſiderable Annuity to turn Evidence; and had given him Inſtructions before he was called in to the Lords, what Queſtions would be asked him, and what Anſwers he ſhould make, and threaten'd him with Newgate if he would not comply.

Skeene ſays further, That Neynoe ſwore (and I hope the Reverend Bench will in ſuch a Caſe, permit me to repeat the Words) by God, there were two Plots; One of Mr. Walpole's, againſt the proteſting Lords, and one of his, to bite Mr. Walpole of Money: And this ſeems to be the only Time that ever Mr. Neynoe averr'd any thing upon Oath.

To convince the World, what a Creature this Neynoe was, he tells Skeene further, That once at Lord Townſhend's Office, he had a great Inclination to have ſtabb'd the Chancellor of the Exchequer. He tells you, That Neynoe had wrote a Paper to declare, That all he had ſaid of Lord Orrery was falſe.

My Lords, The next witneſs was Mr. Stewart, who was unfortunately in Cuſtody when Neynoe was brought to Town from Deal.

Stewart ſays, That he ſlept the ſecond Night with Neynoe: That Neynoe had told him what he had ſaid of the Biſhop, was falſe; and that Mr. Walpole had offered him a great Sum of Money, if he would ſwear to what he ſaid, and turn Evidence, which he declared he could not do.

That Mr. Walpole had taken him into another Room before he was examined, and told him what Queſtions he would probably be asked, and what Anſwers he ſhould give.

He ſays, That Neynoe told him alſo, That he had like to have kill'd Mr. Walpole, and ſo put an End to the Plot: and that Mr. Walpole had given him a Paper of Directions, which he was to anſwer, in order to be a Witneſs againſt the Proteſting Lords.

As a Confirmation of his Teſtimony, Stewart ſays, He told this to Mr. Gordon before Mr. Neynoe was drowned, and to Mr. Kynaſton before the Meeting of the Parliament.

Mr. Gordon confirms this Part of his Evidence, and aſſures your Lordſhips, that he had heard it from Stewart before the Death of Neynoe. And Mr. Kynaſton, a Gentleman of an undoubted Character, lately a Member of Parliament for Shrewſbury, has aſſured your Lordſhips, That he was acquainted with Stewart's Account of Neynoe before the Meeting of the Parliament: and adds this Circumſtance, That when in the Appendix he ſaw thoſe ſix Queſtions printed, he ſhew'd them to Stewart, who ſeem'd rejoyced, and ſaid, You ſee, Sir, what I told you is true.

Such concurring Teſtimonies from Perſons kept ſo ſeparate, and who are ſpeaking againſt their own private Intereſt, muſt have the greateſt Weight, and muſt at leaſt prevent any rational and impartial Perſon from giving the leaſt Credit to the bare Hearſay of this Philip Neynoe.

If any doubt could remain, as to the Validity of this Teſtimony, it is ſufficiently confirm'd by the Perſons brought to diſprove it.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer himſelf does not pretend to deny that Neynoe told theſe Things, but only adds other Circumſtances to convince you of Neynoe's Villany, and aſſures you, That at the Time he was receiving Favours from him, he was thorowly convinc'd he intended to cheat him; which was the Occaſion of his being apprehended.

He own'd the Tranſactions between them before Neynoe went to France, and particularly the Money mention'd by Bingley; which are Proofs that Neynoe muſt have diſcloſed theſe Secrets ſince they could not come from Mr. Walpole, and He and Neynoe only were privy to it.

Mr. Walpole has ſhewn your Lordſhips the foul Draught of the Queſtions mention'd by Stewart; and when he denies that Part of Neynoe's Declaration relating to the Inſtructions given him before the Examinations, he owns, he was twice alone with him; once the firſt Night of his being brought to Town, and the ſecond time, when he gave him the Paper of Directions, which might be Foundation enough for Neynoe to frame ſo notorious a Falſhood.

The Witneſſes brought by the Counſel for the Bill, to the Character of Mr. Bingley, ſeem rather to confirm it than otherwiſe; and all agree, they never heard any thing againſt his Morality.—— They indeed have ſaid, he bore the Character of a Jacobite; and ſuffered for having diſperſed a Libel: But Mr. Baron Gilbert, who was his Judge when that Puniſhment was inflicted on him, has told your Lordſhips, That his private Life was not vilified at his Trial, and that neither Perjury or Forgery was ever laid to his Door.

Tho the Puniſhment he ſuffered was the Pillory, yet it is the Crime, and not the Puniſhment, that makes the Ignominy; and for this I can appeal to the Learned Judges.

In order to deſtroy the Evidence of Mr. Skeene, they produced one Pancier, who tells you, That Skeene had revealed many Secrets to him relating to the Plot; and particularly of a Military Cheſt, which which was collected to carry on these supposed Designs, and support the Jacobites.—But I presume every body who heard the two Persons at the Bar, could not but remark the Steddiness with which Mr. Skeene denied these Asseverations, and the Confusion with which the other affirmed them.

Mr. Pancier seem'd to drop something which intirely destroys any Credit that could be given to him, by saying, That he had owned to Mr. Skeene, that he was a Friend to this Administration; and yet has sworn, That after such a Declaration, Skeene had still persisted in his Story, and revealed some Part of this Intelligence to him. How far this is probable, your Lodships are the best Judges.

Mr. Pancier goes further, and tells you, That Part of this Conversation happened in St. James's Park, in the Presence of one Dufour. This Dufour was in the Hands of the Government; and I can't conceive why we have never seen him or his Depositions, when it would have been so easy to have brought this corroborating Witness to Mr. Pancier's Testimony.

I can't but think, That the not producing this Man's Evidence, is a strong Circumstance to convince your Lordships he did not agree in the same Story with Mr. Pancier.

They also produced Skeene's Attainder for the Preston Rebellion: But there have been many Acts of Grace since, so that he is capable of being an Evidence; and there has nothing appeared to traduce his Character as a Man of Morals.

In order to shew your Lordships, that Neynoe could not possibly make these Confessions to Mr. Skeene and Mr. Stewart, the Counsel for the Bill maintain, That they will prove Neynoe and the Prisoners were not together after the first Night.

This, my Lords, would be very material; but I think it appears, by the Proofs brought to support this Assertion, that they frequently have conversed one with another.

The first Witness they call'd, was Mr. Crawford the Messenger, in whose House the Prisoners were in Custody; and, my Lords, I can't but say, it seems very odd, they should bring a Man to swear he had done his Duty: He has told your Lordships, That Lord Townshend had given him Orders, that Neynoe should be close confined; and if, after that, it should appear, that he had neglected such Directions, there is no question, but that he instantly, and deservedly, would have been removed out of his Imployment.

This Messenger, in this Situation, tells you, That after the first Night they never convers'd, to the best of his Knowledge: That Mr. Skeene call'd Neynoe a Rogue of an Informer; and spoke in very hard Terms of him; which I indeed think it appears the Fellow well deserv'd.

Crawford says, That Mr. Neynoe had some Paper, two Sheets of which he found missing. He likewise swears, That Mr. Stewart lay upon the Stairs; and owns, he had at that time two Servant-maids.

Mrs. Crawford, his Mother, swears, That, to the best of her Knowledge, the Prisoners were never together: That she kept the Keys of the Rooms herself, but used to send up the Maid, Hannah Wright, with the Dinner.——Your Lordships will observe, that both this Woman and her Son swear to the best of their Knowledge only, and are far from positive Witnesses.

Hannah Wright, when she was first call'd, spoke in the same Language with them, tho she afterwards recollected herself better.

When the Bishop came to rejoin, Francis Wood, Thomas Wood, and Mr. Russel severally say, That this Hannah Wright had declared to them, That she used to let the Prisoners converse together whenever she had an Opportunity, which was when Mr. Crawford and his Mother were out of the way; and that she used to stand upon the Stairs, and give Notice when any Person came, that they might retire into their several Rooms. And the other Maid, whose Name is Christian, has deposed, That Hannah gave the Key of Neynoe's Room to Stewart, and several times desired Stewart to go up to him, and that they were together an Hour or more. And when Hannah was call'd a second Time, she own'd she was turn'd away for Suspicion of having help'd Neynoe in his Escape; That she has left Skeene's Door open, who lay near Neynoe; and that there was a large Hole in Neynoe's Door, thro' which they might converse.

She said, That Neynoe gave her a Paper, which she was to convey for him; but that it was taken out of her Bosom, and burnt by one of the Prisoners.

When Mr. Stewart said, That he sat upon Neynoe's Bed the second Night, and lay in the Garret where there was a Partition, but a Communication between 'em, Hannah said, She could not be positive to that, but believes it true.

Mr. Crawford, when he was call'd to that Point, according to his usual Custom, denies it to the best of his Knowledge.

Your Lordships will now judge, whether the greatest Credit is to be given to the Belief of a Messenger and his Mother, who are swearing that they did their Duty; or to the positive Oaths of Skeene, Stewart, Gordon, Kynaston, Francis Wood, Thomas Wood, Russel and Christian, confirm'd by the Confession of Hannah Wright, when she came to be cross-examined and confronted.

This, my Lords, concludes what has appear'd at the Bar, relating to Mr. Neynoe and his Transactions; and I am pretty certain, every impartial Body must agree with me, That so far from giving the least Credit to what he says, there have appeared such Circumstances in the Transactions which are now come to Light, that must make the greatest Caution necessary, before we believe any other Part of the Charge.

Your Lordships will take notice, That Mr. Crawford confesses Mr. Neynoe had the Use of Paper, and found two Sheets missing; and Hannah Wright owns she had a Paper from him, which was burnt by one of the Prisoners. This, my Lords, undoubtedly was the Paper relating to Lord Orrery, mentioned by Skeene in his Evidence.

My Lords, I am now coming to the great and only Foundation remaining to support this Bill, viz. Neynoe's Examination: for if his Hearsay is not to be believed, which is the Proof that was offered to shew that Mr. Kelly was the Bishop's Secretary, and used to write for him; and particularly, That the Bishop dictated Three Letters, which were wrote in Kelly's Hand, and transmitted to France under Cover to Monsieur Gordon le Fils;

The

Then, as every Body muſt agree, the Biſhop ought to be acquitted; and when hereafter, this great Affair comes to be canvaſs'd by Poſterity, it will ſtand or fall as this Fact ſhall be ſtrongly made appear,

They firſt read Plunket's Cypher, and Mr. Vanneske atteſts it to be his Hand-writing.

When this Piece of Evidence was offer'd, People were at a loſs to know what they intended to make of it, and little thought, that they ſhould be drove to make uſe of Jackſon, ſtanding for the Pretender in that Cypher, to ſhew that the Letter directed to Jackſon (one of the three before-mention'd, affirm'd to be dictated by the Biſhop of Rocheſter to Mr. Kelly) was to the Pretender. I ſhall take notice of this extraordinary Proceeding when I come to conſider thoſe Letters: I ſhall only ſay now, That were Mr. Plunket's Correſpondence to be regarded, the Plot is of a very deep Nature; for he has had the Impudence to inſinuate the moſt ridiculous Aſperſions againſt the greateſt Men amongſt us.

Three of his Letters were read out of Cypher, in Two of which Mr. Johnſon is named, that is Mr. Kelly; but neither Mr. Kelly, or the Biſhop of Rocheſter are allowed Places in his Cypher, and conſequently were not in an Aſſociation with him. Johnſon is only ſpoke of by Plunket, when he is mentioning Domeſtick News, and in no other than might be in every News-Letter that went by the General Poſt.

My Lords, in order to ſhew that the Three Letters ſent under Cover to Mr. Gordon de Fils, were Mr. Kelly's Hand-writing, which they very juſtly thought was neceſſary to be made appear before they proved that the Biſhop was concerned in them; they produced a Letter of the 20th of Auguſt, which a Clerk of the Poſt-Office ſwears was ſtopt at the General Poſt-Office.

To convince us this Letter is Mr. Kelly's Writing, Hutchins the Meſſenger ſays, To the beſt of his Knowledge it is Mr. Kelly's Hand; and at the ſame time owns, he never ſaw him write till after his Commitment, and then he ſtood by him while he wrote two Letters, one to Lord Townſhend, the other to Mr. Delafaye: Thoſe Letters were produced at the Bar, and therefore every Lord in the Houſe is as good a Judge of the Similitude as the Meſſenger, who has lately been reſtored into Favour, on what Account I cannot tell.

If Mr. Kelly, during his Confinement, counterfeited and diſguiſed his Hand, then the Meſſenger's Evidence can't be of any Weight; and if he wrote as uſual, then every Perſon is equally capable of framing an Opinion of it, who ſees the Three Letters.

The next Witneſs is Malone, who ſwears, he has ſeen him direct Letters, but can't tell how long ſince he ſaw him write, nor how often.

The Perſons who contradict this Evidence are ſo poſitive, ſo clear, and ſo concurring in their Teſtimony, that no Doubt can riſe upon it.

Mr. Bingley, when he was ſhewn this Letter, ſwears it is not like his Hand-writing.

Mr. Brown, a Peruke-maker, well vers'd and acquainted with his Writing, when he was ſhewn the Letter of the 20th of Auguſt, and the Date of it hid, by the Counſel for the Bill (ſo that he could not know what Paper it was before him) ſwears, it is not his Hand-writing: When the Letter to Delafaye was produced, he declared, That was his Hand-writing: When another Paper was ſhewn, (I think it was the Marriage Articles) he ſaid, That was more like his Hand-writing than that of the 20th of Auguſt, but he did not believe it was wrote by him; and when they queſtion'd him upon the Letter to Lord Townſhend, he ſwore it was Mr. Kelly's Hand-writing.

Mr. Pickering, who had Occaſion to know Mr. Kelly's Hand, having lent him ſome Money, and received ſeveral Notes and Letters from him during that Tranſaction, does agree with Mr. Brown in every particular and moſt minute Circumſtance; which is a clear and evident Proof, that this Letter of the 20th of Auguſt was not wrote by Mr. Kelly.

The Difference which they tell your Lordſhips they obſerve, between the Cut of the Letters in that of the 20th of Auguſt, and the others, is, That one is longer and ſtraiter, the other wider and ſhorter: which is obvious to any body that will look on both, and is a Confirmation of their Veracity.

The Proſecutors of the Plot might have prov'd this better, and not have been driven to the Teſtimony of a Meſſenger to ſupport this great Foundation of their Charge. It is notorious what Search they have made for Evidence of all kinds; and as Mr. Kelly was educated in a College, they might eaſily have found credible Witneſſes to that Point, if thoſe Letters had been wrote by him.

In the Caſe of Similitude of Hands, when it has been the moſt clearly and poſitively proved, as on the Trial of Colonel Sidney, it has been eſteemed to be cruel, that a Man ſhould be convicted on ſuch kind of Evidence; and the Attainder of that unfortunate Gentleman was reverſed for that Reaſon.

In Sidney's Trial, his Bankers ſwore, They uſed to pay Bills drawn by him in the Hand-writing they were ſhewn, and no Perſons could contradict them; and yet the Sentence againſt him was a great Blemiſh to that Reign. The Great Lord Chief Juſtice Holt, in the Caſe of Crosby, refus'd to admit it; and the Lord Chief Baron Bury, on Francia's Trial, follow'd that Example.

At preſent, give me leave to ſay, There is no Evidence that it is Mr. Kelly's Hand, and there is poſitive Proof that it is not.—— Therefore, we who live under ſo equitable, juſt, and happy a Government, can never convict a Man, in theſe Days of Liberty, on ſuch inſufficient Conjectures.

They next produced the Three Letters, which, they would inſinuate, were wrote by Kelly, and dictated by the Biſhop, which were mentioned by me before, and which were ſworn by the Clerks of the Poſt-Office to have been ſtopt going to France.

The Biſhop deſired to examine them relating to theſe Letters being detain'd, and would fain have known who took them out of the Mail: this he thought was proper for him to demand, ſince he ſeem'd to inſinuate, That he queſtion'd their ever having been in the Poſt-Office. But your Lordſhips would not ſuffer any Enquiry to be made on this Head, and voted it inconſiſtent with the Publick Safety, and unneceſſary for the Defence of the Priſoner, to permit any further

Queſtions

Questions to be ask'd in relation to this important Affair.

These honest Gentlemen, the Clerks of the Post-Office, have deposed further, That the Papers produced, are true Copies of the Originals detain'd by them; tho, at the same time, they confess, they never examin'd them after they had copied them.

They positively swore further, That the Originals were of the same Hand with the Letter of the 20th of August, tho they affirm this barely upon Memory, never having mark'd any Letter in order to know it again: and one of them declared upon Oath, That he did not believe there could be such an Imitation of Kelly's Hand as could deceive him; tho the whole House agrees, That Hands may be counterfeited so as to deceive the Men that wrote them.

They own, they never compared two original Letters between the 20th of April, and 24th of August tho they might have stopt a Letter one Post, without Prejudice to the Government, in order to be more certain in their Evidence.

Thus, my Lords, should this Bill pass, this great Man must fall by the Dependance this House must have on the Memory of these Clerks.

Mr. Lewis, who has long serv'd in the Secretary's Office, tells us, That frequently Letters and Seals used to be counterfeited; and, in a more particular manner, by one Brocket, who excelled so much in this Art, that he has cheated many Persons, and has so far deceived them, that they have not known his Copy from their own Originals.

When these Letters, thus attested, came to be read, they are in Cypher; so that it must again depend on the Honesty of a Decypherer, before they can possibly be made Treasonable.

Mr. Willes declares, They were truly decyphered according to the best of his Judgment and Skill; and more particularly, that the Number 1378, which is subscribed to the Third Letter directed to Jackson, stands for the Letter R. But when some Lords ask'd him a Question, which perhaps had he answered, might have proved him to be under a Mistake; he refuses to give an Answer, either in the Affirmative or Negative, for fear of revealing his Art. Your Lordships thought proper to prevent any further Cross-Examination of this Gentleman, by a Resolution.

Mr. Willes says, He shew'd these Letters decyphered to my Lord Townshend, before he communicated them to Mr. Corbire, who is a Clerk in the Secretary's Office, and then he says, That Mr. Corbire and he agreed.

Before these Letters can yet prejudice the Bishop, the Cant Names in them must be explain'd, according to the Key which the Prosecutors of the Plot have made; and in order to it we must believe that Jackson stands for the Pretender, because Mr. Plunket gave him that Title in his Cypher. Can there be a greater Absurdity, than to imagine a Person of the Bishop of Rochester's Capacity, should borrow a Name of that Consequence, from so insignificant a Wretch as Plunket, who it does not appear ever saw him?

Indeed, the Counsel for the Bill did not read these Letters against the Bishop, since they had no Proof of his dictating them, and they were only read on Account of the general Conspiracy.

I must observe, It was a great Artifice of these learned Gentlemen, whenever there was a Piece of Evidence to which the Bishop objected, they constantly pretended, they produc'd it to the Plot in General; for they knew it could not be admitted against the Reverend Prelate: But yet when they came to sum up, they applied them to this Particular Case; which is not agreeable to that Candour that is necessary on such Occasions.

If your Lordships should be of Opinion, that Kelly wrote 'em; that they were stopp'd at the Post-Office; that they were duly copied; that they were truly decyphered, and the Cant Names explain'd; yet still this cannot affect the Bishop, unless it be fix'd upon him that he dictated them: Two of them were sign'd Jones and Illington, and to induce your Lordships to believe the Bishop was Guilty, as they affirm'd, they endeavour to prove those Names must denote him. And, in Order to it, they read some Letters, affirm'd in the same Manner, (as before mention'd) by the Clerks of the Post-Office, to be his Hand-Writing: But first they read a Cypher taken upon Mr. Dennis Kelly, and sworn by the Messenger Hutchins to be wrote by George Kelly.

I can observe nothing upon this Cypher, but that the Bishop of Rochester is not mention'd in it; which seems very extraordinary, and is not a Proof of the Reverend Prelate's being in a Conspiracy.

The Letters they read of Mr. Kelly are of no Moment, and are only calculated to fix the Names of Jones and Illington upon the Bishop.

They give an Account of his Lady's Death, the Bishop's own Illness, his going to and from Bromley; and in some of them, the Dog Harlequin is mentioned.

It seems repugnant to Reason, that in a Treasonable Correspondence of this Importance, a Gentleman should venture his Life to give an Account of the State of one Person's private Affair, and entertain his Friends Abroad with no other Business in such a Tract of Time.

In the Letters directed to Mr. Andrews at the Dog and Duck, which are proved to have been received by Mr. Kelly, Jones and Illington are not named; and those in which we find them, were such as pass'd thro' the Post-Office, and were attested like those under Cover to Gordon le Fils.

It is not likely, that in a Transaction of so secret a Nature, Mr. Kelly should take such Pains to give such a Description as might give the least room for a Suspicion that the Bishop was concerned; much less to have mentioned so many Particulars, as it may be suggested he has done, if there could be any Possibility of wresting the Meaning of Jones and Illington, and interpreting of them to mean the Bishop.

William Wood, the Bishop's Coachman, is brought to prove the particular Times of the Bishop's being in or out of Town, in order to shew, that they agree with the Times mentioned of Jones and Illington in the intercepted Correspondence; and he refreshes his Memory by a Book of Memorandums, which might have been destroyed, if it had been apprehended by the Bishop's Friends, that such Evidence could affect him.

What they next attempt, was to ſhew, That the Dog brought over by Mr. Kelly from France, and which Mrs. Barnes ſwears, that he once told her was for the Biſhop of Rocheſter, was a ſtrong Circumſtance to fix the Name of Illington on the Biſhop.

My Lords, Mrs. Barnes, who is under the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger, is the only Witneſs to this Point; and what ſhe ſays, is only Hearſay from Kelly: She owns that Kelly never told her ſo but once, and that was when ſhe thought to have kept it for herſelf: And indeed, it might be barely an Excuſe to prevent his parting with it, for he had promiſed to bring her ſuch a Preſent before he went to France.

She owns, that to her Knowledge, the Biſhop never ſaw the Dog, nor ſent any Meſſage about it; which ſeems to be very extraordinary, that if this Preſent was of ſuch great Conſequence, he ſhould not have had Curioſity enough, at leaſt, to ſee it: An Affidavit was read from Birmingham, a Surgeon in Paris, which ſays, That he gave this Dog to Mr. Kelly, for Mrs. Barnes.

Before I leave this Circumſtance of the Dog, it is proper to obſerve another great Improbability, which is, in a Letter wrote a few Days after the Death of the Biſhop's Lady, it is ſaid, Mrs. Illington was in great Tribulation for the Loſs of poor Harlequin; and can it be ſuppoſed, that at a Time when the Biſhop was in Affliction for the Death of his Wife, he ſhould indecently diſcover ſo much Grief for ſuch a Trifle?

I think this is ſufficient to convince any Perſon whatſoever, that this Correſpondence is of a very extraordinary Nature.

Mrs. Barnes has told your Lordſhips, That Mr. Kelly came from France the 11th of April.

My Lords, I am now come to the only Piece of Evidence that ſeems particularly levelled at the Biſhop; which is, The Proof that has been given of the dictating thoſe Letters: and unleſs this be clearly and plainly made appear, I cannot conceive that any Thing can be laid to this Prelate's Charge.

Unleſs it is evident, that the Biſhop did dictate as alledged, I cannot think any of your Lordſhips can vote him Guilty according to the Rules of Juſtice; for no Man is ſafe either in his Life, Liberty, or Fortune, if he may be deprived of either, on account of a Correſpondence in which it does not appear he was concerned. Tho your Lordſhips ſhould ſo far credit the precarious Evidence at your Bar, as to believe that Jones and Illington ſtood for the Biſhop of Rocheſter; yet unleſs it is plain that it was with his Privity, it is certainly impoſſible this Bill ſhould paſs: And if it ſhould, it will hereafter be in the Power of any two Men, one at Home, and one Abroad, to ruin the moſt innocent Perſon, by entring, without his Knowledge, into a Correſpondence of this Nature.

If the being named in Treaſonable Letters be a Crime, tho it does not appear it was with the Privity of ſuch Perſons, I will ſubmit to your Lordſhips, how far Men of the greateſt Zeal to the preſent Eſtabliſhment, are to be affected by Mr. Plunket's Inſinuations.

No Man ought to ſuffer for the Suggeſtions of another Perſon, unleſs it appears he has given great Foundation for them. And in this Caſe, would it not be moſt extraordinary and moſt unjuſt, to puniſh this Reverend Prelate, for a Crime which there is no Proof he ever committed? I mean, the dictating of theſe Letters. And if, on the other hand, the unfortunate Circumſtances of his Affairs have furniſhed him with Means of ſhewing, beyond Contradiction, that he could not be concern'd in the Letters of the 20th of April; that for a conſiderable time he could not ſee Mr. Kelly; and that there never was an Intimacy between 'em: Then, my Lords, I hope, every Man who gives his Vote for the rejecting this Bill, has the ſtrongeſt Evidence of his Side to ſupport his Opinion; and need not be afraid or aſhamed to own it here, or any where elſe.

This Part of the Evidence being of great Conſequence, I muſt beg your Lordſhips Attention, whilſt I recapitulate the Heads of it, as clearly and diſtinctly as poſſibly I can.

The firſt Witneſs they call'd, was Flower, a Chairman, who ſwears, That he carried Kelly twice or thrice to the Deanery; but that the Biſhop was never at Home, and conſequently did not ſee him. His Partner ſwore, he had carried him, with Flower, one of thoſe Times.

The next Perſon produced, was a Porter, one Vanlear, who depoſed, That he went about Chriſtmas was Twelve-Months, twice, with Meſſages from Kelly to the Biſhop; the laſt of which Times, he carried ſome Beaver Stockings; that the Biſhop ſent for him up Stairs, gave his Service to Mr. Johnſon, and thank'd him for his Preſent.

Mrs. Kilburne, at whoſe Houſe Mr. Kelly lodged, ſays, That once a Servant came from the Biſhop, to know how Mr. Johnſon did, and was ſorry he could not have his Company at Dinner.

William Wood, the Biſhop's Coachman, ſays, he once ſtopp'd in Bury-Street; but does not know for what; and that the Biſhop ſent a Servant ſome where, who preſently returned. And,

Lloyd, who keeps the Star and Garter in Palace-Yard, has told us, That Neynoe once came to his Houſe, and told him, he ſtaid for an ingenious Gentleman, who was gone to the Biſhop of Rocheſter's Houſe.

This, my Lords, is all the Proof they offered of this Intimacy; from which they would infer, that the Biſhop dictated theſe Letters, and is conſequently Guilty of the Crimes laid to his Charge.

If your Lordſhips conſider what was produced on the other ſide, I am ſure you muſt agree there is no Foundation for this Aſſertion.

Mrs. Kilburne denies, to the beſt of her Knowledge, that the Biſhop ever came to her Houſe, or that his Coach ever ſtopp'd there, or ever was ſent for Kelly.

That Kelly did not go out of Town, from the time he came from France, till he was taken up, the 19th of May, and never lay out of her Houſe one Night.

This, my Lords, was confirmed by her Maid Anne Ellis.

Mrs. Barnes ſays, She never heard of any Meſſage from the Biſhop to Kelly, nor ever had any Converſation with him about the Biſhop.

William Wood the Coachman, who liv'd with the Biſhop four Years, has declared, that the Biſhop of Rocheſter never ſent him with his Coach to Bury-Street to fetch any Perſon from thence, that there was no Stranger at Bromley for a Fortnight

night before his Lady died, which was the 26th of April; that no-body could come in a Coach or on Horseback, but he must know it; that he never saw such a Person as Mr. Kelly, till he was shewed him at the Tower; and, that the Bishop went ill of the Gout to Bromley the 12th of April, and did not return to London till the 7th of May.

Malone, Mrs. Barnes's Servant, says, That she never saw the Bishop, or any of his Servants, with Mr. Kelly.

Thomas Grant, who has been the Bishop's Servant nine Years, has declared, That the Bishop went to Bromley the 12th of April very ill of the Gout, and that no Stranger could come to him, from the time he went to Bromley, till after his Wife's Death; that one or other of the Servants always sat up with him; and that no Person could visit him, but they must know it; for they were either in the same Room, or the next Room to him: and that no Stranger, except Dr. Aldridge and the Apothecary, came near him. Grant says, That he was forc'd to go to Town to attend at the Westminster Election of Scholars on the 21st of April, but left Beauchamp there, who came down for that Purpose on the 18th.

Beauchamp and Steen, who were the two Servants that attended with Grant, swear the same thing.

Susannah Harvey, Sarah Jones, Thomas Farnden, Elizabeth Higginson, and all the Servants agree, that they never heard of any Person by the Name of Kelly or Johnson's being with the Bishop. And, Mrs. Inglish, who took the Names of the Bishop's Visitors for many Years, does not remember, that she ever heard of such a Person as Kelly or Johnson. And I doubt not, but that every Lord must allow, that it is not possible to have a more clear, a more strong, or legal Proof to a Negative, than this is.

I must observe to your Lordships, that most of these Servants have been in strict Custody, and severely used, particularly Farnden, and yet your Lordships see how unanimous they are in their Evidence: and their Testimony is so positive, that I cannot conceive any Person can suggest there was the least Intimacy between this Reverend Prelate and Mr. Kelly; and much less, that he could be with him to write the Letters that are dated the 20th of April.

Mr. Reeves did, indeed, so far agree, as to be of opinion, that they might have been wrote the 11th of April, which was the Day Kelly came from France: But, my Lords, Mrs. Barnes has deposed, he went to Bed the Minute he came home, and lay there for a considerable time; besides, it is improbable that Letters wrote the 11th, should not be sent till the 19th. But if any further Argument was necessary to confute this absurd Supposition, the Earl of Sunderland's Death is mentioned in the Letter to Chivers, and that Noble Lord died the 19th; at which Time it hath been prov'd, Mr. Kelly was not with the Bishop.

The Bishop of St. Asaph did at first peremptorily contradict one Part of Mr. Grant's Evidence, by saying, he had received a Letter from the Bishop of Rochester, at the Time which Grant has sworn he was so ill of the Gout that he could not write.

His Lordship positively affirmed, That he received this Letter on Saturday the 21st of April in the Morning, and saw Grant in London between Twelve and Two: But when it was proved that Grant did not leave Bromley till the Evening of that Day, and that another Person officiated for him as Butler in the Deanery, by Reason of his Absence, then the Bishop seem'd to think himself under a Mistake, and allow'd it might have been some time before.

His Lordship own'd, He never received a Letter from the Bishop of Rochester before nor since, and therefore was a Stranger to his Hand.

I could have wished this Reverend Prelate had recollected himself more fully, before he had given his Testimony in a Matter of this great Importance to one of his Brethren.

There was another Witness examined, which was Crofton the Shoemaker, to prove, that Talbot (who was said to have received the three Letters directed to Gordon le Fil) was at that Time in London, when he was supposed to have been in Boulogne. Crofton swears he saw him in Town the 29th of April, and prov'd it by his Book.

There was another Person call'd, whose Name was Donner, that deposed, Gordon own'd to him the receiving of this Pacquet; but an Affidavit was produced from Gordon, in which he denies it. Donner's Evidence is only Hearsay, the other is positive.

My Lords the Counsel for the Bill produced some Papers which were taken in the Bishop's Custody when he was apprehended, and endeavour to draw very ill-natur'd and forc'd Constructions from them.

The First was a Letter from the Dutchess of Ormond, in which she acquaints him, That she had something to send him, which she could not trust to a better Hand; or Words to that effect. And this they would pretend to insinuate, were some treasonable Papers.

I appeal to all Mankind, whether it is not very extraordinary to suppose, that the Bishop should be presumed to convey a Traiterous Correspondence thro' that Channel. Every Body knows the Friendship which was between the Reverend Prelate and that Family; and it is not surprizing that this unfortunate Lady should think him a proper Person to consult, and intrust with her own Affairs. Therefore I can't think, that these general Expressions can at all affect him.

The next they read, is a Paper found, or pretended to be found, at the Deanery, subscribed to Dubois, but without Date: In this the Person who writes it, says, He received a Letter by Mr. Johnson, to which he return'd an Answer in his Hand.

The Secret Committee, at first, apprehended that this was received by the Bishop; and thus it pass'd, till upon seizing a Letter wrote in the Tower by his Lordship, they found a Similitude in the Seals, which immediately inlightned them, and then it was presently said to have been wrote by the Bishop.

They then wanted to fix this to be the Bishop's own Hand-writing, and they could find no other Way of doing it, but pretending there was a Similitude between the E's in this Letter, and those which the Bishop generally used. I believe it is the first time that ever such an Argument was brought to prove that the whole Letter has been wrote by a Perſon: much leſs was it ever pretended to be offered to a Court of Juſtice againſt any Priſoner whatſoever: But, I believe, there is no Man acquainted with the Biſhop's Hand, but ſees it is not wrote by him.

They would alſo affirm, that when in this Letter the Biſhop is ſuppoſed to ſay, That he returned an Anſwer in Mr. Johnſon's Hand, it muſt be underſtood to be his Hand-writing: which, I muſt confeſs does not at all appear to be a neceſſary Concluſion; for he might deliver his Anſwer into Mr. Johnſon's Hand, which, I think, is more natural to ſuppoſe than the other.

Your Lordſhips muſt judge, how improbable it is, that the Biſhop ſhould keep ſuch a Letter by him, which he wrote himſelf; or that when ſuch Care is taken, as the Proſecutors of the Plot themſelves ſay, for preventing any Perſon's diſcovering the Intimacy between Mr. Kelly and him, ſuch a Secret ſhould be truſted in Writing, and even without a Cypher.—— The Two Seals which gave this Turn, are Cicero's Heads, which are very common, and are to be found every where. They are one broke, the other whole, which muſt make it very difficult to judge of them: and it is allow'd, that, at beſt, it is but precarious Evidence.

If Mr. Neynoe ſpeaks Truth, when he ſaid, The Biſhop had Notice of the Storm that threatned him, I am certain, that this Paper, if it could have been apprehended of Conſequence, would have been deſtroyed: But, I believe, it was impoſſible for him, or any body elſe, to think it ſhould meet with ſuch an Explanation.

The next Letter they produced, which they ſeem'd to think material, was that which was ſeiz'd on his Servant going to Mr. Morrice: In this he ſays, That the Evidence of Plunket, and thoſe People, could not affect him; but as he does not mention Mr. Kelly, they would have it preſumed, that this is a Proof, that Kelly could have ſaid ſomething of him. But, I think, this muſt appear to be a very ill-natur'd Aſſertion.

Your Lordſhips will conſider, he was then writing to his Son-in-Law; and therefore no great Accuracy was neceſſary.

In another Place he ſays, That if they impeach'd him, he ſhould remain in Priſon for ſome time; and this they would decypher to be an Implication of his Guilt.——But, in my poor Opinion, it is the Reverſe: He ſeems to ſay, That if the Commons ſhould be induced to ſend up an Impeachment againſt him, he was ſo ſatisfied of his own Innocence, and your Lordſhips Juſtice, that he thought the Confinement till his Trial, would be the only Misfortune that could attend him. The Example of the Earl of Oxford was recent in his Memory, and might juſtly create in him a Fear of undergoing a long Impriſonment.

It is objected, That he, in this Letter, makes no Proteſtations of his Innocence: But if you will conſider he writes to Mr. Morrice, I believe every body will agree, that ſuch Declarations were not neceſſary.

Mr. Layer's Attainder was read; but it does not appear, That the Biſhop had any Correſpondence with him; therefore I can't conceive why we were troubled with it.

My Lords, I have now gone thro' the whole Evidence that is brought to juſtify this extraordinary Proceeding, and muſt obſerve the Steps that have been taken to procure all the poſſible Means to work the Deſtruction of this Great Man.

You have ſeen his very Servants confined, who, it does not appear, were guilty of the leaſt Glimpſe of Treaſon.

Lawſon, a Baker of Bromley, who appeared at your Bar, has been employ'd to examine the Perſons in the Biſhop's Neighbourhood, in order to find the leaſt Particular that could amount to the Shadow of a Proof; and went ſo far, as to offer Wood the Coachman the Wages that were due to him, if he would have gone the Lengths that were required.

Mr. Bingley told us in the Caſe of Kelly (and as it has not been diſprov'd, it is to be taken for granted) that a Warrant was ſhewn by the Meſſenger, ſign'd by a Secretary of State, to carry him to Newgate, which he was told was unavoidable, unleſs he would own the Letter of the 20th of Auguſt to be Mr. Kelly's Hand-writing: But it appeared the next Day, to be nothing but in order to terrify him.

Mr. Kelly himſelf has told you Lordſhips, That Mr. Delafaye offer'd him his own Terms, if he would have turn'd Evidence: And this was done to deſtroy the Biſhop of Rocheſter; or, to ſpeak in the Language mentioned at your Bar, To pull down the Pride of this Haughty Prelate.

Your Lordſhips may remember, That Mr. Wearg objects to the Biſhop's Servants, becauſe two of them had Employments, as appears by his Lordſhip's own Letter: but, my Lords, when they were examined, they acquainted the Houſe, that it was upon reading of the Report, that they recollected the Biſhop's Circumſtances before the Death of his Wife. And if every Man who has a Place under the Biſhop, is not to be eſteemed a free Agent, when he is upon Oath, I hope it will be allowed, on the other hand, that thoſe who have Employments under the Government, ought not to be admitted; then all the Witneſſes that have been brought to ſupport the Bill, from the Decypherer to the Meſſenger, will be diſcredited, and the whole Proſecutionm uſt fall to the Ground.

My Lords, it has been a Hardſhip that has attended the Biſhop, that he has been forc'd to prove a Negative; and the Difficulty has been the ſtronger upon him, that your Lordſhips have not permitted Mr. Kelly to be examin'd, as was moved by a Learned Lord, in my Eye; and if the Gentleman had ſworn what he ſo ſolemnly affirmed at your Bar, relating to this Affair, I can't conceive we could have had the leaſt Debate.

The Noble Lords who appear the moſt zealous in this Proſecution, were thoſe who oppos'd the Examination of Mr Kelly; which in my poor Opinion, is a ſtrong Argument, That if he had been brought before us, he would have perſiſted in his Declarations of the Biſhop's Innocence.

The Reverend Prelate has deſired of any Lord in the Adminſtration, and even the Honourable Perſon who appear'd at your Bar, to declare, whether any one ſingle Perſon had charg'd him (on their own Knowledge) of being guilty of any treaſonable Practice. And it has appeared to the contrary: Therefore this whole Charge is founded upon the slight Circumstances and improbable Innuendoes before-mentioned.

Another Objection, which has raised, is, that Mr. Kelly made Resistance, when he was seiz'd, till he had burnt some of his Papers: But, my Lords, I don't see any Reason to lay this to the Charge of the Bishop.

Kelly is to answer for his own Actions, and is unfortunately like to suffer for 'em: A Person of his Age might have many Letters in his Custody, which he did not care should be seen, and yet of a different Nature from a Traiterous Correspondence.

After this Evidence is considered, I cannot think your Lordships will establish such a Precedent, which hereafter may be employ'd to ruin the greatest amongst you. And if ever hereafter Pains and Penalties are unjustly inflicted on any Person, Posterity will derive the Original of such Bills from the Proceedings of this Parliament; and what Opinion will be framed of us, should this be passed into a Law, I submit to every impartial Person.

It must be left to your Lordships Consideration, which will be of most fatal Consequence to the Publick, The leaving this Precedent (of Condemning on such kind of Evidence) like a Sword which your Enemies may take up when they please, or the Banishing the Bishop of Rochester, in the Evening of his Days, who alone could do, in his single Person, no Prejudice to the Constitution. If he were inclin'd to overturn it, as his Enemies suggest, he is in a better Situation Abroad, than at Home, to execute that Design, and direct the Counsels of the Disaffected. The Ruin of one Man will not heal the Wound, that the Passing of this Bill seems to make in the Government of this Kingdom.

It has been said in the Debate, That the Bishop ought to have made Protestations of his Zeal for his Majesty and his Family: But, I think he took the most ready Way of Performing his Duty, when he shew'd himself Innocent of the Crimes laid to his Charge.

If he had made use of any Expressions, which those Lords blame him for omitting, the same good Nature would have call'd it Hypocrisy; and those who are displeas'd with his Silence, would have accused him of Insincerity.

My Lords, this Bill seems as irregular in the Punishments it inflicts, as it is in its Foundation, and carries with it an unnatural Degree of Hardship.

It is Felony for his Children to correspond with him: And in this Circumstance, it is different from the only Bill that carries with it the least Resemblance of this; I mean, That for the Banishment of the Earl of Clarendon.

The Earl had flown from the Prosecution, and retired beyond Sea. The Charges against him were, principally, for advising a Standard Army; and another Article exhibited was, That he had advised and procured divers of his Majesty's Subjects to be imprison'd against Law, in remote Islands, Garisons, and other Places, thereby to prevent them of the Benefit of the Law, and to produce Precedents for the Imprisoning any other of his Majesty's Subjects in like Manner.

The 7th Article against him was, That he had, in a short Time, gain'd to himself a greater Estate than can be imagin'd to be gain'd lawfully in so short a Time: And contrary to his Oath, he hath procured several Grants under the Great Seal from his Majesty, for himself, and his Relations, of several of his Majesty's Lands, Hereditaments and Leases, to the Disprofit of his Majesty.

There need not have been any Witnesses of these Crimes, for they were apparent; and every body knew that he was Prime Minister: Yet Sir Francis Goodier, upon that Debate in the House of Commons, declared the Sentiments which I express'd at the beginning, That he was not against Proceeding, but unsatisfied to do it without Witness, it being like swearing in verba Magistri.

Another great Man, upon the same Question, and an Ancestor to a Noble Lord near me, said; That if the Parliament set aside Law in this Case, we should be happy to see Law declaring the Power of Parliaments.

The Punishment for Corresponding with the Earl was High-Treason, and then Two positive Witnesses were necessary to convict: But in this Case, one corrupt, terrified, and perjur'd Person may take away the Life of the most innocent Man.

There is another great Misfortune which this Bill brings upon the Bishop, which is, That he is incapable of receiving his Majesty's Pardon. This, my Lords, is an Entrenchment upon the Prerogative. And what must make it the more severe in this Case, is, That his Majesty's Inclinations to Mercy (which are the distinguishing Characters of his Life) are stop'd by this Law, which the unfortunate Prelate might have Hopes of receiving when he had merited it, by a dutiful Behaviour to the Country that had sent him to wander abroad in Exile, and by his future Conduct have confirm'd, if possible, the Evidence he has given of his Innocence.

My Lords, in the Case of the Earl of Danby, your Lordships have declared, That his Banishment should be no Precedent, nor drawn into Example for the Time to come, and have so enter'd it in your Journals.

It has been prov'd, That this Reverend Prelate was at the time that he was suspected to be acting in Treason, engaged in Studies of the most high Nature, which is a Circumstance that ought to have some Weight.

If this Bill pass into a Law, such Evidence is establish'd, and such a Method of Proceeding introduc'd, as must effectually render all that is dear to us precarious; and if ever, hereafter, we should see a wicked Administration, supported by a corrupt Majority in Parliament, this Step taken in these Times of Liberty, will be a sufficient Precedent to give a Colour of Justice to the Actions of those who should be wanton in Tyranny.

The Reverend Prelate, who spoke before me, mentions some Cases relating to Bills of Attainder, which in my poor Opinion, differ very much from our present Question.

The Attainder of Sir John Fenwick was only to supply the want of a Witness who had deposed against him upon Oath before the Grand-Jury, and who was spirited away by the Prisoner's Friends: But at present, your Lordships are to supply the Defect of Evidence, by condemning on improbable Conjecture. There was a

Noble

Noble Lord in this Houſe the other Day, I don't ſee him now, who made the greateſt Figure in Oppoſition to that Bill, I wiſh we could have his Aſſiſtance on this Occaſion.

My Lords, ſince that Reverend Prelate has quoted ſome Caſes, he will permit me to remind him what has been formerly ſaid upon Acts of Attainder; That ſuch Bills, like Siſyphus's Stone, have frequently roll'd back upon thoſe that were the chief Promoters of them.

This prudential Argument ſhould reſtrain us from being too forward with them at this Time of Day.

The Act for the Attainder of the Earl of March paſs'd, becauſe he had been inſtrumental in procuring the Attainder of another Lord, under pretence of a Letter, which the Record ſays, was no Evidence.

The Lord Cromwell is another known Inſtance of this Obſervation: He was the firſt who adviſed this violent Proceeding in Henry the 8th's Time: and it is remarkable, that the Advice he gave to the Ruin of others, prov'd, not long after, fatal to himſelf.

I have now given your Lordſhips the Reaſons why I am againſt the Bill. I fear I have tired your Patience, and ſhall therefore conclude with the Words of the Great Man I before mentioned; I mean, Sir Heneage Finch, in the Caſe of the Earl of Clarendon—— 'We have an Accuſation up'on Hearſay, and if it is not made good, the 'blackeſt Scandal Hell can invent, lies at our 'Doors.'

The Reſult of this Debate was, that the Bill paſs'd the Houſe; it afterwards obtained the Royal Aſſent, and was as follows.

An Act to inflict Pains and Penalties on Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter.

WHEREAS in the Years One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty one, and One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty two, a deteſtable and horrid Conſpiracy was formed and carried on by divers Traitors, for invading your Majeſty's Kingdoms with foreign Forces, for raiſing an Inſurrection and Rebellion againſt your Majeſty, for ſeizing the Tower and City of London, and for laying violent Hands upon your Majeſty's moſt ſacred Perſon, and upon his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, in order to ſubvert our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment in Church and State, by placing a Popiſh Pretender on your Throne: And whereas for the better concealing and effecting the ſaid Conſpiracy, divers treaſonable Correſpondences were, within the Time aforeſaid, carried on by Letters written in Cyphers, cant Words, and fictitious Names; which Conſpiracy, had it not been diſappointed by the Goodneſs of Almighty God, would have deprived your Majeſty's Kingdoms of the Enjoyment of their Religion, Laws, and Liberties, involved them in Blood and Ruin, and ſubjected your People to the Bondage and Oppreſſion of Romiſh Superſtition and Arbitrary Power: For which execrable Treaſon Chriſtopher Layer hath been indicted, tried, convicted, and attainted. And whereas Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, notwithſtanding the many ſolemn Aſſurances by him given of his Faith and Allegiance to your Majeſty, by taking the Oaths by Law appointed to be taken, inſtead of the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy; which Oaths he had likewiſe taken at ſundry Times, during the reſpective Reigns of their late Majeſties King William and Queen Mary, and of her late Majeſty Queen Anne; and notwithſtanding he had frequently abjured the Pretender, hath, in direct Violation of his ſaid repeated Oaths and Obligations, and to the great ſcandal of Religion, and his Holy Function, been deeply concerned in forming, directing, and carrying on the ſaid wicked and deteſtable Conſpiracy, and hath been a principal Actor therein, by traiterouſly conſulting and correſponding with divers Perſons to raiſe an Inſurrection and Rebellion againſt your Majeſty within this Kingdom, and to procure a foreign Force to invade the ſame, in order to depoſe your Majeſty, and place the Pretender on your Throne; and by traiterouſly correſponding with the ſaid Pretender, and Perſons employed by him, knowing them to be ſo employed: Therefore to manifeſt our juſt Abhorrence of ſo wicked and abominable a Conſpiracy, and our Zeal and tender Regard for the Preſervation of your Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in your Majeſty's Royal Family, the ſolid Foundations of our preſent Happineſs and future Hopes; and to the end that no Conſpirator may, by any ſubtil Contrivance or Practice whatſoever, eſcape Puniſhment, and that all others may by the Juſtice of Parliament be for ever hereafter deterred from engaging in any traiterous Conſpiracies or Attempts; We your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, do humbly beſeech your Majeſty, that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the Advice and Conſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That the ſaid Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, from and after the firſt Day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty three, ſhall be, and is hereby, to all Intents and Purpoſes, deprived of all and ſingular his Offices, Dignities, Promotions, and Benefices Eccleſiaſtical whatſoever, and that the ſame, and every of them, ſhall from thenceforth be actually void, as if he were naturally dead; and that the ſaid Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter ſhall from thenceforth for ever be diſabled, and rendred incapable of and from taking, holding, or enjoying any Office, Dignity, Promotion, Benefice, or Employment within this Realm, or any other his Majeſty's Dominions, and alſo of and from uſing or exerciſing any Office, Function, Authority, or Power Eccleſiaſtical or Spiritual whatſoever; and ſhall and do ſuffer perpetual Exile, and be for ever baniſhed this Realm, and all other his Majeſty's Dominions, and ſhall depart out of the ſame on or before the Five and twentieth Day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty three: And that if the ſaid Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter ſhall return into or be found within this Realm, or any other his Majeſty's Dominions at any time after the ſaid Five and twentieth Day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty three, he the ſaid Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, being thereof lawfully convicted, ſhall be adjudged Guilty of Felony, and ſhall ſuffer and forfeit as in Caſes of Felony, without Benefit of Clergy, and ſhall be utterly incapable of any Pardon from his Majeſty, his Heirs or Succeſſors.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That all and every Perſon and Perſons, who ſhall, from and after the ſaid Five and twentieth Day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred twenty three, be aiding or aſſiſting to the Return of the ſaid Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter into this Realm, or any other his Majeſty's Dominions, or ſhall harbour or conceal him within the ſame, or any of them, being thereof lawfully convicted, ſhall be adjudged Guilty of Felony, and ſhall ſuffer and forfeit as in Caſes of Felony, without Benefit of Clergy.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any of the Subjects of his Majeſty, his Heirs or Succeſſors, except ſuch Perſons as ſhall be licenſed for that purpoſe by his Majeſty, his Heirs or Succeſſors, under his or their Sign Manual, ſhall, from and after the ſaid Five and twentieth Day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty three, within this Realm or without, hold, entertain, or keep any Intelligence or Correſpondence in Perſon, or by Letters, Meſſages, or otherwiſe, with the ſaid Francis Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, or with any Perſon or Perſons employed by him, knowing ſuch Perſon or Perſons to be ſo employed, ſuch Perſon ſo offending, being thereof lawfully convicted, ſhall be adjudged Guilty of Felony, and ſhall ſuffer and forfeit as in Caſes of Felony, without Benefit of Clergy.

And be it further enacted, That if any Offence againſt this Act ſhall be committed out of this Realm, the ſame ſhall or may be alledged, laid, enquired of, and tried in any County within Great Britain.

In purſuance of this, on Tueſday the 18th of June, the deprived Biſhop of Rocheſter, accompanied by his Son-in-Law Mr. Morrice and his Wife, embark'd on Board the Aldborough, one of his Majeſty's Ships of War, and on Friday the 21ſt, landed at Calais.

CXCII. The Trial of Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, for High Crimes and Misdemeanors in the Execution of his Office, May 6. 1725. 10 Geo. I.

The FIRST Day.

ABOUT Eleven of the Clock, the Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, the Managers for the Houſe of Commons being in the Conveniencies made for them at their Lordſhips Bar, Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, having a Stool plac'd for him within the Bar, and his Councel, viz. Mr. Serjeant Probyn, Doctor Sayer, Mr. Lingard, Common-Serjeant of the City of London, Mr. Robins, and Mr. Strange, ſtanding near him at the Bar, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation as follows:

Serj. at Arms, Oyez, Our Soveraign Lord the King ſtrictly charges and commands all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then the Serjeant at Arms again made Proclamation as follows:

Serj. at Arms. Oyez, Whereas a Charge of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors has been exhibited by the Houſe of Commons, in the Name of Themſelves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, againſt Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield; all Perſons concern'd are to take Notice, that he now ſtands upon his Tryal, and they may come forth in order to make good the ſaid Charge.

Then the Clerk-Aſſiſtant, by Direction of the Lord-Chief-Juſtice King, Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, read the Articles of Impeachment, the Earl of Macclesfield's Anſwer, and the Replication of the Houſe of Commons, as follows:

ARTICLES

Exhibited by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled, in the Name of Themſelves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, againſt Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, in Maintenance of their Impeachment againſt him for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

WHEREAS the Office of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain is an Office of the Higheſt Dignity and Truſt, upon the impartial and uncorrupt Execution whereof the Honour of the Crown, and the Welfare of the Subjects of this Kingdom greatly depend: And whereas Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, in or about the Month of May, in the Year of our Lord, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen by the great Grace and Favour of His moſt Excellent Majeſty, was conſtituted and appointed Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and did thereupon take the uſual Oath for the due Execution of that High Office, whereby he did ſwear well and truly to ſerve our Soveraign Lord the King, and His People, Poor and Rich, after the Laws and Uſages of this Realm, and ſuch other Oaths as have been accuſtomed; and the ſaid Earl continued in this great Office until about the Month of January, in the Year of our Lord, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty four, and in Right thereof was intruſted with the Nomination and Admiſſion to the Offices of Maſters of the Court of Chancery, which Maſters of the ſaid Court are Officers of great Truſt ſworn to ſerve the King and his People, and aſſociated to the Lord Chancellor for his Aſſiſtance in the due Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in the ſaid Court: And whereas His Majeſty, upon the ſaid Earl's being appointed to the Office of Lord Chancellor, did, of His Grace and Bounty, beſtow upon the ſaid Earl the Sum of Fourteen thouſand Pounds, or ſome other great Sum, and did likewiſe grant unto George Parker Eſq; now commonly called Lord Parker, Eldeſt Son and Heir Apparent of the ſaid Earl, a Yearly Penſion of Twelve Hundred Pounds, payable out of His Majeſty's Receipt of the Exchequer, during the joint Lives of His Majeſty and the ſaid Lord Parker, determinable upon His Majeſty's making a Grant to the ſaid Lord Parker, in Poſſeſſion of the Office of one of the Tellers of His Majeſty's Exchequer, for the Term of his Natural Life, which Office being of the Yearly Value of Fifteen hundred Pounds, or upwards, has been ſince granted by His Majeſty unto the ſaid Lord Parker for his Life, who in or about the Month of July, in the Year of our Lord, One thouſand ſeven hundred and nineteen, was duly admitted to and doth ſtill enjoy the ſame; and the ſaid Earl during the Time of his continuing Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, did not only enjoy the uſual Salary, Fees, and Profits belonging to his Office, of a very great Annual Value, but alſo did continue to receive an Annual Penſion of Twelve hundred Pounds, which His Majeſty in or about the Month of June, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſixteen, had granted to him and his Aſſigns, during His Majeſty's Life; and did likewiſe receive from the Crown a further Annual Allowance of Four thouſand Pounds, and many other Advantages: Yet the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, not being ſatisfied with this large and ample Revenue, nor regarding the Obligation of his Oath, or the Duty of his high and important Office, but entertaining wicked and corrupt Deſigns and Views, to raiſe and procure to himſelf exceſſive and exorbitant Gain and Profit, by divers unjuſt and oppreſſive Practices and Methods herein after-mentioned, whilſt he continued in the ſaid Office of Lord Chancellor, did Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorſively take and receive to his own Private Uſe the following or ſome other great Sums of Money.

ARTICLE I.

That Richard Godfrey, Esq; having Contracted with Sir Thomas Gery, One of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, for the Purchase and Surrender of his Office, at the Price of Five thousand Pounds, or some other Great Sum of Money; The said Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admission of the said Richard Godfrey into the Office of One of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, did, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorsively Insist upon, Take and Receive of and from the said Richard Godfrey the Sum of Eight hundred and forty Pounds, or some other Sum of Money, for the Admitting him into such Office of a Master of the Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the said Richard Godfrey should Have, Exercise and Enjoy the same, which said Office Touches and Concerns the Administration and Execution of Justice in the said Court, and the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Pursuance and Execution of the said wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Pursuance of some other Bargain or Agreement of the same Infamous and Corrupt Nature, did admit and swear the said Richard Godfrey into the Office of one of the Masters of the said Court of Chancery, upon the Surrender of the said Sir Thomas Gery, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Trust in him Reposed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and against the Good and Wholesome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. II.

That the Office of One of the Masters of the said Court of Chancery becoming Vacant by the Death of Samuel Browning, Esq; One of the late Masters of the said Court; The said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admission of James Lightboun, Esq; into the said Office of One of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, did, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorsively Insist upon, Take and Receive of and from the said James Lightboun the Sum of Six thuosand Pounds, or some other great Sum of Momey, in Consideration of, and for the Admitting him into such Office, and to the Intent that the said James Lightboun should Have, Exercise and Enjoy the same, which said Office Touches and Concerns the Administration and Execution of Justice in the said Court, and the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Pursuance and Execution of the said wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Pursuance of some other Bargain or Agreement of the same Infamous and Corrupt Nature, did admit and swear the said James Lightboun into the Office of One of the Masters of the said Court of Chancery, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Trust in him Reposed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and against the Good and Wholesome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. III.

That John Borret, Esq; having Contracted with John Meller, Esq; One of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, for the Purchase and Surrender of his said Office, at the Price of Nine thousand Pounds, or some other great Sum of Money; The said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admission of the said John Borret into the Office of One of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, did, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorsively Insist upon, Take and Receive of and from the said John Borret the Sum of Fifteen hundred and seventy five Pounds, or some other Sum of Money, for the Admitting him into such Office of a Master of the said Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the said John Borret should Have, Exercise and Enjoy the same, which said Office Touches and Concerns the Administration and Execution of Justice in the said Court; And the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Pursuance and Execution of the said wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Pursuance of some other Bargain or Agreement of the same Infamous and Corrupt Nature, did admit and swear the said John Borret into the Office of One of the Masters of the said Court of Chancery, upon the Surrender of the said John Meller, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Trust in him reposed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and against the Good and Wholesome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. IV.

That Edward Conway, Esq; having Contracted with John Orlebar, Esq; one of the late Masters of the Court of Chancery, for the Purchase and Surrender of his said Office, at the Price of Six thousand Pounds, or some other great Sum of Money, the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admission of the said Edward Conway into the Office of one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, did, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorsively Insist upon, Take, and Receive of and from the said Edward Conway, the Sum of Fifteen hundred Pounds, or some other Sum of Money, for the Admitting of him into such Office of a Master of the said Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the said Edward Conway should Have, Exercise, and Enjoy the same, which said Office Touches and Concerns the Administration and Execution of Justice in the said Court; and the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Pursuance and Execution of the said wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Pursuance of some other Bargain or Agreement of the same infamous and corrupt Nature, did admit and swear the said Edward Conway into the Office of one of the Masters of the said Court of Chancery, upon the Surrender of the said John Orlebar, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Trust in him reposed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and against the Good and Wholsome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. V.

That William Kynaston, Esq; having Contracted with William Rogers, Esq; one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, for the Purchase and Surrender of his said Office, at the Price of Six thousand Pounds, or some other great Sum of Money, the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admission of the said William Kynaston into the Office of one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, did, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorsively Insist upon, Take, and Receive of and from the said William Kynaston, the Sum of Fifteen hundred and seventy five Pounds, or some other Sum of Money, for the Admitting him into such Office of a Master of the said Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the said William Kynaston should Have, Exercise, and Enjoy the same, which said Office Touches and Concerns the Administration and Execution of Justice in the said Court; and the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Pursuance and Execution of the said wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Pursuance of some other Bargain or Agreement of the same infamous and corrupt Nature, did admit and swear the said William Kynaston into the Office of one of the Masters of the said Court of Chancery, upon the Surrender of the said William Rogers, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Trust in him reposed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and against the Good and Wholesome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. VI.

That Thomas Bennet, Esq; having Contracted with John Hiccocks, Esq; one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, for the Purchase and Surrender of his said Office, at the Price of Seven thousand five hundred Pounds, Pounds, or ſome other great Sum of Money, the ſaid Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admiſſion of the ſaid Thomas Bennet into the Office of One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, did, by colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorſively Inſiſt upon, Take, and Receive of and from the ſaid Thomas Bennet, the Sum of Fifteen hundred and ſeventy five Pounds, or ſome other Sum of Money, for the Admitting him into ſuch Office of a Maſter of the ſaid Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the ſaid Thomas Bennet ſhould Have, Exerciſe, and Enjoy the ſame, which ſaid Office Touches and Concerns the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in the ſaid Court; and the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Purſuance and Execution of the ſaid wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Purſuance of ſome other Bargain or Agreement of the ſame infamous and corrupt Nature, did admit and ſwear the ſaid Thomas Bennet into the Office of One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, upon the Surrender of the ſaid John Hiccocks, in Breach and Violation of his Oath, as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Truſt in him repoſed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and againſt the good and wholſome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. VII.

That the Office of one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, becoming vacant by the Death of William Fellows, Eſq; One of the late Maſters of the ſaid Court, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and before the Admiſſion of Francis Elde, Eſq; into the ſaid Office of One of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery, did, by colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorſively Inſiſt upon, Take, and Receive of and from the ſaid Francis Elde, the Sum of Five thouſand two hundred and fifty Pounds, or ſome other great Sum of Money, in Conſideration of, and for the Admitting him into ſuch Office of a Maſter of the ſaid Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the ſaid Francis Elde ſhould Have, Exerciſe, and Enjoy the ſame, which ſaid Office touches and concerns the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in the ſaid Court; and the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Purſuance and Execution of the ſaid wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in Purſuance of ſome other Bargain or Agreement of the ſame infamous and corrupt Nature, did admit and ſwear the ſaid Francis Elde into the Office of One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, in Breach and Violation of his Oath, as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Truſt in him repoſed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and againſt the good and wholſome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. VIII.

That the Office of One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery becoming vacant by the Death of John Borret, Eſq; One of the late Maſters of the ſaid Court, who died inſolvent, greatly indebted to the Suitors of the ſaid Court, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, without ſecuring a juſt Satisfaction to the ſaid Suitors, for their Debts, and before the Admiſſion of Mark Thurſton, Eſq; into the ſaid Office of One of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery, did, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorſively, Inſiſt upon, Take, and Receive, of and from the ſaid Mark Thurſton, the Sum of Five thouſand two hundred and fifty Pounds, or ſome other great Sum of Money, in Conſideration of and for the admitting him into ſuch Office of a Maſter of the ſaid Court of Chancery, and to the Intent that the ſaid Mark Thurſton, ſhould Have, Exerciſe and Enjoy the ſame, which ſaid Office Touches and Concerns the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in the ſaid Court; and the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in Purſuance and Execution of the ſaid wicked and corrupt Bargain, or in purſuance of ſome other Bargain or Agreement of the ſame infamous and corrupt Nature, did admit and ſwear the ſaid Mark Thurſton into the Office of One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, in Breach and Violation of his Oath, as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Truſt in him repoſed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and againſt the good and wholſome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. IX.

That whereas Thomas Bennet, Eſq; in or about the Month of Auguſt, in the Tenth Year of His Majeſty's Reign, was poſſeſs'd of an Office in the Court of Chancery, called the Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, for the Term of his Life, by Virtue of his Majeſty's Letters Patents under the Great Seal of Great Britain, which Office is an Office of Truſt in the ſaid Court, in the Gift and Diſpoſal of the Crown by Grant under the Great Seal, and concerns the writing and making Commiſſions to inquire of Ideots and Lunaticks, and the Proceſs thereupon, and Letters Patents for the Cuſtody of the Bodies of Ideots and Lunaticks, and the keeping, entring, and tranſcribing Orders, Reports, and Accounts made and declared touching Ideots and Lunaticks, and their Eſtates in the ſaid Court of Chancery; and the ſaid Thomas Bennet having agreed with Hugh Hamerſley, Eſq; to reſign the ſaid Office, in order to obtain His Majeſty's Royal Grant of the ſaid Office to the ſaid Hugh Hamerſley, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, did refuſe to permit or accept of ſuch Reſignation, until the ſaid Thomas Bennet had agreed to pay unto the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, or unto his Uſe, One hundred and five Pounds, or ſome other Sum of Money, as a Conſideration for the ſame, and, by Colour of his Office of Lord Chancellor, did Illegally, Corruptly, and Extorſively Inſiſt upon, Take, and Receive, of and from the ſaid Thomas Bennet, the ſaid One hundred and five Pounds, or ſome other Sum for and in Conſideration of the permitting and accepting ſuch Surrender of the ſaid Office, in order to and for the obtaining and procuring a New Grant of the ſaid Office to the ſaid Hugh Hamerſley; and in purſuance thereof, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, then being Lord Chancellor, and One of the Lords Juſtices of this Kingdom, during His Majeſty's Abſence, did accept, or cauſe to be duly accepted, the Reſignation of the ſaid Thomas Bennet of the ſaid Office, and by his Intereſt and Recommendation did obtain and procure His Majeſty's Royal Warrant for preparing and paſſing His Majeſty's Grant of the ſaid Office, under the Great Seal, to the ſaid Hugh Hamerſley for the Term of his Life; which Grant afterwards, in or about the Month of September, in the Tenth Year of His Majeſty's Reign, did accordingly paſs the Great Seal, then in the Cuſtody of the ſaid Earl, for which all the uſual and accuſtomed Fees were paid, over and beſides the ſaid One hundred and five Pounds, in great Deceit of the Crown, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the ſeveral great Truſts then in him repoſed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and againſt the good and wholſome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. X.

That the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, did Illegally and Corruptly Ordain, Name, and Make divers other Officers and Miniſters of His Majeſty, for Gift and Brocage, and did likewiſe Illegally and Corruptly ſell divers other Offices, touching and concerning the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice in the Court of Chancery, to ſeveral Perſons, for divers great Sums of Money, which the ſaid Earl did receive from the ſaid Perſons for their reſpective Admiſſions into ſuch Offices, and before they were admitted thereinto, and in order that the ſaid Perſons ſhould Have, Exerciſe, and Enjoy the ſame, in great Breach of the Truſt in him repoſed, and of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and againſt the Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

ART. XI.

That the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued in the Office of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, in order to advance and increaſe the Illegal and Corrupt Gain, ariſing to himſelf from the Sale and Diſpoſal of the Offices of Maſters of the Court of Chancery, in Violation of the great Truſt repoſed in him for the Care and Protection of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, whoſe Money and Effects were, by Orders of the ſaid Court, lodged in the Hands of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, did admit ſeveral Perſons to the ſaid Offices of Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, who, at the Time of ſuch their Admiſſions, were of ſmall Subſtance and Ability, very unfit to be truſted with the great Sums of Money and other Effects of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, lodged in their Hands by the Orders of the ſaid Court; and did publickly in open Court, when he ſat there as Lord Chancellor, falſly repreſent the ſaid Perſons, ſo by him admitted to the Offices of Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, as Perſons of great Fortunes, and in every reſpect qualified for the Truſt repoſed in them, to the manifeſt Deceit and Injury of the Suitors of the ſaid Court.

ART. XII.

That whilſt the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield executed the ſaid Office of Lord Chancellor, an unjuſt and fraudulent Method was practiſed in the Court of Chancery upon the Sale of the Offices of Maſters of the ſaid Court, and upon the Admiſſions of new Maſters, that the Prices or Sums of Money agreed to be paid for the Purchaſe of the ſaid Offices, and for the Admiſſions thereinto, were ſatisfied and paid out of the Monies and Effects of the Suitors of the Court depoſited in the Hands of the reſpective Maſters, ſurrendring their Offices, or dying, either by way of Retainer of the Purchaſe Money in the Hands of the Maſter reſigning, or of replacing the Money diſburſed for ſuch Purchaſe or Admiſſion by the ſucceeding Maſter, out of the Money and Effects of the Suitors coming into his Hands; by which Practice the Price and Value given upon the Sale of the ſaid Offices, and Admiſſions thereinto, during the Time aforeſaid, were greatly advanced, and ſeveral Perſons of ſmall Ability and Subſtance were encouraged to Contract for the ſaid Offices, upon a Proſpect of the eaſie Method of paying for the Purchaſe of the ſame, by means whereof great Deficiencies have incurred in the Offices of ſeveral Maſters of the ſaid Court, admitted by the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, which they have not been able to anſwer and make good; and although the ſaid Practice was notorious and publick, and the ſaid Earl was well informed thereof, and fully acquainted therewith, yet the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, in order to increaſe his own unjuſt and corrupt Profit in the ſelling the ſaid Offices, and the Admiſſions thereto (which in conſequence of this evil Practice was raiſed and received by him out of the Effects of the Suitors, for whom he was intruſted) did not at any Time, whilſt he continued in his Office of Lord Chancellor, uſe or take any Meaſures to reform the ſaid Abuſe, or to prevent the ſame, either by cauſing proper Schedules to be taken of the Money and Effects of the Suitors delivered over and Transferred, or by appointing any Perſon, in his Behalf, to inſpect or ſuperviſe the Transfers or Deliveries thereof, or in any other Manner; But on the Contrary, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, Unjuſtly, Corruptly, and contrary to the Duty of his ſaid Office of Lord Chancellor (to whom the Superintendency of the ſaid Maſters, and of their Accounts did Appertain) did ſuffer the ſaid Fraudulent Practice to proceed and be exerciſed without any Controul or Check, whereby great Embezzlements have been made of the Suitors Money and Effects, to their great Loſs, in the Offices of ſeveral of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, who have not been able to anſwer and pay their reſpective Ballances owing upon their Accounts, in breach of the Truſt repoſed in him for the Preſervation of the Eſtates and Effects of the Suitors, to the Diſhonour and Diſcredit of the ſaid Court, and to the great Injury and Defrauding of the ſaid Suitors, in a Court of Equity, Eſtabliſhed for their Relief and Protection.

ART. XIII.

That Fleetwood Dormer, Eſq; one of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery, having Embezzled great Part of the Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the ſaid Court, with which he was Intruſted by the ſaid Court, and diſpoſed of the ſame for his own Private Advantage, by Means whereof there became, and ſtill Continues a great Deficiency in that Office, to the Amount of Twenty five thouſand Pounds, or ſome other great Sum; and the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, having Abſconded and for ſome time Abſented himſelf, Application was made to the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield, then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, to ſecure the Perſon of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, and to take proper Methods for Compelling the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer to make Satisfaction to the Suitors for the Money and Effects, which he had ſo Embezled, yet the ſaid Earl, from an Apprehenſion, that a Publick Diſcovery of the ſaid Deficiency might leſſen the Unjuſt Gain he propoſed to make to himſelf, by ſelling and diſpoſing of the ſaid Offices of Maſters of the ſaid Court, neglected and declined either to ſecure the Perſon of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, and his Eſtate and Effects, or to make a proper Enquiry into the ſaid Deficiency: But on the Contrary, the ſaid Earl, whilſt he Continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, did Endeavour, by many Indirect Practices, to conceal from the Suitors of the Court, the true State and Condition of the ſaid Office, as well with reſpect to the Effects of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, as to the Debt due from him to the Suitors of the Court; And upon Motion made in the ſaid Court of Chancery (after the ſaid Earl knew that the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer had ſo Abſconded) on behalf of ſome of the Suitors of the Court, to have their Effects Transferred from the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer to ſome other Maſter, for the better Securing thereof, the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield, in order to delude the Suitors of the ſaid Court into a Belief that their Effects were ſafe, and thereby to prevent a Publick Enquiry, then ſitting as Lord Chancellor in open Court, did ſay, That the ſaid Parties need not be in haſte, and did at the ſame time falſly and deceitfully Declare, that the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer was only gone to take the Air in the Country, and that he would return in a little time, and all would be well, or to that Effect.

ART. XIV.

That the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, having towards Satisfaction of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, aſſigned to Henry Edwards, Eſq; (who Succeeded him in his Office of Maſter of the ſaid Court of Chancery) a Debt of Twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds Four Shillings, or ſome other great Sum due from William Wilſon, a Banker to the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, to the intent that the Money received on Account thereof ſhould be applied and diſpoſed of, as the ſaid Court of Chancery ſhould Order and Direct, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, for the Unlawful Purpoſes aforeſaid, without Regard to the Intereſt of the ſaid Suitors, by colour of his Office, did, in an Unwarrantable, Clandeſtine, and Unuſual Manner, Authorize, Direct, and Eſtabliſh a precarious and trifling Compoſition with the ſaid William Wilſon, upon the Terms of the ſaid William Wilſon's paying the Sum of Fourteen hundred ſixty three Pounds, two Shillings and a Penny, and aſſigning Ten thouſand Pounds, part of a Debt of Twenty two thouſand and ſixty Pounds, twelve Shillings and five Pence, pretended to be due to the ſaid William Wilſon from Edward Poulter, or to that Effect, in Diſcharge of the ſaid Debt; and to that End, upon the Report of John Hiccocks, Eſq; then one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, without any Attendance order'd or had thereupon, and without Notice to the ſaid Suitors, did, by a private Order not made in open Court, order the ſaid Henry Edwards to accept of the ſaid Compoſition, in full Diſcharge of the ſaid Debt, which ſaid Edward Poulter was a Perſon inſolvent, and has ſince abſconded for Debt, and none, or but a very ſmall part of the ſaid Ten thouſand Pounds, has been or is ever likely to be received.

ART. XV.

That the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, to carry on his Corrupt and Unjuſt Purpoſes, and to conceal the Deficiency that was in the Office of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, did, in or about the Month of February, in the Year of our Lord, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty, order the ſeveral Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery to bring in their Accounts of the Caſh, Effects, and Securities in their Hands belonging to the Suitors of the Court, not with a Deſign of Examining their Accounts, or Securing the Eſtate and Effects of the Suitors, but with an Intent to Terrify the ſaid Maſters, and thereby oblige them to contribute great Sums of Money towards anſwering the Demands that ſhould, from Time to Time, be made upon the ſaid Office; for which Purpoſe, he the ſaid Earl did at ſeveral Times repreſent, or cauſe to be repreſented to the ſaid Maſters, that if they refuſed ſo to do, the Money and Effects of the Suitors would be taken out of their Hands, and the ſaid Maſters deprived of making any Profit of the ſame; by which Practices the ſaid Earl, being then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, by colour of his Authority, did perſuade and induce Nine of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, to pay Five hundred Pounds each for the Purpoſes aforeſaid, ſeveral of whom paid the ſame out of the Money or Effects of the Suitors in their Hands; but after ſuch Payments, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield did not oblige the ſaid Maſters to deliver in their Accounts in Purſuance of ſuch his ſaid Order.

ART. XVI.

That Elizabeth Chitty, Widow, having obtained an Order of the Court of Chancery, on or about the Seventeenth Day of March, in the Tenth Year of His preſent Majeſty's Reign, made by the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, then Lord Chancellor, whereby Henry Edwards, Eſq; One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, who ſucceeded Fleetwood Dormer, Eſq; in the ſaid Office, was ordered to pay her the Sum of One thouſand Pounds, Part of the Sum of Ten thouſand Pounds, or other great Sum of Money, formerly paid into the Hands of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, as a Maſter of the ſaid Court, and by the ſaid Order mentioned to be then in the Hands of the ſaid Henry Edwards; and the ſaid Henry Edwards complaining to the ſaid Earl, that the making Orders upon him to pay Money which had been received by the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, was a very great Hardſhip upon him the ſaid Henry Edwards, in regard he had not any Money or Effects in his Hands to anſwer ſuch Demands, the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield, being then Lord Chancellor, in further proſecution of his Unjuſt and Corrupt Purpoſes, did, by Colour of his Authority, endeavour to prevail with the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, to raiſe the ſaid Sum of One thouſand Pounds out of their Effects, by repreſenting to them, that a Diſcovery of the Deficiency in the ſaid Office might occaſion a Parliamentary or Publick Enquiry into the Nature and Condition of their Offices, and hazard the Forfeiture of the ſame, by reaſon of their having bought the ſaid Offices contrary to Law, which the ſaid Earl then declared would affect him, but themſelves much more, or to that Effect; but the ſaid Maſters refuſing to raiſe the ſaid Sum of One thouſand Pounds, the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield did order his Secretary Peter Cottingham, Eſq; to pay the ſaid One thouſand Pounds; who, in purſuance of the ſaid Earl's Directions, in or about the Month of July, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty four, did pay the ſame to Aſcan Chriſtopher Lochman, for the Uſe of the ſaid Elizabeth Chitty; and the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield, upon Application made to him by the ſaid Aſcan Chriſtopher Lochman, for Payment of the ſaid Money, did acquaint him, that he, the ſaid Earl, had given Directions to his Secretary for Payment of that Sum, but at the ſame time declared to the ſaid Aſcan Chriſtopher Lochman, that he, the ſaid Earl, belived this would be the laſt Payment ſhe was like to receive out of the ſaid Money paid into the Hands of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, for the Reſidue thereof was in great Danger of being loſt, by reaſon of the Deficiency in the Effects of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, or to that Effect. Notwithſtanding all which Proceedings, in this and ſeveral other Articles mentioned, upon a Motion made in the Court of Chancery before the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, then Lord Chancellor, on or about the Fifth Day of December laſt, in a Cauſe there depending between Jane Harper, Plaintiff, and Thomas Caſe, and others, Defendants, relating to the Sum of Two hundred and ſixty Pounds, or ſome other Sum, depoſited in the Hands of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer before his abſconding, and which was then apprehended in great Danger of being loſt, the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, then ſitting in Court as Lord Chancellor, did Publickly, Falſely, and Deceitfully declare, That he had heard there was a Deficiency in the Office of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, but that he, the ſaid Earl, knew nothing of it, only as publick News, or to that Effect; and thereupon did order, that the ſaid Henry Edwards ſhould examine in what Manner the ſaid Two hundred and ſixty Pounds was depoſited with the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, and whether there was likely to be a Loſs of any Money depoſited with the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer.

ART. XVII.

That notwithſtanding the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield well knew, that there was a very great Deficiency and Loſs by the Failure of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, and that the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Succeſſor, had not ſufficient in his Hands to pay the whole Money due to the Suitors of the Court, that had been received by the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer on their Account; yet the ſaid Earl of Macclesfield, being Lord Chancellor, in order to carry on his Unjuſt Deſigns of concealing the ſaid Deficiency, and to prevent any publick Enquiry that might ariſe from the juſt Complaints of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, did, from time to time, in manifeſt and wilful Violation of the Truſt repoſed in him, make Orders on the ſaid Henry Edwards for Payment of the Money belonging to ſeveral particular Suitors, which had been lodged in the Hands of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer; In Obedience to which Orders ſeveral Sums were paid, without regard to, or conſideration of the Proportion which the reſt of the Suitors were Entituled to, out of the Effects of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, whereby many of the ſaid Suitors loſt the Benefit of their proportionable Share, to which in Juſtice they were Entituled.

ART. XVIII.

That the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, notwithſtanding that he very well knew, and was informed that the Maſters of the ſaid Court did, or that it was in their Power, from Time to Time, and at their Pleaſure to diſpoſe of and employ the Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the ſaid Court, which were intruſted with them reſpectively, and more particularly, that the Deficiency appearing in the Office of Fleetwood Dormer, Eſq; One of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery, was chiefly occaſioned by his the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer's having taken upon himſelf unduly to Diſpoſe of and Employ the Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the ſaid Court, which were Intruſted in his Hands; and notwithſtanding that, ſoon after the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer became Inſolvent, it was repreſented and propoſed to the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, in order to prevent for the Future any Loſſes that might happen to the Suitors of the ſaid Court, that the ſeveral Effects and Securities belonging to the Suitors ſhould be placed out in ſuch Manner, as that the Power of Diſpoſing, Imploying, or in any manner Trading with the ſame, might be totally taken away from the ſaid Maſters, for the Effecting of which juſt Deſign, a particular Method was laid before the ſaid Earl; and it was alſo further propoſed, that the ſaid Maſters ſhould give ſome reaſonable Security to anſwer the Ballance of ſuch Caſh, as ſhould, from Time to time be in their Hands; and notwithſtanding the ſaid Earl was Credibly Informed, that the Sufficiency of ſome other of the ſaid Maſters was very much ſuſpected, yet the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilſt he was Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and thereby propoſing to make unlawful Gain to himſelf by the Diſpoſal and Sale of the Offices of Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery; and in order to Induce Perſons to give him, the ſaid Earl, a greater Price or Reward for their being admitted to the ſame, did not Require or Demand any Security whatſoever, to be given by any of the ſaid Maſters, upon their being admitted to their Offices, or at any other Time; and the ſaid Earl, with the ſame Corrupt View and Intention, and to keep up the Price of the ſaid Offices, totally neglected to Enquire into the Accounts of the ſaid Maſters, and did Fraudulenly, Unjuſtly, and in Breach of the Truſt repoſed in him, Permit and Incourage the Maſters of the ſaid Court, to Employ and Traffick with large Sums of Money belonging to the Suitors of the ſaid Court, and to make Intereſt thereof for their own unjuſt Gain and Profit; and the ſaid Earl, after ſuch Propoſal made to him, as aforeſaid, or at any other Time, during his Continuance in the ſaid Office, did not take any Care that the Effects of the ſaid Suitors ſhould be placed out in ſuch Manner, as to prevent the Maſters from Trafficking therewith, or that the ſaid Maſters ſhould give ſuch Security, as was propoſed; by Means whereof great Deficiencies, to the amount of many Thouſand Pounds, have been, through ſuch Default of the ſaid Earl, occaſioned in the Offices of ſeveral other of the Maſters, to the great Loſs and Injury of the Suitors of the ſaid Court.

ART. XIX.

That whereas his moſt Sacred Majeſty, out of his Fatherly Goodneſs to His People, did, in or about the Month of November laſt, direct an Enquiry to be made into the Accounts of the Maſters of the ſaid Court of Chancery, to the Intent that proper Methods might be taken for the Security of the Suitors of the ſaid Court; the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and One of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, in order to Obstruct the same, and to prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry into the State and Condition of the Offices of the said Masters, In Breach of the several great Trusts reposed in him, did give Advice and Encouragement to the said Masters to Assist and Supply each other with Money and Effects, and did represent to the said Masters, that it would be for their Honour and Service, to appear able and sufficient, and that if they made a Bold Stand now, it might prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry, or to that Effect; and did persuade several of them to make false Representations of their Circumstances to His Majesty, by adding a Subscription to their respective Accounts deliver'd to the said Earl, to be laid before His Majesty, to the Effect following (viz.) That they were able to answer the Money and Securities in their Hands, and were willing to pay the same to such Persons as were Entituled thereunto, although the said Earl knew, or had good reason to believe, that several of the Masters were not then able to answer the Ballance of their Accounts, nor are they yet able to satisfie or make good the same; and when the said Masters were afterwards required to produce the Cash and Effects of the Suitors in their Hands, some of the said Masters, according to such Advice and Encouragement given by the said Earl, did Supply others of them with Cash and Effects, to make a false shew and appearance of their Ability and Readiness to answer the Ballance of their Accounts.

ART. XX.

That the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued in the Office of Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, in Breach of the Trust reposed in him, and contrary to the Duty of his Office, did, at several times, borrow and receive of some of the Masters of the said Court, several great Sums of the Money belonging to the Suitors of the said Court, deposited in the Hands of such Masters, and did make use thereof for his own private Service and Advantage, so long as he had occasion for the same.

ART. XXI.

That the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, whilst he continued Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, did, in an illegal and arbitrary Manner, extend the Power and Authority of Lord Chancellor, and of the Court of Chancery, beyond their lawful and just bounds, and did arbitrarily and illegally assume to himself, as Lord Chancellor, and by Colour of his Office, an unjust and unlimited power of dispensing with, suspending and controlling the Statutes of this Realm, made for the Security and Preservation of the Estates and Properties of the Subjects of this Kingdom, to the great Oppression of the Suitors of the said Court, in subversion of the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, in manifest Breach and Violation of the Rights and Liberties of his Majesty's good Subjects, and of his own most solemn Oath, as Lord Chancellor of Great Britain; and more especially, when Francis Tyssen, Esq; deceased, being seized, and possessed of a real Estate of the Value of three thousand Pounds per Annum, or some other great annual Value, did, by his last Will and Testament in writing, duly executed, in or about the Month of October, one thousand seven hundred and seventeen, give and devise all his said real Estate to the Child his Wife was at that time enseint with (if such Child should be a Son) for his Life, without Impeachment of Wast, with Remainders to the first, and other Sons of the said Infant in Tail Male, and did likewise by such Will expresly nominate and appoint his the said Testator's Wife, Rachel Tyson, to be the Guardian of all his Children, during their respective Minorities, if she should so long continue a Widow; and the said Francis Tyssen, soon after died, leaving one Daughter, and the said Rachel, his Widow, with Child, after whose Decease the said Rachel was delivered of such Child, being a Son, afterwards named Francis John Tyssen, in whose Right by virtue of the said Will, and of the Statute made in the Twelfth Year of the Reign of King Charles the Second, intituled, An Act for the taking away the Court of Wards and Liveries, and Tenures in Capite, and by Knights Service, and purveyance, and for settling a Revenue upon His Majesty in lieu thereof; the said Rachel Tyson did lawfully take into her Care and Custody her said Infant Son, and the Estate so devised to him, or was willing and endeavoured so to do, and to undertake the management of his said Lands and Tenements for his best Advantage, and demeaned herself therein without any Misbehaviour; yet the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, being then Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, under Colour of his Office and authority, did, by several Orders made by him, in the Months of January and February, in the Fifth Year of his Majesty's Reign, or in one of them, illegally and arbitrarily, and in direct contravention of the Statute made in that Behalf, remove and exclude the said Rachel Tyson, the Guardian of the said Infant, and also John Nicholas Esq; (a Person of good Substance and Ability, nominated by the said Rachel Tyson to be Receiver of the Rents and Profits of the said Infant's Estate, and approved by Robert Holford, Esq; one of the Masters of the said Court, and for that purpose, who had given sufficient Security for the due Execution of his said Trust) from the Management and Receivership of the said Infant's Estate; and did, by such Orders, unduly and injuriously nominate and appoint Robert Doyley, Esq; a Creature and Confident of his own, and a Person altogether unfit and unqualified for so great a Trust, to be Receiver of the Rents and Profits of the said Infant's Estate, and to have a Salary for the same with a Power to let such Part of the said Estate, as was or should become untenanted, with the Approbation of the said Robert Holford, although the said Rachel Tyson did expresly object unto, and oppose such Appointment of the said Robert Doyley, and did insist to have the Benefit and Exercise of her Right in that Respect, as the Guardian appointed and intrusted by her late Husband; and the said Robert Doyley, after he was so admitted into the said Receivership, did for several Years receive the Rents and Profits of the said Infant's Estate, to the Amount of about Ten Thousand Pounds, or other great Sum, and in his Life-time did embezzle and convert to his own Use great Part thereof; and in or about the Month of November, One thousand seven hundred and twenty two, died insolvent and indebted to the said Infant and his Estate in the Sum of Two thousand six hundred Pounds, or other great Sum, upon the Ballance of his Account, no Part whereof has hitherto been satisfied or paid; and the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, in further Abuse of his Power, and in contempt of the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, when upon Debate of the Matter in the said Court of Chancery, before the said Earl, being then Lord Chancellor, in the Month of January or February, in the Fifth Year of His Majesty's Reign, or in one of them, it was insisted upon, in Behalf of the said Rachel Tyson, by her Council of great Ability and Experience in the said Court, that such the Proceedings of the said Earl, as Lord Chancellor, were a reviving the Power of the Court of Wards, and were not supported or warranted by any Precedent in the Court of Chancery, he, the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, then sitting in the Court as Lord Chancellor, did not only persist in such his Appointment of the said Robert Doyley, but did also arbitrarily, and in Defiance of the said good and beneficial Statute, say and declare, in open Court, that then he would make a Precedent in that Instance, or he, the said Earl, declared and expressed himself to that Effect; which Actings, Proceedings, and Declarations of the said Earl, have been and were not only very injurious and prejudicial to the Right and Interest of the said Rachel Tyson, as Guardian, and to the great Damage and Loss of the Infant Francis John Tyson, and a notorious Violation of Property, but were also a dangerous Exercise of illegal and arbitrary Power, to the Destruction of the Laws and Constitution of this Realm, in manifest Breach of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and in great Abuse of his Authority.

And the said Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, by Protestation, saving to themselves the Liberty of exhibiting, at any Time hereafter, any further Articles, or other Accusation or Impeachment against the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, and also of replying to his Answers which he shall make unto the said Articles, or any of them, and of offering Proof to all and every the aforesaid Articles, and to all and every other Articles, Impeachment, or Accusation, which shall be exhibited by them, as the Case shall, according to the Course of Parliament, require, do pray, that the said Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, may be put to answer the said Crimes and Misdemeanors, and that such Proceedings, Examinations, Tryals, and Judgments, may be thereupon had and given, as is agreeable to Law and Justice.

The ANSWER of Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, to the ARTICLES exhibited by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses in Parliament assembled, in the Name of themselves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, in Maintenance of their Impeachment against him for high Crimes and Misdemeanors, supposed to have been by him committed.

THE said Earl saving to himself all Advantage of Exception to the said Articles, and of not being prejudiced by any Words or want of Form in this his Answer, and also saving to himſelf all Benefit and Advantage of the Act for the King's moſt gracious, general, and free Pardon herein after mentioned, and all Rights and priviledges belonging to him as one of the Peers of this Realm, for Anſwer to the ſaid Articles ſaith, That he having for ſeveral Years executed the Office of Chief Juſtice in the Court of King's-Bench, His Majeſty of His Royal Grace and Favour was pleaſed, the Tenth Day of March, One Thouſand ſeven hundred and fifteen, to advance the ſaid Earl to the Dignity of a Peer of this Realm, and created him Baron of Macclesfield; and, in regard to his Circumſtances at that Time, was further pleaſed, for the better Support of that Honour, to grant to the ſaid Earl the Penſion of Twelve hundred Pounds per Annum, in the Articles mentioned, payable at the Receipt of the Exchequer; and His Majeſty was then likewiſe pleaſed to declare His Royal Intentions of giving to the ſaid Earl's only Son, George Parker, for his Life, an Office of conſiderable Profit, when a proper Opportunity ſhould offer; That in the Beginning of May, in the Year One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, he the ſaid Earl, was, by his Majeſty's great Grace and Favour, appointed Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and was ſworn before His Majeſty in Council the Fourteenth Day of that Month, when the following Oath, being the uſual Oath of Lord Chancellor, was adminiſtred to him, (viz.)

YOU ſhall ſwear, that you ſhall well and truly ſerve our Sovereign Lord the King, and his People, in the Office of Chancellor of Great Britain; and you ſhall do Right to all manner of People, Poor and Rich, after the Laws and Uſages of this Realm; and truly you ſhall Counſel the King, and his Council you ſhall lain and keep; and you ſhall not know nor ſuffer the Hurt or Diſheriting of the King, or that the Rights of the Crown be decreaſed by any Means, as far forth as you may lett, and if you may not lett it, you ſhall make it clearly and expreſsly known to the King, with your true Advice and Counſel; and that you ſhall do and purchaſe the King's Profit in all that you may; All which you ſhall do to the beſt of your Skill and Knowledge.

As God ſhall help you.

And the ſaid Earl at the ſame Time took the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, but no Oath of Office beſides that above ſet forth; and the ſaid Earl doth admit, That, during his Continuance in the ſaid Office of Lord Chancellor, he did Enjoy the uſual Salary, Fees, and Profits belonging to ſuch Office, which, he ſays, are of much leſs annual Value than they are generally (as he believes) eſteemed to be; And that His Majeſty was pleaſed to grant him the Salary or Allowance of Four thouſand Pounds per Annum, in the Articles mentioned, during ſuch Time as he ſhould Continue to be Lord Chancellor; but the ſame is ſo far from being particular in the Caſe of the ſaid Earl (as the ſaid Articles would inſinuate) that it is no other than what hath been for many Years paſt conſtantly granted to, and enjoyed by his Predeceſſors in the ſaid Office; and the ſaid Earl doth likewiſe admit, That His Majeſty did, of His Royal Grace and Bounty, ſign a Warrant for Payment of the Sum of Fourteen thouſand Pounds mentioned in the ſaid Articles, to the ſaid Earl, out of the Receipt of the Exchequer, whereof Two thouſand Pounds was the conſtant uſual Allowance from the Crown to the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, for and towards the Expences in entring upon the ſaid Office; and the Reſidue of the ſaid Fourteen thouſand Pounds, over and above the uſual Fees and Deductions upon Payment thereof, was His Majeſty's Royal Munificence to the ſaid Earl, and the ſame was received by him accordingly; And the ſaid Earl doth likewiſe, with the greateſt Gratitude, own, that about the ſame Time, his ſaid Son being then of a proper Age, and deſirous to go abroad to travel, His Majeſty was pleaſed to grant to the ſaid George Parker the Yearly Penſion of Twelve hundred Pounds, payable out of the Receipt of the Exchequer, during the joynt Lives of His Majeſty and the ſaid George Parker, determinable upon His Majeſty's granting to him, the ſaid George Parker, in Poſſeſſion or Reverſion, the Office of One of the Tellers of the Exchequer, for Life, and his coming into the actual Poſſeſſion thereof and which the ſaid Earl likewiſe admits has been ſince granted to his ſaid Son, and that he came into the actual Poſſeſſion thereof in or about July, One thouſand ſeven hundred and nineteen, whereby the ſaid Yearly Penſion is determined; And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That, during his continuance in the ſaid Office of Lord Chancellor, or at any other Time, he never once had a Deſign, or View, or Wiſh to raiſe to himſelf any Exorbitant Gain or Profit, much leſs uſed or ever thought of uſing any Unjuſt or Oppreſſive Methods to Extort or Obtain any Sum whatſoever, as in the ſaid Articles is ſuggeſted, but ſuch Views and Practices are inconſiſtent with the whole Tenor of his Life and Actions; And in caſe it ſhall be thought proper for the ſaid Earl to lay before your Lordſhips an Account of his Eſtate and Fortune, and of the conſiderable Sums of Money he has diſtributed for the Relief and Support of others, it will appear that he is not ſuch a Deſigning, Avaritious, and Oppreſſive Man, as in the ſaid Articles he is repreſented; And the ſaid Earl humbly hopes, that he ſhall be allowed, in this his Anſwer, to diſtinguiſh between Acts themſelves, and the Inferences drawn from them by the ſaid Articles, and that whenever he admits any Fact, he may not be underſtood to admit that ſuch Fact was by him done or committed upon ſuch Motives, and with ſuch Deſigns, or in ſuch Manner, as is ſuggeſted in the ſaid Articles. And with this Reſervation he anſwereth, as followeth: By way of General Anſwer to ſuch of the ſaid Articles, as relate to the making any Preſent by Perſons admitted to the Office of Maſters in Chancery; The ſaid Earl doth ſay, That the ſame has been long uſed and practiſed in the Time of his Predeceſſors, in the ſaid Office, and that ſuch Preſents have been reckoned amongſt the ancient and known Perquiſites of the Great Seal, and the making and accepting thereof has been Notorious to all the World, and never before looked upon to be Criminal or Complained of as ſuch; And the ſaid Earl humbly hopes, that the giving or receiving of a Preſent on ſuch Occaſion is not Criminal in itſelf, or by the Common Law of this Realm, and that there is not any Act of Parliament whatſoever, by which the ſame is made Criminal, or ſubject to any Puniſhment or Judgment, which can be prayed in this Proſecution; And the ſaid Earl thinks himſelf obliged humbly to lay this before your Lordſhips, not only in his own Defence, but in Vindication of the Honour of ſo many Great and Excellent Men, who have been his Predeceſſors in the ſaid Office, and have all along done the ſame, for which the ſaid Earl is now complained of, and of others having been Lords Chief Juſtices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, Maſters of the Rolls and other Judges, who have likewiſe received Preſents in Money, upon the Admiſſion of the ſeveral and reſpective Officers under them, in ſeveral Courts of Juſtice, and who, the ſaid Earl is aſſured, never apprehended themſelves to be Guilty of any Crime againſt any the good and wholſome Laws or Statutes of this Realm.

To the Firſt, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Articles, The ſaid Earl further ſaith, That long before the Twenty fourth of July, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty one, He did Admit and Swear Richard Godfrey, James Lightboun, John Borrett, and Edward Conway Eſquires, into the Offices of Maſters of the Court of Chancery, and every One of them did Freely and Voluntarily, and of their Own Accord, as former Maſters had done to the Predeceſſors of the ſaid Earl, ſend to the ſaid Earl a Preſent upon Occaſion of the reſpective Admittances, which the ſaid Earl accepted, and that after the ſaid Twenty fourth of July, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty one, he did Admit and Swear William Kynaſton, Thomas Bennet, and Francis Elde into the Offices of Maſters of the Court of Chancery, and ſaith, That every of the ſaid Perſons laſt Named did Freely and Voluntarily, and of their Own Accord, in like Manner, ſend a Preſent to the ſaid Earl upon Occaſion of their reſpective Admittances, but ſaith, That it being pretended by the ſaid Kynaſton and Bennet, that they were by ſuch Preſents diſabled from Anſwering ſo much of the Money due from them to the Suitors of the Court, he the ſaid Earl did afterwards, and before the Impeachment deliver the Preſent ſo ſent him by the ſaid William Kynaſton, being Fifteen hundred ſeventy five Pounds; and alſo the Preſent ſo ſent him by the ſaid Thomas Bennet, being the like Sum of Fifteen hundred ſeventy five Pounds, into the Court of Chancery, in open Court, to be applied for the Benefit of the Suitors, as the Court ſhould Direct, and that the ſaid Earl retained of the Preſent ſo ſent him by the ſaid Francis Elde, no more than the Sum of One Thouſand eight hundred and fifty Pounds.

VIII. To the Eighth Article the ſaid Earl further ſaith, That in July laſt the Office of one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court became Vacant by the Death of John Borrett, Eſq; who died Inteſtate, but whether Solvent or not, he cannot ſay, but upon Notice of his Death, the ſaid Earl did at Firſt deſire Richard Godfrey, Eſq; One of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, who had been very well acquainted with the ſaid Mr. Borrett, and his Affairs, and afterwards the ſaid Mr. Godfrey and John Bennet Eſquire, another of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, to inquire into his Effects, and to take what Care they could about the ſame, who, after ſome Inquiry, informed the ſaid Earl, that they believed there would be no Deficiency, and Secured a Conſiderable Part of the Effects of the ſaid Mr. Borrett, and Entred a Proper Caveat in the Prerogative Court, to prevent Adminiſtration being granted to any Perſons who might Embezzle the ſaid Borrett's Eſtate; and afterwards, at the Requeſt of the ſaid Earl, proceeded ſo far, as to Obtain a Sentence in the ſaid Prerogative Court, for Adminiſtration to be granted, for the Benefit of the Suitors of the Court, to them, the ſaid Mr. Bennet and Mr. Godfrey, which was afterwards upon their Waving thereof, Granted to Mr Paxton, as the ſaid Earl believes, but the ſaid Earl thought it proper and neceſſary to Admit another Maſter in his Place, to Carry on the Buſineſs of the Court, and to be Intituled to Demand the Effects of the Suitors, from the Repreſentative of the ſaid Mr. Borrett, when one ſhould be appointed; and therefore, about the Fifth Day of Auguſt laſt, did Admit and Swear Mark Thurſton, Eſq; into the ſaid Office, Vacant by the Death of the ſaid Borrett, and the ſaid Earl Admits the ſaid Mark Thurſton did upon that Occaſion Freely and Voluntarily, and of his own Accord, ſend a Preſent, whereof Two thouſand Pounds and no more were Retained.

IX. In Anſwer to the Ninth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he believes Thomas Bennet, Eſq; in this Article named, was Poſſeſſed of the Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, in the Article deſcribed, and that ſuch Office is in the Gift and Diſpoſal of the Crown, by Grant under the Great Seal, but denies that he did at any time Inſiſt upon the Sum of One hundred and five Pounds, or any other Sum of Money, to permit or accept of the Reſignation of the ſaid Thomas Bennet, or did refuſe to permit or accept thereof, until the ſaid Thomas Bennet had agreed to pay the ſame, or any other Sum on that Account; But ſaith, That although the ſaid Office be uſually granted by the Crown, yet it has always been looked upon to be the Right of the Lord Chancellors, or Lord Keepers, to Recommend to that, and other Offices under the Great Seal, and to Approve and Allow of the Deputies to Execute the ſame; and, upon ſuch Recommendations and Approving of Deputies, have accepted Preſents, and looked upon the ſame as their Right; and further ſaith, That there have been Two of ſuch Offices granted in his Time, One of which appearing to him to be a Caſe wherein the Party had ſuffered great Hardſhip, the ſaid Earl paſſed the ſame without any Preſent whatſoever, though the Office be of Conſiderable Value; the other was the Caſe of Mr. Hamerſley, in the Articles mentioned, in which the ſaid Earl owns he did Accept a Preſent.

X. In Anſwer to the Tenth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, The ſame is conceived in ſuch General Terms, that it is not to be expected he ſhould give any particular Anſwer thereto; However, he ſaith, That, during the whole Time of his being Lord Chancellor, he never Once took any Money, Preſent, or Gratuity whatſoever, for or upon Account of the Naming, Making, or Admitting any Officer whatſoever, other than before particularly named, Except in the Curſitor's Office, where he owns he has done, as was done by all his Predeceſſors before him.

XI. In Anſwer to the Eleventh Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That the ſame not containing any Particular Charge, he apprehends himſelf not obliged to give any Particular Anſwer thereto; but however, in General, does ſay, That he never did Admit any Perſon into the Office of a Maſter of the Court of Chancery, but who was either known to be of Subſtance and Ability, and fit to be Truſted in ſuch Office, or, upon a proper Inquiry, very well recommended to him as ſuch; and, whenever there have been ſeveral Candidates, the ſaid Earl has Conſtantly given the Preference to him that he thought would beſt Diſcharge the Office, and moſt for the Honour of the Court, and the Advantage of the Suitors; and believes that he may, upon ſome Occaſions, have declared, that he thought the then Body of Maſters as Good, with reſpect both to their Eſtates, and Ability for Diſcharge of the Office, and their Integrity, as had been at any time before, or to that Effect, and what he did ſay to that Purpoſe, he thought to be really true.

XII. To the Twelfth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That if there was any ſuch Practice as is mentioned in the Article, of paying for the Places of the Maſters out of the Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the Court, he was totally ignorant of it; but admits, that he did not, nor did any of his Predeceſſors, that ever he heard or believes, give any particular Directions for Schedules to be made of the Money and Effects of the Suitors of the Court to be delivered over to the ſucceeding Maſters, but believes, that in Virtue of the General Order of Transfer made of courſe upon every Admittance, ſuch Schedules were made between the New Maſters and their Predeceſſors, or the Repreſentatives of their Predeceſſors; and if the ill Conſequences, in the Articles alledged, had followed from ſuch Practice, or the not ordering ſuch Schedule, which he does not Admit, he Inſiſts that the ſame could not render him Criminal.

XIII. In Anſwer to the Thirteenth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That after Chriſtmas, in the Year One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty, he was Informed, That the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer had withdrawn himſelf to Holland, where he then was, and thereupon the ſaid Earl uſed all the propereſt Methods he could for Securing his Effects, and particularly directed Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers, the then two Senior Maſters of the Court, to make an Enquiry into his Affairs and Accounts, and to conſider what would be moſt proper to be done; And the ſaid Earl believes, that the ſaid two Maſters, in Purſuance of the Directions from the ſaid Earl, did ſearch the Chambers of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, in Lincolns-Inn, to ſee what Books, Accounts, or Effects could there be met with, but found no Account whatſoever, nor any Effects of Value, and did put a Stop to the transferring of the Stock, then in the Name of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, in any of the Publick Companies; And the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer's Perſon being thus out of Reach, and his Accounts and Effects wholly unknown, except the Stock, which could not be diſpoſed of without his Concurrence, a Propoſal was ſome time after made to the ſaid Earl, That the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer might have a Promiſe of his Liberty from the ſaid Earl, and upon that Condition he would come over, and aſſign all his Effects, and aſſiſt in getting them in, and ſettling and adjuſting his Accounts; And the ſaid Earl, ſeeing no other way open to get any thing for the Suitors, and being made to believe, that if any Deficiency ſhould happen, the ſame would be made up by the other Maſters, did agree, That in caſe the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer would come over, and make a full Diſcovery of all his Effects, and aſſign the ſame for the Benefit of the Suitors, he the ſaid Earl would allow him his Liberty on that Condition, and not otherwiſe; and the ſaid Earl was ſoon after Informed, That the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer ſubmitted to thoſe Terms, and would very ſoon come over, and diſcover and deliver up his Effects; And the ſaid Earl did not doubt, but the whole Debt upon the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer would be paid. And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he does not remember that any Application was ever made to him, by the ſaid Maſters of the ſaid Court, for any Aſſiſtance of the Court, touching the Perſon or Effects of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, but what he granted, ſo far as he thought it tended to the Benefit of the Suitors, and believes that no Application was ever made to him by the Suitors, or any of them, or any other, to ſecure the Perſon of the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, or for Compelling him to make Satisfaction to the Suitors; And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he never endeavoured to Conceal the true State and Condition of the ſaid Office from the Suitors of the Court, nor did any of them apply, till very lately, to the ſaid Earl to look into the ſame; And further ſaith, That he remembers nothing of his ever Uſing any ſuch Expreſſion, as is charged in the ſaid Article, at any Time before or after he knew that the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer Abſconded.

XIV. To

XIV. To the Fourteenth Article the Earl ſaith, That Henry Edwards, Eſq; in this Article mentioned, ſucceeded to the Office of Mr. Dormer about the Eighteenth Day of May, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty one; but, by Reaſon of the Diſorder the ſaid Office was then under, and the great Danger of a Loſs therein, the Earl had given up and quitted all the Advantage which might Accrue to him upon the Diſpoſal thereof, and left it entirely to the other Maſters to raiſe what Money they could thereby, which was agreed to be all applied towards making Good any Deficiency or Loſs, which might happen to the Suitors of the Court Concerned in that Office; and thereupon the Sum of Five thouſand Pounds was raiſed, by the Diſpoſal of the ſaid Office to Mr. Edwards, and was applied accordingly; And the ſaid Earl believes the Debt from William Wilſon, in this Article mentioned, was aſſigned by the ſaid Mr. Dormer to the ſaid Mr. Edwards in Truſt, and to the Intent, that he ſhould Pay, Apply, and Diſpoſe of the ſaid Debt, or ſuch Part thereof, as ſhould, from Time to Time, be by him got in, and received of and from the ſaid William Wilſon, in ſuch manner as the Court ſhould Order and Direct, or to that Effect; after which ſaid Aſſignment ſo made, the Earl believes that the ſaid Mr. Edwards uſed great Endeavours to obtain Payment and Satisfaction of the ſaid Debt from Mr. Wilſon; but finding all his Endeavours fruitleſs, and that the ſaid Wilſon had long before ſtopt Payment, and was in no Condition of Paying his Creditors the Whole of their Debts, but that he was willing, and had offered to come to a Compoſition, and to pay them in Proportion the Utmoſt he was able; The ſaid Mr. Edwards thereupon, about the Thirtieth Day of June, in the Year of our Lord, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty two, preferred his Petition to the ſaid Earl, as Lord Chancellor, ſetting forth in Subſtance the State of the Caſe, as before mentioned, and Praying that it might be referred to one of the Maſters of the Court, to ſee if ſuch Compoſition, ſo propoſed by the ſaid William Wilſon, were for the Benefit of the Perſons Intituled to receive the ſame; and the ſame was accordingly, by Order of the ſaid Earl, referred to Mr. Hiccocks, the then Senior Maſter of the Court, to Enquire into, and make his Report therein; And about the Six and twentieth Day of July, then next following, the ſaid Mr. Hiccocks made his Report, that the ſaid William Wilſon had, under his Hand in Writing, propoſed to Aſſign over to the ſaid Mr. Edwards, as a Compoſition for, and in full Diſcharge of, the Sum of Twenty four thouſand forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, therein mentioned to be due and owing from him to the ſaid Mr. Edwards, as Aſſignee of the ſaid Mr. Dormer, the Sum of Ten thouſand Pounds, Part of a large Sum due to the ſaid William Wilſon, from Edward Poulter of Hackney, Gentleman, in this Article mentioned, and to pay the ſaid Mr. Edwards in Specie, the Sum of One thouſand four hundred ſixty three Pounds, two Shillings and one Penny, over and above the Sum of Five hundred and ſixty Pounds, then already paid to the ſaid Mr. Dormer, in Part of the ſaid Compoſition; and that upon Conſideration had of the Circumſtances of the ſaid William Wilſon, and the ſaid ſeveral Matters, he was of Opinion, that the accepting the ſaid Compoſition would be for the Benefit of the Perſon or Perſons Intitled to receive the ſame; Upon which ſaid Report the ſaid Mr. Edwards, about the Third of Auguſt then next, preferred another Petition to the ſaid Earl, with the ſaid Report annexed, and thereby expreſly Prayed the ſaid Earl to Order him, the ſaid Mr. Edwards, to accept of the ſaid Compoſition, whereupon the ſaid Earl, in a proper and uſual Manner, Ordered the ſame as Prayed; And the ſaid Earl ſaith, that he was informed, and believes, that the ſaid Compoſition was Made and Agreed to, upon a Conſultation of all or moſt of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, who the ſaid Earl did believe would Uſe their beſt Endeavours to get as much as they could; And the ſaid Earl ſaith, he hath heard, and believes it to be true, that beſides the One thouſand four hundred ſixty three Pounds, Two Shillings and One Peny, then paid down, there hath been ſince got in by Mr. Edwards, on Account of the ſaid Debt from Edward Poulter, the Sum of One thouſand Pounds, or thereabouts; and that at the time of the ſaid Aſſignment, the ſaid Debt, claimed by Wilſon from Poulter, was a juſt Debt, and Judgment at Law has been ſince obtained for Eighteen thouſand Pounds, Part thereof, and the ſaid Poulter was looked upon to be a Subſtantial Perſon, though, to avoid Payment of the ſaid Wilſon's Debt, which aroſe on account of their Dealings in South Sea Stock, and Subſcriptions in the Year, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty, the ſaid Poulter not only brought his Bill in Chancery, but, after the ſame was diſmiſſed, and that he was taken in Execution at Wilſon's Suit at Common Law, he found Means to make his Eſcape out of the Cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Court of King's Bench, and to get over to France or Holland, where he ſtill Continues, as the Earl is informed; but he is likewiſe Informed, that, after the ſaid Eſcape, a Commiſſion of Bankruptcy was taken out againſt him by the ſaid Wilſon, upon which ſome Effects were recovered, and likewiſe an Action at Law brought, and a Verdict and Judgment for Eighteen thouſand Pounds and upwards obtained by the ſaid William Wilſon againſt the Marſhal, on Account of the ſaid Eſcape; and ſaith, he hath likewiſe been Informed, That the ſaid Edward Poulter and the Marſhal have each of them offered Conſiderable Sums of Money by way of Compoſition for the ſaid Debt; but the ſaid Wilſon, from a Perſuaſion of the Abilities of the ſaid Edward Poulter to pay the Whole, did at firſt refuſe any Compoſition with the ſaid Poulter, and ſince hath been afraid to make any Compoſition, either with Poulter or the Marſhal; and what may be the Conſequence thereof, with regard to the Suitors of the Court, or what further Sums of Money may be recovered upon Account of the ſaid Debt, towards making them Satisfaction, the Earl ſaith, he cannot with any Certainty take upon him to Anſwer.

XV. To the Fifteenth Article the Earl ſaith, That about the Month of February, in the Year of our Lord, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty, he gave Orders to his Secretary to write to the ſeveral Maſters of the Court of Chancery, to bring in their Accounts of the Caſh, Effects, and Securities in their Hands, belonging to the Suitors of the Court, and believes he did ſo, but denies that the ſame was done with any unjuſt Purpoſe, or with any Thought to terrifie the ſaid Maſters to make any Contribution, towards Satisfying the Demands upon the ſaid Office of Fleetwood Dormer, but believes, what they did contribute, they paid Freely and Voluntarily, and out of their own Money, and therein, as the ſaid Earl believes, did no more than follow a Precedent of the like Nature, on the Failure of Dr. Edisbury, formerly a Maſter of the ſaid Court; And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That his real and whole Intention in Calling for the ſaid Accounts, was to Inform himſelf, in the beſt Manner he was able, of the State and Condition of the ſeveral Offices, and thereby to be the better able to make proper Regulations concerning the ſame; and therefore, though the ſaid Article ſeems to Inſinuate, as if the Calling for the ſaid Accounts was dropped, as ſoon as the Maſters were prevailed on to Contribute, the ſaid Earl ſaith, That afterwards, and without any Regard thereto, he ſtill Continued to Call for the ſaid Maſters Accounts, and not finding them brought in, as he expected, he did, about the Beginning of November following, cauſe another Letter to be ſent to them, requiring them to bring in their Accounts; and, by both the Letters ſent to them on that Occaſion, he directed the particular Method in which he would have their Accounts made up; but the ſaid Earl, being afterwards convinced how Difficult and Tedious a Work it would be, and what Obſtruction it would give to the Buſineſs of the Court, and that at laſt it could not be depended upon with any Certainty, was forced to lay aſide that Deſign, and to content himſelf with going on in the ſame Road which his Predeceſſors had done; and humbly begs leave to Obſerve, That what has been lately done, with reſpect to the Accounts of the ſaid Maſters, plainly ſhews the Inſuperable Difficulties of ſuch an Undertaking.

XVI. To the Sixteenth Article the Earl ſaith, That he believes that, on or about the Seventeenth of March, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty three, ſuch Order was made, as in the ſaid Article is mentioned, for Henry Edwards, Eſq; to pay Elizabeth Chitty one thouſand Pounds, Part of the Money brought before Mr. Dormer, but does not remember that the ſaid Henry Edwards made any Complaint thereof to the ſaid Earl, but believes Mr. Edwards, not having then ſufficient Effects of Mr. Dormer's in his Hands, refuſed Payment thereof; and that in July following, Mr. Lochman, in the Articles named, applied himſelf to the ſaid Earl ſeveral times, and in a very earneſt Manner, to help the ſaid Mrs. Chitty to the ſaid One thouſand Pounds, alledging that he the ſaid Mr. Lochman was to marry her, and that he had made a Compoſition with his Creditors, upon which One thouſand Pounds was to be paid in a very ſhort Time, which he then mentioned; and that he the ſaid Mr. Lochman was to have the ſaid One thouſand Pounds for that Purpoſe; and that, if he had it not by the Time, the Compoſition would be Void, and he ſhould be utterly Ruin'd; And at length the ſaid Earl, being greatly moved by the preſſing Importunities of the ſaid Mr. Lochman, and by Compaſſion for the very great Diſtreſs in which he then appeared to be, did promiſe to ſupply him with the ſaid One thouſand Pounds out of his own Pocket, and accordingly directed Mr. Cottingham, then his Secretary, to pay it, taking from the ſaid Mrs. Chitty an Aſſignment of the Benefit of the ſaid Order, and believes the ſame was done accordingly; and that, upon Mr. Lochman's Preſſing for a further Sum for the ſaid Mrs. Chitty, for her own Uſe, the ſaid Earl might tell him, that the ſaid One thouſand Pounds was all that he muſt Expect from the ſaid Earl; and the ſaid Earl does not believe that he had any Diſcourſe with the ſaid Maſters to perſuade them to pay the ſaid One thouſand Pounds to Mr. Lochman.

And as to the laſt Branch of the ſaid Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That the Fact was, that one Jackman, having, in the Cauſe in the Article mentioned been Confirmed the beſt Purchaſor of part of the Eſtate of T. Harper at the Price of Two hundred and ſixty Pounds, ſo long ago as the Nineteenth of December, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventeen, and it being at the ſame time Ordered, That the Writings belonging to ſuch Eſtate, ſhould be delivered to his Councel, and that the Tenants ſhould Attorn to him, on his bringing his Purchaſe Money before Mr. Dormer, then one of the Maſters, and the ſaid Money having been brought before the ſaid Maſter the Twenty fourth Day of December, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventeen, and the Tenants, having Attorned to Jackman, but the Conveyances not being then executed, though long before approved, a Motion was made in the Court of Chancery before the ſaid Earl on the Fifth Day of December laſt, that all Parties might Execute the Conveyances, and the Two hundred and ſixty Pounds be paid to the Plaintiff, towards Satisfaction of a Demand ſhe had out of the Eſtate of the ſaid Harper; and thoſe that were to have the Reſiduum of the ſaid T. Harper's Eſtate, inſiſted, that they were always ready to joyn in the Conveyances, if the Purchaſe Money were applied to Diſcharge the reſt of the Eſtate, that they were Apprehenſive of a Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's Eſtate, and therefore neither they nor the Plaintiff ought to be Sufferers by ſuch Deficiency, the Delay having been occaſioned by the Purchaſer, and not by the Plaintiff, and therefore ſcrupled Executing the Deeds, unleſs upon Payment of the Money to the Plaintiff, and diſcharging the reſt of the Eſtate therefrom; and this being the firſt Time that any Queſtion relating to Mr. Dormer's Deficiency had been laid before the Court, by any of the Suitors, the ſaid Earl took Notice of its being ſo, and believes he might Expreſs himſelf to this Effect, That he had indeed heard of the ſaid Dormer's Deficiency, but that it had never yet come Judicially before him, upon Complaint of any of the Suitors of the Court; and further Declared, That if there ſhould be any Deficiency in his Office, ſeveral Circumſtances had concurred thereto, as Wilſon the Banker's ſtopping Payment, greatly Indebted to him, Poulter's going away in Wilſon's Debt Eighteen thouſand Pounds, and upwards, after a Verdict and Judgment at Law, and Poulter in Actual Execution for it; and that, as he had heard, Wilſon had then lately brought an Action of Eſcape againſt the Marſhal, and recovered a Verdict againſt him for the like Sum; and how all theſe Matters would at laſt come out, the ſaid Earl ſaid he did not know, or he expreſſed himſelf to that Effect, and no other; and thereupon Ordered, that it ſhould be referred to Mr. Edwards, to examine whether the ſaid Two hundred and ſixty Pounds was Depoſited with Mr. Dormer for the Benefit of any particular Perſon, and whom, and what was the Occaſion of the Delay, that the ſaid Conveyances were not Executed, and the ſaid Two hundred and ſixty Pounds, Purchaſe Money, paid out before the Year one thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty; and whether there was likely to be a Loſs of any Money Depoſited with the ſaid Mr. Dormer, and that upon the Maſters Report ſuch further Order ſhould be made, as ſhould be juſt; and the ſaid Earl hopes the ſaid Order was very proper and neceſſary, and takes the Liberty of Repreſenting to your Lordſhips, That this was after the Accounts of the Maſters had been laid by the ſaid Earl before the Lords of the Council, and had been for ſome Time under the Conſideration of the Judges and others, appointed by His Majeſty to inſpect the ſame.

XVII. To the Seventeenth Article the Earl ſaith, That he never Endeavour'd to conceal the Deficiency Occaſioned by Mr. Dormer's Failure, but as the ſaid Earl was under a full Perſuaſion, that the ſame would all in due Time be made Good, and as Mr. Dormer's Effects were coming in by Degrees, and no Application was made to him by any of the Perſons concerned, to put a Stop to, or any Reſtraint upon, the Payments, he did not think it Incumbent upon him, Ex Officio, to make a Declaration of an Average. And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he does not know that any Order was made by him for Mr. Edwards to pay any Money that had been lodged with Mr. Dormer, except the Order aforementioned, in the Caſe of Chitty, but believes ſeveral Orders have been made by the Court for that Purpoſe, and that the ſaid Mr. Edwards, under a firm Perſuaſion that the whole Deficiency would be made Good, paid out the whole Sums ſo Ordered, ſo far as the Money then in his Hands would extend.

XVIII. To the Eighteenth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, He never knew how the Maſters kept or diſpoſed of the Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the Court; and as he believes, that after Dr. Edisbury's Failure, the then Lord Chancellor, ſo he knows that after Mr. Dormer's misfortune, the Earl thought of ſeveral methods to prevent any Inconvenience upon the like Accident for the Future; but they had both the ſame misfortune, not to bring any of them to ſuch Perfection, as to venture to put them in Practice.

That Several Propoſals were made to him by the Perſons he conſulted upon that Occaſion, but none that he believes, it will be held Criminal not to have then Eſtabliſhed; ſome Things were propoſed that he thought Impracticable, ſome Inſufficient, ſome Inconſiſtent with that compleat Regulation he hoped to make, the Objects he propoſed to himſelf, were to Provide for whatever Deficiency might happen in the Office late of Mr. Dormer, to Secure the Suitors from any future Loſs, and to make ſeveral Regulations relating to the Offices of the Maſters, and he thought theſe would be beſt done together, nor had he perfected the Scheme of any One of them to his own Satisfaction; he Remembers no Propoſal, that he thought would take it totally out of the Power of the Maſters, to diſpoſe of the Securities or Effects, or effectually Secure the Caſh. The ſaid Earl Admits, that he did not demand any Security to be given by any of the ſaid Maſters at the time of their Admittance, becauſe it had not been done by his Predeceſſors, who were much wiſer Men than himſelf, nor was he ſo much as asked by any of the Parties Intereſted ſo to do; as to what the ſaid Earl did with Relation to the Accounts of the ſaid Maſters, he hath already ſet forth, and ſaith, That he gave no Permiſſion nor Encouragement to the Maſters of the Court, to Employ or Traffick with the Suitors Money for their own Gain or Profit; he owns, that with reſpect to the Securities in the Hands of the Maſters, he made no General Order, and thinks it the leſs material, becauſe, notwithſtanding what is alledged in the Cloſe of this Article, he believes all the preſent Maſters did, in December laſt, Produce all the Securities in their Hands, and the Court of Chancery hath ſince Secured the ſame for the Benefit of the Suitors.

XIX. To the Nineteenth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That upon great Conſideration of Mr. Dormer's Deficiency, and of the Danger there might be of further Inconveniences, with Relation to the Money and Effects in the Hands of the Maſters, and of ſeveral Diſputes and Differences that had ariſen in the Court of Chancery, and of ſome Applications of the ſaid Maſters, for Eſtabliſhing them in their juſt Rights, and of ſome Practices of the Maſters, which the ſaid Earl thought ought to be Reformed; he was Convinced, that the ſame was a work of too great Conſequence for him Singly to Attempt, and being highly Senſible of His moſt Sacred Majeſty's Paternal Goodneſs to His People, did preſume humbly to Beſeech His Majeſty, as the fountain of Juſtice, to Depute ſome of His moſt Honourable Privy Council, to take the matters aforeſaid into Conſideration, in Order to the Eſtabliſhing ſuch Regulations, as might tend to the Honour of that High Court, and to the Advantage of His Majeſty's Subjects being Suitors there; which Requeſt, His Majeſty out of His Wonted Goodneſs, was pleaſed to receive very Graciouſly, and Named ſeveral Lords, and other Honourable Perſons of His Privy Council, to be a Committee, to take the ſame into Conſideration; and purſuant to His Majeſty's Command, the ſaid Committee met, and began with the Accounts of the ſaid Maſters, wherein the ſaid Earl begs leave to Appeal to ſuch of your Lordſhips, who Attended in that Committee, whether he did not Contribute to the Utmoſt of his Power, to have every thing done which the ſaid Committee thought Expedient: And the ſaid Earl ſaith, that he made all ſuch Orders as were by them Judged requiſite, and ſo preſſed the Execution thereof, that not only the Accounts of all the Maſters then in being were brought in, but all the Securities in all their Hands, and the Caſh of moſt of them were Actually Lodged in the Bank of England, and therefore the ſaid Earl is greatly Surprized, to find himſelf Charged with Obſtructing the taking thoſe Accounts, which he had thus deſired might be taken, and contributed to the taking of them with all his Power. And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he never thought of preventing a Parliamentary Enquiry, any otherwiſe, than by making it unneceſſary, and procuring to the Suitors a full redreſs of all their Grievances, and rectifying whatever he found Amiſs, and that he looked upon to be his Duty, and begs leave to ſay it here Once for all, in Anſwer to all the ſeveral Inſinuations of that kind contained in the Articles,

And the ſaid Earl further ſaith, That while the ſaid Accounts were taking, every one of the ſaid Maſters declared over and over, that they had Effects ſufficient to Anſwer their whole Accounts, and the ſaid Earl Firmly believed the ſame to be true, and as all of them, that he ſaw (which he believes were all, or at leaſts all but Mr. Kynaſton) had told the ſaid Earl, that they were able to Anſwer their Accounts; and when they brought their Accounts to the ſaid Earl, for him to lay before the ſaid Committee, Mr. Holford had wrote under his Account ſome Declaration to that Effect, and ſome others of them, as he remembers, had made uſe of ſome other Expreſſions, which he thought not ſo proper; and ſome, as he believes, had wrote nothing (but he cannot Diſtinguiſh the Perſons) and the ſaid Earl thinking that when the ſaid Accounts came to be laid before the Committee of Counſel by him, it would be proper that the ſame thing ſhould be Declared to the Committee, which had been ſaid to him ſingly, he Adviſed them all to Write the ſame Words under their Accounts, and did tell them, in great Sincerity and Friendſhip, that at a Time when ſo many Men's Mouths were open againſt them as Inſolvent, it would be for their Honour and Intereſt to make it appear, that they were Able and Sufficient, as he then believed them to be, but never thought of a Contrivance to have them Deceitfully appear or ſeem what they really were not; and he ſays they did then withdraw to make the Subſcription, or at leaſt ſo many of them whoſe Accounts were then ready, and ſoon after deliver'd them to the ſaid Earl, who carried them with him to the Committee of Council, whither he was then going, without looking upon them; but upon reading them at the Council, it was obſerved that they had not all uſed the ſame Words, having Varied conſiderably, but what any of the Subſcriptions were, he cannot take upon him to ſet forth.

And the ſaid Earl further ſaith, That a ſubſequent Order being made by the ſaid Earl, for the ſaid Maſters to produce their Securities, and their Caſh, before the Perſons appointed to Inſpect their Accounts, they made great Complaint, that ſo many hundred thouſand Pounds ſhould be required at ſo ſhort a Warning, and ſome of them ſaying, that though they had Effects ſufficient, and could raiſe the Whole, if they had a little Time, deſired the ſaid Earl to allow them further Time for that Purpoſe; but the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he required them to beſtir themſelves, and raiſe it immediately, telling them, that ſince they had Effects to give Security, they might find Friends to furniſh the Money; and believes he did ſay, that ſome of their own Brethren might perhaps be able to let them have Money till they could raiſe it another Way.

But if any of them did ſupply others with Caſh or Effects to produce, only to make a falſe Shew and Appearance of their Ability and Readineſs to Anſwer the Ballance of their Accounts, the ſaid Earl knows nothing of it, and is ſure they had not the leaſt Encouragement from him ſo to do.

XX. To the Twentieth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That it never entred into his Thoughts, to make uſe of, nor did he ever make uſe of any of the Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court, for his own private Advantage, but believes, that in December, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty, having Occaſion for the Sum of One thouſand five hundred Pounds, and Asking his Secretary, Mr. Cottingham, whether he could lend him the ſame, he ſaid he could not, but would procure it for him, and accordingly Borrowed the ſame from Mr. Godfrey, one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, and the ſaid Earl gave his own Note for Payment thereof to the ſaid Mr. Godfrey, and in February following Repaid One thouſand Pounds, Part of the ſaid Principal Sum; but in the ſame month of February, One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty upon a freſh Occaſion, borrowed again Part of the ſaid One thouſand Pounds ſo paid back, and a Note or Notes were given for the Payment thereof; and ſome Time after the ſaid Earl Ordered the whole Money borrowed of the ſaid Mr. Godfrey to be paid, with all the Intereſt due for the ſame; and the ſaid Godfrey received the Principal, but would not be prevailed upon to take the Intereſt, or any Part thereof: And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That all the ſaid Money was repaid within the Compaſs of a Year, after it was borrowed; and the ſaid Earl declares, That he never received or borrowed any Sums of Money whatſoever of any of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, except as above ſet forth.

XXI. To the One and twentieth Article the ſaid Earl ſaith, That upon the ſtricteſt Review of his own Behaviour, during the Time he had the Honour of Serving His moſt Sacred Majeſty in the Office of Lord Chancellor, he is not Conſcious to himſelf that he ever did, in any Illegal or Arbitrary manner, Extend his Power, or the Power of the Court, beyond their Lawful and Juſt Bounds, or that he did Arbitrarily or Illegally aſſume to himſelf, as Lord Chancellor, or by Colour of his Office, any unjuſt and unlimitted Power of Diſpenſing with, Suſpending, or Controlling the Laws or Statutes of this Realm, or that he any ways Oppreſſed the Suitors of the Court, or was guilty of any Breach or Violation of the Rights or Liberties of the Subject, or of his own Oath, as Lord Chancellor: And with regard to the particular Complaint againſt him in this Article, the ſaid Earl ſaith, That Rachel Tyſon, in the Article named, as the Earl is informed, cauſed a Bill to be Exhibited in the Court of Chancery, in the Name of her Son and Daughter, in the ſaid Article likewiſe mentioned, by their Prochein Amy, againſt herſelf, and the ſaid John Tyſon and others, to have the Truſts in the Will of her late Husband duly performed; and the ſame was brought to Hearing at the Rolls the Seventh Day of July, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, and by the Decree then made, It was amongſt other Things Ordered, upon the Prayer (as the ſaid Earl hath heard and believes) of the Councel employ'd by the ſaid Rachel Tyſon, that a Receiver ſhould be appointed of the Rents and Profits of the Real Eſtate, who was to have a Salary allowed him, and Power to Let and Set the ſaid Eſtate, as there ſhould be Occaſion, with the Approbation of the Maſter, to whom the Cauſe was referred: And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That an Execution of that Part of the Decree, which directed a Receiver to be appointed, the Maſter having certified that he had appointed John Nicholas, Eſq; to be the Receiver of the Rents and Profits of the ſaid Eſtate, the ſaid John Tyſon, thinking himſelf Aggrieved thereby, did, in the uſual Courſe of Proceedings in the ſaid Court, cauſe Exceptions to be Filed againſt the ſame, and upon the Arguing thereof before the ſaid Earl, by Councel of both Sides, Affidavits were read, to ſhew that the ſaid John Nicholas was an Improper Perſon; that the ſaid Teſtator had declared in his Life Time, that the ſaid John Nicholas by Name ſhould not have any thing to do with the Management of his Eſtate; and that a conſiderable Part thereof conſiſted in old Houſes and Water-works: And the ſaid Earl, upon a Full Hearing of both Parties, was of Opinion, that the ſaid John Nicholas ought not to be appointed the Receiver; and upon the Propoſal of the ſaid John Tyſon, then in Court, Order'd Robert Doyley, Eſq; to be Receiver, he giving Security to be approved of by the ſaid Maſter; which Order was made, as he believes, on the Fifteenth of January, in the Year One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen; and affirmed upon the Re-arguing the ſaid exceptions on the Sixth of March, in the Year One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen; ſince which Time the Parties Intereſted have never thought fit to complain thereof to your Lordſhip's by Appeal, in order to have it Reverſed, as miſtaken or Unjuſt, though now the making thereof is complained of as a crime; and the ſaid Earl is not Aſhamed to Own, that he was very well Acquainted with the ſaid Robert Doyley for ſome Years before the ſaid Order, and believed him to be a Perſon of great Honour and Integrity, Application and Exactneſs, and believes there are ſeveral Perſons of Diſtinction, to whom he had the Honour to be known, who had the ſame Opinion of him; but the ſaid Earl did not appoint him Receiver becauſe of his own Reſpect for him, but becauſe he was named by the ſaid John Tyſon, who was Uncle of the ſaid Infant, and Executor of his Father's Will in Truſt for him, and by the ſame Will appointed his Guardian in caſe of his Mother's Death or Marriage, and to whom the ſaid Teſtator had Deviſed the ſaid Eſtate, in caſe of the Death of the ſaid Infant without Iſſue Male, and whoſe Intereſt it therefore was to take Care of the Infant's Intereſt in that particular; and the ſaid John Tyſon and Sir Cæſar Child (whoſe Daughter the ſaid John Tyſon had Married) had ſuch Confidence in him the ſaid Robert Doyley, that upon the Eighteenth Day of March, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, they entred into a Rocognizance, together with him, in the Penalty of ſeven thouſand Pounds, for the ſaid Robert Doyley's duly accounting for and paying the Money he ſhould receive out of the ſaid Infant's Eſtate; And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That no Complaint was ever made to the ſaid Earl againſt the ſaid Robert Doyley to the time of his Death, but he owns that he hath heard, that upon the Maſter's Stating the Accounts ſince Chriſtmas laſt, there does appear due from the ſaid Robert Doyley about Two thouſand and five hundred Pounds, or Two thouſand ſix hundred Pounds, but believes there is not any fear or doubt but that the ſame is very well ſecured by the ſaid Recognizance.

And the ſaid Earl ſaith, That he does not remember the particular Expreſſions uſed by the Council or himſelf, upon Aruging or Re-arguing the ſaid Exceptions, but he cannot believe that any Council of great Ability and Experience in the ſaid Court, would have thought what the ſaid Earl did Extraordinary, much leſs would have uſed ſuch an Expreſſion to the ſaid Earl as in the Articles, which is an Indecent Cenſure of his Proceedings; and here being a Decree in this Caſe, approved of by all Parties, that a Receiver ſhould be appointed to receive the Rents and Profits of the Infant's Eſtate, the ſaid Earl is at a loſs to underſtand, how the fixing on the Perſon to be the Receiver, upon good Security, to account for and pay the ſame for the Infant's Uſe, is Reviving the Court of Wards, whoſe Buſineſs it was to take the Rents and Profits of the Infant's Eſtate for the King's Uſe, without Accounting for any of them to the Infant, but barely providing a Maintenance for him, at the Diſcretion, perhaps, of ſome Grantee of the Cuſtody.

Thus the ſaid Earl has laid his Caſe before your Lordſhips, and doth further, for Anſwer to all the ſaid Articles, ſay, That he is not Guilty of all or any of the Matters contained in the ſaid Articles, or any of them, in Manner and Form as they are therein Charged againſt him; And the ſaid Earl doth further Inſiſt upon the Benefit of His Majeſty's moſt Gracious and General Free Pardon, granted to all His Subjects (not therein Excepted) in and by an Act of Parliament for that Purpoſe made in the Seventh Year of His Majeſty's Reign, in Bar of, and in his Defence againſt the ſaid Impeachment, and the ſaid Articles exhibited in maintenance thereof, and all and every the Proceedings thereupon, ſo far as the ſame extend to any Neglect, Offence, or Miſdemeanor, or Suppoſed Neglect, Offence, or Miſdemeanor, or any other Act, Matter, or Thing, Suffered, Done, or Committed, or Omitted, by him the ſaid Earl, before the Four and twentieth Day of July, in the Year One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty one, and doth humbly Inſiſt, That no Evidence ought to be given againſt him for or concerning any of the Matters or Things aforeſaid, in and by the ſaid Act Pardoned, or any of them; and doth Aver, That he is not within any of the Exceptions in the ſaid Act contained.

MACCLESFIELD.

The COMMONS REPLICATION to the Anſwer of Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield.

THE Commons have conſidered the Anſwer of Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, to the Articles Exhibited againſt him by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled, and Obſerve, that the ſaid Earl hath Induſtriouſly Avoided giving a direct and particular Anſwer to ſeveral Matters poſitively and certainly Alledged againſt him in the ſaid Articles, which, from the Nature of the Facts themſelves, muſt neceſſarily Lie in his own Knowledge, and hath Attempted to Diſguiſe and cover the real Crimes laid to his Charge, by Immaterial and Evaſive Inſinuations of Facts of a different Nature; and that many Parts of the ſaid Anſwer are Contradictory to, and Inconſiſtent with each other, upon which they might Demand your Lordſhips Immediate Judgment: Yet the Commons being able to Maintain the Truth and Juſtice of their Accuſation, are willing to Enter into the due Examination thereof: and do Aver their Charge of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors againſt the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield to be true, and that the ſaid Earl is Guilty, in ſuch Manner as he ſtands Impeached; and that the Commons will be ready to prove their Charge againſt him, at ſuch convenient time as ſhall be Appointed for that Purpoſe.

Lord

Lord C. J. King. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, you may proceed as you please.

Sir G. Oxenden. My Lords, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled have, out of their indispensible Duty to His Sacred Majesty, and Zeal for the Security of the Estates and Properties of their Fellow-Subjects, exhibited a Charge of High Crimes and Misdemeanors against the Earl of Macclesfield, late Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, complaining of many dangerous and corrupt Practices, many grievous and heinous Offences committed against the good and wholesome Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

The first and principal Accusation of the Commons is, That the Earl at the Bar, whilst he continued in the Office of Chancellor, did illegally and corruptly insist upon, and take of divers Persons, several great and exorbitant Sums of Money, in Order to, and before their Admission into their Offices of Masters in Chancery; and that those Offices concern the Administration of Justice in that Court.

This, my Lords, is a Charge of the deepest Dye; The Crime alledged strikes at the very Root of Government itself; it is the Essence and Stability of Society, that Justice should be administer'd with Clearness and Impartiality, that the People may sit easy under the Wings and Protection of the Laws, and their Properties be guarded from unjust Invasions. In the Progress of the Charge your Lordships will observe, That almost all the other Crimes and Misdemeanors, of which this noble Person stands accused, are subservient to this chief Design of amassing together vast and immense Sums of Money, and that they have a Tendency to advance the Price of these Offices: Whether they be acts of unjust Oppression; of wilful Neglect; or of partial and unequal Administration of Justice: Whether they be Acts of open Violation of Duty, or of secret and private Intrigue to elude the publick Justice of the Kingdom: Your Lordships will find these Arrows drawn all from the same Quiver, dipt in the same deadly Poison, and directed to the same Mark.

In order to set this in the clearest Light, I must go on and observe, That the Commons charge in the next Place, That insufficient Persons were found out and pitched upon, to be admitted Masters of the Court, Men of small Substance and Ability; no ways fit to be entrusted with the great Sums of Money and Effects lodged in their respective Hands.

My Lords, The natural Qualities and Endowments requisite to recommend Men to so great a Trust ought to have been Honesty and Probity; The acquir'd ones, those of Knowledge and Experience; without a due Mixture of these it was very hazardous to admit any into Trust: But no doubt Credit and Competency of Fortune were Ingredients perfectly necessary; because whatever Loss, or Misfortune, might attend the Management of a Master so accomplished, in the ordering the Suitors Money, here might be some Provision coming out of his Estate to make Reparation. Your Lordships will, no question, at the first View, think it carries an odd Appearance, when this unfortunate Earl had resolved within himself, at all Hazards, to raise exorbitant and immense Treasures out of the Sale and Disposal of the Masters Places, how it should answer his corrupt Designs to admit into them Persons of small Substance, and some of almost desperate Fortunes, utterly unable to lay down the vast Prices those Offices were sold for at Publick Auction: But, my Lords, the Vastness of the Price was no Objection, or Discouragement, to a Person already undone, provided he might be made easy in the Manner of Payment, and run no Hazards. Men of Substance might very well be afraid to Present, as his Lordship's Phrase is, a whole Estate at once for an uncertain and precarious Prospect, either of Success in the Office, or of Life, or Health, to enjoy it; so that the fittest Engines and Instruments to effect the noble Lord's Purposes, were Men of small and shattered Circumstances. And therefore the Commons go on and charge, That there was a fraudulent and unwarrantable Method made use of in paying for the Masters Offices out of the very Money belonging to the innocent Suitors of the Court.—That this Practice was notorious and publick, and the Person at the Bar well acquainted therewith. Your Lordships now observe, That the greatest Difficulty of all to an indigent Person, viz. the Payment of the Money, was, by this dangerous and unjustifiable Contrivance, totally removed, and when a Man was neither to be out of Pocket himself, nor thrown into any Fears and Apprehensions of being questioned for misapplying the Suitors Money, is it at all to be wondered at, that the Price of these Offices should swell to that Bigness, as long to be the Topick of Conversation in the World about us, and at last become the Subject of a National Enquiry? This scandalous Method of Payment is of the most malignant Kind, and a Suitor is, contrary to the Law of Nature, made the Instrument of his own Destruction; his Substance which ought to be his Support and Relief, is turned to his Oppression, or if Part only be taken from him, it is in order to arm another to dispossess him of the Rest. The great Person, whose Duty it is to protect his Property, is the Promoter of his Loss, and is the more unpardonable in it, as he turns that Loss to his own Advantage. If it be a Thing universally condemn'd, for a Person in the Earl's late high Station, to borrow a Suitor's Money without his Knowledge, notwithstanding he offers a moderate Interest for it, because it is encouraging the Masters, by his own Example, to lend out Sums with as much Justice to other People, How infinitely greater is this Offence? If it be a Crime to put Mens Properties to hazard, how much blacker is it to take them to one's self, and incorporate the Widow's Mite with one's own Heap! But, My Lords, when such prodigious Sums were extorted from the Masters, could it be any Mystery how they were to re-imburse themselves? For although they paid no Money of their own, yet they made themselves accountable for what they used of the Suitors; was it not an obvious Consideration, That if they dared pay for their Employments with part of the Trust-Money they meant to traffick and game with the Remainder too? They came in Masters upon such Terms, for no other Purpose but to pillage and fleece those under their Care. What must be the natural and unavoidable Consequence of lodging in their Hands such uncontrollable and licentious Power over their Cash, but that the first ill Run would crush them at once, and pave the Way to great Deficiencies! But lest the Prospect of so calamitous a Case should deter the most greedy from contracting for a Master's Place on Terms the most inviting, you will see, in the Series of this Affair, what Shifts, what Artifices were employed, to hide such a miserable Scene from the Eyes of the World. For the Commons in the next Place charge, That Fleetwood Dormer, Esq; having embezzelled great Part of the Effects belonging to the Suitors of the Court, died indebted to them in divers Sums of Money, amounting in the whole to 25000*l.* and upwards; that the noble Lord at the Bar has not made any proper Inquiry into Dormer's Deficiency, taken no Care about his Effects, but has endeavoured to hide and conceal, from the Suitors, the State and Condition of the Office, and that this Concealment was, lest a publick Discovery of the Deficiency might leſſen the unjuſt Gains he propoſed to himſelf from the Sale of the Maſters Places. Your Lordſhips obſerve here, That one Accuſation is, a great and manifeſt Neglect in the Execution and Diſcharge of his Duty; a wilful and deliberate Neglect; not ariſing from the Infirmity of human Nature, but growing out of the Corruption of it; mitigated by no one Shadow of Excuſe, but aggravated by the Attendance of many foreſeen ill Conſequences. If an Office abuſed in the moſt fatal Manner, on the Brink and Precipice of utter Deſtruction, was not a proper Object of his immediate Inſpection, no wonder the more proſperous Offices did not deſerve his Care; what Maſter, who was an Eye-Witneſs of this, would be under that decent and neceſſary Awe of the preſiding Perſon, and keep himſelf within the juſt Bounds and Limits of his Office? This, my Lords, is indeed a wilful Neglect: But if you look on it in another Light, in Order to conceal the Deficiency, that the Value of the Maſters Places might not be run down, it will appear, in its worſt Colours, an Artifice to ſupport and carry on a Fraud, a Contempt of Duty for the ſake of Corruption. The Series of the Accuſation will evidently ſhew, that the Earl's Heart was ſet upon this Concealment; for we ſhall now find him beginning to diſplay his utmoſt Ingenuity; here was an Accident, which, unleſs great Care were taken, would entirely fruſtrate and blow up his Deſigns; were Dormer's Deficiency divulged abroad, and the whole Body of the Suitors (who had ſure a Right, even from Compaſſion, to be taken care of) made acquainted with the ruinous Condition of his Office, who would anſwer that the Government itſelf might not have been alarmed, and a publick Inſpection made four Years ago into the other Maſters Accounts too? The Dread of a publick Examination now overbalanced all other Conſiderations; and as ſome of the Suitors (whoſe Intelligence and Sagacicity were better than the reſt) were daily preſſing and ſolliciting for their Due, the Office-Money embezzelled, no care taken to ſecure Dormer's Effects, all Supplies and Demands on Wilſon cut off by the wretched and unwarrantable Compoſition made for the Suitors without their Conſent or Knowledge: Theſe Diſtreſſes and Difficulties preſſing and ſurrounding this unfortunate Earl, it was neceſſary ſome Meaſures ſhould be immediately concerted to prop and ſupport this tottering Office; and therefore, my Lords, you will now find him arming himſelf with the Weapons of Authority and uncontrollable Power, and playing the Tyrant under the ſpecious Pretence and Colour of Duty. For the Commons go on and charge, That the Perſon at the Bar, during the Time he was Lord Chancellor, made an Order for the Maſters to bring in their reſpective Accounts of the Caſh and Securities in their Hands; (a very proper Inſpection, no doubt, had it been well-deſigned) but your Lordſhips will obſerve the Charge is, That this was done to terrify and induce the Maſters to contribute Money towards Dormer's Deficiency; to conceal the true State of the Deficiency from the Knowledge of the World: and they further alledge, That in purſuance of this intimidating Order, Money was contributed for that Purpoſe, Part of which we ſhall prove to be paid ſince the Act of Grace, on the 11th of Auguſt, 1721. and that thoſe Accounts were not inſiſted upon after that. My Lords, This Propoſal met with its deſerved Oppoſition from the Maſters; however, the Apprehenſion of loſing the Caſh and Effects prevailed at laſt, the Point was carried, and a Sum accordingly contributed. When your Lordſhips have but juſt now ſeen that there was a very viſible, and deſigned Neglect in forbearing to inquire into Dormer's Effects, and to go to the Bottom of his Deficiency; is it to be imagined, that this calling for the State of their Accounts cou'd be done out of Vigilance and Duty? No Man can think ſo; were they ever inſiſted upon after the Contribution? His Lordſhip knows they never were; if the real Deſign was to ſearch and examine them, it was as proper a Time to do it after the 11th of Auguſt as before, no body believes they were in a better Condition, the Maſters had the ſame free Power of their Caſh, and the Perſon at the Bar had as deep a Senſe of his Duty after that Day ſure, as before. If the Misbehaviour of Dormer gave occaſion to this deſigned Inſpection into the general Condition of the other Offices, how came it about the Deſign was never carried into Practice, till His Majeſty, out of Compaſſion and Paternal Goodneſs to his oppreſſed People gave Directions for that End? The Deficiency of Dormer continues ſtill, and yet the Earl impeached has made no Regulations in the Offices, examined no Accounts during the Time he remained in that high Poſt; nor ſet up any Lights, or Land-Marks, whereby the preſent deficient Maſters might have cleared the Rocks on which they have ſplit. No, my Lords, this was only a Pretence of Regulating; a Diſſimulation of Duty, for the better Concealment of Dormer's Frauds. Beſides, the Propoſal that the Maſters ſhould contribute to the patching up a Deficiency in another's Office, is unjuſt in itſelf, and fatal in its Conſequence. Can any thing be more repugnant to Juſtice than to oblige one Perſon to repair the Loſſes of another, incurred without his Knowledge or Fault? Or where is the Advantage to the Offices in general, allowing it to be juſt? if Dormer's Deficiency be ſupplied out of other Offices, will not thoſe Offices miſs thoſe Supplies? and be as much impoveriſhed in the general, as Dormer's is mended in particular? Surely, my Lords, there needs no Reaſoning about this, the Thing ſpeaks itſelf. The Commons take notice of an Alternative in this Article offered to the Maſters, either to conſent to a Contribution, or to be immediately ſtripp'd of the Caſh and Effects; ſo that upon paying down the Sum demanded, a Maſter was confirmed afreſh in the ill Conduct of his Affairs, he pays his Fine, and renews his Leaſe of Knavery and Impunity; his Books may be kept as cloſe from Inſpection as the Books of the Sybils, they contain alike the Deſtiny of Mankind, and he may go on with Authority to prey upon the Properties of the Fatherleſs and Widow; and no doubt the Maſter argues upon as good Grounds as the noble Earl; and concludes, that if for the Advantage of his unjuſt Schemes, the impeached Lord thinks it highly reaſonable to extort Money from him belonging to the Suitors, which is never to be reſtored, it may, with Parity of Juſtice, be as decent for him to take the ſame Liberty with their Caſh too, for the Service of his own. But the Commons deteſt the corrupt Practices of both, and expect exemplary Juſtice on the Great Offender at the Bar.

Thus far I have touched in a general Manner on the Management and Artifices uſed in the Concealment of Dormer's Deficiency, and, no doubt, it muſt create an univerſal Aſtoniſhment in your Lordſhips, how it could ever enter into the inmoſt Receſſes of his Thoughts, that ſo great a Calamity as this could poſſibly be for ever hid in Darkneſs; that ſo torn and ghaſtly a Wound could ever heal of itſelf; or rather, that it ſhould not by long Neglect become quite incurable.

Your Lordſhips will obſerve in the enſuing Charge, That Mrs. Elizabeth Chitty, an unfortunate Widow, having obtain'd an Order from the Earl at the Bar, by Virtue of which Mr. Edwards, Dormer's Succeſſor, was to pay her 1000 l. part of a much larger Sum depoſited in the Hands of Mr. Dormer, and Edwards refuſing to pay the ſame, not having ſufficient in his Hands, out of Dormer's Effects, to anſwer the ſaid Demand. The impeach'd Lord did again make uſe of the ſame Artifices fices and Stratagems to compel the ſeveral Maſters to contribute this further Sum of 1000 l. to ſtop the Complaints, and ſtifle the Murmurings of Mrs. Chitty; and did alſo intimidate them, by repreſenting, That if the Deficiency were known, a Parliamentary Enquiry would probably enſue, and the Maſters be deprived of their Offices, having bought them contrary to Law: This not taking Effect, the Commons Charge, That in order to accompliſh his wicked and corrupt Purpoſes, he did himſelf pay the 1000 l. into Lochman's Hands, for the Uſe of Mrs. Chitty, ſaying, this was the laſt Money ſhe was ever likely to receive, by reaſon of a Deficiency in Dormer's Office. My Lords, You ſee here is a ſecond Attempt, a freſh Endeavour to conceal the Deficiency by the Aid and Aſſiſtance of the ſame Meaſures made uſe of before, but backed by the Terrors of a National Inſpection. The Continuation of theſe Arts is no ſmall Preſumption, that the End deſigned was unjuſt in the Earl's own Judgment. His Condemnation, in this Inſtance, ariſes and ſprings out of his own Arguments and Conduct. If a publick Diſcovery of this Deficiency would lay the Foundation of a publick and national Examination; What ſafer, what more expedient Meaſures could be concerted and taken, than immediately to ſatisfy Mrs. Chitty's Demands; by the Refuſal of which, this publick Diſcovery, ſo much, and ſo juſtly apprehended, might come out? And what ſtronger Inducement could he lay before the Maſters, why the Burden of this Payment ſhould fall upon them, than by ſhewing in how fatal a Manner that national Examination would affect themſelves? He repreſents to them their having purchaſed their Offices (and many of them of himſelf too) in direct defiance of the Law, and that it was their near Concern to avoid the Pit, in which they were likely to be ſwallowed up. My Lords, I take this to be a plain Confeſſion of his Crime: Our Accuſation is, That the Sale of theſe Offices is repugnant to Law and Juſtice; Here is his own manifeſt Acknowledgment that it is ſo, but aggravated and heightened by this flagitious Circumſtance, That whilſt he is reminding the Maſters of that Guilt which he himſelf ſhared, he draws an Argument from that very Guilt, why they ſhould aſſiſt him in a freſh Offence; and ſince they had already offended againſt the Laws of the Land, if they would avoid Puniſhment, the beſt way of doing it, was by a new Tranſgreſſion. You have his own Word for it, that he knowingly exceeded the ſtatutable Limits preſcribed by the Wiſdom of our Anceſtors, for the Safeguard and Protection of the Rights and Properties of the Britiſh Nation. If the Buyer is Criminal, how can the Seller be Innocent? And yet his Lordſhip, it ſeems, knows of no Statute now in being, on which Judgment can be prayed in this Proſecution. 'Tis this wilful and deliberate Tranſgreſſion of the Laws that has opened that Fountain of Iniquity which has drowned and laid waſte the Fortunes of our Fellow Subjects.

In ſtating the Charge thus far, it is Evident, That neither a wilful Neglect of Duty has been wanting, nor a thorough Contempt of Juſtice; no Pains ſpared, no Artifices unemploy'd to plunge the Deficiency in Dormer's Offices in the deepeſt Obſcurity: You have found him forcing and wreſting a Contribution from the Maſters; not ſuch a one, my Lords, as would equally anſwer all Demands on the Office, but as a bare Sufficiency to ſatisfy the Importunities of Perſons for the preſent, and thereby lull others into a deſtructive and fatal Security; To make a falſe ſhew and appearance of Ability in this Office, which the Maſters were afterwards directed to do in theirs. Your Lordſhips ſhall ſoon find him acting another Part, and diſheartning Lochman from ingaging any further in the Marriage with Mrs. Chitty (for the Sollicitations of a weak Woman to have her juſt Due might be eaſier dealt with) aſſuring him, that the Deficiency was ſuch as muſt infallibly root out all future Hopes and Expectations on her Account; and yet the cloſe of this Article ſets forth, That ſo lately as the fifth of December laſt, this Earl ſitting then in open Court, did, in a Cauſe depending before him, proteſt and affirm, That, for his Part, he knew nothing of Dormer's Deficiency, but as publick News. My Lords, If Truth and Sincerity are not to be found in the Seat of Judgment, where muſt we look for them? Where ſhall we place our Confidence, if there is no Dependence on the Affirmation of a Judge? Where ſhall we ſeek Examples worthy our Imitation, if the uprighteſt Places afford them not? But to paſs over this unpleaſing Scene, your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to take Notice, That the unfortunate Perſon at your Bar, in Hopes ſtill to cover the Deficiency, made divers Orders on Mr. Edwards for the diſcharging and paying the intire and full Dues to ſome of the Suitors, whilſt others were put off with an inconſiderable Share. Is there any Thing more Noble in the Mind of Man, than a Deſire of diſtributing equal Juſtice? Without Equality Juſtice is deſtroy'd and ſacrificed to the Paſſions and Infirmities of Men; and yet your Lordſhips will find there is no Virtue ſo lovely, no Principle ſo amiable, but muſt be abandoned and proſtituted to the carrying on this wretched Scheme. Such is ever the miſerable Fate of thoſe who dip their Hands in Corruption; they ingage originally in one Vice only, but are forced to adopt and cheriſh a number of others to keep that one a Secret from the World. For it becomes, at laſt, neceſſary to do injuſtice for the ſake of Security; Peoples Neceſſities, tho' they may be alike, yet are their Paſſions quite different, and a neceſſitous and ſtarving Suitor of a broken and worn-out Spirit might be turned away from his Lordſhip's Preſence with a tenth Part of his Right; whilſt one of a more obſtinate Make, and a bolder Conſtitution, would inſiſt upon, and wrangle for the whole. This Difference of Tempers might facilitate, poſſibly, ſuch unjuſt Dealings for a Time; but could this partial Preference of one Perſon to another, in manifeſt Contempt and Violation of the Rules of Equality, be any otherwiſe of Service to this Noble Lord, or make any amends for diminiſhing Reputation, but by ſtopping the Mouths and Cries of the ſollliciting Suitors with ſuch Proportions as would go down with them, prevent the Contagion from breaking out, and diſappoint the Application of a publick Remedy? You ſee plainly the miſerable Conſequences the Sale of the Maſters Places has been attended with; the fraudulent Method of Payment; the unjuſt and uncontrolled Abuſes of the Maſters; the great Neglect of Dormer's Deficiencies; the unjuſtifiable Concealment of it; the ſtretches of Art and Injuſtice in the Manner of doing it; 'tis one continued Series and Succeſſion of Maleadminiſtration, calculated for the advancing the Profit and Gain of the Perſon at your Bar. Your Lordſhips would, no doubt, wonder elſe, why ſo great a Truſt as upwards of a Million of Money, ſhould be repoſed in the Maſters, without ſome reaſonable Security on their Part, or ſome proper Reſtraint laid upon them for their due and fair Diſcharge of it, eſpecially, ſince Dormer had broke, and brought upon the Sufferers ſo fatal a Misfortune: And this it is, my Lords, that raiſes the Reſentment and Amazement of the Commons, who farther Charge, That, notwithſtanding the Earl well knew that Dormer's Deficiency was chiefly occaſion'd by the Liberty he aſſumed to himſelf of Trafficking and Gaming with the Suitors Effects, and that the other Maſters did, or had it in their Power ſo to diſpoſe of, or otherwiſe wiſe miſemploy the Money and Securities in their Hands; and, notwithſtanding a reaſonable and proper Scheme was laid before him, whereby the like Misfortune might be prevented for the future, yet the Earl never required any Security, or laid any Reſtraints on the Maſters, but left them to the wide and boundleſs Liberty of abuſing their Truſt as Avarice and Ambition ſuggeſted Occaſions. I will not enter into the Conſideration how far it may have been the Practice not to require Security, I take it for granted, if none has been formerly demanded, it was becauſe the Preſiding Perſons were vigilantly executing the Duty of their Offices, and by frequent Inſpections into the Maſters Accounts, reſtraining them from the Exerciſe of unwarrantable Power. But were that otherwiſe, bad Precedents, my Lords, will not juſtify Omiſſions; no, nor extenuate them, tho' I believe not any Inſtance can be produced, not ſo much as the Appearance of any, where it was ſo indiſpenſibly and abſolutely Neceſſary as in this Caſe; there was no need or uſe of any Example to remind him of it, common Prudence teaches us the Neceſſity of providing againſt Diſorders or Loſſes for the Time to come, which our paſt Negligence has once brought upon ourſelves or others; 'tis the only Attonement a Man can make for his former Faults; and if the Perſon at the Bar had had at Heart the leaſt Intention of repairing the Breaches made in the Juſtice of that Court where he governed, here was the moſt fortunate Opportunity of doing it; for your Lordſhips ſhall find the very Maſters themſelves, in a manner, importuning and ſolliciting him to tie up their Hands by ſuch proper and equitable Reſtrictions, as would put the fluctuating Fortunes of their Fellow-Subjects on the firmeſt Eſtabliſhment. Had the Noble Lord liſtened to this Propoſal (which will come more properly within the Province of another Gentleman to open to your Lordſhips) the unhappy Deficiencies in the preſent Maſters Offices had been fortunately prevented, the Clamours of the World about us had been ſtopt, and the Nation eaſy. Did not Neceſſity demand it? The deplorable Havock committed ſince ſhews it did. Did not the National Voice call aloud for it? The Proſecution of this Day is ſufficient Teſtimony. Was it not his Duty? Sure I am, it would have been his Happineſs. And ſhall not the Ruin of Widows and Orphans plead for Puniſhment and Reparation? The Commons rely upon your Lordſhips Juſtice that they ſhall.

But, my Lords, there is a Charge behind, which contains Matter worthy your Obſervation; it ſets forth, That his moſt ſacred Majeſty, out of his fatherly Goodneſs to his People, having directed an Enquiry to be made into the Accounts of the Maſters in Chancery, in the Month of November laſt, the Earl impeached did, by his Advice and Authority, perſuade and induce them to make falſe Repreſentations of their Accounts and Circumſtances to his Majeſty in Council, and to aſſiſt one another with Caſh and Effects to make a falſe Shew and Appearance of their Ability, that a Parliamentary Enquiry might be prevented; and did oblige them to declare in Writing, at the Foot of their Accounts, That they were able and willing to pay the Ballance, although the Earl well knew many of them were not. Your Lordſhips, ſure, cannot but be aſtoniſhed at the Boldneſs of this Attempt, to defeat and fruſtrate the gracious Intentions of his moſt ſacred Majeſty, to take from his unfortunate Subjects that Redreſs and Satisfaction, which their Duty and Loyalty, their Wrongs and Sufferings had claimed in his Royal Mind; to deceive his Majeſty at the very Council-Table, where he had the Honour himſelf to ſit; and to deprive the Commons in Parliament of that Inquiſition for Juſtice, which the Nation expected at their Hands. The Dread and Apprehenſion of Parliamentary Juſtice is a ſtrong Preſumption of his Guilt. Why, my Lords, ſhould publick Enquiries terrify and diſmay an innocent Perſon? National Acquittals are eternal Monuments of Renown; they are more glorious and laſting than Pillars of Marble, or triumphal Arches; they remain upon Record to all Poſterity, never to be defaced by the Malice or Teeth of Time. But, my Lords, as there are Monuments of Praiſe, ſo there are Columns of Infamy; there are National Condemnations as well as National Acquittals; and the noble Lord muſt now take his Fate in the Judgment of your Lordſhips, which he ſo much dreaded. It is an Evidence of a Man's Crime, if he flies for it; it betrays a Self-Conviction in the Party accuſed, in that he dares not abide a Legal Trial; it is another Circumſtance againſt a Man, to be found tampering with a Witneſs, and carries with it ſome Preſumption of his Guilt; becauſe no innocent Perſon wants the Aid and Aſſiſtance of a falſe Evidence. Your Lordſhips have ſeen him as it were flying from his Tryal, and you will now find him tampering and intriguing with the Maſters in the moſt dangerous and artful manner; and that the Maſters are Evidence, and cloſe ones too, will fully appear at your Bar. You ſhall find him colouring and gloſſing over the Maſters Accounts, with Touches and Strokes of his own, hoping to ſhelter his own male Adminiſtration, by putting the Vizor of Integrity on theirs; this is the glorious Exit he makes; thus he finiſhes his Impartial and Juſt Adminiſtration.

My Lords, the Evidence to ſupport this Charge will be opened to you, by the learned Gentlemen to whom the particular Proofs are aſſigned; I ſhall not therefore take up your Time in entring upon that which exceeds my Province; I only beg leave to hope for your further Indulgence, while I make a general Obſervation or two on the Nature of the Charge.

The Ground-work and Baſis of this Noble Perſon's Crimes is Corruption, a thing in private Life the moſt deteſted, and in publick Perſons of the moſt malignant Influence to the State. It deprives the Crown of that ſolid Strength and Grandeur, that ſhining Luſtre and Beauty, which a juſt Execution of the Laws reflect upon it; it diſarms the People of that Security and Safety which naturally flows upon them from an impartial and uninterrupted Adminiſtration of Juſtice. The Conſequence of which will ever be, the Crown will loſe that proper Reverence and Veneration from the People which are its Due; and the Subjects reſtleſs, and uneaſy for want of Juſtice, will lay hold on the firſt Opportunity of throwing off Allegiance itſelf. It brings a National Reproach upon us; and, by ſowing the Seeds of Diſcontent at Home, expoſes us to the Incurſions and Depredations of our Enemies: But, my Lords, when it protects itſelf under the Shadow of Juſtice, and puts on the Smiles of Innocence, 'tis high time to riſe up in Defence of our violated Laws, and ſet a publick Mark of Infamy upon it. To what purpoſe are Judges and Miniſters reſtrained, by the Proviſion of Acts of Parliament, from ſelling Offices under their Protection and Care, if Men ſhall hide themſelves under Example in bar of the Laws! Will Example plead for him? Surely, my Lords, there are none ſuch: Or, if there were, what would that be but to defend Crimes by their own Blackneſs and Malignity? As if a Diſtemper were not to admit of any Remedy becauſe it is general and contagious. But ſuppoſing, for Argument's ſake, there have been Great Perſons, his Predeceſſors, who have ventured upon ſmall Preſents and Gifts on ſuch Occaſions, does it follow, with any colour or pretence of Reaſoning, becauſe thoſe have been confined within the Bounds of Moderation, therefore the Extortion of exorbitant Sums, to connive at outragious Measures and Oppressions, exceeding almost the Fears of the Oppressed themselves, should take shelter under the poor Pretence of Precedent and Example? Alas! my Lords, I am afraid Example only operates according to Mens Appetites and Passions; else whence comes it about, that Example should have all the Beauty of an Angel in this Instance, and all the Deformity and Horror of a Fiend in another? His great * Predecessor made no Attempts to conceal a deficient Office in his Time. No, my Lords, he had no corrupt Purposes to feed. The same Noble Person never ordered some Suitors their entire Demands, and left others groaning and starving under the Pressure of an unequal Distribution; he did the direct contrary. Happy had it been for this unfortunate Person, happy for the Widows and Fatherless, had he copied after the Example of his renowned Predecessors, in their wise and upright Distribution of Justice, as well as flown to their eminent Names for Protection, in the illegal Practices wherewith he is charged! To what a low Ebb is the Virtue and Reputation of this Nation reduced, if Impunity shall justify Offences, if Bribery shall receive a Patronage from great Examples, and the basest Actions be adorned with the same Lustre and Honour, that are only due to the most virtuous. But, my Lords, the Commons have found him bargaining and bartering an † Office, in the Gift of the Crown, for the poor and sordid Advantage of an hundred Guineas. This is an Instance wherein the very Person of the King is insulted in the most flagrant manner; 'tis a Prostitution of the Regal Honour and Dignity, by one who had the Trust reposed in him, as one of the joint Guardians of the Realm during his Master's Absence: As if too there was no Access to the Throne for Grace and Favour, no tasting the refreshing Streams of that Fountain of Goodness, which rises in his Majesty's Breast, for the universal Comfort of a dutiful and happy People, but by the Assistance of the most abandoned Measures. Can your Lordships any longer wonder the People's Properties were imployed to ill Purposes, when his Majesty's Prerogative is traffick'd with and sold? Could it be expected a poor Suitor's Rights should remain secure under his Protection, as Chancellor, when the King's were precarious in the Hands of his own Trustee? And yet, my Lords, how often and how gloriously has this Nation vindicated and asserted its own Honour, in the Ruin it has poured on the Heads of corrupt Judges and Ministers! It was the Loss and Forfeiture of all the Lands and Estate of Sir William Thorpe, Justice of the King's Bench, who was sentenced for Bribery in the Reign of Edw. III. Nay, the Sentence extended even to Loss of Life itself, though that part has been thought not sufficiently warranted, and should have ended in Imprisonment only. Every one knows the Vengeance hurled on the Earl of Middlesex, which is to be found in the Rolls of Parliament. This unfortunate Earl, having delayed Justice to the Farmers of the Customs, in a Matter referred to him by King James I. and having polluted his Hands with exorbitant Bribes, was sentenced in Parliament to lose all his Offices, which he held in the Kingdom; to be for ever uncapable of any Office, Place, or Employment in the State; to be imprisoned in the Tower of London during the King's pleasure; to be fined 50,000 l. never to sit in Parliament any more, nor to come within the Verge of the King's Court. The Case of my Lord Bacon is another Instance of the Virtue and Integrity of your Ancestors, in the Abhorrence they shewed, and the Punishment they inflicted on that Great Man's Crimes.

My Lords, if the Offences committed by the Earl, and those of the Great Persons just mentioned were compared, and the Consequences naturally flowing from them, it would be found how much greater Guilt is comprehended in the Charge of this Day. I will not spend your Lordship's Time, in enlarging on a Distinction between Bribery In an Office, and Bribery by Colour of an Office; between Bribery in a Judicial Way, on account of Judgment in Causes, and Bribery in the Disposal of Offices, that concern the Administration of Justice; but only observe, that the Sale of the Masters Places, accompanied with the Circumstances I have already explained, is attended with more mischievous and oppressive Consequences to the Subject, than a Judge's accepting a Bribe in Causes depending before him. By means of the latter a Person is put to an extraordinary Expence indeed to come at his Right; or, if he is deprived of it by a corrupt Determination, yet still there is another Resource; and his Happiness is, that he may appeal to Parliament for Redress. But the Consequence of the other Case is, he can come at no Right at all; his Money is embezzelled and lost, the Master runs away, the Chancellor is in the Secret, and there is no Remedy left. Is it any Excuse to say, That the Master is liable to answer for his own Frauds, and not the impeached Lord? I beg only to put the following Case. If a Keeper, who has undertaken the Care and Management of a Madman, wilfully neglects his Duty, sees the disordered Person going to do Mischief, and does not interpose, is not the Keeper responsible? Surely, my Lords, by the Law of Reason he ought. But what if the Noble Lord did not foresee the Mischief, and yet be the Occasion of it, from the Exercise of an unlawful Act, there is no question but he would be answerable. A Person intends to rob the King's Forrest, and shooting at a Deer, kills the Keeper, is not he guilty of Murder? No doubt he is: Because though he did not intend Murder, yet the Act he was about, was an unlawful Act. But, my Lords, the Person at your Bar has not this Excuse; he foresaw the Consequence, and his Intention was bad.

When the Commons consider the high Station in which this noble Lord was placed, the many signal Marks of his Majesty's Favour and Munificence bestowed upon him; the notorious Breach and Violation of his Oath, and of the several great Trusts reposed in him; when they have found him prostituting and abusing the Authority and Dignity of the Crown, trampling upon the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, destroying and confounding the Properties and Rights of divers of his Majesty's Subjects; the Commons could not sit still, and see this great Offender triumph in the Luxury of unpunished Crimes, without using their best and most effectual Endeavours to bring him to Punishment, and to make him an Example of the Justice of the present Age, a Warning and a Terror to Times to come.

Sir Clement Wearg, Solicitor General. My Lords, I have likewise received the Commands of the Commons, to lay before your Lordships the Evidence, in maintenance of the Charge of High Crimes and Misdemeanors, against Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield.

The Nature of the Charge consists,

In illegally and corruptly Selling and Disposing of Offices, which concern the Administration of Justice; in using and practising many indirect and unjustifiable Methods, for the keeping up the Price of such Offices, in order to advance his own unjust Gain,

* Lord Cowper. † Clerk of the Custodies.

My Lords, The Honour of every Government, and the Happiness of every Nation, depend upon nothing more than a strict impartial Administration of Justice; and the Justice of every Court depends not only upon the Uprightness of the Judge that pronounces the Decree, but likewise upon the Honesty and Uncorruptness of the lesser Officers, who are Assistants to him, and upon whose Reports and Representations his Decrees are founded.

It was doubtless from a just Sense of this, that the Legislature, in the fifth Year of Edward VI. in order to prevent such a corrupt Bartering for Offices, which was before that Statute, against Law, wisely provided, that where any Office, which concerned the Administration of Justice, not excepted in that Statute, was procured for Money, the Office should become void, and the Parties concerned in the corrupt Bargain disabled from holding it.

The Court of Chancery, in which the Earl presided, must be allowed, with regard to the Number and great Value of Suits instituted there, to be by far the most considerable Court of Justice within this Kingdom.

The Masters of Chancery are next to the Person that has the Custody of the Great Seal, and the Master of the Rolls, the great Officers of that Court.

They are, by Commission under the Great Seal, associated with the Judges in hearing Causes, and claim a Right to interpose their Opinions in the making of Orders and Decrees under that Commission.

They are intrusted by the Court to state and report Matters of Fact, upon the Truth and Fairness of which Reports the Justice of the Decree of the Court must depend. They are sworn to advise the Chancellor himself.

And of late Years they have been intrusted with the Effects and Estates of the Suitors of the Court, to an immense and incredible Sum.

My Lords, great part of the Charge against the Earl consists in setting up those Places to Sale, in using unwarrantable Methods to incourage Purchasers, and increase the Price.

It is Matter of great Surprize, to find in his Lordship's Answer an Insinuation, That it is not illegal, or against any Statute, to sell those Offices.

Surely, my Lords, there are no Places, that concern the Administration of Justice, more improper to be sold from the Nature of them, or the Selling of which is more evidently against the Statute of Edward VI. than the Masters in Chancery, unless it be Judges themselves.

But it must be owned, the Expressions made use of by his Lordship are conceived in such doubtful Terms, that it is difficult to know whether he intends to represent the Lawfulness of selling those Places for a Price, or only of taking a Present which the Party gives freely, voluntarily, and of his own accord, and which his Lordship says his Predecessors used to take

There possibly may be a Difference between a Present and a Price; if there is, it is the latter his Lordship is charged with taking; a Price fixed by his Lordship, insisted upon, haggled for, and with Unwillingness paid by the Purchaser.

But, my Lords, even this may be said to be nothing more than an Offence against the Statute of Edward VI. which as it creates the Offence, so it prescribes the Punishment,

Where the Person admitted to the Office is in all Respects equal to the great Trust reposed in him;

Where the Price given bears a Proportion to the lawful Gain arising from such Office, there may be some pretence to say, It is only an Offence against that Statute.

But if Persons are admitted to an Office, by which they are intrusted with near 100,000 l. and give as much, or more, for that Office, than their whole Substance amounts to;

If the Price they give is greater than can possiby be given, by one who would be contented with the honest Profits of the Office; if that Price is paid for out of the Money of the Suitors of the Court; if, to make the Officers amends for giving such extravagant Prices, they are connived at, indulged, incouraged to traffick with the Money and Effects of the Suitors of the Court, lodged with them for safe Custody only;

This is something more than barely an Offence against the Statute of Edward VI.

'Tis selling a Licence to abuse and defraud the Suitors of the Court, and making the Suitors themselves pay the Price of that Licence.

It is this the Commons have charged the Earl of Macclesfield withal. And this surely is Illegal, and against some Law or Statute in being.

My Lords, the ill Consequences of this Practice are very obvious; the least of them is a Delay of Justice, from the Masters using Shifts and Excuses to continue that Money in their Hands, which they are allowed to make a Gain by, and which probably, when called for, may be locked up by some hazardous Contract.

But the most fatal Consequence is, what cannot be mentioned or thought of, without feeling the greatest Compassion for the unhappy People concerned in it, the Loss which the Suitors of the Court are likely to sustain by it. The Hazard was all theirs, but the Gain belonged to others.

My Lords, whatever Excuses might be made for his Lordship, from the great Variety of Business his High Office engaged him in, which might prevent his Attending to those Things, an Accident happened in his Lordship's Time, sufficient to awaken the most engaged Attention.

When Dormer withdrew from his Office, the Masters themselves were alarmed at it.

When it appeared his Misfortunes were brought upon him by trafficking with the Money of the Court, and lending it to Goldsmiths at 10 l. per Cent. they expressed a Concern for the Suitors of the Court.

And, to prevent the like Mischief for the future, a Proposal was made to his Lordship by one of them, That the Masters might give some Security for the Money in their Hands; that the Effects might be put in the Name of more than one Master, to prevent their being trafficked with.

This might have prevented the Mischief for the future, at least in some Degree.

But

But who then would have given 6000 l. for the Purchaſe of a vacant Place? Who would have given 1500 Guineas to procure an Admiſſion?

For theſe Reaſons the Commons charge the Propoſal was not liſtned to, was not put in Execution.

My Lords, another Accuſation againſt the Earl conſiſts in his amuſing the Suitors of the Court, with a falſe Repreſentation of the Maſters Subſtance, by declaring from the Bench, That they were Men of as good Fortunes as ever filled thoſe Places.

Such an Encomium from a Chancellor would have been a great Honour, had all the Perſons really deſerved it.

But it ſurely reflects Diſhonour, if ſpoke at a Time when ſcarce any one Perſon, who heard it, could give credit to it.

When it was the Subject of common Converſation, that one third of the Maſters had given as much, ſome of them more, for the Purchaſe of their Places, and to procure their Admiſſion, than they were worth in the World at the Time of their Purchaſe. And the Perſon, for whoſe ſake the Compliment was made, leaſt deſerved it of any; having but lately been a Receiver of a County, nominally diſcharged by ſubſtituting his Brother into his Place, and having paid off a large Arrear, ſoon after he got the Money of the Suitors into his Hands, out of that Money.

But there was then a Maſter's Place vacant.

His Lordſhip is further charged with endeavouring to conceal the Deficiency in Dormer's Office;

With making a trifling, precarious Compoſition, for a large Debt aſſigned for the Benefit of the Suitor, in a very unwarrantable manner;

With making Orders for the Payment of Money out of that deficient Office, without regard to the other Suitors, who were entituled to a Proportion of what was left.

His Lordſhip ſeems to intimate, That he never thought there would be any Deficiency in that Office, but is under a full Perſuaſion that all would be made good.

How that is conſiſtent with his quitting 1500 Guineas from the Danger of a great Loſs in that Office, I ſhall ſubmit to your Lordſhips; but ſurely the Manner in which Dormer withdrew was a ſtrong Symptom of a Deficiency, when the Maſters intruſted to ſecure his Effects found little more than the Debt from Wilſon to anſwer a Ballance of near 40000 l.

When that Fund was reduced to nothing by a Compoſition made for half that Sum upon a Beggar, who has ſince eſcaped out of Goal and abſconds for Debt.

From whence thoſe full Aſſurances could ariſe, we muſt wait to hear from his Lordſhip.

That his Lordſhip did endeavour to conceal this Deficiency, needs no other Proof than his not doing any one Act in publick relating to it.

Had Mr. Dormer's Perſon been rendered ſacred, by that extraordinary Promiſe of Security, mentioned in his Lordſhip's Anſwer, yet he might have been examined upon Interrogatories to diſcloſe his Effects.

The Suitors might have had ſome Warning to have uſed their Diligence in diſcovering his Eſtate, and preventing any Concealment of it.

Nothing of this done, but on the contrary; upon an Application by one of the Suitors to have his Money transferred to another Maſter, from an Apprehenſion of Loſs, after Dormer had abſented himſelf from the Office; he was informed from the Bench, that his Fears were raſh, the Maſter only gone to take the Air, and that all would be well.

From this Time every thing was carried on with the greateſt Privacy between his Lordſhip and the Maſters.

Orders were made for the Payment of Money out of that Office, as if it had been clear from all Suſpicions of Loſs, contrary to that Rule of Equality, which is a fundamental Principle of a Court of Equity, That where ſeveral Perſons have Demands out of a Fund like to prove deficient, they muſt bate in Proportion.

And altho' where that Fund is in the Hands of private Perſons to be paid by them, it may be intelligible to talk of judicial Knowledge, and an ex Officio Declaration of an Average,

Yet where the Fund is in the Hands of the Court, the Payment to be made by the Court, and the Loſs ſuſtained while the Court was poſſeſſed of that Fund.

Every Knowledge of ſuch Loſs is judicial, and the Court ought in Juſtice, by what means ſoever the Knowledge of that Loſs comes before the Court, to direct the Payment in Proportion only.

There is but one Article more that I ſhall take particular Notice of, whereby his Lordſhip is charged with endeavouring to diſappoint His Majeſty's gracious Intent of having the Accounts of the Maſters, and the State of their Office enquired into.

His Lordſhip, to put a Stop to ſuch Enquiry, perſuaded ſeveral of the Maſters to make a falſe Appearance of Subſtance, and a Shew of Readineſs to pay over the Money and Effects of the Suitors of the Court in their Hands.

This was not only a Breach of his Duty as Chancellor, but a great Violation of that high Truſt repoſed in him as he was a Privy-Counſellor; And if his Lordſhip did at the ſame time in Council ſeem to promote every Step taken there, that is a very great Aggravation of his Crime.

Such, my Lords, is the Nature of the Charge, which the Commons have exhibited againſt the Earl of Macclesfield; which they are able to make good by plain and clear Proof.

Sir William Strickland. My Lords, The Gentlemen who have ſpoke before me, having fully opened to your Lordſhips the general Charge againſt the Earl of Macclesfield, it is my Province, and that of the Gentleman who is to ſpeak after me, to open the Evidence we ſhall produce to make good the ſeveral Facts contained in the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Articles; but as the ninth differs very much in its Circumſtances from the other four, I ſhall ſay nothing to that Article, but leave that to the Gentleman to whom the opening of theſe Articles is likewiſe allotted.

My Lords, We ſhall ſhew you, that notwithſtanding the many great and beneficial Favours beſtowed upon this Earl by the bountiful Hand of his Majeſty; that all thoſe Honours conferr'd upon Himſelf and his Family; the Dignity of his high Office, and the great Truſt repoſed in him, have been proſtituted, in order to ſatiate a boundleſs Appetite for unlawful Gain.

This I ſhall now particularly proceed to ſhew, by mentioning to your Lordſhips, in the firſt Place, the ſeveral Grants which the Earl, in his Anſwer, has own'd to have receiv'd; and, afterwards, by opening the Evidence, the Commons will produce, to make good their Charge contain'd in the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8*th* Articles abovementioned, which relate to the illegal and corrupt Admiſſion of four Maſters in Chancery.

The firſt beneficial Grant the Earl, in his Anſwer owns to have receiv'd from his Majeſty, before the Honour of Peerage was conferr'd upon him, was 1200 l. a Year granted to him and his Aſſigns, during the Life of his Majeſty, in, or about June 1716; in the next Place, that in the Year 1718 he was created Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain; and, that at the ſame Time, his Majeſty, out of his Royal Bounty, did beſtow upon him 14000 l and likewiſe granted to his eldeſt Son, now Lord Parker, an annual Penſion of 1200 l. payable during the joint Lives of his Majeſty and the ſaid Lord Parker, but determinable whenever he ſhould be put into Poſſeſſion of one of the Offices of a Teller in the Exchequer for Life, and which Office he has ſince obtained; and over and above all theſe great and beneficial Grants, the uſual Salary of 1500 l. a Year out of the Hanaper Office; the other great Profits and legal Perquiſites of his high Office, the Earl owns to have had an Allowance of 4000 l. a Year. As theſe were all Marks of the greateſt Honour, Eſteem and Confidence from his Great and Munificent Benefactor, ſo ſurely they ought to have produced in him all ſuitable Returns of Gratitude, by a juſt and impartial Execution of the Truſt repoſed in him, to the Honour of his Majeſty, and the Good and Welfare of his Subjects.

But my Lords, The Thirſt of Gain was predominant; and in purſuance of that, he did, in a Manner highly derogatory to the Dignity of the Office he then bore, illegally, corruptly and extorſively, by Himſelf and Servants, treat and barter for the Sale of Offices of Maſters in Chancery, which Offices concern the Adminiſtration of Juſtice; and, in the ſame Manner, did take very great Sums of Money for their Admiſſions into the ſaid Offices.

I muſt take Notice that his Lordſhip, in his Anſwer, does not deny to have taken all the ſeveral Sums laid to his Charge by the Commons, on the Admiſſion of the Maſters, mentioned in the Articles of Impeachment, to their reſpective Offices; but alledges that he took them as Preſents only, freely and voluntarily given, and ſuch as had been uſual on ſuch Occaſions. But, my Lords, we ſhall ſhew you that the Sums of Money taken by him were taken in the Manner alledged in the Articles; and by the Evidence I ſhall now open, your Lordſhips will ſee how very different this Matter will appear from that which the Earl would inſinuate in his Anſwer; I ſhall begin by opening the Evidence to the 5th Article, which relates to the illegal and corrupt Admiſſion of Mr. William Kynaſton to the Office of a Maſter in Chancery, in Auguſt 1721. We will ſhew you that before Mr. Kynaſton was admitted to be a Maſter, he was adviſed by Mr. Rogers (with whom he had then contracted for the Sale of his Office for 6000 l.) that the Lord Chancellor would expect 6 or 700 for his Admiſſion; upon this he applied to my Lord's Secretary, Mr. Cottingham, (who appears to have been the Broker on all theſe Occaſions) and deſired to be recommended to the Chancellor for that Office, and told Mr. Cottingham, that if it was neceſſary he could obtain my Lord Bradford's Recommendation; the Secretary only anſwer'd, that another Maſter had given 1500 Guineas on the ſame Occaſion; Mr. Kynaſton then offered 1000 l.; Cottingham reply'd, he could mention nothing leſs to the Lord Chancellor than 1500 l.; but being afterwards asked by the Perſon who was to pay the Money, what Sum would be inſiſted on? Anſwered, It muſt be 1500 Guineas, nothing it ſeems was to be abated, for this (Mr. Cottingham told Mr. Kynaſton) was one of the beſt Offices, being the fulleſt of Money and Securities. Money and Securities, my Lords, the Property of the Suitors of the Court; and how fatal the Maſters making Uſe of ſuch Money for their own Profits has been, in order to reimburſe themſelves for the very great Sums paid for their Offices, is now too ſeverely felt by Numbers of helpleſs Orphans and injured Suitors. Mr. Kynaſton, however, ſeeing no Poſſibility of Admiſſion without paying the whole Sum of 1500 Guineas, comply'd at laſt, ſent the Guineas to Mr. Cottingham, who afterwards paid it to the Chancellor; and the next Day Mr. Kynaſton was admitted and ſworn a Maſter.

I come now to open to your Lordſhips, the Evidence which we ſhall produce to make good the 6th Article, which relates to the illegal and corrupt Admiſſion of Mr. Thomas Bennet to the Office of a Maſter in Chancery.

Mr. Thomas Bennet, about May, 1723, bargain'd with Mr. Hiccocks, then a Maſter in Chancery, for the Sale of his Office, at the Price of 7500 l. The next Thing to be done, was to apply to Mr. Cottingham, which he did, deſiring to be recommended to my Lord Chancellor for that Office. Mr. Cottingham did recommend him, and told him, that the Lord Chancellor had no Objection to him, that he knew his Father, and ſhould be glad to oblige him; the Compliment, however, ended with a Propoſition of a Preſent, as he call'd it, and ſaid, he indeed would name no Sum, but that his Brother, then a Maſter in Chancery, and Mr. Godfrey, would eaſily Chalk out a Method for him. Mr. Bennet, my Lords, after conſulting theſe Gentlemen, offer'd 1000 Guineas; Mr. Cottingham ſhook his Head, and ſaid, he did not care to go to the Chancellor with an offer of that Sum, that more had been given, and he hoped Mr. Bennet would not lower the Price. Mr. Bennet gave ſome Reaſons why he hoped Lord Macclesfield would accept the 1000 Guineas, and ſaid he did not care to give more; Mr. Cottingham again told him, he did not care to go with that Meſſage; upon which Mr. Bennet asked him what had been given by other Maſters; Cottingham told him 1500 Guineas.

However, Mr. Bennet again deſired he would go to the Chancellor, and ſaid, that if the Sum he had offered would not do, he would give 1500 l.; Cottingham deſired to be excuſed from going on that Meſſage, and ſaid my Lord did not love Haggling; and that if Mr. Bennet would give no more, he might loſe the Office, for that if the Chancellor ſhould refuſe that Sum, he would not go with any other offer; upon this, my Lords, Mr. Bennet, at laſt, conſented to give the 1500 Guineas; and this will appear to have been what the Lord Macclesfield calls Mr. Thomas Bennet's free Gift. The Guineas were paid to Mr. Cottingham, who paid them to the Chancellor, for which Mr. Bennet was admitted into his Office, which appears to have coſt him 9075 l. and that very Sum, upon the making up of his Accounts, appeared to have been wanting in his Office, for the making up of his Ballance due to the Suitors of the Court.

I muſt

I must take Notice to your Lordships, that the Lord Macclesfield, in his Answer, alledges, that the said Kynaston and Bennet pretending they were disabled from answering to the Suitors of the Court, so much Money as he had taken from them at their respective Admissions, the said Earl did, before the Impeachment, pay into the Court of Chancery, for the Use of the Suitors to that Court, the two several Sums received by him from Mr. Kynaston and Mr. Bennet; but, my Lords, that we shall shew to be a gross Mistake in the Answer, for we shall prove the said Sums were not repaid by him till after the Impeachment, and after they had by Affidavit charged the Payment of these Sums as one Cause of the Deficiency in their Offices.

I come next to shew the Manner in which Mr. Francis Elde was admitted to his Office of a Master in Chancery, which happened in February, 1723. upon the Death of Mr. Fellows; we shall shew your Lordships, that Mr. Elde applied personally to the Chancellor, who told him he would treat with him in a different manner from any Man living; in two or three Days after this he applied again to the Earl for the Office, and then did mention a Sum of 4 or 5000 l. my Lord told him, Mr. Elde and I must not make Bargains. So, my Lords, Mr. Elde after this went to Mr. Cottingham, and told him of his Intention to give the Chancellor 5000 l. Mr. Cottingham advised him to make it Guineas. And, in pursuance of this Advice, Mr. Elde did, on or about the 1st of Febr. 1723. carry to the said Lord Macclesfield's House 3000 Guineas, and 2100 l. in Bank-Notes, muffled up in a Dutch-Basket, which he sent up to my Lord by Mr. Cottingham, who left it with his Lordship, brought down word all was well, and within a Day or two after Mr Elde was sworn into his Office.

I would observe upon this, That a Present, which might have been innocently made, and as innocently received, had needed no such secret Conveyance. But, my Lords, the Suitors of the Court now began to be awakened by the Apprehensions of their Losses, and the Voice of the People to exclaim against that infamous manner of admitting Masters in Chancery; and therefore I presume, my Lords, Privacy was now come to be thought so necessary, that the Secretary himself, tho' concerned in the Transaction, was kept ignorant of the Contents in the Basket.

I come next to open the Evidence we will produce, to prove the illegal and corrupt Admission of Mr. Mark Thurston to be a Master in Chancery, as it is laid in the VIIIth Article. He succeeded Mr. Borrett about the 5th of August last past: And, my Lords, notwithstanding what the Earl of Macclesfield alledges in his Answer, That he was informed by Mr. Godfrey and Mr. John Bennet, that there was like to be no Deficiency in that Office. We will shew your Lordships, That before Mr. Thurston's Admission there was a great Confusion in it; and that his Lordship must have forgot himself, when he says he ever was acquainted by those two Masters, that there was like to be no Deficiency in that Office.

This, my Lords, the Commons will produce to shew, That, notwithstanding the very great Losses already sustained by the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, from the great Prices given by the Masters for their Offices, the great Confusion then in that Office, and in which there is a Deficiency of more than 10,000 l. yet, in the same unlawful Pursuit of Gain, he did admit Mr. Mark Thurston to the Office of a Master in Chancery, for the Sum of 5000 Guineas. The manner of it was thus, my Lords.

Mr. Thurston, upon Mr. Borrett's Death, applied to Mr Cottingham about that Office, and the Price agreed upon betwixt them was 5000 Guineas; with this Agreement Lord Macclesfield was acquainted, and seemed to agree to it: But afterwards, upon a Report's being spread, that Lord Macclesfield designed to give the Office to Dr. Sayer, Mr. Thurston (well advised no doubt) applied to Lady Macclesfield; and, after many Arguments used to persuade her to write to my Lord in his Favour, produced at last 5000 Guineas in Bank-Notes, which had their desired Effect; my Lady wrote, and Mr. Thurston in two or three Days was admitted to his Office.

My Lords, I will make this Remark upon this Transaction; That the taking such an extravagant Sum of Money for an Office, in which there was like to prove a great Deficiency, was so far from being thought blameless even by the Earl himself, that it looks as if this Way was necessary to be found out, to hide this Transaction too from the Secretary, who had had the first hand in it: And, to take all cause of Suspicion away from him, he was ordered to be sure to take no Money from Mr. Thurston, on account of his Admission; which he observed so religiously, that I think he scrupled even his own Fees.

Before I conclude, my Lords, I must take notice of an Expression in the Earl's Answer to the two last Articles I have mentioned.

That, of the Money he received from Mr. Elde, he retained no more than 1850 l. and, of that received from Mr. Thurston, no more than 2000 l. By this, I presume, the World is to believe, the Earl made an immediate Restitution of the Remainder of the Money: But, my Lords, we will shew you, that no Money was returned to Mr. Elde till November last, a Time that he stood in need of it to shew and produce his Ballance; nor to Mr. Thurston till October last, at which Time it was evident an absolute Stop must be put to the infamous Practice of Stock-Jobbing with the Suitors Money; and which of consequence would put those two Masters out of a Possibility of reimbursing themselves the great Sums so lately paid for their Offices.

My Lords, the next thing we shall prove will be, That in all these Transactions Mr. Cottingham has acted by my Lord Macclesfield's immediate Directions; and when we have proved that, and the several Facts I have now opened to your Lordships, I doubt not but you will be of opinion, That we have fully made out the Allegations in the Vth, VIth, VIIth and VIIIth Articles, in their utmost Extent; and that the said Earl has taken the several Sums, laid to his Charge, illegally, corruptly and extorsively, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the great Trust in him reposed, contrary to the Duty of his Office, and against the good and wholsome Statutes of this Realm.

Mr. Doddington. My Lords, I am commanded by the Commons to assist the Gentleman who spoke before me, in making good the Vth, VIth, VIIth, VIIIth and IXth Articles against the Earl of Macclesfield, which relate to his taking Money for Offices.

The Commons look upon this part of their Charge as a necessary Foundation of the whole, because from this insatiate Desire of Gain has sprung all the Evils and Mismanagement, charged upon the Earl in the rest of the Articles.

The Charge againſt the Earl in four of theſe Articles is, in ſhort this, That he took ſeveral great Sums for the Admiſſion of ſeveral Perſons into the Office of Maſter in Chancery; and that he took them illegally, extorſively, corruptly, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the Truſt in him repoſed.

My Lords, theſe Facts have been ſo clearly ſtated to your Lordſhips, and the extorſive and corrupt manner in which they were committed, in Breach of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, ſo ſtrongly inforced by the Gentleman who ſpoke before me, that I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips upon thoſe Heads.

As to the Illegality of ſuch Practices, that have been laid before your Lordſhips by the learned Gentleman who opened the general Charge; and, I do not doubt, will be further explained by other Gentlemen, to your Lordſhips Satisfaction: But when the Earl is pleaſed to ſay, in his general Anſwer to all theſe Articles, "That he hopes receiving Preſents on ſuch Occaſions "is not criminal in itſelf, or by the Common Law "of this Realm, and that there is not any Act of "Parliament by which the ſame is made criminal" Though I have not had the Happineſs to have been bred to the Profeſſion, I muſt beg leave to remind him of the Statutes of Richard II. and Edward VI. as to the Statute Law: And by all that I have ever heard, or can learn, the whole Tenor and Meaning of the Common Law does diſapprove and condemn ſuch Practices, (though poſſibly it has not been an adjudged Caſe) And the Statutes I have mentioned are one Proof of ſuch Meaning of the Law, to me, at leaſt, who have always looked upon them to be Comments and Declarations, made from time to time to explain and inforce ſuch Conſtruction.

Putting up Offices of Juſtice to Auction, my Lords, is repugnant to the Dictates of plain Reaſon, and conſequently to the whole Senſe and Spirit of the Common Law of this Realm, which is founded upon Reaſon; and in this Repugnance to the Intent and Meaning of the Law of the Land, lies this Offence, (in my poor Judgment) as to the Illegality of it.

We hope therefore, my Lords, (when we have given our Evidence) that it will fully appear to your Lordſhips, from what we have opened, That the Earl of Macclesfield has taken the Sums charged upon him; and that he has taken them, as they are charged in the Articles, extorſively, corruptly, illegally, in Breach and Violation of his Oath as Lord Chancellor, and of the Truſt in him repoſed.

I am now come to the IXth Article, which I am commanded to open to your Lordſhips; and, indeed, it is a moſt extraordinary Inſtance of human Frailty: The Earl of Macclesfield here is not charged with taking Money of a Perſon who received an Office from him, but of one who quitted an Office; not for an Admiſſion, but for a Reſignation.

I believe this is the firſt Inſtance, my Lords, where any Perſon, on the other Side of this Bar, was ever accuſed of forgetting his own Dignity, the Dignity of the Auguſt Body he belonged to, and the Honour of his Soveraign, whoſe Counſellor he was, and whoſe Royal Authority was, at that time, lodged in his Hands, for an hundred and five Pounds. This is ſo amazing, that did I not know there was full Evidence, to the moſt minute Parts of this Charge, I myſelf ſhould not believe it; and I am ſure your Lordſhips Hereditary Greatneſs of Mind muſt make it ſo inconceivable to you, that I ſhall need all your Patience and Indulgence in what it is my Duty to ſtate to your Lordſhips, till you hear the Evidence we ſhall produce.

The Caſe, my Lords, is this: Mr. Thomas Bennet, one of the Maſters mentioned in the VIth Article, ſoon after his Admiſſion, was deſirous to part with his Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, (which is in the Gift of the Crown) to Mr. Hamerſley; but being unwilling to do any thing, without my Lord Macclesfield's Approbation, he applied to Mr. Cottingham, his Secretary, to obtain it upon this Occaſion. Mr. Cottingham promiſed to acquaint his Lordſhip with this Requeſt. In a few Days Mr. Cottingham told Mr. Bennet, that he had acquainted my Lord with his Deſign, but ſaid, a Preſent was expected of him; and asked him, what he would give? (Your Lordſhips will obſerve, that this was their conſtant Method, in driving all theſe Bargains; for they were conſcious that they were doing what was illegal) Mr. Bennet replied, That he did not apprehend that any thing was due to my Lord on this account; for that he ſucceeded his Brother, Mr. John Bennet, and neither himſelf, nor his Brother, made Lord Cowper any Preſent: And further added, That he hoped my Lord would not inſiſt upon any thing, on ſo trifling an Occaſion, ſince he had ſo lately paid him ſo conſiderable a Sum. But ſtill Cottingham inſiſted that a Preſent was required. Upon which Mr. Bennet ſeeing himſelf ſo hard driven, ſaid he would give my Lord 105 l. In a few Days Cottingham told him, That my Lord accepted the 105 l. but that he was to look upon it as a particular Favour, that he accepted ſo ſmall a Sum; and that if he would bring the Money to him, Cottingham, he need take no farther Trouble, for my Lord would apply to the King, for Leave to reſign. Accordingly on the 28th of July, 1723. Mr. Bennet carried a Bank-Note of 105 l. to Cottingham; and, in about three Weeks time, (your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to remember, that his Majeſty was then abroad) Cottingham told him, that the Sign Manual was come over, and chid him for not taking out the Patent; The Conſequence of which was, Mr. Bennet did take it out, and when it came to the Great Seal, no Conſideration was had of what he had given before, but it coſt him about 64 l. for the Seal.

We ſhall call Mr. John Bennet to inform your Lordſhips, that when he reſigned to his Brother, he asked the Lord Cowper if any thing was due to his Lordſhip, who told him nothing was due.

This, my Lords, is the naked State of the Caſe, and I ſhall make no Remarks upon it; I think nothing can be added to illuſtrate it, becauſe I am confident there never was any thing like it.

But I think, out of Duty to the Commons, and Juſtice to the Earl of Macclesfield, I am obliged to take Notice of what he alledges in his own Defence againſt this Charge.

His Lordſhip is pleaſed to ſay, "That tho' this "Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies has been uſually "granted by the Crown; yet it has been always look'd "upon as the Right of the Lords Chancellors, or the "Lords Keepers, to recommend to that, and other Of-"fices under the Great Seal, and approve of the De-"puty to execute the ſame; and upon ſuch Recom-"mendations, and approving of Deputies, have ac-"cepted Preſents, and look'd upon the ſame as their "Right.

I ſhould not have taken Notice of his putting this Part of his Defence in the plural Number, and endeavouring to ſhelter himſelf under the pretended Practices of his Predeceſſors, if he had confined it to this Article; but in his general Anſwer to all the Articles we have opened to your Lordſhips, he ſays, "That he "has done no more than his Predeceſſors, Great "and Able Men have done before him, and therefore "hopes that it ſhall not be imputed as a Fault to him." And indeed this Reaſoning runs through almoſt his whole Defence.

My Lords, we could ſhew, That he has done more than any of his Predeceſſors; but your Lordſhips very well know, that is not now in queſtion. I am ſure, how Great or able ſoever a Man may be, that commits a Fault, your Lordſhips will always be Great enough, and Able enough to puniſh him for it, when he comes before you. And I am ſurprized the Earl ſhould ſuppoſe, that you will connive at a corrupt Practice in him, (if this be one) becauſe you have not condemned it in others, who were never called to anſwer it before you, if any have been guilty of it. I hope your Lordſhips will look on it as a new Way of Reaſoning, firſt made uſe of by the Earl of Macclesfield, to juſtify his own Faults by the Faults of another, and extenuate the Danger and Malignity of a Diſtemper by the Extent and Inveteracy of it.

By the reſt of this Argument of his, your Lordſhips plainly ſee, that he himſelf thinks that the Acceptance of any Gratuity for adviſing the King, as a Counſellor, to grant this Office, had been highly Criminal, for he was, at that Time, one of the Lords Juſtices, and during this whole Charge a Miniſter of State; but he does not ſay that he obtain'd leave for Mr. Bennet to reſign, and a new Grant of the Office as a Favour from the Crown; no, that he ſeems to admit would have been highly blameable; but he ſays, that as Lord Chancellor, he had a Right of Recommending to this Office; and his whole Conduct unhappily explains, that he looked upon a Right of Beſtowing or Recommending to be a Right of Selling; ſo that by his own Argument, he thinks himſelf juſtifiable in doing that as the chief Officer and Diſtributor of Juſtice, which he ſeems to own would be highly unjuſtifiable in a Miniſter or Servant of the Crown.

I ſhall take Notice of but one Part more of his general Anſwer to the Articles, which we have opened to your Lordſhips, and that is where he ſays, "That during his Continuance in the ſaid "Office of Lord Chancellor, or at any other "Time, he never once had a Deſign, or View, or "Wiſh to raiſe to himſelf any exorbitant Gain "or Profit, and appeals to the whole Tenor of "his Life and Actions for the Truth of his Aſ"ſertion.

This, my Lords, is an Inſtance how little the greateſt Men are acquainted with themſelves, and how much they are liable to miſtake, when they talk of their own Actions; many of his Tranſactions in Money Matters, have been opened to your Lordſhips, more will be opened; and ſurely, my Lords, you muſt be of Opinion, that this inordinate Longing after Gain, this Impotence of Mind where Money was concerned, is a conſtitutional Weakneſs in the Earl of Macclesfield, which has given a Tincture to every Thing that paſſed thro' his Hands: Your Lordſhips have ſeen him taking great Sums, accepting ſmall ones, taking 5000 l. accepting 105 l. taking for Offices in his own Gift, for Offices in the Gift of the Crown, taking for Admiſſions, taking for Reſignations; in this, indeed, he has ſhewn an Impartiality that, on every other Account, were highly to be wiſhed in a Judge.

My Lords, I would not trouble your Lordſhips again after our Evidence is examined, and therefore beg leave to ſay, that the Commons look upon theſe Practices ſo nearly to concern the Welfare of the People, they repreſent, that, notwithſtanding the great Part they bear in the Conſtitution of this Realm, they have thought it indiſpenſibly neceſſary to appear themſelves, and demand Juſtice of your Lordſhips, and we do it with the more Pleaſure, becauſe we are aſſured, That when the Commons are Proſecutors, and your Lordſhips Judges, the meaneſt Subject will have Juſtice, and the greateſt will not find Favour.

And, my Lords, conſidering that the Earl of Macclesfield is to be judged by the moſt auguſt Aſſembly in the World, of which he is himſelf a Member; it is but a ſuſpicious Symptom of his Confidence in his own Integrity, when he lays hold of any Subterfuge to avoid your Judgment, or endeavours to ſecure himſelf againſt any Part of it by any Plea but that of his Innocence, and the Juſtice of his Cauſe.

Sir Thomas Pengelly, his Majeſty's Serjeant. My Lords, Before the Managers lay before your Lordſhips any Evidence upon the particular Articles, there are ſome Things, we apprehend, neceſſary to be taken Notice of in the Introduction to the Articles, which are not ſufficiently admitted by the Lord Macclesfield, in his Anſwer, and wherein we apprehend it will be neceſſary to give your Lordſhips ſome Satisfaction; and that is relating to his immediate Duty as Lord Chancellor, and the Obligation he is under of an Oath, which is adminiſtred to his Lordſhip, and is eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament. My Lords, We think it proper to lay this before your Lordſhips, becauſe the noble Lord has forgot it, not only in his Anſwer, but in his Conduct. The Oath is eſtabliſh'd by the Statute of the 12*th* of Rich. 2. which enacts, That the Chancellor, &c. ſhall not name or make any Officer, or Miniſter, of the King, for any Gift, or Brocage, but make all ſuch Officers and Miniſters of the beſt and moſt lawful Men.

My Lords, I beg leave to ſhew, that this Oath is eſtabliſh'd by Act of Parliament, and afterwards ſhew your Lordſhips, that it has been adminiſtred to, and taken by the noble Lord within the Bar. It is the Statute of the 12*th* of Rich. 2. Chap. 2. which enjoyns this Oath to be taken by his Lordſhip.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, We are not willing to trouble your Lordſhips with more than is neceſſary, or to go about to prove thoſe Things that are admitted by the Earl's Anſwer, but where they are not fully admitted in ſuch a Manner as they are charged, and with all that Advantage that we think we can make of them, we muſt beg leave to trouble your Lordſhips with the Proof of them. My Lords, It is admitted by the Anſwer, that there was an Oath of Office taken; and it is likewiſe ſet forth in the Anſwer, what that Oath was, but the Anſwer goes no farther, and doth not admit any Thing as to another Oath founded on the Statute of the 12*th Rich.* 2. which hath frequently been taken by the Noble Lord; we think it therefore neceſſary to have the Statute of Rich. 2. firſt read, and the Oath that is there preſcribed, and to ſhew you that the Noble Lord within the Bar, did take that Oath ſeveral Times.

Then the Clerk read the Statute of 12 Rich. 2. Cap. 2 viz.

" Item, It is accorded that the Chancellor, " Treaſurer, Keeper of the Privy-Seal, Steward " of the King's Houſe, the King's Chamberlain, " Clerk of the Rolls, the Juſtices of the one " Bench and of the other, Barons of the Exchequer, " and all other that ſhall be called to ordain, " name, or make Juſtices of Peace, Sheriffs, Eſ- " cheators, Cuſtomers, Comptrollers, or any other " Officer or Miniſter of the King, ſhall be firm- " ly ſworn, that they ſhall not ordain, name, or " make Juſtices of Peace, Sheriff, Eſcheator, " Cuſtomer, Comptroller, nor other Officer, nor " Miniſter of the King, for any Gift or Brocage, " Favour or Affection; nor that none which pur- " ſueth by him, or by other, privily or openly to " be in any manner of Office, ſhall be put in the " ſame Office, or in any other, but that they " make all ſuch Officers and Miniſters of the " beſt and moſt lawful Men, and ſufficient to " their Eſtimation and Knowledge."

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. We beg leave that Mr. Eyre may be produced and ſworn, in order to prove the Adminiſtration of this Oath, and to prove the Noble Lord's taking it ſeveral Times.

Mr. Thomas Eyre Sworn.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire that Mr. Eyre may be asked, Whether he is an Officer of the Exchequer, and what that Book in his Hand is?

Mr. Eyre. My Lords, This Book I have had in my Cuſtody ever ſince I have been in the Office. I have been there forty Years. This is the Book in which the Statute of 12 Rich. 2. is enter'd; and, before the Privy Council name the Sheriffs, this Statute is read over to them, and then the Privy Counſellors are all Sworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, We deſire the Oath may be read.

Mr. Eyre. There is no Oath in the Book, 'tis only the Statute.

Earl of Macclesfield. Will your Lordſhips be pleaſed that he may ſpeak aloud. He ſays there is no Oath in the Book.

Mr. Eyre. The Statute is read, and as ſoon as it is read the Book is preſented to the Privy Counſellors, and they are Sworn.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire he may be asked, Whether he was preſent at any Time when the Earl of Macclesfield has taken the Oath to perform this Statute in the Court of Exchequer?

Mr. Eyre. Yes, ſeveral Times.

Earl of Macclesfield. I beg leave to ask this Queſtion in the firſt Place, Is there any Oath there in that Book?

Mr. Eyre. No, nothing but the Statute of Rich. 2.

Earl of Macclesfield. Nothing but the Statute of Rich. 2. What is it you read or do at that Time when you ſay the Privy Counſellors are ſworn.

Mr. Eyre. As ſoon as this Statute is read, the Bible is preſented to the Privy Counſellors, and they kiſs the Book.

Earl of Macclesfield. Is there any one Word ſaid to them, or by them?

Mr. Eyre. No, the Statute is read over, and the Privy Counſellors kiſs the Book.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire he may read it.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire that he may read the very Words in the Book, as he reads them in the Exchequer.

[Mr. Eyre reads the Statute.]

Anno xii Richardi Secundi.

Earl of Macclesfield. Thoſe you ſay are the very Words you read at that Time when the Sheriffs are nominated in the Court of Exchequer?

Mr. Eyre. Yes.

Earl of Macclesfield. I ſuppoſe you read in that very Manner.

Mr. Eyre. Yes.

Earl of Macclesfield. Do you ſay any one Syllable more?

Mr. Eyre. No.

Earl

E. of Macclesfield. In the next place, I desire he may tell your Lordships what it is that the Officer does at this time?

Mr. Eyre. He carries the Book to all the Privy Counsellors, and they kiss it.

E of Macclesfield. Does he not carry it to the Judges too?

Mr. Eyre. Yes, every one present kisses the Book.

E. of Macclesfield. Does he say any thing to them?

Mr. Eyre. No.

E. of Macclesfield. You say he doth not say any thing to them?

Mr. Eyre. No, nothing at all.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Eyre may be asked, whether, during his time, this hath not been the usual Method of Swearing the Lords of the Privy Council?

Mr. Eyre. Yes, my Lords, it has.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, it seems to be a Question whether this is Swearing at all. Therefore the Question I desire may be ask'd this Witness, is, what Book it is they kiss?

Mr. Eyre. My Lords, it is the Bible.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked, whether this hath not been taken to be Swearing them to do what is commanded by this Statute?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we beg Leave to object to that Question. We apprehend the Witness is only called to give Evidence as to the Fact, and not to state his Reasons and Constructions of Fact.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I beg Leave then to ask a Question that I hope they won't object to: Whether or no this is not the Manner of Swearing the Lords, upon the Nomination of Sheriffs in the Court of Exchequer?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we humbly beg Leave to object to that Question: We apprehend That Centers in the same thing with the former. The Witness has already given your Lordships an Account of all that is said and all that is done when this Act of Parliament is produced. He tells your Lordships the Act of Parliament is read; they kiss the Book; nothing is asked of them, nor is any thing answered: And yet the Gentleman is pleased to ask, whether this is called a Swearing? The Witness has given his Evidence, your Lordships will determine whether it be a Swearing or no.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I desire he may be asked, whether this Kissing the Bible upon the reading this Act, is not usually done at the time of appointing the Sheriffs?

Mr. Eyre. As soon as ever the Act is read over, the Privy-Counsellors kiss the Bible.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I desire it may be asked, whether they proceed to name or appoint any Sheriffs before they kiss the Book in this manner?

Mr. Eyre. No, they do not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we shall rest this matter here.

Lord Lechmere. My Lords, I would be glad if this Question might be asked the Witness; Whether there is any Entry or Memorandum made upon Record in the Court of Exchequer, of any Oath taken by the Privy-Counsellors on this Occasion?

Mr. Eyre. No, there is not.

Mr. West. We submitt this Matter to your Lordships: This Statute prescribes, that an Oath shall be particularly taken; the Fact has been stated by the Witness: And whether it does not amount to the Proof of an Oath, that they will comply with that Act of Parliament, we leave to your Lordships Judgment.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We shall leave this Evidence to your Lordships, and submit it to your Determination, whether this noble Earl can excuse himself from his Obligation to this Act of Parliament, as an Oath? It is very probable, by his future Conduct, he might be of Opinion, that there was no Obligation of any Act or Oath upon him: But upon the Evidence given, we shall submit this Fact: And shall next proceed to call some Witnesses to give an Account of the Nature of the Offices of the Masters in Chancery, who are admitted, by the noble Lord, within the Bar. We shall first produce the Oath which is administred to every Master in Chancery upon his Admission: Then we shall shew the Commissions from Edw. the VIth's time, and so from time to time, to this Day; wherein the Masters in Chancery are joined with my Lords the Judges, to hear and determine Causes in the Absence of my Lord Chancellor; to punish Contempts, to execute and administer a Jurisdiction in that Court. The particular Oath very little varies from the Oath administred to the Lord Chancellor, which, in his Lordship's Answer, is set out at large. However we shall now beg Leave to produce the Oath; and to that Purpose, we desire Mr. Pynsent, the Deputy-Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, may be examined, and he will produce the Oath before your Lordships.

Mr. Pynsent sworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Sir, will you produce, before the Lords, the Oath administred to the Masters in Chancery, upon their Admission to their Offices?

Mr. Common Serjeant. My Lords, we hope he shall give an Account, whether he hath seen the Oath taken, and hath administred it?

Mr. Pynsent. Yes, my Lords, I have seen the Oath taken, and have administred it myself.

Reads the Oath.

Sacrm Magistrorum Cancellarie } YE shall swear that well and trulie Ye shall serve the Kinge Our Sovereigne Lord, and his People, in the Office of one of the Maisters of his Chauncerye, to the whiche Ye be called: Ye shall not assent, ne Procure the Disherytaunce, ne perpetual Damage of the Kinge, to Your Power, ne fraude; Ye shall doe or cause to be made wrongefullye to anye of his People, ne in anye thinge that touchethe the Seale: And lawfullye Ye shall Counsail the thinges that touchethe the Kinge, when ye shall be thereunto required. And the Counsayll that Ye shall geve touching him, Ye shall not disclose. And yf Ye know anye thinge of the Disheretaunce or Damage of the King, or fraude to be made upon anye thinge that touchethe the keeping of the Seale: Ye shall put Your lawfull Power it to redresse and amende; And yf that Ye cannot do, Ye shall advyse the Chauncellor, or Lorde Keper of the Seale, or other whiche may that amende, to Your Power. As God you helpe, and by the Content of this Boke.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, there will be Directions given to lay a Copy of this Oath, as well as Copies of other Records, upon your Lordships Table.

The next Evidence we shall produce, are Commissions beginning in the Time of Edw. 6. to this time, granted to Masters, appointing them to hear Causes, &c. The first Commission we shall produce, is dated the 9th of October, the 4th of Edw. 6. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Paxton may be sworn, who has Copies of these Commissions, and has examined them with the Records.

Mr. Ralph Paxton sworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we desire that he may be asked, whether the Copies in his hand are true Copies, and where they were examined?

Ld. Ch. Just. King. Are they true Copies, and where did you examine them?

Mr. R. Paxton. My Lords, they are true Copies. I examined them in several Places. I must look upon each of them, and then I shall tell your Lordships where I examined them. I examined some at the Rolls, some at the Petty-Bag Office, and some at the Report-Office.

Ld. Ch. Just. King. Did you examine them all there?

Mr. R. Paxton. I did.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Are they true Copies?

Mr. R. Paxton. I believe they are, I took a great deal of Care and Pains in examining of them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we desire that these Copies may be read.

Mr. Strange. Are they upon Stamps?

Mr. R. Paxton. Yes, Sir, with a double Six-penny Stamp.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, it seems they are Stampt, since they make an Objection of that Nature, we desire they may be read.

WRIGHTE.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we don't apprehend it neceſſary to read all the others over; we ſhall deliver them in; unleſs it be deſired by the noble Lord. My Lords, we now beg leave to call Mr. Meller, who hath executed the Office of a Maſter in Chancery for ſeveral Years. He will give your Lordſhips ſome Account of the Nature and of the Manner of Execution of that Office, in ſupport of what the Commons have charged.

Mr. John Meller ſworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, We deſire Mr. Meller may be asked whether he hath executed the Office of a Maſter in Chancery, and how long, and what is the Nature of that Office?

L.d. Ch. Juſt. King. Sir, you hear the Queſtion?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, according to the beſt of my Remembrance, I was admitted a Maſter the latter End of the Year 1708, and continued ſo till July, 1720. The general Nature of the Office is, to digeſt and ſum up thoſe Matters which are ordered upon Hearing to be referred to us, by way of Report: That is the general Buſineſs. There is a further Buſineſs, when Bills of Coſts are to be taxed, they are taxed and adjuſted by us what is to be paid. I don't recollect any more particular Buſineſs.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, for whoſe Service and Uſe thoſe Reports are made?

Mr. Meller. Thoſe Reports are made for the Uſe of the Suitors of the Court. 'Tis to ſtate the Facts that the Lord Chancellor has referred to the Maſter that are too tedious for the Court to look into.

Mr. Lutwyche. To whom are they returned and directed?

Mr. Meller. Theſe Reports are made to the Court, to the Lord Chancellor, or the Maſter of the Rolls. They have theſe Reports, and make a final Order upon them.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire he may be asked, when Reports of the ſeveral Matters referred to the Maſter to conſider of, which would take up too much Time of the Court to ſettle, are made, whether thoſe Reports of the Maſter are at all concluſive? Or what is the Method in caſe the Parties don't acquieſce?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, the Report is only to ſtate the Facts to the Court; and till the Report is confirmed by the Court, what the Maſter hath reported has no Effect. So that I apprehend it is only to lay the State of the Matter before the Court: If what the Maſter reports, ſeems agreeable to the Court, then they confirm it; if not, they vary it, or ſometimes ſend it back again to the Maſter for his further Conſideration.

Mr. Com. Serjeant. My Lords, I deſire that Mr. Meller may inform your Lordſhips, if any Perſon apprehends the Facts miſtaken, whether they have not an Opportunity of rectifying this Report of the Maſter.

Mr. Meller. My Lords, ſo far as I apprehend, the Rule of the Court is this, when a Report is drawn up, the Parties on both Sides have Liberty to object to that Report before the Maſter; and whatever they put in by way of Objection before the Maſter, they may ſpeak to thoſe ſeveral Points when the Report comes before the Court.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. What are the Matters that are generally referred to the Maſters by the Court?

Mr. Meller. The Chief Matters are the ſtating of Accompts.

Mr

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I beg leave to ask the Witneſs this Queſtion. Whether any Matters of Judgment are at any time referred by the Court to the Maſter?

Mr. Meller. The Nature of Reports requires ſome Concluſion upon them, to be given by the Maſters according to the beſt of their Opinion. But the Court gives a Sanction to thoſe Reports.

Mr. Strange. Whether in any one Inſtance, the Judgment of the Maſter is final to the Suitor?

Mr. Meller. I will recollect, and give your Lordſhips the beſt Account that I can remember as to that. I think when a Maſter has taxed a Bill of Coſts, there is a Subpœna taken out for the Coſts upon the Maſter's Report, without going to the Court. I am not ſure.

Mr. Com. Serjeant. When Exceptions are taken to a Maſter's Report, doth the Maſter or the Court paſs a Judgment upon them?

Mr. Meller. The Method is this, when a Report is drawn up, a Copy is given to both Sides, and each Side puts in ſuch Objections to it as they think proper; the Maſter goes through thoſe Objections, and having gone through them, he forms an Opinion upon the whole. Then it goes to the Court, and the Parties have Liberty to go upon thoſe Objections before the Court, who finally determine.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire, my Lords, that Mr. Meller may acquaint your Lordſhips who preſided in the Court when he came in?

Mr. Meller, My Lord Cowper, I take it, was then Chancellor; it was in the Year 1708, or the Beginning of 1709.

Mr. Com. Serj. We deſire to know, whether he gave any Money when he came into the Office, and to whom?

Mr. Plummer. We have called this Gentleman to give an Account of the Nature of the Office of a Maſter in Chancery, we are not come to that Matter of giving of Money; we ſubmit whether it is neceſſary to enter into that Queſtion now?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If this Gentleman is to be called again, we beg Leave to reſerve that Queſtion till they come to that Part of the Charge.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I have another Queſtion to ask: It has been asked, whether the Determination of a Maſter in Chancery is final? I deſire it may be asked, if the Maſter in Chancery makes a Report, to which there is no Exception, whether the Decree in Chancery is not according to that Report?

Mr. Meller. I take it, after the Maſter has made a Report, and there is no Exception to it, that Report is firſt confirmed niſi, and then it is confirmed abſolutely upon a ſecond Motion.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked another Queſtion: If there be a Reference concerning an Anſwer which is alledged inſufficient, and the Maſter reports it inſufficient, whether it is not final and concluſive, unleſs the Party takes Exception to ſuch Report?

Mr. Meller. Unleſs the Party takes Exception, 'tis looked upon as final: For then he ſubmits and puts in a farther Anſwer, and then the End of referring it to the Maſter is anſwered: But the Party may except if he pleaſes.

Mr. Lutwyche. As to the taxing of Coſts, whether when the Coſts are taxed to a particular Sum, that is not final and concluſive, unleſs the Party makes Application to the Court?

Mr. Meller. I apprehend I did anſwer that before. The Maſter, after he has taxed the Bill of Coſts, the Clerk in Court, as I take it, makes out Subpœnas for Coſts of courſe: But I cannot ſpeak to that ſo well as the Clerks in Court; but I take that to be the Practice.

Earl of Abingdon. I would be glad to be informed in this Point: Suppoſing a Sum of Money to be laid out upon a Purchaſe or Mortgage, whether the Titles of thoſe Eſtates are not commonly referred to a Maſter, and whether the Maſter does not judge of or determine thoſe Titles?

Mr. Meller. In that Caſe, I can only ſpeak to what came before myſelf. When there was an Order to put Money out upon a Mortgage, the firſt Step I took was, I ſent the Title-Deeds to ſome able Counſel; when I had his Opinion, I uſed the beſt of my Judgment to inform myſelf: If I found no Objection, then I thought I was obliged to allow the Security, and accordingly made my Report of Allowance; and then as Maſter ſet my Hand to the Side of the Deed.

Mr. Lutwyche. Another Queſtion I would beg Leave to ask. Tho' it is well known, yet it is fit it ſhould appear from the Witneſs, and that is, Whether the Maſters don't ſit upon the Bench with my Lord Chancellor in open Court in Weſtminſter-Hall every Term?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, in Weſtminſter-Hall three Maſters are required to attend the Chancellor; at his own Houſe two; and the like at the Rolls.

Mr. Com. Serj. If the Gentlemen have done, we beg Leave to ask one Queſtion: Whether even in the Caſe of Coſts, if the Parties are diſſatisfied, Application is not made to the Court (tho' not by way of Exception, yet by Motion) to refer it back again?

Mr. Meller. In the Caſe of Coſts, it hath been a very rare thing to apply to the Court. Some Inſtances there have been, I believe, but few.

Mr. Com. Serj. I beg Leave the Maſter would inform your Lordſhips, whether in the Caſe of Titles, if there happens any Difference in the Opinion of the Parties, whether they apply to the Court, or are concluded by the Opinion of the Maſter?

Mr. Meller. I never knew, during the Time that I was in the Office, that any Title was ever conteſted before the Court; I mean in my own Caſe.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether or no he knows any Caſe where the Parties have differ'd in Opinion about a Title, that the Maſter's Opinion has concluded the Parties?

Mr. Meller, I don't know, while I was in the Office, that there was ever any Objection before me in the Caſe of a Title.

Mr. Robins. Give me Leave to ask one Queſtion: You ſay three Maſters ſit with my Lord Chancellor at Weſtminſter, two at his own Houſe: I deſire to know what they do there, whether they ſit as Aſſiſtants?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, I don't know that ever their Advice was asked.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, I would ask whether they ever interpoſed by way of Judgment, or took upon them to act as Judges?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, I think not, I don't remember any Inſtance of it.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether what the Maſter ever does is confirmed of courſe, or is there not a Motion for that purpoſe?

Mr. Meller. I thought I mentioned that before: I ſhall repeat it again. There is firſt a Motion to confirm niſi Cauſa; and upon the ſecond Motion, unleſs there is Cauſe ſhewn, it is confirmed.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, if there is not an Affidavit of Service of the firſt Order?

Mr. Meller. I believe there is; but that is the Buſineſs of the Sollicitor.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I beg Leave he may be asked one Queſtion more, Whether there is not a Certificate alſo from the Regiſter that no Cauſe is ſhewn?

Mr Meller. My Lords, I can't ſpeak particularly as to that; It is a Buſineſs that does not lie before the Maſter in his Office: I believe in many Caſes the Regiſter certifies.

Dr. Sayer. We will trouble your Lordſhips with no more Queſtions except this one; that is, Whether we ſhall ſee Mr. Meller again? For if we are to take our Leave of him now, we ſhould offer ſome other Queſtions before he departs.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I can't tell whether the Managers will have any Occaſion to call him again; but he ſhall ſtay here to attend, in order to be called when he is wanted, either by the Noble Lord or any other Perſon. We don't think fit to trouble your Lordſhips with any other Evidence as to that Matter. Their Authority in Court appears by the Commiſſions that have been produced. It is not ſaid in the Introduction to the Articles, that the Maſters are to comptroll the Lord Chancellor, but to aſſiſt him in the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice, of which we think we have produced the fulleſt Proof; and beg Leave to proceed to another Part of our Evidence, that which relates to the Profits of the Office of Lord Chancellor. The ordinary Profits, not to mention the extraordinary ones, which have been made by the Noble Lord within the Bar, I think may be computed to amount to 8000 l. a Year, or thereabouts; ſo that there is no Occaſion to uſe other Means. But not to enter into them all, we ſhall only beg Leave to call one Witneſs to prove one groſs annual Sum of 1500 l. a Year paid out of the Hanaper-Office. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Pynſent may be asked, for what annual Sum he accompted to the late Lord Chancellor out of the Hanaper-Office, during his time of being in the ſaid Office, how much he has paid him?

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I beg Leave to oppoſe that Queſtion. I believe there is no Payment from the Crown but what is always upon Record; and therefore that being a Matter of a higher Nature, they ought to produce thoſe Records, and not examine Witneſſes viva voce to it.

E. of Macclesfield. I believe this Gentleman is right in his Objection in Point of Law. But however, as this Perſon is the proper Officer, and I believe an honeſt Man, I will not inſiſt upon the Nicety.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire to know how much a Year he has paid to the impeached Lord out of the Hanaper-Office?

Mr. Pynſent. I have no Voucher with me; but as far as I can charge my Memory, 'tis about 13 or 1400 l. a Year.

E. of Macclesfield. If he had had his Memorandum with him, I was willing he ſhould give your Lordſhips an Account of that Matter; but if he ſpeaks only by an uncertain Memory of it, I hope I ſhall not be bound by it, eſpecially when he himſelf aſſigns the Want of his Vouchers as a Reaſon why he cannot be certain.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire he may be asked, How much he can take upon him to ſay he has paid? It is not material whether by Warrant or Special Direction: It is only a Queſtion of Fact, whether he can be certain to a Sum, either 13 or 1400 l. a Year, or other Sum?

Mr Pynſent. I can ſay above 1000 l. a Year. If I had my Vouchers here, I could be more certain.

Mr Com. Serj. The Noble Lord waved the Objection, upon a Suppoſition that he had a certain Account. As he has not, I muſt beg Leave to inſiſt upon the Objection that I made againſt the Legality of the Proof.

Mr. Lutwyche. We only ask in this Caſe to a Fact, what he paid to him; and I will add this further, for what time?

Mr Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we muſt inſiſt upon our Objection. The Witneſs ſays he is uncertain how much he has paid: He ſays he has Vouchers which will ſhew the particular Sums he has paid; and ſince it is in their Power to produce thoſe Vouchers, we muſt ſubmit it that they ſhall produce the beſt Evidence they have in their Power to give, and that the Receipts and Vouchers ſhall be produced.

Mr Com. Serj. The Anſwer of the Honourable Managers to the Objection, is no Anſwer. They ſay 'tis a Matter of Fact; but that Matter of Fact is Matter of Record: It muſt be proved by the Record, becauſe the Law expects the higheſt Proof to be made that can be, even in trifling Caſes, and much more when the Honour of ſo great a Lord is in queſtion.

Mr Serj. Probyn. I deſire to know if there is not conſtantly a Receipt given upon every Payment?

Mr Pynſent. Yes, and thoſe Receipts are carried into the Auditors Office, and there they reſt.

Mr Serj. Probyn. Then they can be come at?

Mr Pynſent. Yes, they are carried in yearly.

Mr Sol. General. My Lords, I did not expect this Objection: But we muſt ſubmit it whether there is any Foundation for it. If the Matter of Record be inſiſted on, only with reſpect to the Receipt given, there is no need of it: Better Evidence cannot be given to prove Payment, than the Man who paid it. The common Evidence to prove Payment of Money, is to produce duce a Man to ſwear that he paid that Money. No better Evidence can be given; and tho' a Receipt is given, yet when a Perſon proves he paid the Money, he need not produce the Receipt: It is better Evidence than the Receipt: A Receipt may be given without Payment. Therefore we apprehend that the Witneſs's Proof of the Payment, is ſufficient to prove this Matter of Fact.

Mr. Com. Serj. I apprehend there is no Money either received or iſſued out by the Crown, but what appears by Record. It is not only thoſe Receipts that is the Strength of the Objection; but when there are Matters uncertain, and the Witneſs ſays he can't declare what it was, whether upon that Foundation your Lordſhips won't expect a certain Evidence, not only from the Nature of the Thing, but from the preſent Circumſtances of this Caſe, when the Witneſs declares that he cannot remember it?

Mr Strange. My Lords, I wonder to hear it ſaid, that a Perſon who ſwears to the Payment of Money, is the moſt certain Evidence. He may be miſtaken, the Receipt cannot. Therefore we muſt ſubmit it, as they have opened it, whether this is the beſt Evidence?

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, I wonder your Lordſhips ſhould be troubled with any thing of this kind, in order to prove a Salary of 1500 l. a Year belonging to the Noble Lord's Office, when we ask only to the Quantum of the Sum which he did receive from Mr. Pynſent: The Queſtion is, whether we ſhall be admitted to ask that Queſtion? It is admitted that the Witneſs paid the Salary: All the Queſtion is, what he paid?

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I am ſorry your Lordſhips Time ſhould be taken up about a thing of this kind. When the Objection was firſt made by my Counſel, which I apprehend is right, I ſtood up to acquaint your Lordſhips, that I did not inſiſt on the Nicety of it. This Gentleman uſed to pay me Money, and I believe he is a very honeſt Gentleman; but when he comes to ſay he is not ſure how much, and they were working him up to a higher Pitch, and theſe Gentlemen, for ought I know, or their Sollicitor, may have the Receipts in their Pockets, I thought it was then high time to ſtop them. This Gentleman did ſay it was more than 1000 l. My Lords, I admit it, I believe it to be 1100 l. a Year, or thereabouts: If I knew exactly, I would tell it, I never intended to diſpute the Matter.

Mr Weſt. I would not have your Lordſhips imagine that the Commons are capable of working up a Witneſs. It is unworthy of the Commons of Great Britain, of the Gentlemen appointed Managers in their Behalf; it is impoſſible that they ſhould have any View but the Truth of the Fact, and the Juſtice of the Cauſe. The Queſtion asked was only what it was he paid; it was not endeavouring to work him up to any thing. If this was a Queſtion relating to the Crimes charged upon his Lordſhip, I ſhould not have been ſo much ſurprized; but this is only an Aggravation contained in the Preamble. I think the litigating the Point is as great an Aggravation, as the proving the Payment of the Money.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I did not intend any Reflection upon the Commons; nor did I ſay any thing which amounts to it. I did ſay the Sollicitor might have the Receipts, I don't know what they have in their Hands. The learned Gentleman that ſpoke laſt, ſays 'tis not a Charge, only an Aggravation: If it be an Aggravation, ſhould it not be proved, and legally proved? But I have been ready to make this Matter eaſy, for I agreed it to be as much as their own Witneſs can with any Certainty ſay it was, and I don't think it to be any Aggravation; and therefore told your Lordſhips I believed it might be 1100 l. a Year, or thereabouts, not being willing to take up any more of your Lordſhips time about it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, the Managers for the Houſe of Commons do not think it ſo material whether it be 11 or 1500 l. a Year. We will take the Noble Lord's Admiſſion: And we apprehend as it is 1100 l. a Year, it is a reaſonable Addition to the Salary of his Office.

E. of Macclesfield. I only would ask this Queſtion, Do you remember what the Chancellor's Annual Salary is?

Mr. Pynſent. No, I do not.

E. of Macclesfield. That is Part of the Particular that makes up the 1100 l. per Annum?

Mr. Pynſent. I think it is ſo.

E. of Macclesfield. Is it not 300 l. per Annum?

Mr Pynſent. I think it is thereabouts.

Mr Com. Serj. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether or no this 1100 l. a Year hath been uſually allowed to the preceding Lords Chancellors?

Mr Pynſent. I take it for granted that it was ſo.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we ſhall now proceed to call our Witneſſes in Support of the Ninth Article, that being a diſtinct Particular, relating to a Sum not at all involved in the Queſtions touching the Maſters; and, as we apprehend, received by the Noble Earl under Circumſtances of the greateſt Aggravation that is poſſible; abuſing the Royal Authority, or that Share of it which the Noble Lord enjoyed at that time when he was one of the Lords Juſtices. Therefore we give Preference to that Article, and deſire Mr. Thomas Bennet, whom I ſee in your Lordſhips Houſe, may be ſworn and examined.

Mr. Thomas Bennet ſworn.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, Mr. Bennet was the Perſon who was poſſeſſed of the Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies, at the time of the Reſignation of it for the Benefit of Mr. Hamerſley, who has now a Patent. We have the Patent here; and if that be read, it will more fully acquaint your Lordſhips with the Nature of the Office, and then we ſhall acquaint your Lordſhips with the Nature of the Tranſaction.

The Patent begun to be read.

'Teſte, &c. 5^to^ Septemb' An. 10 Georgii Regis.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. Tho' the Noble Lord's Name be not mentioned in the Patent, yet it is ſufficiently known from the Date and Time of of it, that it was when the Noble Lord was one of the Lords Juſtices, and had the Cuſtody of the Seals, and that at that time he affixed the Seals to this Patent.

Then the Patent was begun again to be read.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I beg Pardon for interrupting, I don't know whether they think it of any particular Uſe to read it through; if not, for ſaving your Lordſhips time, I admit that a Grant was made of the Office to Mr. Hamerſley, on the Surrender of Mr. Bennet.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, as it is neceſſary to ſhew the Reſignation of Mr. Thomas Bennet, ſo likewiſe the Nature of the Office; and therefore to the end that may be the better ſeen, we beg Leave the Patent may be read.

Clerk reads.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The Reading of theſe Letters Patents ſhews, that this Office is in the Gift of the Crown: It likewiſe ſhews, that the Reſignation of Mr. Tho. Bennet was for the Benefit of Mr. Hamerſley, for that is recited in the Letters Patents themſelves. Now, my Lords, we ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips upon what Conſideration or Bargain that Reſignation and new Grant were made.

Mr. Com. Serj. I beg Leave to make an Objection to that: The Foundation of this Article is a corrupt Agreement for the Reſignation of an Office accepted by the Lord Chancellor. Now, in the Letters Patents in general, a Reſignation is taken Notice of; but they ought to make it appear, That his Lordſhip's Permiſſion or Acceptance of it is neceſſary. The Reſignation is not made to the Lord Chancellor: Therefore we hope it ſhall not, by way of Concluſion and Implication, be an Evidence to prove this Reſignation to be accepted or procured by him. The Reſignation was in fact made without his Privity; and the Reſignation itſelf is of Record, and muſt be proved by Record.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, I can hardly think myſelf at your Lordſhips Bar, by the Objections which are made by the Counſel for the noble Lord. They object before they hear us: They object we cannot prove the Reſignation to the Earl: When we have produced our Proof, then they will ſee whether it be ſufficient: 'Tis time enough for them to make the Objection then. If we are to be objected to upon every Witneſs we call, before we have asked them one Queſtion, I am afraid a great deal more Trouble will be given your Lordſhips than we are willing to give. We are firſt to ask our Queſtions; if we ask an improper Queſtion, they may object to the Queſtion: Or, if the Anſwer don't prove our Charge, they may obſerve on it when it is given. I little expected this Method at your Lordſhips Bar.

Lords. Go on, go on.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. We don't apprehend there is any Occaſion to enter into this Objection. It is a Reſignation to the Crown, but through the Hands of the Lord Chancellor: He is the Lord that puts the Seal to the Inſtrument: But if further Evidence be neceſſary, they muſt object to that when we have gone through the Proof. Therefore we beg Leave to ask Mr. Tho. Bennet.

Mr. Lutwyche. I thought they would have objected to our asking Mr. Bennet any Queſtions at all.

Mr. Onſlow. It is rather an Obſervation upon our Evidence, which will be more proper for them when they come to make the noble Lord's Defence.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg Leave to ask Mr. Bennet, what Application he made for Liberty to reſign this Office, and for Mr. Hammerſley to be admitted?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lords, as ſoon as I was admitted a Maſter of the Court of Chancery, which was the 3d of June, 1723, I thought it inconſiſtent to hold this Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies, which I had before; and therefore I intended to ſurrender it to ſome Perſon that was proper: And after I had found Mr. Hamerſley, and made an Agreement with him, I applied to Mr. Cottingham, then Secretary to my Lord Chancellor. I told him I was poſſeſſed of an Office in the Gift of the Crown, and was willing to ſurrender, and was going to apply to a Secretary of State to get the King's Leave to ſurrender for the Benefit of Mr. Hamerſley. I told him that the Office being in the Court of Chancery, the Secretary of State would naturally ask my Lord Chancellor, whether the Perſon I propoſed was well-affected to the Government, and qualified for the Place: And therefore, for that Reaſon, I thought it my Duty to acquaint my Lord Chancellor with my Intention, and who the Perſon was I intended to ſucceed me. I deſired Mr. Cottingham to acquaint my Lord Chancellor that Mr. Hamerſley was the Perſon. Mr. Cottingham replied, he would acquaint my Lord Chancellor, and I ſhould have an Anſwer as ſoon as poſſible. He appointed me to meet him the next Day, when he told me he had acquainted my Lord Chancellor who the Perſon was, and that my Lord Chancellor ſaid he had not any Knowledge of him. I told Mr. Cottingham he might have acquainted his Lordſhip that he knew him, for he lived the next Door to him: He is a Gentleman at the Bar well known; and I do aſſure you he is in the Intereſt of the Government. Says Mr. Cottingham, my Lord Chancellor don't know him, nor do I. I was ſurprized at that. But however, ſaid he, Mr. Bennet, there is a Preſent expected by my Lord Chancellor, and if I made that Preſent, the thing might be made eaſy, and my Lord Chancellor would do what I deſired; that is, to acquaint the Secretary of State, that Mr. Hamerſley was a Perſon well affected to the Government; and that I deſired he might ſucceed me in my Place. Mr. Cottingham ſaid, there muſt be a Preſent. On this, I told Mr. Cottingham, that it was not uſual to give any Preſent upon this Occaſion; that, in my own Caſe, when I came in, I gave none to my Lord Cowper, and my Brother told me that he gave none; and that at his Coming in, he asked Lord Cowper if any thing was due to him, and my Lord Cowper denied that any thing was due, and abſolutely refuſed any thing: Beſides, ſaid I, it is very hard for my Lord Chancellor to ask or accept any thing from me, becauſe I ſo lately paid him ſo great a Sum as Fifteen hundred Guineas for my Maſter's Place; but if he will have it, I will give him One hundred Guineas. He ſaid he would acquaint my Lord Chancellor with it; and the next day, or the day after, he told me that my Lord Chancellor would accept of that; but it was a very ſmall Preſent, and it was a Favour my Lord accepted it; and my Lord would ſend over to Hanover for the King's Warrant, and I need have no further Trouble beſides paſſing the Patent.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he paid the One hundred Guineas to Mr. Cottingham, and in what manner?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I did pay it, I think it was in a Bank Bill of 105 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Do you remember at what time?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. It was long before the Reſignation: For ſome conſiderable time after, Mr. Cottingham asked me what I meant that I did not paſs the Patent, for the Warrant was come over. I ſaid I had employ'd Mr. Tench to do it; but however I would ſpeak to him again; which accordingly I did, and Mr. Tench paſſed the Patent, and I paid him 64 l. 17 s. 0 d. the Fees for paſſing the Patent.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was that over and above the One hundred Guineas?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, my Lords.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was there any Deduction upon the Payment of the One hundred Guineas?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. None at all.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, how long this was after he was admitted a Maſter in Chancery?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I believe it was about ſix Weeks. I was admitted a Maſter in Chancery the Beginning of June, and the latter End of July following, I ſurrender'd my Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We have done with Mr. Bennet.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If the Gentlemen have done with him, we beg that he may be asked a few Queſtions on behalf of my Lord Macclesfield. What was it you deſired Mr. Cottingham to ſay in your Favour to my Lord Macclesfield?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I deſired Mr. Cottingham to acquaint my Lord Chancellor, that I intended to apply myſelf to the Secretary of State for Leave to ſurrender the Place of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, and to beg the Favour, that if the Secretary of State ſhould enquire of him after the Abilities and Circumſtances of Mr. Hamerſley, he might aſſure the Secretary of State, that he was a Man qualified for the Place, and well affected to the Government.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Was that all?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I think that was all.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Was that all that Mr. Cottingham told you he had asked?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I don't remember any thing more, but only Mr. Cottingham returned for Anſwer, my Lord did not know Mr. Hamerſley, and I muſt make a Preſent, and then what I deſired would be complied with.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I think you ſay you had ſome Treaty with Mr. Hamerſley about the Surrender of your Office?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Had you come to any Agreement with him for the Office, if you could procure a Surrender and Admittance?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Then I deſire to know what Sum of Money he was to pay you for that Office, if you could procure him to be recommended?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We hope the Counſel will not ask ſuch a Queſtion.

Mr. Sol. Gen. It is not ſo proper for us to object: The Objection is to come from him: We may tell him that he is not bound to anſwer ſuch a Queſtion, unleſs he pleaſes.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I deſire to be excuſed anſwering a Queſtion that is not material on one Side or the other.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I hope it will be thought reaſonable, that he ſhould inform your Lordſhips, what was the Conſideration that induced him to ſurrender his Office, or what Money he was to have?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I might have ſurrendered that Office without receiving any Money for it; whether I gave it, or whether I ſold it away, is not material.

Mr. Strange. I deſire to know whether he gave it away.

Mr. Weſt. The Queſtion is only to induce him to accuſe himſelf of a Fact which may be prejudicial to him, and it hath no Influence on the Queſtion before your Lordſhips; which is not, whether this Gentleman had a Right to give away or ſell his Office, but whether the Earl of Macclesfield corruptly took Money.

Mr. Sol. Gen. It is our Duty that he ſhould not be ſurprized into a Queſtion that may ſubject him to Puniſhment: It is not properly an Objection from us; but we ought to let him know, that an Anſwer to the Queſtion may ſubject him to a Proſecution. If he thinks fit to anſwer, we have nothing to ſay to it.

Mr. Plumner. I have another Objection to the putting of this Queſtion. I perceive the Counſel intend to draw out this Tryal to an exceſſive Length; I hope your Lordſhips, for your own

Sakes,

Sakes, will not permit this Queſtion to be anſwered?

Earl of Abingdon. If this Point be inſiſted on on both Sides, it cannot be avoided but they muſt withdraw: But I hope the Counſel for the noble Lord will conſider very well of it, before they give your Lordſhips or the Managers that Trouble: For if your Lordſhips ſhould judge the Queſtion unreaſonable, it would throw a Diſgrace upon themſelves, and be at leaſt of no Service to the noble Lord that is impeached.

E. of Macclesfield. I humbly apprehend this Queſtion to be extremely material, as that Circumſtance of his having made this Preſent of One hundred Guineas out of Two thouſand, perhaps, which he received for ſurrendring the Place, muſt ſet this matter in a different Light than it would appear in, if nothing elſe had been done but the bare paying of the One hundred Guineas; but ſince I perceive it to be your Lordſhips Senſe that he ſhould not be asked the Queſtion, I therefore decline inſiſting on it.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, I beg Leave to ask Mr. Bennet this Queſtion: He was pleaſed to ſay that he gave a Hundred Guineas. Now I deſire it may be asked of him, Whether he gave it to permit him to reſign, or to give a Recommendation of Mr. Hamerſley, or what elſe. That he would pleaſe to explain it, what it was given for.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I have ſaid it twice; but I will repeat it again. I ſaid that it was that my Lord Chancellor might recommend the Perſon to the Secretary of State; for I apprehended it was not in my Lord's Power or Gift: He might have done it without taking any Money.

Dr. Sayer. With regard to this 64 l. odd Money, what was that paid for? Whether to the Great Seal only, or for the whole Fees in paſſing the Patent through all the Offices?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. It was paid to Mr. Tench the Clerk of the Patents, who paſſed this Patent through all the Offices; and the Great Seal was included in it as I apprehend.

Dr. Sayer. I ask who this Mr. Tench is, whether he is an Officer belonging to the Great Seal, under the Lord Chancellor?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. He is Clerk of the Patents; I do not know who he belongs to.

Mr. Robins. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, Whether Mr. Cottingham told him, that the Lord Macclesfield inſiſted upon any particular Sum?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Mr. Cottingham told me, that my Lord inſiſted upon One hundred Guineas; and I argued the Unreaſonableneſs and Hardſhip of it.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Bennet may acquaint your Lordſhips, whether ever he made any Application to the noble Lord for Permiſſion to reſign?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I never ſpoke to my Lord myſelf.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If the Gentlemen have done with him, we beg Leave to explain this Matter, and to ask him upon what Account it was that Mr. Cottingham from my Lord Macclesfield ſaid a Preſent was expected?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I can't ſay what was Mr. Cottingham's Reaſon; but he ſaid my Lord Chancellor did not know Mr. Hamerſley; and then he went on, and ſaid, a Preſent was expected. I apprehended, Mr. Cottingham took it, that I could not do it without my Lord Chancellor's Conſent.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, Whether the Hundred Guineas was paid for a Recommendation of Mr. Hamerſley, or that the Whole of procuring the Warrant for the Patent was to be done for it?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Mr. Cottingham aſſured me, I need have no farther Trouble about it, if I would pay the Hundred Guineas: He would get the King's Warrant; and I ſhould have no farther Trouble, but paſſing the Patent.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he depended upon theſe Aſſurances, or whether he made Application to any body elſe?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I never made any other Application; and I told Mr. Cottingham, if any Accident happen'd of Death, &c. before the Warrant came over, I hoped my Lord Chancellor would return the Hundred Guineas; and he ſaid, Surely ſo.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I beg Leave to obſerve, that the Patent proves that this corrupt Bargain was executed.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether Mr. Cottingham delivered to him the Sign-Manual, or whether Mr. Cottingham got the Patent paſſed?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I never ſaw the Sign-Manual. He delivered it, as I believe, to Mr. Tench.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did Mr. Cottingham give you Notice when the Sign-Manual came over?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, he did give me Notice it was come over, and was very angry I did not go about it.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire Mr. Bennet may give your Lordſhips an Account what Time it was?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. About the latter End of July.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, whether he had not made Application to the Secretary's-Office?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, I had not made any Application at all.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Did you never make any Application to any other Perſon, either before or after?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I am poſitive I did not.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Did you ever ſay about that time, that you had made Application to any other Perſon?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, I don't remember that I did.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. No; did you never make Application to any body elſe?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I never told any body, to the beſt of my Knowledge and Belief, I am very confident I never did.

Mr. Serj Pengelly. My Lords, if they have done with this Witneſs, we beg Leave to call Mr. Cottingham, who was an Agent, and paid over this Money to my Lord Macclesfield.

Mr. Peter Cottingham ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we only call Mr. Cottingham to acquaint your Lordſhips when he paid over theſe Hundred Guineas to my Lord Macclesfield.

Mr. Cottingham. In July I think it was.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. How long after you received it from Mr. Tho. Bennet?

Mr.

Mr. Cottingham. I believe I paid it over that Day, or the Day after.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked, how long before the Patent was passed?

Mr. Cottingham. I can't tell, because I can't certainly say when the Patent passed.

Mr. Lutwyche. We desire to ask him, whether it was that Year when the King was beyond Sea?

Mr. Cottingham. I think, my Lords, it was; it was in July 1723.

Mr. Com. Serj. If the Gentlemen of the House of Commons have done with him, I beg that he would give your Lordships an Account what Discourse he had with Mr. Bennet?

Ld. Ch. Just. King. You hear the Question?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Tho. Bennet told me he had agreed with Mr. Hamersley for the Place of the Clerk of the Custodies; and that he did not think it convenient to keep two such considerable Places which depended upon his own Life only; that is, the Master's Place, which he had before purchased, and this. He told me he had disposed of this Place to Mr. Hamersley, in order to reimburse himself Part of the Money he had paid to Mr. Hiccocks for his Master's Place that he had purchased of him, and for that Reason he did not care to keep both.

Mr. Com. Serj. Did he tell you how much he had disposed of it for?

Mr. Cottingham. No, he did not.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I desire Mr. Cottingham may be asked what it was Mr. Bennet desired him to request of my Lord Macclesfield?

Mr. Cottingham. To the best of my Remembrance, he said, he hoped that his Lordship would accept of a Hundred Guineas, because he had received from him so lately a Present for his Master's Place; and he desired his Lordship to forward his Petition to his Majesty.

Dr. Sayer. Was this on the first Application?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes; he never made but one Application to me.

Dr. Sayer. It is of Consequence; and therefore I desire it may be asked, whether at the first time he apply'd, he made this Offer of One Hundred Guineas?

Mr. Cottingham. He did, and I paid it over to my Lord Macclesfield.

Dr Sayer. I desire Mr Cottingham may be asked, whether he knew Mr Hamersley before this time?

Mr Cottingham. I knew him very well, he was my next Door Neighbour both in Town and Country.

Dr Sayer. Did you tell Mr Bennet you did not know him?

Mr Cottingham. No, I never told him so, it was impossible I should; he was my next Door Neighbour both in Bell-yard, and at Hampstead.

Dr Sayer. What Character had Mr Hamersley?

Mr Cottingham. A very good one.

E. of Macclesfield. When you first spoke to me of this matter, what did you tell me?

Mr Cottingham. I told your Lordship Mr Hamersley was my next Door Neighbour both in Town and Country; and that he was a Gentleman of as unquestionable a Character as any at the Bar; and your Lordship was pleased to depend upon me for his Character.

Mr Strange. He is pleased to say Mr Bennet did not inform him what Agreement was made between him and Mr Hamersley. But did not he say on what Account he resign'd?

Mr Cottingham. He told me he surrendred the Office, to reimburse himself the Money he had paid to Mr. Hiccocks for his Office.

Mr. Strange. What Office was that?

Mr. Cottingham. The Master's Office.

Mr. Strange. Did he mention that?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, he did mention it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If they have done, we beg leave to ask Mr. Cottingham, since he informed my Lord of the Circumstances of Mr. Hamersley, whether he acquainted my Lord of Mr. Hamersley before or after the time he paid the 100 Guineas?

Mr. Cottingham. I acquainted his Lordship before.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I beg leave to ask another Question. If this Gentleman can inform your Lordships upon what Account it was, he received the 100 Guineas from Mr. Bennet?

Mr. Cottingham. I received the 100 Guineas upon Account of his Surrender of his Office.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg leave to ask another Question. Whether before he agreed with Mr. Bennet, he had informed my Lord Macclesfield of any Proposal, or what was to be expected?

Mr. Cottingham. No, I don't remember I did. All that passed on that Occasion was, Mr. Bennet said he was willing to give 100 Guineas, and he hoped his Lordship would not insist upon more.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I beg he may be asked another Question. Whether when he came back from my Lord Macclesfield to Mr. Bennet, with the Account of the Acceptance of the 100 Guineas, whether he did not tell Mr. Bennet he ought to take it as a favour that his Lordship accepted so little?

Mr. Cottingham. I can't remember, but I think I did not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Can you say you did, or you did not?

Mr. Cottingham. To the best of my Remembrance I did not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We desire he may inform your Lordships what Answer he brought to Mr. Bennet from my Lord Macclesfield?

Mr. Cottingham. The Answer my Lord Macclesfield ordered me to give to Mr. Bennet, was, that he agreed to accept of the 100 Guineas according to his Proposal.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether was this Offer of the 100 Guineas the first time, or after Mr. Cottingham had spoken to my Lord Macclesfield about it?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Bennet proposed to me to give the 100 Guineas before I spoke to my Lord about it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether it was the first Time he offered the 100 Guineas, or some time after.

Mr. Cottingham. He offered the 100 Guineas the first time.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether Mr. Cottingham did not say the first time, that something was expected?

Mr. Cottingham. I believe I did say the Great Seal would expect something.

Mr. Lutwyche. Mr. Cottingham says he believes he did say something was expected. Then I desire to refresh his Memory, and that he would acquaint your Lordships whether that was mentioned before the 100 Guineas were offered?

Mr.

Mr. Cottingham. No, not as I remember.

Mr. Lutwyche. What did you ſay on that Occaſion?

Mr. Cottingham. I ſaid on that Occaſion, as he offered 100 Guineas, I told him my Lord was willing to accept of it.

Mr. Lutwyche. I am ſpeaking of the firſt Diſcourſe he had with him, I think he does recollect that he ſaid my Lord expected ſomething on the Account of this Office?

Mr. Cottingham. The firſt Diſcourſe when that was mentioned, I told him my Lord expected ſomething to be paid by way of Compliment.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was that the firſt Diſcourſe?

Mr. Cottingham. The firſt that I remember.

Mr. Lutwyche. I beg another Queſtion. If Mr. Cottingham told Mr. Bennet that my Lord expected ſomething by way of Compliment, how came Mr. Cottingham to know that?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Bennet asked me if I believed his Lordſhip would not expect a Compliment? I told him I believed his Lordſhip would, and then he ſaid he would give 100 Guineas.

Mr. Lutwyche. Had you any Diſcourſe with my Lord Macclesfield before?

Mr. Cottingham. No, none at all. I told him it was uſual to make a Preſent; and then he told me he was willing to give 100 Guineas.

Mr. Plummer. I know Mr. Cottingham is a very honeſt Gentleman. I deſire to ask him, if Mr. Bennet did not then tell him, that when his Brother was admitted, my Lord Cowper would take nothing?

Mr. Cottingham. He did not upon the Oath I have taken, this is the firſt Word I heard of it: I did not know whether his Brother paid any thing or nothing.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. There is ſome little Variation, tho' not material, between Mr. Bennet and Mr. Cottingham; we beg that Mr. Bennet may come to the Bar again.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I don't oppoſe Mr. Bennet's coming to the Bar again; but I think it is very extraordinary for Perſons to produce Witneſſes to confront their own Witneſſes.

Mr. Lutwyche. We do it, to confirm the Teſtimony of our Witneſs.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. In an Affair of this Nature it is impoſſible to produce direct Evidence, without producing the Agent employed. Mr. Cottingham was the Agent made uſe of by the Chancellor, and we beg leave to ask of Mr. Bennet what Anſwer Mr. Cottingham brought or ſaid he brought from my Lord Chancellor relating to this Affair.

Mr Tho. Bennet. When Mr Cottingham went from me to my Lord Chancellor, there was not a Word of Money mentioned the firſt time. I would not ſo much as put it into his Head; and he returned to me the next Day, and told me my Lord Chancellor inſiſted upon a Preſent. Then I ſaid it was very hard, and I would give my Lord 100 Guineas if it muſt be ſo.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. Was it not at the ſecond Meeting that he inſiſted on a Preſent to my Lord?

Mr. Tho Bennet. At the ſecond Meeting. At the firſt time he did not, becauſe there was no mention made of Money.

Mr. Cottingham. All that Mr Bennet ſaid to me on that Occaſion was, that in regard a Compliment of 1500 Guineas had been ſo lately given to his Lordſhip, he hoped his Lordſhip would take no more of him than 100 Guineas.

E. of Macclesfield. Theſe Gentlemen are pleaſed to differ in their Evidence. I would ask Mr Bennet a ſecond time, whether Mr Cottingham told him that he did not know Mr Hamerſley.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I am ſure Mr. Cottingham told me that my Lord Chancellor did not know him, and I think he told me that he did not know him. That made me ſay, why, Sir, that is ſtrange you ſhould not know him, when he lives the next Door to you!

E. of Macclesfield. Before, he ſaid Mr Cottingham ſaid he did not know Mr Hamerſley. I think he told your Lordſhips ſo, that he did not know him.

Mr Tho. Bennet. It is impoſſible to ſwear to a Converſation at ſo great Diſtance.

E. of Macclesfield. You are not poſitive?

Mr Tho. Bennet. I am not poſitive.

E. of Macclesfield. Then, if he is not poſitive whether Mr Cottingham told him ſo, I deſire he may be asked whether he is poſitive that he anſwered Mr Cottingham, why Sir that is very ſtrange that you ſhould not know him, when he lives the next Door to you?

Mr Tho. Bennet. I am as poſitive of the one as of the other. This Converſation paſſed between us, as near as I can remember.

Mr Cottingham. It is very ſtrange I ſhould ſay ſo of my very next Door Neighbour, and a Gentleman at the Bar.

Mr. Thomas Bennet. Therefore I wondered at it.

Mr. Lutwyche. There is but one thing more relating to this Article. It is very well known that his Lordſhip was one of the Lords Juſtices.

Mr. Cottingham. It is very ſtrange ſure, Mr. Bennet, that I ſhould not know him. He is a Gentleman at the Bar, I ſee him every Day at Weſtminſter-Hall.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. That was the Wonder I made of it. I might miſtake you; I am ſure you ſaid my Lord did not know him, and I believe you ſaid you did not know him. Mr. Cottingham is very deaf, and he might miſtake me.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We apprehend the noble Lord does not put us on the Proof of his Acting as one of the Lords Juſtices.

E. of Macclesfield. If Mr. Delafaye is there, I deſire he may be called to give an Account of my Acting.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What I call Mr. Delafaye for, is to give an Account of my Lords Acting as one of the Lords Juſtices. If they don't admit it; we muſt call him.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, we deſire he may be called.

Mr. Delafaye called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire Mr. Delafaye may be ſworn.

Mr. Delafaye ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Since that is inſiſted upon for Form-ſake, which is notorious to the whole Kingdom, we only beg leave to ask Mr. Delafaye, whether my Lord Chancellor acted as one of the Lords Juſtices at the Time of this Patent. [ſhewing him Mr. Hamerſley's Patent.] Look upon the Date of that Patent.

Mr. Delafaye. Yes, my Lords.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we only ask this Witneſs whether my Lord Chancellor, who had then the Cuſtody of the Great Seal, acted as one of the Lords Juſtices?

Mr. Delafaye. Yes, my Lords, he did.

Mr Serj. Probyn. I beg leave to ask him, whether he knew any thing of Mr. Bennet's Petition being tranſmitted to his Majeſty abroad, and by whoſe Direction?

Mr. Delafaye Mr. Bennet's Petition was tranſmitted to his Majeſty abroad, by the Direction of the Lords Juſtices.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire this Witneſs would inform your Lordſhips, whether in Mr. Bennet's Petition it was deſired that a Grant of his Office ſhould be made to any, and what particular Perſon.

Mr. Lutwyche. I think we may reaſonably object to that Queſtion. We are not for troubling your Lordſhips with unreaſonable Objections; but when a Gentleman experienced in the Law ſhall ask Queſtions, concerning written Evidence, we muſt oppoſe that, and ſubmit it to your Lordſhips.

Then the Managers for the Commons acquainting the Houſe, that they had gone through with their Evidence to the Ninth Article, did intend next to proceed to the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Articles; and alledging it was requiſite their Evidence ſhould be given entire, ſubmitted it to their Lordſhips whether they ſhould now proceed; whereupon, they and all Parties were directed to withdraw, and the Lords Reſolved to proceed further in the Tryal tomorrow at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, and adjourned to Nine a Clock tomorrow Morning.

Friday May 7. The ſecond Day.

The Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, and the Managers being come, and the ſaid Earl ſitting on a Stool as before, and his Council at the Bar, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows.

Our Sovereign Lord the King ſtrictly charges and commands all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made as on the firſt Day, That all Perſons concerned were to take Notice, that Thomas Earl of Macclesfield now ſtands upon his Tryal, and they may come forth in order to make good the Charge.

Ld. Ch. Juſt. King. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, you may proceed in your Evidence.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The Managers will now proceed to the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Articles, being all of the ſame Nature and Kind, relating to the Corrupt taking of Money on the Diſpoſal of the Offices of the Maſters in Chancery. The Queſtion between the Commons and the Lord impeached upon theſe ſeveral Articles, is, the Manner of taking this Money. The Commons Charge the taking of the Money to be by Extortion, and Corruption, and to be drawn out of the Maſters againſt their Conſent; the Lord in his Anſwer inſiſts, that it was freely and voluntarily given, as Preſents, upon their reſpective Admittances. The Managers apprehend that they ſhall give your Lordſhips full Satisfaction, that the Charge of the Commons is true, and that the Manner of taking theſe Sums charged on the Lord, will be ſupported by the Evidence that will be produced. The firſt Witneſs that we ſhall call is Mr. William Kynaſton to the Fifth Article.

Mr. William Kynaſton ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire that Mr. Kynaſton may be asked, when he was admitted to be one of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery?

Mr. Kynaſton. On the 9th of Auguſt, 1721.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire that he may be asked, concerning the manner of his Admittance, what Tranſactions there were before-hand about it, with whom, and what he gave the Lord Chancellor for his Admiſſion?

Mr. Kynaſton. After I had agreed with Mr. Rogers for the Purchaſe of his Office, I deſired one Mr. Baily to go to Mr. Cottingham, my Lord's Secretary, to know what my Lord Chancellor would expect for my Admiſſion into the Office, and treat with him about it. Mr. Baily told me it was beſt for me to talk with Mr. Cottingham myſelf. So I went to him, and told him my Caſe. He mentioned to me that other Maſters, particularly Mr. Conway and Mr. Borret, had given Fifteen Hundred Guineas apiece. I propoſed to him One Thouſand Pounds, or One Thouſand Guineas; He ſaid he could not mention it to my Lord Chancellor under Fifteen Hundred. I agreed to give it, but I thought he meant Pounds, and made Preparations for it accordingly; but Mr. Baily afterwards telling me that he had ſeen Mr. Cottingham, and that he inſiſted upon Guineas, I ſent them to him on the 8th by Mr. Baily, and the 9th I was admitted and ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Arguments were made Uſe of by Mr. Cottingham, to raiſe the Price from One Thouſand to Fifteen hundred Guineas?

Mr. Kynaſton. I don't particularly remember; but either Mr. Rogers or Mr. Cottingham ſaid it was the oldeſt and the beſt Office.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether any thing was ſaid that the Office was full of Caſh?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We apprehend that a Leading Queſtion.

Mr. Lutwyche. It is a proper Queſtion. But however, if they do not like it in thoſe Words, we will put it into another Form. Whether there was any Diſcourſe about the Profits of the Office?

Mr. Kynaſton. I don't remember it.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was there any Diſcourſe about your being recommended by any one?

Mr. Kynaſton. I told him I had the Honour to be known to the late Lord Bradford, and deſired to know whether his Recommendation might be neceſſary.

Mr. Weſt. What Reaſon did they give you why it was the beſt Office?

Mr. Kynaſton. Becauſe it was the Senior Office, and had moſt Cauſes in it.

Sir Wm. Strickland. I deſire to know what Anſwer Mr. Cottingham gave him, when he ſaid he believed he might obtain that noble Lord's Recommendation?

Mr. Kynaſton. I don't remember any he made.

Mr. Plummer. Whether any Objection was made by him to the Price upon his coming into the Office, by reaſon of any Deficiency in Dormer's Office?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. That Queſtion is liable to the ſame Objection that was made to the former; it is too leading.

Mr. Sol. Gen. It is a fair Queſtion, whether any Objection was made by him, on Account of the Deficiency of Dormer's Office?

Mr. Kynaſton. I mentioned this to Mr. Rogers, he made little of it; I mentioned it afterwards to Mr. Cottingham, he too ſeemed to make light of it, and ſaid it would be made up. So that I apprehended it would be of no great Conſequence.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Reaſon did he give, why he thought his Admiſſion to the Office was not worth Fifteen Hundred Pounds?

Mr. Kynaſton. I don't know that I mentioned any thing.

Mr.

Mr. Lutwyche. In what manner was the Money paid?

Mr. Kynaſton. I did not count it, but the Sum of Fifteen Hundred Guineas was carried in a Bag by Mr. Baily to Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether he had any Diſcourſe with Mr. Rogers the former Maſter, about the Value of this Office, before he ſpoke with Mr. Cottingham?

Mr. Kynaſton. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How much did he ſay it was worth?

Mr. Kynaſton. He ſaid, he uſually made 1700 l. a Year of the Office, and ſometimes 2000 l. a Year.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, what Sum of Money he gave Mr. Rogers for his Place?

Mr. Kynaſton. 6000 l.

Dr Sayer. I deſire this Gentleman may be asked, at what time he paid Mr Cottingham this Fifteen hundred Guineas; whether it was before or after his Admiſſion?

Mr Kynaſton. Before; I believe it was the 8th or 9th of Auguſt in the Morning.

Mr Serj. Probyn. I deſire this further Queſtion, whether he paid it out of the Suitors Money, or out of Effects of his own?

Mr Kynaſton. It could not be paid out of the Suitors Money, for I was not then admitted.

Mr Com. Serj. Whether Mr Baily, or any body elſe, concerned in negotiating this Affair, gave any Account of your Subſtance and Ability?

Mr Kynaſton. No, I believe not.

Mr Lutwyche. If the Gentlemen have done, I beg Leave to ask him one Queſtion, and it is in relation to what he was examined to firſt: He ſaid there was a Diſcourſe, that the Office was worth 1700 or 2000 l. a Year. Now, my Lords, I would ask him, how it was Mr Kynaſton apprehended theſe great annual Profits did ariſe? whether by the ordinary Profits of the Office, or the making Uſe of the Suitors Money?

Mr Kynaſton. I underſtood it of both together.

Mr Lutwyche. There hath been one Queſtion asked, as if there was no Colour to ſay this Money was paid out of the Suitors Money: But I would beg Leave to ask another Queſtion to explain that: I think Mr Kynaſton ſays, that the Money paid for him by Mr Baily, was not out of the Suitors Money, becauſe he was not then admitted; but I would ask, how it was repaid or replaced?

Mr Kynaſton. I did not imagine, when I came to Town, that the Place would have come to ſo much: There was 1100 l. and 400 l. I borrow'd of a Gentleman, one Mr Rogers at Temple-Bar; and I afterwards accompted with him for that Money, for I kept an Account of the Money of the Court with him.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. What Sum of Money was reported to be in your Office, and to go along with the Office as Caſh?

Mr Kynaſton. I was told there was about 20,000 l.

Mr Com. Serj. I deſire to know who told him ſo?

Mr Kynaſton. Mr Rogers.

Lord Lechmere. When the 1100 l. and the 400 l. was accompted for to the Perſon that firſt lent it, if I did underſtand him right, he ſays he accompted for it, and it was allow'd out of the Suitors Money.

Mr Kynaſton. Yes, my Lords, the Money lent me to pay Mr Cottingham, I did accompt for that Money out of the Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court: I underſtood it was uſual to do ſo, and that others had done it.

Lord Lechmere. My Lords, I would ask him another Queſtion; I think Mr Kynaſton talks of 6000 l. being paid by him to his Predeceſſor: I would be glad to know in what manner that was paid, and out of what Money or Effects?

Mr Kynaſton. My Lords, when I treated with Mr Rogers, he mention'd to me what Money he had in his Hands belonging to the Office; and we entred into Articles in relation to my paying him 6000 l. for his Place: And when I came up to Town, in order to take the Office, before I went to my Lord Chancellor's, I gave him a Bond for 6000 l. This was the 9th, and on the 12th he deliver'd me up the Bond, and paid me 9 l. in Money; and I gave him a Receipt for Six thouſand and nine Pounds.

E. of Strafford. I deſire he would explain himſelf on that Part; where he ſays, he gave him up his Bond; whether he reckoned the 6000 l. to much ſhort of the Suitors Money?

Mr Kynaſton. Yes, my Lords, I did.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked this Queſtion. He ſpeaks of a Gentleman that paid him 1100 l. Part of the 1500 Guineas; I deſire he may be asked, whether that Gentleman had any, and what Money of his in his Hands?

Mr Kynaſton. My Lords, I had Money in that Gentleman's Hands: When I lived in the Country, he uſed to receive Money for me in Town, on Government Securities, and other Occaſions, and pay as I directed: There was an Accompt Current between us, and I did not then preciſely know what Balance was then in his Hands; but I have caſt it up ſince, and find that there was about 300 or 400 l. due to me at that time.

E. of Macclesfield. If I apprehend him right, he ſays he had an Accompt current with that Gentleman at that time, and kept Caſh with him.

Mr Kynaſton. He uſed to receive and pay Money for me when I was in the Country.

E. of Macclesfield. I beg Leave to ask one Queſtion more, if Mr Kynaſton did not afterwards keep, with that Gentleman, the Caſh of the Suitors, as well as his own Caſh, promiſcuouſly?

Mr Kynaſton. Yes.

Sir Wm. Strickland. When was the Fifteen hundred Guineas paid?

Mr Kynaſton. On the 8th the Fifteen hundred Guineas was paid, and the 9th I was admitted.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. We don't now proceed to examine relating to the manner of Payment for the Offices out of the Suitors Money, becauſe there will be a diſtinct Examination as to that, upon another Article; the preſent Queſtion being only about the Sum paid for the Admiſſion, and not out of what Money, which we don't enter into at preſent.

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, we think it neceſſary to mention this, becauſe otherwiſe it will take up a great deal of your Lordſhips time unneceſſarily, and it will be proper to keep the Evidence entire; and therefore we hope the Counſel on the other Side ſhall be confined to ask ſuch Queſtions only, as are proper to the Article they are upon. My Lords, we deſire Mr Charles Baily may be called.

Mr. Charles Baily ſworn.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he paid any Money, and what Sum to Mr Cottingham, and when?

Mr Baily. My Lords, a day or two before Mr Kynaſton was admitted, I paid Fifteen hundred Guineas, Guineas, which was given for his Admiſſion. I delivered it in a Bag to Mr Cottingham.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. For what Uſe was it paid?

Mr Baily. I apprehend it was for the Uſe of my Lord Chancellor.

Mr Lutwyche. Upon what Account?

Mr Baily. For his Admiſſion to the Office, on Mr Rogers's Surrender.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. I think he ſays it was paid a day or two before he was admitted.

Sir Wm. Strickland. Before the Payment of this Money, what Diſcourſe was there between you and Mr Cottingham?

Mr Baily. I was requeſted, by Mr Kynaſton, to attend Mr Cottingham, to know what was expected; and Mr Cottingham told me Fifteen hundred Guineas was expected to be paid, as a Sum for Mr Kynaſton's Admiſſion.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. If the Counſel for the noble Lord don't ask this Witneſs any thing, we beg Leave to call another Witneſs.

Mr Com. Serj. There are ſeveral matters we apprehend proper to be asked now, and yet may fall under the other Article. Whether it is your Lordſhips Pleaſure that we ſhall now ask Mr Baily as to the Circumſtances and Character of Mr Kynaſton?

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, there is an expreſs Article to that Point; wherefore when we come to that, then is the time.

Mr Serj. Probyn. One Queſtion may be proper to be asked before this Gentleman goes, and that is, whether when Mr Cottingham told him what was expected on his Admiſſion, he told Mr Kynaſton of it?

Mr Baily. Yes, Sir, I told Mr Kynaſton that Fifteen hundred Guineas was expected.

Mr Serj. Probyn. Then I deſire he may be asked, whether Mr Kynaſton did not immediately conſent to give it, or what did Mr Kynaſton ſay?

Mr Baily. Mr Kynaſton ſaid he muſt ſubmit to it, and do as Mr Cottingham had mention'd, or to that purpoſe.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. Whether Mr Kinaſton informed him of offering him any leſs Sum, and what?

Mr Baily. Mr Kynaſton mention'd to me that he thought it had been but 1500 l.

E. of Macclesfield. How came Mr Baily to know it was Guineas?

Mr Baily. Becauſe Mr Cottingham told me ſo.

Mr Cottingham called, but did not immediately appear.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we are unwilling to give your Lordſhips Trouble, only beg Leave to take Notice, that Mr Cottingham was Secretary to the Lord impeach'd, during the whole Courſe of his Adminiſtration; he is not immediately under the Power of the Managers, but he is under the Obligation of a Summons, and had Notice to attend.

Mr Cottingham appears.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire he may be ſworn.

Mr Cottingham ſworn.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave to ask Mr Cottingham this Queſtion; the Money that he received from Mr Charles Baily, whether he paid it over to my late Lord Chancellor, and when?

Mr Cottingham. The Money which I received from Mr Charles Baily, the Fifteen hundred Guineas, I paid it to my Lord in a day or two I believe, I believe the next day; it was very ſoon after I received it from Mr Baily.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. Whether he acquainted the Earl of Macclesfield that he had received it upon Mr Kynaſton's Admiſſion?

Mr Cottingham. Yes, my Lords, I told the Earl of Macclesfield that Mr Baily had paid me the Money, by the Direction of Mr Kynaſton.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. How long was that before Mr Kynaſton was admitted?

Mr Cottingham. I can't ſay juſtly the time, it might be two or three days. There was a day appointed for the Admiſſion of Mr Kynaſton, but ſomething happened that he could not be admitted that day.

Sir Wm. Strickland. My Lords, I deſire to ask this Witneſs one Queſtion: At that time, whether Mr Cottingham can recollect himſelf, if Mr Kynaſton did not make an Objection of the great Deficiency that had happened in Dormer's Office?

Mr Cottingham. Upon the Oath that I have taken, he did not.

Sir Wm Strickland. I deſire another Queſtion, whether he did not tell Mr Kynaſton that this was one of the beſt Offices?

Dr Sayer. My Lords, I ask your Pardons; I hope they ſhall be confined to the general Queſtion what was ſaid, and not to Particulars.

Sir Wm. Strickland. What was ſaid in relation to the Goodneſs of the Office?

Mr Cottingham. I did ſay before the Honourable Committee, that when he agreed to give the Fifteen hundred Guineas, I told him that he had purchaſed a very good Office; and I did ſay, that there was a great deal of Buſineſs in it; but I never knew what Money was in the Office, nor do I know it to this day. I own I did ſay before the Honourable Committee, that I told him he had purchaſed a good Office.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. Whether was this before or after the Agreement made with Mr Kynaſton?

Mr Cottingham. I think at the ſame time, juſt after we had ſettled the Compliment to be paid to my Lord Macclesfield, I told him he had purchaſed an Office with very good Buſineſs in it.

Mr Serj. Probyn. I deſire one Queſtion more, whether he remembers that there was any Mention made of 1000 l. or One thouſand Guineas by Mr. Kynaſton?

Mr Cottingham. No, I remember nothing of it. He asked me what my Lord expected; I told him what my Lord had from the preceding Maſters, he expected the ſame from him: I never heard a Word of 1000 l. or One thouſand Guineas, nor knew nothing at all of it. I have given you the beſt Account I can as to the Fact that happened relating to the Agreement: Mr Baily may remember more of it; the Fact is above four Years ago.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we now beg Leave to proceed to the 6th Article, relating to Mr Thomas Bennet, who was admitted the 1ſt of June, 1723.

Mr Thomas Bennet (ſworn before.)

Mr Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire that Mr Bennet may give an Account to your Lordſhips when he was admitted, and upon what Bargain? Give an Account of the whole Treaty.

Mr Tho. Bennet. I was admitted the 1ſt of June, 1723. and before my Admiſſion, and as ſoon as I had agreed with Mr Hiccocks my Predeceſſor, I applied to Mr Cottingham; and deſired him that he would acquaint my Lord Chancellor I had agreed with Mr Hiccocks for to ſucceed him in his Office, and deſired him to let me know know my Lord Chancellor's Thoughts, whether he approved of me to ſucceed Mr. Hiccocks; ſoon after that, I believe the next Day, or a Day after, he met me, and told me, he had acquainted my Lord with the Meſſage I ſent; he ſaid my Lord expreſſed himſelf with a great deal of Reſpect for my Father Mr. Serjeant Bennet, and that he was glad of this Opportunity to do me a Favour and Kindneſs, and he had no Objection in the World to me: That was the Anſwer Mr. Cottingham returned; he then mentioned there was a Preſent expected, and he did not doubt but I knew that; I anſwered, I had heard there was, and I was willing to do what was uſual; I deſired to know what it was that was expected, and what would be expected; he ſaid he would name no Sum, and he had the leſs Reaſon to name a Sum to me, becauſe I had a Brother a Maſter, and I was well acquainted with Mr. Godfrey who had recommended me, and I might apply to them, and they would tell me what was proper for me to offer. I told him upon that Occaſion I would conſult my Brother and Mr. Godfrey; accordingly I did, and I returned to Mr. Cottingham, and told him, I had talked with them about it, and their Opinion was a thouſand Pounds (but I believe, I ſaid, I would not ſtand for Guineas) was ſufficient for me to offer. Upon this Mr. Cottingham ſhook his Head, and ſaid, that won't do Mr. Bennet, you muſt be better adviſed: Why, ſaid I, won't that do, I think it is a noble Preſent: Says he, a great deal more has been given: Says I, I am ſure my Brother did not give ſo much, nor Mr. Godfrey, and theſe Perſons, you adviſed me to conſult with, told me it was ſufficient, and I deſire you to acquaint my Lord with the Propoſal: Says he, I dont care to go with that Propoſal, you may find ſome-body elſe to go: Says I, I don't know whom to apply to: Says he further, ſure Mr. Bennet, you wont go to lower the Price, (theſe were his very Words, at leaſt, I am ſure that was the Meaning of them) I can aſſure you Mr. Kinaſton gave 1500 Guineas. I ſaid that was above 3 or 4 Years ago, and ſince that Time there have been ſeveral Occaſions of lowering the Prices; the fall of Stock hath lowered the Value of Money; and I think I mentioned Dormer's Deficiency, and I did not know what the Conſequence of that might be; and therefore, I thought at this time of Day, when Stock and every Thing was fallen, a thouſand Guineas was more now, than 1500 when Mr. Kinaſton gave it. He ſtill inſiſted he did not care to go with that Meſſage: Says I, only acquaint my Lord with it, and if my Lord inſiſts upon more, I will conſider of it: Says he, there is no haggling with my Lord, if you refuſe it, I don't know the Conſequence, he may reſent it ſo far, as not to admit you at all, and you may loſe the Office. Then I began to conſider, and was loth to loſe the Office, and told him I won'd give 1500 l, he ſaid Mr. Kinaſton had given Guineas. Then I asked whether it muſt be in Gold. He ſaid, in what you will, ſo it be Guineas. In a Day or two after he came and told me, that my Lord was pleaſed to accept of me, and he ſhould admit me aſſoon as Opportunity ſerved, and he would give me Notice. He accordingly gives me Notice about the latter end of May; he told me my Lord had fixed a Day for my Admiſſion, and my Father and I went to my Brother Bennet's, and took him up by the Way, in order to pay our Reſpects to my Lord on that Occaſion. We had not been there long, but there was a Meſſage brought to my Houſe, to let me know that my Lord was very ill, and I could not be admitted; but I ſhould know in a little Time when I ſhould: Upon that, I ſaw Mr. Cottingham afterwards, and I asked him how my Lord did, and when I ſhould be admitted: Says he, I can't fix the Day; but be in a Readineſs, and I ſhall ſend for you. Accordingly on the 1ſt of June, 1723. he ſent, and deſired me to come immediately, and to come alone, and bring no Body with me, for my Lord wou'd ſwear me in that Morning. Accordingly I went, and the firſt Queſtion Mr. Cottingham ask'd me was, if I had brought the Money? I told him, to be ſure I ſhould not come without it. He asked what it was in? I told him in Bank Bills, two Bank Bills, one of 1000*l*. and the other 575 l. He took them up, and carried them to my Lord: He returned back, and told me my Lord was ready to admit me. I was carried up Stairs, and then ſworn in his Bed-Chamber.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire, if he can remember, he may be asked in what Name thoſe Notes were made payable, or in what manner they were made?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I can't remember the Names the Notes were made payable to, they were ſent for from the Bank for this Purpoſe; but I believe they were feigned Names.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, why he thinks they were feigned Names, and for what Reaſon the Notes were taken in feigned Names?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. The Reaſon was, becauſe I did not think it proper to take them out in the noble Lord's Name, nor in my own Name.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, of whom he received thoſe Bank Notes, whether they were his own, or whether he borrowed them.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I borrowed a Draft upon the Bank of my Brother, he kept his Caſh at the Bank, and he gave me a Draft upon the Bank, and I ſent to the Bank, and ordered the Notes to be made out in feigned Names.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether by his Brother, he means his Brother the Maſter?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, my Brother the Maſter?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. And where did he keep his Caſh?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. He kept his Caſh at the Bank.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire Mr. Bennet may inform your Lordſhips what Converſation he had with my Lord Macclesfield when he was admitted?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I had no Converſation with him before I was ſworn. At that Time my Lord was in his Bed, and aſſoon as I was ſworn in, my Lord called me to him, ſhook me by the Hand and wiſh'd me Joy, and ſaid he had a Reſpect for my Father Serjeant Bennet, his old Friend and Acquaintance, and the Family; and ſaid he, you are ſworn in by a dying Chancellor. I told him, I hoped his Lordſhip would live a great many Years.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire Mr. Cottingham may be called.

Mr. Cottingham called, and appeared.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Cottingham may be asked, to whom he paid the 1500 Guineas which he received from Mr. Tho. Bennet?

Mr. Cottingham. I paid it to the Earl of Macclesfield.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he carried it immediately or not, or at what Time?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Bennet brought it to me, as I remember, in a Bank Note of 1500 Guineas, and I gave it to my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether this was done immediately after you received it?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, my Lords, immediately.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. That is all we ask, my Lords, we only beg leave to obſerve one thing that ariſes from the Anſwer of the Lord impeached to theſe two Articles, which is, that afterwards, and before the Impeachment, he did deliver the Preſent ſo ſent to him by the ſaid William Kinaſton, being 1575 l. and alſo the Preſent ſo ſent to him by the ſaid Tho. Bennet, being the like Sum of 1575 l. into the Court of Chancery, in open Court, &c.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Cottingham may be asked one Queſtion, what Converſation there was between him and Mr. Bennet, concerning the Payment of this 1500 Guineas?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Bennet told me, that he had agreed with Mr. Hiccocks for the ſurrender of his Office. He told me he was a Perſon known to the Earl; but if he wanted a further Character, his Father, Sir John Bennet, and his Brother, would give him a further Character. I acquainted the Earl, his Lordſhip told me that he knew Mr. Bennet, that he had a good Character, and had married a good Fortune, and the Family were a wealthy Family, ſo that the Earl would oblige him, and admit him. A Day was appointed to admit Mr. Bennet; but the Earl falling Sick before the Time came that he was to be admitted, which was, I think, the laſt Day of Eaſter Term, 1723, it was then delayed; Mr. Bennet was prodigious preſſing to have it done, and ſaid that Mr. Hiccocks refuſed to go on with any Buſineſs in the Office; and he had been complimented upon it, the Family knew it, and he was loth to be diſappointed, and he teized me almoſt out of my Life: upon that, I promiſed to ſpeak to the Earl, and aſſoon as the Earl was able to do Buſineſs, it was done.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If you pleaſe to recollect your ſelf, what was the particular Sum Mr. Bennet offered?

Mr. Cottingham. 1500 Guineas.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Did he talk of any leſs Sum?

Mr. Cottingham. Not a Farthing leſs: he asked me what was expected, I told him the Sum Mr. Kinaſton had paid, which was 1500 Guineas; and he never offered a farthing leſs.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire Mr. Cottingham, that you would recollect your ſelf, and tell us whether he offered 1000, or 1500 Guineas?

Mr. Cottingham. I have recollected, and what he offered to me was 1500 Guineas, and I never heard of a Farthing leſs; I never heard a Word of 1000 Guineas.

E. of Macclesfield. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, I deſire Mr. Cottingham may be asked, what Condition I was in, in reſpect to my Health at that Time?

Mr. Cottingham. The Earl at that Time was very ill, Mr. Bennet having preſſed to be admitted the firſt Opportunity; I think your Lordſhip fell ill the laſt Day of Eaſter Term, 1723. and I meeting with Doctor Mead, the Doctor told me, the Earl was in ſo dangerous a Condition, that if his Diſtemper had not a Turn, he thought he could not live 24 Hours. The Doctor and I went and ſupped together; he bid me to be at the Earl's the next Morning; I met him there, and he told me the Earl's Diſtemper had a Turn, and he might get over it: I asked the Doctor, telling him there was a Buſineſs that Mr. Bennet preſſed me to do, if it would be ſafe for the Earl to do it. He told me if it did not admit much Thought and much Company, it might be done. I told him it would not admit much Thought or Company, and he ſaid it might be done.

E. of Macclesfield. What was the Occaſion that Mr. Bennet was deſired to come alone?

Mr. Cottingham. The Reaſon was upon the Account of your Lordſhip's Indiſpoſition; and for that Reaſon, I ſent to Mr. Hiccocks for his Surrender, becauſe my Lord could not ſee much Company.

Mr. Strange. I deſire to ask you, upon whoſe Importunity it was you asked Dr. Mead this?

Mr. Cottingham. I asked it my ſelf, but it was, becauſe Mr. Bennet importuned me ſo: And I remember this Circumſtance, when I went to his Houſe, he had ſomething of the Jaundice, and looked ill. I asked him if he was fit to be admitted: I thought Mr. Bennet would not have been ſo eager, if he did not think the Earl had been dying, and that then he would have waited longer.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, if the Gentlemen have done, I deſire to ask one Queſtion; Whether on Occaſion of theſe Maſters Places being vacant, he took Directions from my Lord Chancellor to ſet a Price, or did it of his own Head?

Mr. Cottingham. I had no Directions in this matter; but when any Vacancy or Alienation, happened, and they asked me what Compliment I thought would be acceptable, I told them the Compliment that had been before made. I ſpoke it as my own Opinion, and without any Directions from the Earl.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether ever he concluded any Bargain with any of theſe Maſters without his Lord's Approbation?

Mr. Cottingham. No, I did not.

Mr. Onſlow. I would ask Mr. Cottingham one Queſtion, which, I think, he hath not anſwered; I ask whether he had not in general Directions from the Lord Chancellor, to insist upon, or ask any particular Prices for these Places?

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I am sorry the learned Gentlemen do not observe their own Rule, in confining their Examinations to such Articles as they go upon, those they have a Right to ask to, and those only; therefore with humble Submission, it is more proper on each Article where they charge me to have insisted upon a Price, to ask to that Price, than to ask these general Questions, whether I did ever direct him to insist upon any Price? It is not that I am afraid of the Question that is put, but I am afraid of its being made a President for giving your Lordships a great deal of unnecessary Trouble.

Mr. Onslow. This is proper to this Article, because it charges the Earl with insisting upon Prices. Therefore I desire to know, whether the Earl did ever give any Order to him to insist upon any of these Prices? I hope the Gentleman shall answer the Question.

Mr. Lutwyche. We apprehend we are upon a proper Question, on the one Side we say these Sums were insisted upon, and that there was an Agreement made for them; on the other Side the noble Lord in his Answer says, they were Presents, without any Regard to any Agreement, and voluntary, as if there had been no Bargain at all.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we only propose a general Question, which, we apprehend, arises from Mr. Cottingham's Examination. When Money is expected, we apprehend it is the same as insisting upon it: Therefore we desire Mr. Cottingham may inform your Lordships, whether he insisted upon any of these Prices without Direction from my Lord Macclesfield?

Mr. Cottingham. The Masters proposed those Sums to me, to make such a Compliment to my Lord, and I acquainted the Earl with it: I did nothing without the Earl's Approbation.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked if he did not insist on those Prices?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I beg the Question may be confined to some particular Article they are now upon; for as they are now upon two particular Articles, they cannot, according to the Rules they were pleased themselves to lay down, ask any Question, but what relates to them: We therefore desire they may confine themselves to these two Articles. As to any Question they propose to any of the Articles they have opened, let them be as general as they will; but we desire they may confine themselves to those Articles: Otherwise one Question may involve all the Articles together.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether we should now ask to Bennet or Kinaston, or to those who came after, we are under your Lordship's Direction: But we desire he may be asked, whether from the Direction he received from the Earl of Macclesfield, he did not insist on those Sums from Kinaston and Bennet?

Mr. Cottingham. I have told you that they had both voluntarily agreed of their own Accord to give 1500 Guineas, and I told my Lord Macclesfield of it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be asked, whether he did not by Direction of my Lord Chancellor insist upon those Sums, and he would not receive under?

Mr. Cottingham. I did not. They asked me what I thought the Earl expected, I told them 1500 Guineas, as I mentioned before; they agreed to give it, and my Lord said he would take it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. At the Time when the Lord Macclesfield agreed to take those Sums, whether he did not insist upon the full of those Sums to be paid?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, he said he would take them.

Mr. Plummer. My Lord Macclesfield does not disown in his Answer the accepting of a Present in general; but avoids saying what Sum in particular he accepted. Therefore I am apt to think the Instructions, the Secretary had, might be like the Answer: So that it is very proper to ask whether he had not general Instructions, that when any Master's Place was vacant, or like to be vacant, he should insist upon such a Price.

Mr. Cottingham. I had not such Instructions. The Gentlemen came and talked to me, and proposed to me the Sum they were willing to give, and I laid it before the Earl: I had no particular Instructions.

Mr. Plummer. With Submission, Mr. Cottingham has not answered the Question, therefore I beg Leave to ask him further, whether he hath not said elsewhere, that he received particular Directions from my Lord Macclesfield to insist upon such a Sum?

Mr. Cottingham. I cannot say but I have, and if you name the Masters, I can answer more particularly.

Sir Wm. Strickland. I would ask him this Question, whether he has not directly said, that he transacted none of these Affairs without my Lord's Direction?

Mr. Cottingham. I own it, I have said so; I own it before your Lordships, that I said that what I did he approved of.

E. of Macclesfield. I desire he may be asked this Question, to each distinctly, Whether I so much as knew any thing of the Matter as to any Sum offered by Mr. Kinaston or Mr. Bennet, till he told me the whole Sum?

Mr. Cottingham. No, never.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether I had any Discourse about Mr. Kinaston or Bennet, being admitted, or the Money they should give, till he told me they would give me 1500 Guineas?

Mr. Cottingham. No, not any Discourse. I told the Earl what they offered, and he was pleased to accept it.

E. of Macclesfield. I beg Leave he may be asked this other Question, since these Gentlemen have gone now into that Matter, whether he did not tell me at the same Time that Mr. Kinaston said he would give me 1500 Guineas, that he likewise said, if that was not sufficient I might please myself?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I hope the Question may be asked general, when they have taken Liberty to interrupt the Managers for asking leading Questions; and hope his Lordship will ask nothing that is leading.

E. of Macclesfield. Then I desire he may be asked when Mr. Kinaston offered 1500 Guineas, whether he said any Thing concerning any further Sum?

Mr. Cotting-

Mr. Cottingham. To the beſt of my Remembrance, I ſpeak it doubtfully, I am not certain, Mr. Kinaſton told me if the 1500 Guineas would not ſatisfy the Earl, he ſhould ſatisfy himſelf

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know certainly whether he told me ſo?

Mr. Cottingham. I am ſure I did.

E. of Macclesfield. What did I ſay thereon?

Mr. Cottingham. Your Lordſhip ſaid you would take 1500 Guineas, and you would take no more.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to ask this Queſtion, How Mr. Kinaſton came to offer more, or to think the Earl ſo inſatiable that the Earl expected more: I ask Mr. Cottingham how he came to offer from Mr. Kinaſton more than was asked?

Mr. Cottingham. I told you what my Lord Macclesfield put to me. I certainly told him ſo. But as to what Mr. Kinaſton told me, that I ſpeak doubtfully; it is a conſiderable Time ago; I cannot ſpeak it poſitively, I ſpeak it doubtfully, to the beſt of my Remembrance it was ſo: I told your Lordſhips before.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with calling any more Witneſſes on this Article, when it appears plainly, that he was intruſted to adjuſt the Prices, and whether they were given to him or my Lord is not material. As to this Article and the Article relating to Mr. Kinaſton, we ſhall leave it with this Obſervation, He is pleaſed to ſay in his Anſwer, as to the few Preſents received from Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Bennet, that he the ſaid Earl did afterwards and before the Impeachment deliver the ſame into the Court of Chancery, in open Court. All that we beg Leave to put your Lordſhips in Mind of, is, that from your own Journals it will appear, the Impeachment was brought up here the 13*th* of February 1724. when my Lord comes to ſhew at what Time he paid the Money, we apprehend it will be ten Days after. The next Article relates to Mr. Francis Elde.

Mr. Elde called.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Elde my be ſworn.

(Sworn accordingly.)

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Elde may be asked when it was he was admitted a Maſter in Chancery?

Mr. Elde. My Lords, I was admitted the firſt Day of February laſt was twelve Month.

Mr. Lutwyche. We deſire he may be asked, whether he applied in Perſon to my Lord Macclesfield to be admitted into this Office, and whether it was upon Death or Reſignation?

Mr. Elde. Upon the Death of Mr. William Fellowes ſome of my Friends came to me, and put it into my Head that this Office might be a proper Office for me, and I took ſome Time to conſider of it. I had ſome Encouragement at the Bar, and was very unwilling to quit it, but after two Days Conſideration I went to my Lord himſelf; I told his Lordſhip an Office was fallen by the Death of Mr. Fellowes: if his Lordſhip thought me a proper Perſon. And I ſhould be glad to have it. I was come to wait upon him about it. His Lordſhip ſaid, he had no manner of Objection to me, he had known me a conſiderable Time; and he believed I ſhould make a good Officer.

Mr. Lutwyche. What further Diſcourſe was there?

Mr. Elde. My Lord at that Time deſired me further to conſider of it, and come to him again: And ſo I did. I went back from his Lordſhip, and I came again in a Day or two, I believe it was the ſecond after I came back from his Lordſhip, and told him I had conſidered of it, and deſired to know if his Lordſhip thought fit to admit me; and I would make him a Preſent of 4 or 5000 l. I cannot ſay which of the two I ſaid, but I believe it was 5000 l.

Mr. Lutwyche. What Anſwer did my Lord return, when you made him that Propoſal?

Mr. Elde. My Lord ſaid, Thee and I, or You and I, my Lord was pleaſed to treat me as a Friend, muſt not make Bargains.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire he may be asked, whether my Lord Macclesfield ſaid in what Manner he would treat with him, whether in a more beneficial manner than any Body elſe?

Mr. Elde. My Lord Macclesfield did ſay, that if I was deſirous of having the Office, he would treat with me in a different Manner than he would with any Man living; thoſe were the Words my Lord uſed, to the beſt of my Remembrance.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. After this Anſwer of my Lord Macclesfield, that they muſt not make Bargains, what further Application did he make?

Mr. Elde. I made no further Application at all, but ſpoke to Mr. Cottingham, meeting him in Weſtminſter-hall, and told him I had been at my Lord's, and my Lord was pleaſed to ſpeak very kindly to me, and I had propoſed to give him 5000 l. Mr. Cottingham anſwered, Guineas are handſomer.

Mr. Lutwyche. We deſire to know what he paid, and in what Manner, and in what Specie?

Mr. Elde. My Lords, I paid my Lord, — I cannot ſay I paid it him, but I paid 5000 Guineas.

Mr. Lutwyche. In what Manner? Who did you pay it to?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. After this Agreement with Mr. Cottingham to make it Guineas, as being handſomer; we deſire he may inform your Lordſhips what he did purſuant to this, and what he carried with him?

Mr. Elde. Upon this I immediately went to my Lord's: I was willing to get into the Office as ſoon as I could. I did carry with me 5000 Guineas in Gold and Bank Notes: I am not certain whether there was 3000 Guineas in Gold or two, but I think there was three, and the Reſidue of the Money was in Bank Notes. This I brought to my Lord's Houſe.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire he may be asked what they were put into, or in what they were carried?

Mr. Elde. I had the Money in my Chambers. I could not tell how to convey it; It was a great Burthen and Weight, but recollecting I had a Basket in my Chamber, I put the Guineas into the Basket, and the Notes with them; I went in a Chair and took with me the Basket in my Chair. When I came to my Lord's Houſe I ſaw Mr. Cottingham there, and I gave him the Basket, and deſired him to carry it up to my Lord.

Mr.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Anſwer did he return?

Mr. Elde. I ſaw him go up Stairs with the Basket, and when he came down he intimated to me that he had delivered it.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire he may be asked whether he acquainted Mr. Cottingham with what was in the Basket?

Mr. Elde. I did not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. After Mr. Cottingham came and acquainted you he had delivered the Basket, how long after that was it before you ſaw my Lord?

Mr. Elde. I did not ſee my Lord after that, tillI was ſworn in.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. How long was that after?

Mr. Elde. I cannot be poſitive, but it was within a Day, either the ſame Day, or if not, it was the next Day after.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, when Mr. Cottingham returned down Stairs after the Delivery of the Basket, what he ſaid to him about the Time of his being admitted?

Mr. Elde. I do not remember he ſaid any Thing to me about my being admitted. I tookthat for granted.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. And when he was admitted, whether he was admitted in the Cloſet or in what Room?

Mr. Elde. When I was to be admitted, my Lord invited me to Dinner, and ſome of my Friends with me; and he was pleaſe to treat me and ſome Members of the Houſe of Commons in a very handſome Manner: I was after Dinner ſworn in before them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire to ask whether he had the Basket again?

Mr. Elde. Some Months after I ſpoke to my Lord's Gentleman, and deſired him if he ſaw ſuch a Basket, that he would give it me back; and ſometime after he did ſo.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was any Money returned in it?

Mr. Elde. No, my Lords, there was not.

Mr. Lutwyche. There is one Thing in the Earl's Anſwer, that he retained only Part of the Preſent ſo made him by Mr. Elde. I perceive the Gentlemen of the other Side do not ask any Queſtions about it: if they do not we ſhall go on.

Sir Wm. Strickland. I deſire to know what Mr. Cottingham did ſay, after he had carried up the Basket and came down again?

Mr. Elde. To the beſt of my Remembrance, he ſaid nothing to me, but as I repeated it before, he intimated to me that he had delivered it to my Lord Macclesfield. I cannot ſay as to any particular Diſcourſe; but I underſtood that he had delivered it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, if they have done with Mr. Elde, I would beg Leave to ask him one Queſtion, and that is in Relation to what the impeached Earl ſaid in his Anſwer, that he retained of the Preſent ſent him by the ſaid Mr. Elde no more than the Sum of 1850 l. We deſire therefore that he may be asked, how much was returned to him of the 5000 Guineas which he at firſt paid?

Mr. Elde. 3400.

Mr. Weſt. When was that returned again to him?

Mr. Elde. In November laſt, to the beſt of my Remembrance.

Mr. Onſlow. In what Manner was that Money returned to him?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We have not yet done with him. I deſire to know when you went out of Town, and when you returned, and how long after your Return was it repaid?

Mr. Elde. It was repaid to me, to the beſt of my Knowledge, within three, four, or five Days after my Return. As ſoon as I came from the Country the Earl took Notice of it, and ſaid that he would repay me: For ſome Time in May before, or thereabouts, the noble Lord had taken Notice that he had received this Preſent from me, and he would make me exceedingly eaſy.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. This was before you went out of Town?

Mr. Elde. Before I went out of Town.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. When did you return to Town?

Mr. Elde. I returned the 19*th*, 20*th*, or 21*ſt* of November.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How ſoon after you came to Town did you ſee my Lord?

Mr. Elde. Very ſoon after I came to Town?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. What Diſcourſe had you with him about it?

Mr. Elde. My Lord told me he would return me my Money again, he did not ſay all, but he would return me my Money; and that he had done it before, had it been convenient.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How ſoon after this Diſcourſe was it, that the Money was returned?

Mr. Elde. I believe two or three Days.

Mr. Onſlow. If the Gentlemen have done, I deſire he may be asked in what Manner this Money was returned, and by whom?

Mr. Elde. After this Diſcourſe my Lord Parker ſent for me, my Lord Chancellor was then at Weſtminſter-hall, and told me my Lord Chancellor had deſired him to pay t ome 3400*l.* and he did pay it.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, if I underſtand Mr. Elde right, he ſaid there was ſome Thing mentioned by my Lord of this Kindneſs before he went into the Country. I deſire he may be asked upon what Occaſion he was going into the Country at that Time?

Mr. Onſlow. I deſire that he may firſt anſwer in what Manner, by whom, and where, this Money was repaid to him, whether in Money, or Notes, or how?

Mr. Elde. To the beſt of my Remembrance it was paid in this Manner, there was 1400 l. in Bank Notes, and 2000 l. in India Bonds.

Mr. Onſlow. Who was this paid by?

Mr. Elde. By my Lord Parker.

Mr. Onſlow. Whether he gave any Receipt for the Money, or any Part of it, and to what Effect.

Mr. Elde. When my Lord paid me the Money, he ſaid my Lord Macclesfield had ordered me to be paid the Money; but his Lordſhip not having ſo much by him; therefore he had ordered him to make it up, and to pay me two thouſand Pounds out of his own Money; and that as 2000 l. of it was his own Money, he deſired me to give a Note of the Receipt of it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether was that Note, a Note for Repayment of the Money, or a Receipt?

Mr. Elde. It was not for Repayment, that I remember, but it was an Acknowledgment of the Receipt of the Money, that I had received ſo much.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether it did not contain a further Acknowledgment, for Repayment?

Mr. Elde. Not that I know of.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was it ſaid upon whoſe Account the Money was paid?

Mr. Elde. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire he may be asked, how many Days before he was to produce the Ballance of his Caſh before the Commiſſioners, that he received this Money?

Mr. Elde. I cannot ſay how long before, it might be a fortnight or three Weeks; I cannot ſay it was not long before.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether it was not neceſſary for him to make Uſe of this Money, in Order to make up this Ballance?

Mr. Elde. I will anſwer that Queſtion as well as I can: I did make Uſe of it to that Purpoſe as having it by me, but I was not ſo poor as to be put to a Neceſſity of ſo doing; I could have had the Money any where of any Body that knew me.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he can remember the particular Time to a Day, when it was repaid him?

Mr. Elde. Upon my Oath, I cannot tell the particular Time.

Mr. Onſlow. Was it after the Inquiry was directed to be made by the Lords of the Council?

Mr. Elde. Yes, my Lords, I was in the Country when the Inquiry was directed to be made, and a Month after.

Mr. Lutwyche I mentioned a Queſtion before; Mr. Elde was mentioning that my Lord Macclesfield had ſaid to him before he went out of Town, that he would make him exceeding eaſy: I deſire he may be asked where he was then going, and upon what Occaſion?

Mr. Elde. My Lords, I was going into Staffordſhire, where the little Effects I have in the World lie.

Mr. Lutwyche. I would know upon what Occaſion?

Mr. Elde. I never miſſed going into the Country the Beginning of Auguſt, for theſe ten Years paſt.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether there was any particular Occaſion for his going down into the Country at that Time?

Mr. Elde. If your Lordſhips are of Opinion that this is a fair Queſtion, I will as fairly anſwer it. I went down to my Houſe, to look into what little Affairs I had there. I called at Stafford firſt, and there declared myſelf a Candidate for the Election that was to enſue.

Mr. Lutwyche. We deſire he may be asked when he returned?

Mr. Elde. I returned about the 19*th* or 20*th* of November.

Mr. Plummer. Mr. Elde ſays, when my Lord Parker paid him he had a Note from him, acknowledging the Receipt of the Money: I deſire to know whether that Note was taken up again and when?

Mr. Elde. The Note I gave my Lord Parker?

Mr. Plummer. Yes.

Mr. Elde. My Lord Parker ſent for me and gave me the Note again. I do not know that I ſaw my Lord Macclesfield till after I had ſeen Lord Parker, and he had given me up the Note again.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be asked, when the Note was delivered up to him?

Mr. Elde. That was asked before; I cannot tell the Day.

Mr. Plummer. It was never asked here before: The Queſtion I ask is, when the Note was delivered up?

Mr. Elde. I do not remember the Day.

Mr. Plummer. As near as you can?

Mr. Elde. In the Beginning of December.

Mr. Sandys. I beg leave to ask one Queſtion, he ſays that he applied this Money, which he received of my Lord Parker, towards making good the Ballance of his Accompt; whether or no, he did not firſt refuſe to ſwear to the Ballance of that Accompt; and what was the Occaſion of it?

Mr. Elde. When I had delivered in my Accompt, the Queſtion I was asked the firſt Time, was propoſed to me, not by any of the Judges who were appointed to inſpect our Accompts, but by Sir Nathaniel Gould, who propoſed it in ſuch a Manner, that I could not by any Means take it. He asked me, whether I owed any Thing, and I was to ſwear I owed nothing: I told him I could not ſwear any ſuch thing. I had ſome Arguments with him about the Abſurdity of ſuch an Oath, and ſaid, if I owe a Million of Money, that is nothing to the Purpoſe: There is the Money due on the Ballance of my Accompt, I deliver it to you, I laid the Money upon the Table, and inſiſted upon leaving it with them.

Mr. Sandys. Whether that Note was delivered to him after he refuſed to take the Oath?

Mr. Elde. It was.

Mr. Sandys. Whether that Note was not the Occaſion of his refuſing to take the Oath?

Mr. Elde. I cannot ſay but it was an Ingredient in it.

Sir George Oxenden. I would be glad to know where this Note is?

Mr. Elde. When my Lord Parker delivered it to me I lapt it up, and put it in my Pocket: My Lord asked me why I did ſo? I anſwered I would keep it as a Memorandum of my Lord Chancellor's Favour to me; but when I came home conſidering that it would be of no Service, and that it might be hazardous to keep it by me, I tore it.

Dr. Sayer. I deſire he may be asked whether he did not look upon himſelf intirely diſcharged from any Demand on Account of that Money, or did think himſelf bound to anſwer it?

Mr. Elde. I do not think myſelf bound to anſwer it.

Dr. Sayer. Whether he apprehends it to be a free and perfect Gift?

Mr. Elde. I do, my Lords.

Mr. Cottingham called again.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we left the Basket in the Hands of Mr. Cottingham, therefore it is neceſſary that Mr. Cottingham inform your Lordſhips what became of it afterwards; what he did with the Basket, after he had it from Mr. Elde?

Mr. Cottingham. My Lords, I carried it up to my Lord, and ſet it down in his Study.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What did you ſay to my Lord?

Mr. Cottingham. Nothing. Mr. Elde ordered me to carry up the Basket, I carried it up, and there I ſet it down, I never ſaw it afterwards.

Mr.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. Whether do you remember what Anſwer my Lord Macclesfield made at that Time?

Mr. Cottingham. None that I remember.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether did he open the Basket?

Mr. Cottingham. No. The Basket was covered up, and I ſet it down in my Lord's Cloſet.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether after that Time he appointed any Time for Mr. Elde to be admitted?

Mr. Cottingham. I think he was admitted that very ſame Day.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire this Witneſs may be asked, whether he received any Thing from Mr. Elde, beſides what was in the Basket?

Mr. Cottingham. Not a Farthing, except my Fees: Nor no more of any of the Maſters than my uſual Fees.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire Mr. Cottingham may be asked, whether at this Time, when Mr. Elde deſired to be admitted into this Office, there was any other Perſon who deſired it, or made any Offer for it?

Mr. Cottingham. Mr. Lucas, a Gentleman of the Temple, was recommended to the Earl by Mr. Bulſtrode, who is ſince dead. He had been formerly a Commiſſioner of the Exciſe; his Name was Whitlock Bulſtrode. Mr. Lucas did tell me upon that Occaſion, if the Earl would admit him, he would give him 6000 l. for the Office. I took a Memorandum of it at that Time, and I had it in my Hands four or five Days ago.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. When Mr. Lucas told you this, whether did you inform the then Lord Chancellor of it?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, I am ſure I did; and the Anſwer he made me was, that Mr. Elde was of a Family which were his particular Friends and Acquaintance, for whom he had a great Friendſhip and Value, and that he ſhould have it 1000*l.* cheaper, or leſſer than any Body elſe.

Mr. Strange. I deſire he may be asked, whether before Mr. Elde was admitted, he did not acquaint the noble Lord, that this Mr. Lucas would give 6000 l?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes, I did.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire to know whether I underſtand Mr. Cottingham right? He ſays, that my Lord would let Mr. Elde have it cheaper than any Body elſe: Whether he underſtood by that, that my Lord expected ſome Body elſe would give him more?

Mr. Cottingham. My Lord ſaid he would let Mr. Elde have it upon the Score of particular Friendſhip and Acquaintance.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If I heard him right, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether he did not ſay that Mr. Elde ſhould have it 1000 l. cheaper than any other Perſon. I ask whether he did not underſtand my Lord Macclesfield would have 1000 l. more from any other Perſon?

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I hope I am not to be charged with the Imaginations of this Gentleman; he is asked about his Apprehenſion of my Intention in a Caſe that did not happen. I deſire he may be asked, if he knew what Character Mr. Elde had?

Mr. Cottingham. A very good one.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire it may be asked, whether he did not know that I had a great Opinion of Mr. Elde's Ability and Integrity?

Mr. Cottingham. He was one your Lordſhip had a great Opinion of, and that he was very deſerving. I never heard your Lordſhip expreſs a better Opinion of any Man than of Mr. Elde.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We have done with this Article: The next Article is the 8th. We deſire Mr. Thurſton may be ſworn.

Mr. Mark Thurſton ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Thurſton may give your Lordſhips an Account when he was admitted into one of the Offices of the Maſters in Chancery, and upon whoſe Death?

Mr. Thurſton. My Lords, I was admitted into this Office upon the Death of Mr. Borret, and the Day of my Admiſſion was the 5th of Auguſt laſt.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether before his Admiſſion he had made any Application either to my Lord Macclesfield or his Secretary, or any Perſon concerned for him?

Mr. Thurſton. My Lords, before my Admiſſion, I did make ſome Application to my Lord Chancellor's Secretary Mr. Cottingham; and at that Time I made a Propoſal of making a Preſent of 5000 Guineas, to be admitted into the Office. Mr. Cottingham asked me ſeveral Queſtions about my Circumſtances, and what Perſons I could name that would recommend me to his Lordſhip: To which I gave the proper Anſwers, and mentioned ſeveral Gentlemen he knew. After that, I having the honour of being acquainted with my Lord Commiſſioner Gilbert, before I took any other Steps, I waited on his Lordſhip, and acquainted him with my Reſolution, and begged the favour of him, that he would take the Trouble to recommend me to my Lord Chancellor, as his Friend, and a fit Perſon for the Office. His Lordſhip did take that Trouble, and waited upon my Lord at Weſtminſter, who was then ſitting upon the Bench; and after Notice was ſent him of that Gentleman's being in the little Room behind, his Lordſhip came off the Bench; and ſome Time being ſpent in Converſation between them, I was called in, and kindly recommended by that honourable Perſon; and my Lord Macclesfield ſeemed to approve of me upon his Recommendation. But I ſhould acquaint your Lordſhips, that as to that Part of the Tranſaction with Mr. Cottingham, he ſaid that he would report thoſe Things to my Lord Macclesfield, of my Character and Perſon, though he never reported any Thing back to me again upon it: But I took the next enſuing Steps, by the Intervention of the honourable Gentleman my Lord Commiſſioner Gilbert.

Sir Will. Strickland. Whether he did not underſtand, that my Lord Macclesfield agreed to his Propoſals?

Mr. Thurſton. Yes.

Sir Will. Strickland. After this Tranſaction with Mr. Cottingham, what further Application was made? And why he was not immediately admitted at that Time?

Mr. Thurſton. It was not expected by me to be immediately admitted at that Time: Becauſe my Lord Chancellor did not abſolutely determine me to be the Perſon; but ſaid he had ſo good a Character of me, that he believed I ſhould be the Man.

Sir Will. Strickland. Whether Mr. Thurſton, being uneaſy about the delaying of admitting him, did apply to any other Perſon afterwards?

Mr. Thur-

Mr. Thurſton. After my being introduced to my Lord Chancellor, there was ſome Time for my Lord's Conſideration. Near a Week after, a Meſſage was ſent me by Mr. Cottingham, that my Lord would be ready to admit me ſuch a Day. Before the Day came, I had a Meſſage contradicting it, upon my Lord Chancellor's being engaged to attend the Council on that Day. After that, I expected the Appointment of another Day for that purpoſe; and in the mean Time this Affair had got into the publick News-Papers, as every Thing does, and I was named by every Body to be the Perſon fixed upon; and People reſorted to me to tranſact the Buſineſs of the Office, which I could not do without being duly admitted. And ſhortly after that Time, there was a Report ſpread, that my Lord Chancellor had deſigned to make a Preſent of the Place to ſome Gentleman in the Country, which gave me an Uneaſineſs, and put me upon an Expedient, that ſince I could not have ready Acceſs to ſo great a Perſon as his Lordſhip, I went to Kenſington one Morning to wait upon the Counteſs of Macclesfield; and upon ſending up my Name, and that I deſired to ſpeak with her, in a ſhort Time I had the honour of ſeeing her, and acquainted her that I was the Perſon that my Lord had promiſed the Office to, and that I could not proceed therein without being ſworn; therefore I deſired her Ladyſhip to interceed with my Lord, that I might be ſpeedily ſworn in. Her Ladyſhip ſaid, ſhe never did meddle in any Affairs of a publick Nature. I uſed ſeveral Arguments with her, as that the Thing was now publick and in Print, that it might be a great Diſappointment to me, and might affect my Character, if my Lord did not think fit to admit me. I laid a good deal of Streſs upon theſe Arguments, and I acquainted her Ladyſhip that I did not expect or deſire to come in without the due Preſent that is always eſteemed the Perquiſite of the great Seal. Then I repeated thoſe other Arguments again, that my Character might be affected by theſe Diſapointments; whereby her Ladyſhip was prevailed upon to promiſe ſhe would write a Letter, and acquaint my Lord Chancellor with it. Before I went away from the Room where I had the honour to be with the Lady, I did leave upon the Table Bank Notes to the Value of 5250 Pounds.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. How were they directed?

Mr. Thurſton. I directed them to the Counteſs of Macclesfield.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, how ſoon after this he was admitted?

Mr. Thurſton. I believe it was within 2 or 3 Days after at fartheſt, that I was admitted and ſworn into this Office.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire he may give your Lordſhips an Account who was his Predeceſſor?

Mr. Thurſton. Mr. Borret, as I acquainted your Lordſhips before.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire he may acquaint your Lordſhips of the State of the Office as it came into his Hands. What was the Deficiency of the Office, due to the Suitors of the Court, not anſwered by the Effects of Mr. Borret, when it came into your Hands?

Mr. Thurſton. That is a Queſtion I can't poſſibly anſwer, becauſe I never had thoſe Accompts under my Inſpection. And I dont find the Gentlemen that have, can give an Accompt of it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I do not ask to a particular Sum; but whether there was a Deficiency, any Deficiency, and about what Sum?

Mr. Thurſton. I do not know any Thing at all about the Matter: I might as well gueſs what a Gentleman is worth that I know nothing of.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether there were Effects ſufficient to anſwer all the Suitors Demands?

Mr. Thurſton. I cannot tell; becauſe there was not any particular or exact Accompt taken of it, that is come to my Knowledge.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether the Suitors have been paid the Money left, or depoſited by them in the Hands of Mr. Borret?

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, if there be any Order of the Court for their being paid, it will appear, and they may produce thoſe Orders to your Lordſhips: How can they pay without any Order?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I do not ſpeak of Orders, I only ask whether he knows that the Suitors have been paid?

Mr. Thurſton. It is impoſſible for me to have any Knowledge of it, for the Reaſons I gave you before; having had no Inſpection of thoſe Accompts.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether any Effects, or Money, or Caſh, and to what Value, have been transferred to him, as the Effects of Mr. Borret?

Mr. Thurſton. About 4200 l.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether he knows what the Caſh was, that was in Mr. Borret's Hands?

Mr. Thurſton. No, my Lords, I do not know.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether he has been applied to by any of the Suitors of the Court, upon the Account of Money depoſited in Mr. Borret's Hands?

Mr. Thurſton. I cannot ſay no Body has applied to me for Money due in Mr. Borret's Office, ſeveral Suitors or their Repreſentatives have been inquiring after ſuch Things, who have been ſatisfied with having ſuch an Anſwer as the preſent Circumſtances would furniſh. There were ſome Sums of Money before this broke out paid to Suitors, that was Intereſt Money, and who were repreſented to me as People in Neceſſity, to the amount of 3 or 400 l. When this broke out, I then deſiſted Payment, upon the Advice of a great Friend.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he would explain himſelf, what he means by ſaying before this broke out?

Mr. Thurſton. What I mean was, the Inquiry made into the Maſters Accompts, by his Majeſty's Direction in Council.

Mr. Lutwyche. The Sum of Money he paid, I deſire he may be asked who he received that Sum from?

Mr. Thurſton. I received it from Mr. Godfrey, the Maſter in Chancery.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether he knew of any Adminiſtration taken out to Mr. Borret, and at what Time?

Mr Thurſton. I believe Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet were deſired to take that Trouble upon them, to look into Mr. Borret's Affairs, by the Lord Chancellor; which they proceeded and took ſome Steps in, till till they were discouraged from it by the Enquiry that was set on foot. They tell me now, that Administration is granted to Mr. Paxton.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may inform your Lordships, since he paid the Interest, why he did not pay the Principal?

E. of Macclef. I believe it would save your Lordships time, if Mr. Serjeant would ask his Questions in such a manner, as not to imply something which was not admitted, or said by the Witness. The Question supposes a principal Sum demanded; the proper Question is, first to ask if any principal Sum was demanded, and whether it was, or was not paid.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I apprehend that Mr. Thurston says, That Creditors came to him, Suitors of the Court, and he could not pay any more than the Interest; therefore I apprehend they came to him for the Money lodged in the Hands of Mr. Borret. Therefore I desire he may be asked, whether any of those Persons that demanded their Money were paid?

E. of Macclef. I desire he may be asked, whether any demanded the principal Sum? and by what Order?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire to ask my own Questions; I apprehend I am not to be directed in the asking my Questions by the Lord impeached. I desire to ask what Suitors applied, and what Sums they demanded?

Mr. Thurston. The Names of the Suitors I can't recollect, I believe it is not necessary to trouble your Lordships with them. The Sums demanded were only Interest Money. The principal Sum, for which I paid the Interest, to the best of my remembrance, was 700*l*. There was no Demand made of principal Money to be paid. But there might be Enquiries made, I believe, by a noble Peer of this House, which I was so very unfortunate, that I could not inform his Lordship of the State of what he enquired after.

Mr. Plummer. Mr. Thurston says, he desisted from paying any further Sums, upon very good Advice; I desire to know why, or by whose Advice, he desisted paying?

Mr. Thurston. It was upon a prudential Reason I did desist; because when a publick Inquiry was set on foot, I did not know how far I might be affected, in being made answerable my self for it.

Mr. Plummer. Whether he had any Suspicion that there was a Deficiency in Mr. Borret's Office?

Mr. Thurston. There was a Suspicion that there was not competent Money to satisfy all the Suitors Demands.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked, whether there was not an Order for transferring the Effects in Mr. Borret's Hands to him?

Mr. Thurston. Upon the Admission of Mevery after, there is an Order of Course signed by the Lord Chancellor, to transfer the Effects to the Successor.

Mr. Lutwyche. I ask if any such Order came to him?

Mr. Thurston. There did, my Lords.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was there any Transfer of the Effects according to that Order?

Mr. Thurston. No, there was not a compleat Transfer.

Mr. Lutwyche. Why was it not, as usual in the Case of other Masters, that either are removed, and are able to transfer; or in case, upon Death, where their Representatives are able to do it?

Mr. Thurston. The Reason it was not done, I conceive, was because it was impracticable, there being no Representative of my Predecessor, no Administration being taken out.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may inform your Lordships, whether he was not applied to by a noble Peer of this House concerning some Effects deposited in the Hands of Mr. Borret, and what account he then gave him of the State and Situation of the Office?

E. of Macclef. I am really very sorry to trouble your Lordships so often. What is it to me what this Gentleman said? He is now upon his Oath, and to give to your Lordships an Account what he knows; but to ask him what he said at such a time, to affect me, I hope they will not insist upon it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When he has declared what he said, then there will be another Question, Whether that was true in Fact? And that Question will then affect the impeached Lord.

E. of Macclef. If Mr. Serjeant will ask a proper Question first, he may; but he should not ask an improper Thing, because he will ask a proper Question afterwards.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We apprehend it is proper Evidence to be given, that he gave such an Account of the Office in answer to the noble Lord: Therefore I desire to know what Account he gave to that noble Lord?

E. of Macclef. My Lords, I humbly oppose that Question, and desire your Lordships Judgment, whether he is to ask what this Person said?

Mr. Lutwyche. I believe the same End may be obtained by asking a Question without Dispute, and to which there can be no Objection; that is, Whether or no he had any Reasons to think that there was a Deficiency in the Office, and what those Reasons were?

Mr. Strange. My Lords, we beg leave to oppose that Question: What his private Opinion may be, is no Evidence; he and another may think variously of the same Matter. They are to ask him as to Fact, and not to his Opinion.

Mr. Plummer. I have not had the Happiness to be bred a Lawyer, and therefore may be mistaken as to legal Evidence: But surely when your Lordships are examining a Person to the Deficiency of his own Office, none can give a better Account than himself. I desire he would answer what he knows, whether he had the compleat Money of Mr. Borret's transferred to him?

Mr. Thurston. The compleat Money of the Office hath not been transferred to me, and for the Reasons I have mentioned to your Lordships; for want of an Administration.

Sir W. Strickland. I would beg leave to ask Mr. Thurston one Question, and I hope a material one; Whether, on his Admission into that Office, he did not find a great Confusion in it?

Mr. Thurston. I can't say that upon my Admission into that Office I found great Confusion in it, because all Papers that came within my View were very regular, and well adjusted to dispatch Business upon.

Sir W. Strickland. I desire he may be asked, whether, if he had known the State of this Office, he would have given five thousand Guineas for it?

Mr. Thurston. If I had known the State of the Office, and the Consequences of it, as appear at this time before your Lordships, rather than have given 5000 l. for it, I would have given 5000 l. to have been without it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Of the Money he paid or left at the time he mentions, on my Lady Macclesfield's Table, I desire to know if he received any of it back again?

Mr. Thurston. I received back again from the Lady Macclesfield the Sum of 3250 l. in Bank-Notes, the same as I enclosed, when I first left it.

Dr. Sayer. Do you know the particular Circumstances of that Transaction, and upon what Occasion the Money came to be return'd? Give a full Account of that whole Transaction.

Mr. Thurston. Soon after my Admission, and as soon as I could adjust the Affairs of my Office, it being the latter End of Summer, and little Business stirring, I went into the Country for my Health. The Servant I left in Town, sent me word, that there were several Messages from my Lord Chancellor, that he supposed might be of Importance. As soon as I could conveniently, I returned to London, and in a Day or two went my self to my Lord Chancellor's House, and I sent to know what the Occasion of those Messages was. They said, it was not from my Lord Chancellor, but it was a Message from my Lady Macclesfield. Upon that I immediately after waited upon her Ladyship. She informed me then, that she did not know that I had left so large a Present with her, as she found it was: And declaring I should be used with Honour, she returned to me 3250 l. and the other part she said she would appropriate to her own use.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We desire Mr. Thurston may be asked, if there was any notice taken of any Order or Directions from my Lord Chancellor about re-payment of the Money? or whether it was only a Transaction between him and my Lady Macclesfield?

Mr. Thurston. There was no notice taken of any Orders from my Lord Chancellor; rather an express Desire that my Lord Chancellor should never be acquainted with it.

Mr. Strange. I would ask when this Money was restored?

Mr. Thurston. The time when the Money was restored, was about the Middle of October.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he may be asked, whether at the time he first applied to Lady Macclesfield, he laid down the Paper those Bank Bills were in on the Table, before he received any Answer from my Lady, or afterwards?

Mr. Thurston. I laid down the Bank Bills on the Table, to the best of my Remembrance, at the time of my coming away, and taking leave.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether they were inclosed in a Paper?

Mr. Thurston. They were inclosed in a Paper, and also sealed up.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether they were opened during the time he was there?

Mr. Thurston. No, they were not.

Mr. Com. Serj. Or taken up by my Lady during that time?

Mr. Thurston. No, my Lords, I don't remember they were.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether he named the particular Sum to her Ladyship?

Mr. Thurston. No, my Lords, not in the least. I did not give any Intimation what Sum was inclosed.

Mr. Strange. I desire he may be asked, whether he can remember that my Lady did or did not open it, before he went away?

Mr. Thurston. To the best of my Remembrance it was not opened, before I went out of the Room.

Mr. Strange. I desire he may be asked this further Question, whether he apprehended that my Lady Macclesfield was acquainted with the Contents, till after he was gone?

Mr. Thurston. I did not apprehend that my Lady Macclesfield was acquainted with the Contents of it, till afterwards.

Mr. West. Since that Gentleman hath asked concerning his Apprehension, I desire he may be asked another Question of the same kind, which is, Whether he apprehended he should have been admitted, if he had not left the Money?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We submit it to your Lordships, whether that be a fair Question.

Mr. West. Really I think it is a proper Question, upon the Foundation of the Question asked before. The former Question was, whether he apprehended my Lady knew what he had left? I ask, whether he apprehended he should have been admitted, if he had not left that Sum?

Mr. Thurston. I do not apprehend, that if I had come without the Money, I should have been admitted. But if the Notes had been return'd to me without any other Answer, then I should fully have apprehended that I should not have been admitted.

Sir John Rushout. I desire he may be ask'd, whether he had any particular Acquaintance with the Lady Macclesfield before?

Mr. Thurston. I had not that Honour.

Sir John Rushout. Whether he had ever seen her, or been in her Company before?

Mr. Thurston. My Lords, I believe I never was.

Sir John Rushout. My Lords, we desire he may be ask'd what he apprehends was the Reason of 3250 l. being return'd to him?

Mr. Thurston. I know not whether I should trouble your Lordships with my Apprehensions, they may not be just; but so far as I could collect from the Lady's Discourse, the Reason was, she thought it too large a Present.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be ask'd, when the 3250 l. was return'd, in what Month it was?

Mr. Thurston. It was in October.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he can recollect in what time of the Month?

Mr. Thurston. I believe it was about the middle of October, to the best of my Remembrance.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, we desire he may be ask'd, whether the return of this Money was before or after the then first Seal before Michaelmas Term?

Mr. Thurston. To the best of my Remembrance, the first Seal was about the middle of October, and it was return'd before the first Seal.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I desire he may be ask'd, whether there was any Message sent about the returning of the Money, before the Return was made?

Mr. Thurston. I have acquainted your Lordships that several Messages past, while I was in the Country.

Mr. Robins. When he waited upon my Lady Macclesfield, after his Return out of the Country, I desire he may be ask'd, whether she mentioned any Thing to him of the Reason of those Messages?

Mr. Thurston.

Mr. Thurſton. She mention'd the Reaſon, and ſaid that it was to return the Money, which ſhe ſaid was too large a Preſent, and that ſhe was afraid my Lord Chancellor ſhould come to the Knowledge of it.

Mr. Ser. Probyn. I deſire he would inform your Lordſhips, when he went to Kenſington to my Lady Macclesfield, where my Lord Macclesfield was?

Mr. Thurſton. When I went to Kenſington to my Lady Macclesfield, my Lord Macclesfield was then engag'd in the Buſineſs of the Court of Chancery, at the latter end of the Sittings, or firſt Seal after Michaelmas Term.

Mr. Ser. Probyn. In what ſtate of Health was my Lord Chancellor at that time? Had he not continued ſome time before at London, and not at Kenſington?

Mr. Thurſton. My Lord Chancellor, by the Enquiry I made, was at that time in London.

Mr. Ser. Probyn. How ſoon after your Admiſſion did the Lord Chancellor go into Oxfordſhire?

Mr. Thurſton. The very Day after my Admiſſion, my Lord Chancellor went into Oxfordſhire, as I was informed by one of my Lord's Officers, who came to me that Day upon ſome Buſineſs.

Mr. Cottingham again call'd.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Cottingham may be ask'd, whether upon the Propoſal of 5000 Guineas made to him by Mr. Thurſton, he acquainted my Lord Macclesfield with it?

Mr. Cottingham. I acquainted my Lord Chancellor with the Propoſal made by Mr. Thurſton of 5000 Guineas.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether did he approve of it, or reject it?

Mr. Cottingham. I am not very certain, whether the Earl did not ſay he would take time to conſider of it. But in the main, according to my Apprehenſion, the Earl ſeem'd to approve of it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether he receiv'd any thing for my Lord Macclesfield's Uſe upon Mr. Thurſton's Admiſſion?

Mr. Cottingham. No my Lords, I received nothing but my own Fees.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If he received nothing, whether he received any Directions from my Lord Chancellor, relating to his receiving, or not receiving any thing from him?

Mr. Cottingham. The Earl was pleaſed to tell me, he had a Deſign to have given that Place to Dr. Sayer, but he was at that time in the Country, out of Town, at Durham: He proceeded ſo far as to order me to take no Money of Mr. Thurſton.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was that?

Mr. Cottingham. Very ſoon before he was admitted.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we ſubmit this as Evidence of the Lord's knowing of the Receipt of this Preſent of 5000 Guineas.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire to know of Mr. Cottingham, whether my Lord Macclesfield had any Acquaintance with Mr. Thurſton before this Propoſal?

Mr. Cottingham. I can't ſay as to that, whether he had or had not; I believe he had not, as I apprehend.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be ask'd one Queſtion, whether he made any difficulty of accepting his Fees on Mr. Thurſton's Admiſſion?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes I did.

Mr. Plummer. And why?

Mr. Cottingham. The Earl ordered me to take no Money of him. Upon that general Order I made a little difficulty, and told him of it; the anſwer he made me was, why ſhould I make any difficulty when he had been thus generouſly dealt with by my Lord Chancellor?

Sir W. Strickland. Whether at that time, when he firſt mention'd the 5000 Guineas, it was not a Day or two before his Admiſſion?

Mr. Cottingham. I believe it was a Day or two before his Admiſſion.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we have done with Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Since the Name of Dr. Sayer is mentioned on this Occaſion, whom the noble Earl declared he would compliment with the Place that fell vacant, I deſire this Witneſs may be asked, whether that was a real Compliment to Dr. Sayer, or whether Dr. Sayer made any Application, or was to give any Thing for it?

Mr. Cottingham. I believe, if Dr. Sayer had been then in Town, my Lord would really have made him a Compliment of it without any Preſent. My Lord told me Dr. Sayer was his particular Friend, and he had a great Value and Reſpect for him.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I beg leave to ask a Queſtion upon that Queſtion. He ſays he thought my Lord Macclesfield would have given it him for nothing; I ask him if he then thought he gave it Mr. Thurſton for nothing?

Mr. Cottingham. The Anſwer I can make to that Queſtion is, that I did not apprehend my Lord was ſo well acquainted with Mr. Thurſton, as to give it him for nothing.

Dr. Sayer. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether he did not repreſent to the Earl of Macclesfield, that there was a neceſſity for the immediate putting a Maſter into that Office, for the diſpatch of Buſineſs?

Mr. Cottingham. I did repreſent it to the Earl, that it was neceſſary to put ſomebody into the Office, for ſeveral Practicers had been with me about their Affairs in that Office, and otherwiſe the Buſineſs might be transferred to another Office, which would have been a great Prejudice. Upon that the Earl ſaid Mr. Thurſton ſhould be admitted.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Whether you had not Application from the Suitors themſelves, and whether there was not a Clamour from them on account of the ſtop it put to Buſineſs?

Mr. Cottingham. Yes there was; it happened to be in the long Vacation, and ſomething I told the Earl muſt be done, there was an abſolute Neceſſity to come to ſome Reſolution or other in the Matter.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. In this Article, as an Aggravation, it is alledg'd, that Mr. Borret died inſolvent: We beg leave to call ſome Witneſſes to give an Account of the State of the Office at his Admiſſion, and afterwards at the time of his Death.

Mr. Meller called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Meller may be ask'd, what Sums in Caſh and Effects he delivered over to Mr. Borret, at the time of his coming into the Office?

Mr. Meller. My Lords, I take it to be about 120000*l.* I refer myſelf to the Account given in

to

to the Judges and Directors of the Bank, and ſigned by my Hand.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we ſubmit it, whether this is regular, to examine to an Accompt Viva Voce, which Accompt hath been reduc'd into writing?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Surely the Witneſs may make uſe of his own Papers to refreſh his Memory.

E. of Macclef. I don't know what theſe Gentlemen intend. They are reading a Charge againſt Mr. Borret, to ſhew what was delivered over to him at the time he came into the Office. Is it expected I ſhould be able to give an Account what was paid to him, or by him, while he was Maſter? that I ſhould give an account of his Eſtate, and Effects, what it is, and if there was ſufficient to pay in his Hands, or not? If theſe Gentlemen had any Order of the Court, in which this had been fixed and ſettled, that might have been ſomething. It is impoſſible for me to enter into it. — It appears he died inteſtate, Adminiſtration was not granted till a great while after his Death; not till very lately: What account hath been taken of his Effects I don't know, nor can any way ſhew. They are beginning with an Account which I apprehend is not a proper Evidence to be given as againſt me, to prove that this Gentleman had not Effects ſufficient to anſwer the Demands upon his Office.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, This Evidence relates to an Accompt delivered in by the Approbation of the Lord impeached, on the Enquiry made before the Lords of the Council. As this Accompt was delivered in before them, we apprehend ſo far it is a proper Evidence, and a Foundation for a farther Enquiry, how much of it remains in the Office: We ſhall ask other Perſons afterwards as to the Deficiency. All the uſe we now make of it, is, to ſhew the groſs Sum that was at firſt transferred over to him.

E. of Macclef. My Lords, If they mean only to ſatisfy your Lordſhips Curioſity, by ſhewing how great a Sum there was in that Office, I think it is of no great Importance.

Mr. Lutwyche. All that we endeavour to prove now, is, what was very notorious at the time of Mr. Borret's Death; that there was a great Deficiency, and that he died inſolvent, and the Earl goes a great way in this matter in his own Anſwer. He ſays in his Anſwer, That on the Death of Mr. Borret, he deſired Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet to enquire into his Effects, and to enter a proper Caveat in the Prerogative Court, to prevent Adminiſtration being granted to any Perſon who might embezzle the ſaid Borret's Eſtate, and to obtain Adminiſtration to be granted to them for the benefit of the Suitors of the Court. This goes a good way, I apprehend, to incline your Lordſhips to believe, that there were thoſe Steps uſed, which are unuſual in the caſe of a Man's Solvency. Therefore what we would ask to, is, that the Witneſs would give an account of what he knows concerning the Deficiency in this Office, or give an account of ſuch Circumſtances, as may induce your Lordſhips to believe there was ſuch a Deficiency.

Mr. Com. Serj. If the Gentlemen who appear on the behalf of the Houſe of Commons think fit to rely upon our Anſwer, they may do it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I think Mr. Meller hath proved that he transferred 120,000 l. to Mr. Borret; we will now go on and prove the Deficiency.

Mr. Com. Serj. Mr. Meller hath ſpoke Viva Voce, in a matter which we apprehend is capable of much better Proof; therefore we hope what he has ſaid ſhall not go for Evidence. There muſt have been a Schedule, and he has the counterpart of that Schedule, by which the Effects were deliver'd over.

Lord Trevor. Mr. Meller hath a Paper in his Hand, I deſire to know what that Paper is?

Mr. Meller. The Paper I have before me is the very Account of the Money delivered to Mr. Borret, and the ſeveral Times when; it is made by way of Schedule. There is another Paper by way of Abſtract. I drew them together at the time I delivered it to the Judges. I had not time to draw out the full Account, and therefore I made an Abſtract, both which are ſigned.

E. of Macclef. The noble Lord asked the Queſtion exceeding proper. The Queſtion asked is, What this Paper was? Perhaps it is the very Accompt Mr. Borret and he made up between them, and ſigned. I ask therefore, Whether it is the Accompt between them, or whether it is an Accompt of his own drawing up ſince?

Mr. Meller. This is the Accompt I drew up from my Books, of which Mr. Borret had a Duplicate. I verified all theſe Items, and likewiſe proved the Payment of the Money by Goldſmiths and Bank Notes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We apprehend that this is as full Evidence as can be laid before your Lordſhips.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We ſubmit it, whether your Lordſhips are of Opinion that this is proper Evidence. Mr. Meller hath been propoſing a Paper, which is not the original Accompt delivered; it is not the Book, but a Copy of the Book taken out, and given in Evidence in another Place: Now he would by this Evidence, ſigned by himſelf, charge Mr. Borret with Money delivered over to him; but as it is an Accompt only ſigned by Mr. Meller, we ſubmit it, whether it can be a Charge upon the Repreſentative of Borret, and conſequently if it can be any Evidence at all?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg leave to inſiſt upon it as proper Evidence. When a Perſon makes up an Accompt of his own Hand Writing, and draws it up, and ſwears that to be a true Accompt upon his own Knowledge, whether this is not proper Evidence?

E. of Macclef. This Gentleman has really given his Evidence, though it was objected to: It will be a proper Enquiry hereafter, when we come to conſider the Evidence that hath been given, whether it be good Proof of what it is brought for?

Dr. Sayer. We ſhall reſerve our Objection to the laſt.

Mr. Soll. Gen. They may reſerve what Obſervations they pleaſe; it is an Objection to be made now, or not at all.

Lord Lechmere. It would be of ſome Service to prevent miſpending your Lordſhips Time, if the noble Lord would diſtinguiſh between Objections and Obſervations; for a great deal of Time has been taken up in Obſervations on Evidence, which are proper afterwards on the Defence.

Mr. William Thompſon called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Mr. Thompſon is one of the Gentlemen, who by the conſent of the Lord within the Bar, as well as of the reſt of that Committee, did examine into the Accompts of the Maſters in Chancery; and we beg leave to ask him, In the Accompt delivered in before the noble Lord himſelf ſelf, what appeared to be the Deficiency upon Mr. Borret's Account?

E. of Maccleſ. If it does appear by thoſe Accounts, thoſe Accounts may be produced before your Lordſhips, and your Lordſhips may be Judges; but I beg they may not inſiſt upon this Gentleman giving his Opinion, in order to affect me with his Collections or Inferences upon them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. The Original Accompts are here. They are on your Lordſhips Table. It will be proper to examine this Gentleman as to that.

Mr. Plummer. I beg leave to make one Obſervation, and I believe it may prevent my ſpending your Lordſhips time. They make an Objection to this Evidence, as if your Lordſhips were going to try how the Deficiency was made up; whereas your Lordſhips are only trying whether there was or was not a Deficiency.

E. of Maccleſ. If the Accompts are before your Lordſhips, and lye upon your Lordſhips Table, and he only declares to your Lordſhips his Obſervations on thoſe Accompts, for your Lordſhips Eaſe, and to ſave you ſome Trouble, I have no Objection to it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Upon the ſtating the Accompt, which we apprehend is a matter of Evidence, when a Gentleman computes the Sum on one Side, and the Sum on the other Side, we deſire to know what appears to Mr. Thompſon to be the Deficiency?

Mr. Thompſon. I can't rely upon my Memory for the Sum, but I have in my Hand a Report made to the Committee of Council, that I ſigned with my Name; by which it appears, that Mr. Meller at ſeveral times, paid to Mr. Borret 120000 l. That Mr. Borret paid out to the ſeveral Suitors 77485 l. and I find the Charge remaining on Mr. Borret's Office unpaid to the Suitors, is 42515 l. Theſe are the Sums that upon Examination of the Accompts we find to be right.

Dr. Sayer. If the Gentlemen that are Managers for the Houſe of Commons have done, we beg leave to ask Mr. Thompſon this Queſtion, whether on the making up of theſe Accounts any Executor or Adminiſtrator of Mr. Borret was preſent?

Mr. Thompſon. When we examined the Accounts, we underſtood there was no Repreſentative of Mr. Borret; and I think it is put in the Report, that we could get no Account but from his Clerk, Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet, two Maſters in Chancery.

Mr. Com. Serj. What Books was it he formed thoſe Accounts from?

Mr. Thompſon. The firſt Charge, or the Charge from Mr. Meller on Mr. Borret, was taken from Mr. Meller's Account. The 77485 l. paid out, was an Account from Mr. Borret's Books, made up by his Clerk, under the Inſpection of Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, whether he himſelf knew thoſe to be Mr. Borret's Books, or only by Relation from other Perſons?

Mr. Thompſon. Only by Relation from his Clerk.

Mr. Com. Serj. Then, with Submiſſion, they muſt go further before the Ballance can be taken notice of. They muſt eſtabliſh that theſe Books are Mr. Borret's Books.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We have done with Mr. Thompſon.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We hope the Council for the Earl impeached, will be pleaſed to read his own Anſwer, wherein he owns that Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet, were employ'd by himſelf to take the Effects of Mr. Borret into their Cuſtody.

E. of Maccleſ. If I apprehend Mr. Thompſon, he ſays, the Charge is taken from the Account given by Mr. Meller himſelf. I deſire to know, whether Mr. Meller was not called upon to diſcharge himſelf of the Money he had in his Hands, before he ſurrender'd to Mr. Borret, and whether that was not the Occaſion of his being there?

Mr. Thompſon. I apprehend Mr. Meller was ſent for, in order to know the State of the Office at the time he left it.

E. of Maccleſ. So he gave an Account how it ſtood at the time of quitting the Office, and what he paid over to Mr. Borret?

Mr. Thompſon. I apprehend he did ſo.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire Mr. Thompſon may be ask'd, whether the 77485 l. Diſcharge, was taken from the Relation of Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet, or from the Books themſelves; or whether he did examine the Books himſelf?

Mr. Thompſon. I went through every Particular of Mr. Meller's Accompt; as to the other, my Memory does not ſerve me to anſwer particularly.

E. of Maccleſ. Whether they did not report at that time, they could not take the Accompts perfectly for want of an Adminiſtrator?

Mr. Thompſon. I believe, my Lords, we might do ſo, and I believe if the Report is turn'd to, it will appear ſo. I don't mention theſe Sums as an exact Accompt, they were the beſt Accompts we could get?

Dr. Sayer. The Queſtion I would trouble your Lordſhips with, becauſe it is of great Conſequence, is, whether the Accompt of 120,000 l. which lies as a Charge upon Mr. Borret's Office, is not the Accompt which Mr. Meller is to diſcharge himſelf by, and of thoſe Effects for which he otherwiſe remains reſponſible?

Mr. Thompſon. How far Mr. Meller is to diſcharge himſelf, I am no competent Judge. This is the Accompt that the Office, as I apprehend, ſtood charg'd with.

Dr. Sayer. To put the Queſtion ſhorter. Whether it is the Accompt of Mr. Meller, as Predeceſſor in the Office to Mr. Borret?

Mr. Thompſon. I apprehend it ſo.

Mr. Plummer. Whether Mr. Meller did not produce Receipts for Mr. Borret, for this whole Accompt?

Mr. Thompſon. To the beſt of my Remembrance, Mr. Meller did produce Vouchers for every Article ſet down in his Accompt.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether there were any Proofs made of theſe Vouchers?

Mr. Thompſon. What the Gentleman means by Proofs, I don't know. They were Receipts under Mr. Borret's own Hand for the whole Sum.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether he is acquainted with Mr. Borret's Hand-Writing, or whether there was any Proof made of it?

Mr. Thompſon. Mr. Borret's Clerk was there, and affirm'd every Receipt to be Mr. Borret's Hand-Writing.

Mr. Com. Serj. I would ask, if there was any Oath made, or if it was only upon his Word?

Mr. Thompſon. If your Lordſhips will give me leave to have recourſe to the Report, I will recollect myſelf. I can't ſay whether Mr. Borret's Clerk was ſworn or no, I think he was; I don't find it ſet down in the Report.

Mr. Lutwyche. I would beg leave to ask this

Queſtion. This Report, that is ſign'd by him as one of the Committee, whether it was laid before the Council, and to whom delivered in, in order to be laid before the Council?

Mr. Thompſon. This very Report was delivered by Mr. Baron Gilbert, to the Committee of Council.

E. of Macclef. I hope it is the ſame that is before your Lordſhips, if it is not, I can't tell what to ſay to it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. This is the Original Report, of which your Lordſhips have a Copy on your Lordſhips Table.

E. of Macclef. I deſire it may be delivered in and lye upon the Table.

Mr. Godfrey called.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We deſire Mr. Godfrey may be ask'd, whether upon the Death of Mr. Borret, he was directed to take an Account of the State of his Office?

Mr. Godfrey. Upon the Death of Mr. Borret, my Brother Bennet and I, were deſired by my Lord Macclesfield, to look into the Affairs of Mr. Borret's Office, and ſee how the Accompt ſtood; and likewiſe to ſee what Securities were in the Bank, in the Exchequer, and Eaſt-India Company, and other Funds. Accordingly, I went to the Bank, and to the Eaſt-India Houſe, and took an Account of what I found ſtood in his Name there. I believe Mr. Bennet will ſatisfy your Lordſhips, he went to the Exchequer and other Places. I applied firſt to the Bank, to Mr. Hanger, who was then Deputy Governour, and he was ſo kind to ſend an Officer to ſearch the ſeveral Books, and I had this Accompt: There was in Mr. Borret's Name 1000 l. in 5 l. per Cent Annuities, 1000 l. Bank Stock. And then I went to the Eaſt-India Houſe, and there was 240 l. Eaſt-India Stock in his Name. This was all the Account I took.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In what State was the Office in General?

Mr. Godfrey. I did not look over the Office Books. I believe Mr. Bennet who was with me took that Charge upon him: I believe he is capable of giving you an Account. I did not ſee the Office-Books at all. But upon my talking with Mr. Bennet about it, he found there was more Stock and Security in Mr. Borret's Name in the ſeveral Funds, than he could find him charg'd with in the Books of the Office.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When Mr. Thompſon and the other Gentlemen enquired into the particular Effects, whether, when he appear'd there, the Accompt he gave in was a true Accompt?

Mr. Godfrey. To the beſt of my knowledge, in relation to Mr. Borret's, it was.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I deſire one Queſtion more, whether it is uſual to enquire into the Effects of a Predeceſſor, unleſs there is reaſon to ſuſpect a Deficiency?

Mr. Godfrey. I don't know whether it is uſual, but it is extreamly neceſſary. When this Gentleman was expiring in ſuch an Office, having no Friends in Town, nor any intimate acquaintance beſides myſelf to take care of his Effects; I thought I ought to take ſome care, that his Office ſhould not be plundered; and that was the only Reaſon that induced me to take care of his Effects, that they might not be embezzled.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether they did not find the Office in great Confuſion?

Mr. Godfrey. In that part of his Office which was at his Chambers in the Temple, we found his Papers in great Confuſion, lying without any Method or Order. We collected them as well as we could, and what Things we found of Value or belonging to the Suitors, as Goldſmith's Notes, Notes under Hand for Money, we put them upon a File; and that File, together with other little Moveables we found belonging to him, as Rings and a Watch, were all put in a Bag, and ſealed up by Mr. Bennet and myſelf, Mr. Grant, who was Mr. Borret's Lady's Father, and Mr. Grant the Clergyman, who was his Lady's Uncle, and put them into a Trunk and lock'd them up; and they are now at my Houſe.

Sir W. Strickland. I would ask him whether the next of Kin did not refuſe to take out Adminiſtration, becauſe of the Deficiency?

Mr. Com. Serj. Here can be no Anſwer, but yes or no, I hope Gentlemen will not ask ſuch Queſtions.

E. of Macclef. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether any Advice was given concerning taking out, or not taking out Adminiſtration?

Mr. Godfrey. Mr. Grant the Uncle, ſaid, that he was a Creditor of Mr. Borret's, by Bond (which indeed I was ſurpriz'd to hear, I did not think he owed any Man a Shilling;) between 6 and 700 l. and being ſo great a Creditor, he thought if he took out Adminiſtration he ſhould be paid firſt. I told him, as Mr. Borret had been in an Office of great Weight, and there was a great Truſt, I could not tell how Matters ſtood in the Office; and if there ſhould prove a Deficiency, I believed he would involve himſelf in taking out Adminiſtration, in much more trouble than he was aware of.

Sir W. Strickland. I deſire he may be ask'd, if he did not apprehend there would be ſuch Deficiency?

Mr. Godfrey. I did not apprehend at that time there would be any Deficiency. He had been in the Office about four Years, he had had Opportunities of re-imburſing himſelf: He had a handſome Fortune of his own when he came in, and had with his Lady 3000 l. Therefore I was under no apprehenſion that there would be a Deficiency.

E. of Macclef. I beg leave I may ask Mr. Godfrey, whether he was acquainted very well with the Affairs of Mr. Borret, and knew his Circumſtances?

Mr. Godfrey. I have had ſome Years acquaintance with Mr. Borret. As to his real Eſtate, I was not perfectly acquainted with it, I had it only by common Relation, that he had an Eſtate of about 400 l. a Year, or rather better; but I don't know it of my own Knowledge.

E. of Macclef. As to his real Eſtate, you ſay you don't know it of your own Knowledge; whether are you particularly acquainted with his perſonal Eſtate?

Mr. Godfrey. No my Lords.

E. of Macclef. I deſire Mr. Godfrey to inform your Lordſhips, what he ſaid to me after Mr. Borret's Death, whether there would be a Loſs or not a Loſs in Mr. Borret's Office?

Mr. Godfrey. I can't at preſent remember what Diſcourſe paſſed between the noble Earl and my ſelf upon the death of Mr. Borret. I believe I might ſay, and it was my Opinion, that there would be no Deficiency. I have heard his Eſtate was ſuch, and I knew very well that his Lady's Fortune was

ſo

ſo much, and that he diſpoſed of a Place, which was the Filazer of Yorkſhire; for which he had, as I have been inform'd, 4200 l. And theſe were the Reaſons that induced me to believe there wou'd be no Deficiency; and I knew very well that I cou'd ſay of my own Knowledge, Mr. Borret lived at no extravagant rate; for I am ſure all the Time he was a Maſter, and in Town, he never ſpent 200 l. a Year.

Sir W. Strick. He ſays, he has heard he had 400 l. a Year in Land: Does he not as well know that that Eſtate was ſettled upon his Family and Children?

Mr. Godfrey. I have heard, that upon his Marriage, ſome part of it was ſettled, but whether all be ſettled, or not, I can't tell.

E. of Maccleſ. It ſeems this Gentleman ſays, he did not ſpend 200 l. a Year. How came you to imagine that he ſhould ſpend no more than 200 l. a Year?

Mr. Godfrey. He told me ſo.

E. of Maccleſ. Where was his Family?

Mr. Godfrey. In the Country.

E. of Maccleſ. With whom?

Mr. Godfrey. With his Lady's Father; and when he was in Town, he had private Chambers in the Temple, and only kept one Servant, and one Horſe.

E. of Maccleſ. I deſire he may be asked, whether he did not once intend and propoſe himſelf to take out Adminiſtration to Mr. Borret, and if he did not take ſome ſteps towards it?

Mr. Godfrey. I had ſo great a concern for the Office, and the Securities not being transferred to a proper Hand, that I was willing to take out Adminiſtration, rather than there ſhould be any clamours on account of the neglect of Buſineſs in the Office. But, my Lords, upon conſidering the Matter, I did not apprehend that I was ſo fit a Perſon for that purpoſe. I was not very young my ſelf, I had two Children, and thoſe young: I apprehended that if I ſhould drop off before things were ſettled, the Caſe might be ſtill the ſame as I found them: Therefore, I deſired I might have ſomebody joyned with me in this troubleſome Affair, for I did foreſee a good deal of trouble in it. However, I ſaid I was willing to engage in it, if my Brother John Bennet were joyned with me, rather than there ſhould be any clamour upon the Office; and I perſwaded him to do the ſame; and accordingly, I went down to the Commons, to ſee if Adminiſtration could be granted to us two. The Relations in the Country, and thoſe People concerned for them, were very willing that Adminiſtration ſhould be granted to Mr. Bennet and my ſelf; and accordingly Proceſs was ſent to cite the Children; and that done, as I am inform'd, Sentence was given, that I and my Brother Bennet ſhould have the Adminiſtration. But then this unhappy enquiry coming out, we did not know what Situation we might be in, and for that Reaſon I declined it.

E. of Maccleſ. Has Mr. Borret a Wife living, or is ſhe dead?

Mr. Godfrey. His Lady died a Month before him.

E. of Maccleſ. What age are his Children?

Mr. Godfrey. The eldeſt is about three Years old, and the youngeſt about two, as I am informed; I never ſaw them.

Mr. John Bennet was called and ſworn.

Sir W. Strickland. The Queſtion I deſire he may be asked is, whether he did not, upon the enquiry into the Affairs of Mr. Borret's Office, apprehend that there was a Deficiency.

Mr. J. Bennet. I did hear it reported that there would be a great Deficiency in that Office, at the Time I was deſired by my Lord Macclesfield to look into it; and I was likewiſe informed ſoon after, that there was like to be no Deficiency.

Sir W. Strickland. I deſire he may be asked, how he found it?

Mr. J. Bennet. I found his Papers and Accompts in the utmoſt Confuſion. His Accompts were moſtly in looſe Papers: There was one Book indeed, but that extended no farther than to the Chriſtmas before his death, which was near three quarters of a Year before he died. Mr. Godfrey deſired I would join with him in taking out Adminiſtration; after a good deal of importunity I did conſent.

Sir W. Strickland. I deſire one Queſtion more. He ſays he was informed ſoon after, there was like to be no Deficiency in the Office. I deſire to know, whether he did inform the Earl of Macclesfield there was like to be no Deficiency?

Mr. J. Bennet. No, I did not, but I did inform him, that there was not ſo great a Deficiency as was reported, which was 25 or 30000 l. I cou'd make no regular Computation, every thing was in the utmoſt Confuſion, as I acquainted my Lord.

E. of Maccleſ. I deſire he may be asked, whether he did not inform me, that he found more Stock in Borret's Name, in the Books of the ſeveral Companies, than he could find charged upon him in the Office?

Mr. J. Bennet. Not to my Remembrance; for I did not look into the Stocks of the Companies, that was Mr. Godfrey's Buſineſs.

E. of Maccleſ. You, then look'd into his Books?

Mr. J. Bennet. I did ſo.

E. of Maccleſ. Then upon your looking into his Books, and Mr. Godfrey's looking into the Companies Books, and comparing them together, I deſire you would inform my Lords, whether you did not take more to be in his Name, than he was charged with in the Books of the Office?

Mr. J. Bennet. Upon Mr. Godfrey's Accompt there appeared, upon caſting it up, to be more Stock in his Name than the Securities he was anſwerable for to the Court.

E. of Maccleſ. He has ſaid, he could not tell what the Deficiency would be, becauſe he could not make up a regular Accompt; I deſire he may be asked, whether he did not tell me that he believed there would be no Deficiency?

Mr. J Bennet. No, I did not.

E. of Maccleſ. Did you not upon your Oath?

Mr. J. Bennet. After Mr. Borret's death, I did ſay to ſeveral People, when they were clamorous (but whether I ſaid ſo to my Lord Macclesfield, I can't tell) that upon the beſt Accompt I could make of his confuſed Affairs, there would be a Deficiency of 4 or 5000 l. and I believed not more.

Mr. Com. Serj. Tho' Mr. Bennet did not look into the Books of the publick Companies; yet whether he did not examine at the Exchequer upon that Occaſion?

Mr. J. Bennet. Yes.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, whether he did not tell Mr. Godfrey afterwards, that upon what appear'd, there would be no Deficiency?

Mr. J. Bennet. No.

Mr. Plummer. Mr. Bennet has ſaid, upon comparing the Books, he found more Stock in Mr. Borret's

Borret's Name, than he was charged with to the Court. I desire he may be asked, if he found more Stock than the Money and the Effects he was charged with to the Court?

Mr. J. Bennet. No my Lords, the best Calculation I could make, was, that there was near 4 or 5000*l.* Deficient.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We shall leave this Article, with this Observation, that Mr. Borret died insolvent, and a debtor to the Suitors of the Court, of which we have given full Evidence; and that Mr. Thurston was admitted into that Office by the Earl Impeach'd, without procuring satisfaction to the Suitors of the Court, or Security for their Debts: If that was done, it lies upon the noble Lord to prove it.

Mr. Onslow. My Lords, The Commons having made good that part of their Impeachment, by which the Earl of Macclesfield stands charged with extorting many great, and extravagant Sums of Money, for the admission of several of the Masters of the Court of Chancery into their respective Offices: We shall now proceed, my Lords, to support the Eleventh and Twelfth Articles, which contain many corrupt Practices, used by the said Earl, to advance and encrease the illegal Gain, arising to himself from the Sale and Disposal of those Employments.

The Eleventh Article charges him, my Lords, with admitting several Persons to those Offices, who at the Time of their Admission, were of small Substance and Ability, and highly unfit for so great a Trust, as by the nature of their Employments at that Time, was to be placed in 'em.

The Masters in Chancery, my Lords, have of late Years, been the Treasurers of that Court. The Repository of the Money and the Effects brought into the Court, brought there my Lords, not by the choice and consent of the Parties concerned, but by the compulsion of the Court, under the Faith of a better Security: But so, my Lords, has it fallen out, that this pretended Security, has served only to delude the Suitors of the Court, into a false Quiet, whilst their Estates have been made a Prey to infamous Stock-jobbers, and wantonly wasted, by some of 'em, to support the extravagancy of their living.

The Fortunes, my Lords, of Orphans and Lunaticks, are from the Compassion of our Government, a part of the Care of the Court of Chancery; and have been lodged in the Hands of the Masters, as a Place of Sanctuary, till the Owners should become capable of managing their Estates themselves: When They come, my Lords, to require their Fortunes, He, who was the Supreme Judge in a Court established for their Relief: He, who was the Great Guardian of Infants and Lunaticks, will be found to have suffer'd an advantage to be taken of the weakness of the One, and the misery of the Other, to render their helpless condition a means of their Ruin, instead of their Protection.

This, my Lords, is the nature of the Trust reposed in the Masters of the Court of Chancery, and This the Use they have been permitted to make of it. The Greatness of the Trust, will shew your Lordships, what Precautions a Lord Chancellor ought to have taken, as to the Officers admitted into these Employments; and the Abuse of this Trust, will demonstrate how little His care has been, whose Duty it was to provide Persons of Integrity, and responsible Men for the execution of these Offices; but who, my Lords, unfortunately for the Suitors, and to the dishonour of the publick Justice of the Kingdom, presided seven Years in the Court of Chancery; in which Time, a deficiency of above fourscore thousand Pounds, has happened upon the Masters He admitted; and what perhaps may be worthy of your Lordship's particular Notice, of the six Masters on whom there appears to be a Deficiency, Four of them were admitted by Him. If our Evidence, my Lords, as to this Article, rested only on the Proof of these Deficiencies, it would, we apprehend, be sufficient to evince what the Commons have here alledged, That Persons of small Substance and Ability, have, by the Earl at the Bar, been preferred to be Masters of the Court of Chancery. But, my Lords, to bring this Charge still nearer to the Earl, We have it in Proof, and strongly so, That little or no inquiry was ever made by Him, into the Characters and Circumstances of Those He admitted into these Offices. That in fact, my Lords, they were Men of very mean Fortunes. No Security ever required of Them; which still made it the more necessary, that their own Ability should be thoroughly looked into and well approved. We shall show your Lordships, That they were entrusted, some of 'em, with forty, sixty, one of 'em, I think, to the amount of a hundred thousand Pounds in Cash and Securities; and yet, my Lords, no other Use was made of This, but to enhance the Price of the Office, when it was to be Sold and Barter'd for the benefit of the Earl. The Argument used, to bring up any Person to the Rate the Earl insisted on, was the largeness of the Sum to be transferr'd to the Purchaser. The Temptation generally succeeded. The Reason your Lordships will easily imagine; and when the Price was thus agreed upon, no other Qualification was required, the Person stood right in the Earl's Opinion, and was thought proper to be Associated to him.——— Were it only that, my Lords, the Commons would not have troubled your Lordships with this Article, ——but to be Associated to him in the Administration and Execution of Justice, and to be entrusted with the Fortunes of whole Families, whose only support, perhaps, depended on the Ability and Integrity of these Men: How well, my Lords, the Earl consulted in the appointment of these Officers, the Honour of that publick Justice They were to assist him in: What Regard He has had for the Interest of Those, whose Estates He thus flung into their Hands, The Evidence we shall produce to your Lordships, and your own Observations upon it, will abundantly show, notwithstanding his flat denial of this part of the Charge.

I will trouble your Lordships but with one particular more in this Article, and it is what the Article concludes with. A remarkable Declaration by the Earl, of the Ability, and other Qualifications of the Masters, particularly those promoted by him; and this happened, my Lords, upon as remarkable an Occasion. A very honourable Person, then a Judge also in that Court, and now justly at the Head of it, having seen with Indignation, the Havock that was making of the Effects of the Suitors; out of compassion to them, and from a Zeal for Justice, endeavour'd to put some stop to it, in an instance that came within his Cognizance. An Order was made by him, my Lords, on one of the Masters, to allow some Profit to a Suitor arising from her own Money, which the Master designed as it was thought, to have sunk to his own Use. The Master thought himself aggrieved, and fled for Redress to his Pa- tron,

trin, the then Lord Chancellor, the Earl now under your Lordships Consideration; and he was secure in so doing, for the Order was immediately discharged; and then it was, my Lords, to obviate the Clamours that were breaking out from all sorts of People against the Masters, that the Earl did in open Court, then sitting as Lord Chancellor, in his Judicial Capacity, declare, that the present Masters were Men of as great Probity, Fortunes, and Abilities, as any set of Masters that ever were in that Court; and that he had had the Satisfaction of putting in most of them himself. As this, my Lords, was spoken in general of them all, but with a peculiar Regard to those he had admitted; the Commons have laid it to be to the manifest Deceit and Injury of the Suitors of the Court, which they are justified in doing, by the Thing it self being false, by the Proof we have, my Lords, that the Earl must know it to be false, and by the Resemblance it bears to that Series of other mean Artifices he had long been practising to give a counterfeit Credit to these corrupt Officers. A Credit, my Lords, he was soon to receive some Benefit from; for the Witness will inform your Lordships, that a Vacancy of a Master in Chancery happened the Day before this significant and memorable Declaration was made.

My Lords, The Commons have made this Article a part of their Charge against the Earl of Macclesfield, as being the great Source of the Evil that is likely to befal the unhappy Sufferers in the Court of Chancery; and as it was the Means he made use of to draw to himself those extravagant Sums of Money we have proved him to have received: For Men of small Fortunes, my Lords, as they have more Temptations, so they run less hazard than others in preying upon Money that is entrusted with them; and it is this, my Lords, that encourages such Men to give exorbitant Rates for Employments which afford them those Opportunities.

Thus, my Lords, I have opened to your Lordships the Substance of the Eleventh Article, and the nature of our Proof upon it. The Twelfth Article will be opened and enforced to your Lordships by the Gentleman who is to come after me. I shall therefore detain your Lordships no longer than to make this one Observation, That as the Office of a Master in Chancery is of great Trust and Importance, that as these Officers are appointed to this Trust by the sole Discretion of the Lord Chancellor; and that the Effects of the Suitors of the Court are deposited in their Custody, by his immediate Orders, which he might have plac'd in safer Hands if he had thought fit; he becomes by all this in the nature of a superior Trustee for, and is therefore justly answerable to the Suitors for the Behaviour of these Men. So, my Lords, in some Degree may the Publick be thought answerable for him; which makes his Guilt without Measure, who has thus brought a Disgrace upon his Country, by prostituting one of its highest Courts of Justice to his own Avarice and Corruption, to the Rapine and Corruption of his inferior Officers, and to the Undoing of those, who, by the Constitution of the Kingdom, have been forced into his Power.

Mr. Palmer. My Lords, The Gentleman that spoke last has fully opened the Evidence of the Eleventh Article, and has shewn to your Lordships, that for his own private and illegal Gain, the impeached Lord did commit the Money and Effects of the Suitors, to Men no way of Substance sufficient for so great a Trust. The Twelfth Article will lay before you a most corrupt Practice, used without Controul, while the Earl was Chancellor, by which this illegal Gain was immediately created; and whereby those Masters of whom the Commons complain in the preceding Article, were tempted and enabled to buy their Offices at extravagant Prices.

Your Lordships will see what Methods were used on the Admission of Masters in Chancery: Great Sums were paid for the Surrenders and Admissions, and those Sums were taken from the Money of the Suitors; sometimes the Purchase-Money was borrowed; but after Admission, repaid from the Cash of the Office; sometimes the Value of the Purchase was left in the surrendring Master's Hands: Whatever different ways were taken at the beginning, they all tended to this; the Suitors were to make the Purchaser easy, and People were perswaded to bid high, by being told how easily the largest Sums could be raised.

It was a common Recommendation to a Purchaser, to tell him how much Cash was in the Office; and that he need not be afraid to make any Contract good, Money would be ready as soon as he was admitted: Your Lordships will see the Consequences of such Recommendations. Masters did offer, and give more than they could be presumed they were worth, the Suitors Money was at Hand to make good the Bargain; and these are the Masters in whose Offices appear the greatest Deficiencies.

It will appear to your Lordships, that Mr. Kinaston, and Mr. Thomas Bennet, procured their Places in this manner. Mr. Kinaston discharged a Bond of Six Thousand Pounds to his Predecessor, by giving a Receipt of the same Value. Mr. Bennet gave a Receipt to his Predecessor for Ten Thousand Pounds; both acknowledged a Transfer of so much of the Suitors Money, the one received but Nine Pounds, and the other Fifteen Hundred, the rest was kept back as part of the Price of their Office, and is now a part of their Deficiencies. How great their Deficiencies are, may be observed to your Lordships; Mr. Bennet's is near Ten Thousand Pounds, and Mr. Kinaston's above Twenty Thousand.

This is the Practice, the impeached Lord, in his Answer, declares himself totally ignorant of, and is what the Commons declare he knew, connived at, and encouraged; and as they have been always careful to aver nothing but what they are satisfied will be fully maintained, this Article will be supported by Proofs, that the impeached Lord was well informed of what he now denies the Knowledge of; that it was the Subject of his Discourse, and that he feared, and endeavoured to prevent a Discovery.

And your Lordships will find him observing on the Accounts of some of the Masters, as they were given in on the late Enquiry, That they were given in in the worst Manner; That they should convince the World that they paid for their Places out of the Suitors Money; and, That they would at last discover what he had always, when asked, taken care to deny.

The impeached Lord admits, in his Answer, that he never caused any Schedules to be made of the Suitors Effects, to be transferred over to succeeding Masters: That it was what his Predecessors never did before him, and that if the Conſequences alledged by the Commons, have ariſen from this Practice, or the not ordering ſuch Schedules, he thinks he is not Criminal.

My Lords, the Charge of the Commons is general, that he knew the Abuſe, and took no Care to reform it; if he had taken Care that the Effects of the Suitors ſhould have been transferred by Schedule; if he had appointed any one to overlook the Transfer; if he had taken any Method at all to be aſſured that the Effects of the Suitors were duly made over according to this Order of Transfer, the Commons would not have charged as they have done, and perhaps he had not at this Time appeared ſo nigh your Lordſhips Bar.

But if the impeached Lord thinks he is juſtified by ſaying, it was not his Duty, and therefore the Omiſſion no Offence: The Commons aver in their Article, that it is the Duty of the Chancellor of Great Britain, to ſuperintend the Maſters and their Accounts; and it is ſubmitted to your Lordſhips, whether he is not Criminal, if he ſuffers Money depoſited by the Orders of his Court in the Hands of the Maſters, to be without Order, conveyed or left in private Hands.

I ſhall ſay no more to your Lordſhips on this Article, but leave the Proof of it to the Evidence.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, the Proof in ſupport of theſe Articles, will go to them both promiſcuouſly. In the firſt Place we beg leave to ſhew to your Lordſhips, the ſeveral Orders of Court, which ſtate the deficiencies of ſeveral Maſters.

Mr. Ralph Paxton Sworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire he may be aſked, whether the Papers he produces, are true Copies of the Orders Examined by the Books in the Office.

Mr. R. Paxton. My Lords, they are true Copies, I Examined them.

Veneris 29. Die Januarii, 1724.

WHEREAS, by an Order made by the Rt. Hon. the late Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, the Seventeenth Day of December laſt, it was (inter al') ordered, That the Bank Notes, and other Effects therein ſpecified, produced before Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, and Mr. Juſtice Raymond, Sir. Nath. Gould, Mr. Thomſon, and Mr. Hanger, three of the Directors, and one of them Deputy-Governour of the Bank of England, by the ſeveral Maſters of this Court, upon the Examination of their Accompts, for or towards anſwering the Ballance of Caſh admitted by their ſaid Accompts, to remain in their reſpective Hands belonging to the Suitors of this Court, ſhould be depoſited in ſeveral Cheſts, and that then the ſaid Cheſts ſhould be locked up and left in the Cuſtody of the Bank of England, in ſuch manner as by the ſaid Order is provided: And whereas, the Maſters had in their ſeveral Accompts, given in Particulars of Stock and of Annuities, transferrable in the Books of the ſeveral Companies, ſtanding in their Names, which belonged to the ſeveral Suitors of this Court, or as their own proper Stock and Annuities, by which part of the Ballance of Caſh in their Hands might be made good, or ſecured. It was further ordered, That they ſhould each of them forthwith, deliver into the reſpective Companies, a Declaration in writing, wherein ſuch Stock in each reſpective Company, or the Annuities there transferrable, as by their reſpective Accompts appeared to belong to the Suitors of the Court, and likewiſe the Stock and Annuities by them reſpectively propoſed towards making good or ſecuring their Ballance of Caſh, or ſo much thereof as ſhould equal the Ballance of their ſaid Accompts; in Caſe they had in their Names, more than ſufficient for that purpoſe ſhould be declar'd to be upon Truſt to attend the Orders of this Court: And it was further ordered; That the ſaid ſeveral Maſters, ſhould forthwith give to the ſaid Mr. Baron Gilbert, their Poſt Accompts of their Receipts and Payments ſince the former Accompts; and by a ſubſequent Order of the 21ſt Day of the ſaid December, It was ordered, That the ſeveral and reſpective Maſters, whoſe Effects ſo ordered to be ſecured, did not amount to the whole Ballance of Caſh admitted by their Accompts to be in their Hands, ſhould forthwith ſecure the reſt of the Ballance of the Caſh appearing to be due on their reſpective Accounts, by depoſiting in like manner Bank Notes, or other Effects to the Amount thereof, or enter into a Recognizance in a competent Sum of Money, with two or more Sureties to be approved of by Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, and Mr. Juſtice Raymond, or any two of them, for duly anſwering from Time to Time as this Court ſhould direct, ſuch Sum and Sums as the remaining Deficiencies of their ſaid reſpective Ballances amount unto. And whereas, Mr. Edward Conway, one of the Maſters of this Court, did, on the Nineteenth Inſtant, attend the Right Hon. the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, and acknowledge that he was Debtor to the Suitors of the Court on the Ballance of his Caſh Accompt, the Sum of 13039 l. 4 s. 4 d. ½. and that he had brought into the Cheſt the Sum of 3000 l. only, ſo that he remains Debtor on the ſaid Caſh Ballance, the Sum of 10039 l 4 s. 4 d. ½. and that ſince making the ſaid former Orders, he had ſold 3500 l. South Sea Stock, in the Cauſe between the Lord and Lady Faulconberg, which was intended a Security for the Sum of 3425 l. and that he had ſince paid off only the ſum of 2593 l. 9 s. 3 d. purſuant to the Orders of this Court in that Cauſe, ſo that there remained the Sum of 831 l. 10 s. 9 d. in his Hands, to be applied to the Parties concerned in that Cauſe; and that he had ſince ſold 2000 l. South Sea Annuities Stock, part of the Sum of 17950 l. South Sea Annuities Stock, belonging to the Suitors of the Court in ſeveral Cauſes, which he ought to re-place. Their Lordſhips did thereupon order, That the ſaid Mr. Conway, ſhould in a Week, depoſite the Sum of 10039 l. 4 s. 4 d. ½. and alſo the ſaid Sum of 831 l. 10 s. 9 d. belonging to the ſaid Cauſe of Faulconberg and Faulconberg in Bank Notes, or Money in his Cheſt at the Bank of England, and alſo ſhould replace the ſaid Sum of 2000 l. South Sea Annuity Stock, or that he ſhould enter into a Recognizance of 26000 l. with two ſufficient Sureties to be approved of by one of the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, for anſwering the ſaid Sums, and replacing the ſaid 2000 l. South Sea Annuity Stock, in ſuch ſuch Manner, as this Court ſhould direct: And this Court being Yeſterday inform'd by Mr. Attorney General, on behalf of the Suitors of this Court, that the ſaid Mr. Conway had not depoſited either of the Sums aforeſaid, or entered into a Recognizance with two Sureties, as by the ſaid Order he was directed: It was thereupon order'd that he ſhould on this Day attend the Court, to ſhew Cauſe why he did not yield Obedience to the ſaid Order. And he now attending accordingly, and admitting that he had not depoſited either of the Sums aforeſaid, nor replaced the ſaid 2000 l. South-Sea Annuity Stock, or given Security with two Sureties, as by the ſaid Order is required: And whereas he did formerly upon Examination of his Accompts, produce to the Perſons who inſpected the ſame, Bank Bills and Notes, ſufficient to make good the ſaid Sum of 13039 l. 4 s. and 4 d. ½: Being the whole Ballance of his Caſh Accompts, but had only depoſited 3000 l. part thereof, in purſuance of the ſaid Order: And it being ſeveral times demanded by the Court, whether he did know or remember the Names of the Perſon or Perſons from whom he had the ſaid Bank Notes, or any of them, or did know or remember the Names of the Perſon or Perſons to whom he had ſince paid or delivered them, or any of them, he declined giving any direct Anſwer to the ſaid Queſtion relating to his own proper Knowledge and Remembrance, but upon Oath ſaid, it was impoſſible for him to anſwer the ſame; whereupon, and upon hearing of Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Sol. Gen. on Behalf of the Suitors; and what was farther inſiſted on, this Court doth declare, that the ſaid Mr. Conway is guilty of very high Contempts, and doth therefore order, that the ſaid Mr. Conway do, for his ſaid Contempts, ſtand committed to the Priſon of the Fleet; and that for making Proviſion for the Execution of his Office, and that no Prejudice may happen to the Suitors of the Court by reaſon of the ſaid Commitment, he do, in the Cuſtody of the Warden this Afternoon, deliver all his Books and Papers belonging to his Office, unto Mr. Holford one other of the Maſters of this Court, who is to act therein as he the ſaid Mr. Conway ought to have done during his Commitment; and the Clerk of Mr. Conway is to be at Liberty, if he thinks fit, to attend Mr. Holford therein, and Mr. Conway is at Liberty from time to time to make ſuch Propoſals to the Court for making good his Deficiency as he ſhall think proper.

Mercur. tertio Die Febr. Ann. Regni Georgii Regis undecimo.

WHereas, by an Order of the 29th of Jan. laſt, for the Reaſons therein contain'd, it was ordered that Mr. Thomas Bennet, one of the Maſters of this Court, ſhould, then ſitting the Court, give his own Recognizance to be taken by Mr. Holford, one other of the Maſters of this Court in the Penalty of 18150 l. conditioned to anſwer and pay the Sum of 9075 l. therein mention'd, in ſuch Manner as this Court ſhould direct; and that upon his ſo doing, the time for his performing of an Order of the 12th of Jan. laſt, for depoſiting the ſaid 9075 l. or procuring two or more Sureties, to enter into a Recognizance of the Penalty aforeſaid, as in the ſaid Order is mentioned, ſhould be inlarg'd till this Day: And if he ſhould procure ſuch Sureties to enter into ſuch Recognizance, he was firſt to give the Names of the intended Sureties to Mr. Paxton (Soll. on behalf of the Suitors of this Court) to the end he might enquire after their Abilities; and the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet, was this Day to attend the Right Honourable the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, when ſuch farther Order ſhould be made as ſhould be juſt. And the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet this Day attending their Lordſhips, in the Preſence of Mr. Attorney General, and Mr. Sollicitor General, on behalf of the Suitors of the Court; and the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet, now delivering into Court a Particular of ſeveral Eſtates which he propoſed to aſſign and convey as the Court ſhall direct, in truſt for the Suitors of the Court, and ſubmitting to be examined upon Interrogatories, for Diſcovery of all other Eſtate he has both Real and Perſonal, and that the ſame ſhall be alſo aſſigned and conveyed to the ſame Truſt: Their Lordſhips do therefore Order, that the time for the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet's giving his Recognizance with two or more Sureties in the Penalty aforeſaid, be enlarged untill Wedneſday next, at which time the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet is to attend in Court, when ſuch farther Order ſhall be made as ſhall be juſt. But in the mean time, he is to aſſign and convey the ſeveral Eſtates by him now propoſed, unto the ſaid Mr. Holford, as he, the ſaid Mr. Holford ſhall approve and direct, and is alſo within that time to produce and leave with the ſaid Mr. Holford, all Deeds and Writings in his own Hands relating thereto; and ſo far as he is able to procure the Mortgages and Annuitant, to produce and leave with the ſaid Mr. Holford, the ſeveral Deeds and Writings in their reſpective Hands relating to the ſaid Perſons. And the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet is alſo within the ſame time to be examined upon Interrogatories, before the ſaid Mr. Holford, for diſcovery of all other, his real and perſonal Eſtates, and is alſo to aſſign and convey the ſame to the ſaid Mr. Holford, as he ſhall approve and direct. And what Eſtates ſhall be by him, the ſaid Mr. Thomas Bennet ſo aſſigned and conveyed to the ſaid Mr. Holford, as aforeſaid, the ſame are to be upon Truſt for the Suitors of the Court, as the Court ſhall direct; and the ſaid Mr. Paxton is forthwith to prepare and lay Interrogatories before the ſaid Mr. Holford for the Purpoſe aforeſaid.

Martis Decimo Nono Die Januarii, 1724.

WHereas, by an Order made by the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, the ſeventeenth Day of December laſt, it was (amongſt other things) ordered, that the Bank Notes and other Effects therein ſpecified, produced before Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, and Mr. Juſtice Raymond, Sir Nathaniel Gould, Mr. Thompſon, and Mr. Hangar, three of the Directors, and one of them Deputy Governour of the Bank of England, by the ſeveral Maſters of this Court, upon the Examination of their Accompts, for, or towards anſwering the Ballance of Caſh admitted by their ſaid Accompts to remain in their reſpective Hands belonging to the Suitors of this Court, ſhould be depoſited in ſeveral Cheſts, and that then the ſaid Cheſts ſhould be lock'd up and left in the Cuſtody of the Bank of England, in ſuch manner as by the ſaid Order is provided. And it was further ordered, that the ſaid ſeveral Maſters ſhould forthwith give to the ſaid Mr. Baron Gilbert, Poſt Accompts of their Receipts and Payments ſince their former Accompts. And by a ſubſequent Order of the one and twentieth Day of the ſaid December, it was ordered, that the ſeveral and reſpective Maſters of this Court, whoſe Effects ſo ordered to be ſecured, did not amount to the whole Ballance of the Caſh admitted by their Accompts to be in their Hands, ſhould forthwith ſecure the reſt of the Ballance of the Caſh appearing to be due on their reſpective Accompts, by depoſiting in like Manner, Bank Notes, or other Effects, to the Amount thereof, or enter into a Recognizance in a competent Sum of Money, with two or more Sureties, to be approved by Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, and Mr. Juſtice Raymond, or any two of them, for duly anſwering from time to time, as this Court ſhould direct, ſuch Sum and Sums, as the remaining Deficiencies of their ſaid reſpective Ballances amount unto. And Mr. Edward Conway, one of the Maſters of this Court, this Day attending the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, and acknowledging that he was Debtor to the Suitors of the Court on the Ballance of his Caſh Account, in the Sum of thirteen Thouſand and thirty nine Pounds four Shilling and four Pence half Penny; and that he had brought into the Cheſt the Sum of three thouſand Pounds only, ſo that he remains Debtor on the ſaid Caſh Ballance, the Sum of ten Thouſand and thirty nine Pounds four Shillings and four Pence Half Penny; and that ſince the making the ſaid former Orders, he has ſold three Thouſand five Hundred Pounds South-Sea Stock, in the Cauſe between the Lord and Lady Faulconberg, which was intended a Security for the Sum of three Thouſand four Hundred and twenty five Pounds; and that he hath ſince paid off only the Sum of two Thouſand five Hundred and ninety three Pounds nine Shillings and three Pence, purſuant to the Orders of this Court in that Cauſe; ſo that there remains the Sum of eight Hundred and thirty one Pounds ten Shillings and nine Pence, in his Hands, to be apply'd to the Parties concern'd in that Cauſe; and that he has ſince ſold two Thouſand Pounds South Sea Annuity Stock, part of the Sum of ſeventeen Thouſand nine Hundred and fifty Pounds South Sea Annuity Stock, belonging to the Suitors of the Court in ſeveral Cauſes, which he ought to replace: Their Lordſhips do thereupon Order, that the ſaid Maſter Conway, do in a Week, depoſite the ſaid Sum of ten Thouſand and thirty nine Pounds four Shillings and four Pence Half Penny, and alſo the ſaid Sum of eight Hundred and thirty one Pounds ten Shillings and nine Pence, belonging to the ſaid Cauſe of Faulconberg and Faulconberg, in Bank Notes or Money, in his Cheſt at the Bank of England; and alſo do replace the ſaid Sum of two Thouſand Pounds South Sea Annuity Stock; or that he do enter into a Recognizance of twenty ſix Thouſand Pounds, with two ſufficient Sureties to be approved of by one of the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, for anſwering the ſaid Sums, and replacing the ſaid two Thouſand Pounds South Sea Annuity Stock, in ſuch Manner as this Court ſhall direct.

And it was further ordered, That the ſaid ſeveral Maſters ſhould forthwith give to the ſaid Mr. Baron Gilbert Poſt Accounts of their Receipts and Payments ſince their former Accounts. And by a ſubſequent Order of the one and twentieth day of the ſaid December, It was ordered, That the ſeveral and reſpective Maſters of this Court, whoſe Effects ſo ordered to be ſecured, did not amount to the whole Ballance of the Caſh admitted in their Accounts to be in their Hands, ſhould forthwith ſecure the reſt of the Ballance of Caſh appearing to be due on their reſpective Accounts, by depoſiting, in like manner, Bank Notes, or other Effects, to the amount thereof, or enter into a Recognizance in a competent Sum of Money, with two or more Sureties, ties, to be approved by Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, and Mr. Juſtice Raymond, or any two of them; for duely Anſwering from Time to Time, as this Court ſhould direct; ſuch Sum and Sums as the remaining Deficiencies of their ſaid reſpective Ballances amounted unto; And Mr. Kinaſton, one of the Maſters of this Court, being this day preſent before the Right Honourable Sir Jeffery Gilbert, Knight, one of the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, and being examined touching the Money and Effects for which he was anſwerable to the Suitors of the Court, did admit, that the Sum of thirty one thouſand nine hundred and fifty four Pounds, fifteen Shillings and a Farthing, was the Caſh Ballance in his Hands, due to the Suitors; and that he had depoſited in his Cheſt at the Bank, the Sum of four thouſand ſix hundred and eighty ſix Pounds, one Shilling and nine Pence, in purſuance of the Order of the ſeventeenth of December aforeſaid; and that he had declared a Truſt of three hundred Pounds South-Sea Stock for the Suitors, which at the preſent valuation is three hundred and ſixty Pounds; ſo that there remains the Sum of twenty ſix thouſand nine hundred and eight Pounds, eleven Shillings and three Pence Farthing, deficient and unſecured to the Suitors of the Court; and propoſed towards Satisfaction thereof, to Aſſign over a Debt of twenty thouſand eight hundred and fifty Pounds, owing to him from Mr. Delahaye, in ſuch manner as ſhould be thought proper for the Benefit of the Suitors: But alledged that he was not to be charged with the Sum of ſeven thouſand five hundred and ſeventy five Pounds, mentioned in his Accounts to be part of the aforeſaid twenty ſix thouſand nine hundred and eight Pounds, eleven Shillings and three Pence Farthing. Whereupon their Lordſhips conſidering what was alledged by him, were of Opinion, That he was anſwerable to the Suitors of the Court for the ſaid Sum of ſeven thouſand five hundred and ſeventy five Pounds; and do therefore Order, That the ſaid Mr. Kinaſton do, in a Week, depoſit the ſaid Sum of twenty ſix thouſand nine hundred and eight Pounds, eleven Shillings and three Pence Farthing, in Money or Bank Notes, in his Cheſt at the Bank of England, or enter into a Recognizance in the penalty of fifty three thouſand eight hundred and ſeventeen Pounds, with two or more Sureties, to be approved of by one of the Lords Commiſſioners for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, to Anſwer and Pay the ſaid Sum of twenty ſix thouſand nine hundred and eight Pounds, eleven Shillings and three Pence Farthing, in ſuch manner as this Court ſhall direct.

R. P. Examined the 6th of May, 1725. by the Book of Entries. Cur' Cance' Letter B.

Mr. Sol. Gen. The Managers for the Houſe of Commons lay before your Lordſhips theſe Orders, to ſhew, that the ſeveral Maſters therein mentioned, were deficient. It will be incumbent on the noble Lord to ſhew; that when they were admitted, they were of Ability proper for ſuch a Truſt. We now proceed upon the Declaration that was made on the 21ſt of January laſt was twelve-Month, and deſire that Mr. Waller may be called.

Mr. Waller Sworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, we deſire he may be ask'd, whether he applied to my Lord Chancellor upon an Order made by his Honour the Maſter of the Rolls, relating to Mr. Conway; and what it was my Lord Chancellor ſaid on that Occaſion?

Mr. Waller. In July 1723. I had Directions from my Client, to apply to Mr. Conway, to lay out upon South-Sea Annuities the Sum of 4000 l. that had been brought before him in a Cauſe between Mr. Davenant and my Lord Cardigan. The Maſter told me at firſt, he would take Care of it. Upon further Application, he ſaid the Order had directed another Sum of Money ſhould be brought before him in the ſame Cauſe, and that he could not put out the one without the other. Upon this, I applied, by Petition, to the Maſter of the Rolls, praying, that Mr. Conway might be oblig'd to put out the Money, and that he might anſwer Intereſt for it after he had had it a reaſonable Time in his Hands. Upon that, the Maſter of the Rolls directed he ſhould lay out the Money immediately.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I beg your Lordſhips Pardon for interrupting this Witneſs. In the manner he is going on, your Lordſhips obſerve, he is taking Notice of Orders, Petitions, Acts of the Court, and this he gives upon his Memory. We think theſe ought to be produced.

Mr. Sol. Gen. If they are deſirous to entertain your Lordſhips with them, we have them all here. We only make uſe of them to let in the Declaration of the noble Lord.

E. of Macclef. If that be all the Uſe, there is no need to produce theſe Orders: But if they are to introduce Evidence with relation to the Merits of the Caſe, it is proper to have them produced.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We don't diſpute the Juſtice of the Order then made, but ask the Occaſion of it; and all we deſire is what was declared, and what was the Occaſion of the Declaration.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The Managers don't enter into the Conſideration whether the Order is juſt, or no. All they repreſent to your Lordſhips, is the Occaſion of this Declaration. Whether a Man acts juſtly, that detains Money, and does not pay it out when he ought to do it, that we leave to another Determination. But what we ask now, is the Declaration of the Earl of Macclesfield, and the Occaſion of it.

Mr. Waller. Upon the Petition to the Maſter of the Rolls, he made an Order to put the Money out, and that the Maſter ſhould pay ſome Intereſt. On this, he applied to my Lord Chancellor, to diſcharge this Order. My Lord, upon that Occaſion, ſaid, the Maſter was not to blame, and that the then Maſters were a Set of Maſters of as great Probity, Ability, and Fortune, as ever had been before; and that his Lordſhip had had the Satisfaction of having put in moſt of them himſelf. I can't ſay that theſe were the very Words, but it was to this Effect.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When, at what Time was this?

Mr. Waller. This Declaration was made the 21ſt of January, 1723.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where was it?

Mr. Waller. In Court, at my Lord's Houſe in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, where he uſually ſat.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there at that time any Vacancy of any Maſter's Office; and how long did that Vacancy happen before?

Mr. Waller. Mr. Fellowes died either the Day before, or the Day but one before.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any Obſervations made at that Time of any Perſon in Court that took notice of what was ſaid?

Mr. Waller. One of the Counſel took Notice of ſomebody taking Notes, and ſaid he believed it would be in the Amſterdam Gazette in a ſhort Time; or to that Purpoſe. My Lord Chancellor asked who he was?

E. of Macclef. I deſire he may tell your Lordſhips, when Application was made to me by way of Complaint of it, what it was I ſaid at that Time?

Mr. Waller. I don't remember.

E. of Macclef. Pray recollect your ſelf, if I did not ſay it was right, and they had a Right to take Notes there.

Mr. Waller. I don't remember that you did.

E. of Macclef. Did I make no Anſwer?

Mr. Waller. Not as I remember.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether he kept any Notes or Memorandum of the Words that were then ſaid?

Mr. Waller. No, my Lords.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How does he then come to remember the very Words?

Mr. Waller. Since my Lord Macclesfield's Counſel will have it, I muſt acquaint your Lordſhips, that it ſtruck me with ſo much Aſtoniſhment to hear ſuch a Declaration made on the Maſters, which moſt People thought they did not deſerve, that indeed I could not but remember it, and have remembred it ever ſince.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We have ſeveral other Perſons who were preſent at this Time, when this Declaration was made; but we apprehend it was ſo publick, ſo notorious, and has been ſo diſtinctly proved by a Perſon preſent, that it will be unneceſſary to call further Evidence to it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We beg leave to trouble your Lordſhips as to one Circumſtance, to aſcertain the Death of Mr. Fellowes: We have one of Mr. Fellowes's Servants here.

Edward Ange ſworn.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We deſire he may be ask'd, whether he was a Servant to Mr. Fellowes?

Mr. Ange. I was a Clerk in Mr. Fellowes's Office, at the Time of his Death, and many Years before.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When did he die, what Day?

Mr. Ange. Upon the 19th of January, 1723.

Mr. Sol. Gen. It was the 21ſt that the Declaration was made, ſo that it ſeems that it was neceſſary; and ſuch a Declaration was wanting at that Time to keep up the Price of the Office.

Mr. Lightboun called.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We deſire Mr. Lightboun may be ask'd, whether he gave any Intimation to the Earl of Macclesfield, that the Circumſtances of ſome of the Maſters were ſuſpicious, before the 21ſt of January was twelve-month?

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire Mr. Lightboun would give your Lordſhips an Account what Diſcourſe he had concerning the Maſters with the Earl of Macclesfield.

Mr. Lightboun. I can't ſay I acquainted him with my ſuſpecting any of the Maſters by Name, being deficient, but I told him in Converſation, that as a Deficiency had happened in Mr. Dormer's Office, the like Accident might happen in others; and that it might be proper for his Lordſhip to take ſome meaſures to prevent the like for the future, if poſſible.

Mr. Lutwyche. In the Year 1723. Whether had you any Diſcourſe with my Lord Chancellor relating to the Circumſtances of any of the Maſters, or about any Propoſals of Security to be given by them?

Mr. Lightboun. In the Year 1723. I had ſome Converſation with my Lord upon that Subject, and it was upon the Occaſion of my Lord's ſending for me to know why I had not complied with a Propoſal of the Maſters, to pay 500 l. towards making good Mr. Dormer's Deficiency. I ask'd, whether it was his Lordſhip's Propoſal, or whether it was a Propoſal from ſome of the Maſters. My Lord ſaid, it was mention'd by the Maſters, and he approv'd of it; and as the reſt had complied, he hoped I would.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You need not now give a particular Account of this; this will be proper on another Occaſion; that I deſire to ask you now, is only in general, whether before the 21ſt of January 1723. you had any Converſation with my Lord about the Deficiency of the Maſters, and that there was Reaſon to ſuſpect a Deficiency in ſome of the Maſters?

Mr. Lightboun. I did not mention any particular Perſon, but only that an Accident had lately happen'd, and as it had happen'd, it might happen again; but I was far from mentioning any Maſter by Name, for I might thereby have made my ſelf liable to an Action.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We don't deſire to ask him whether he mention'd any particular Maſter, but only in general, whether he did not ſay he had Grounds to ſuſpect ſome of them? The Queſtion is in general.

Mr. Com. Serj. The Queſtion was firſt ask'd in general, but the Anſwer not coming out to their Satisfaction, they now apply it to a particular Fact, to which the Anſwer required is only Yea and No. This we apprehend not to be altogether ſo regular, we therefore deſire the Queſtion may be asked in other Terms.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, I will ask the Queſtion in general, whether he gave any Intimation in general, that there might be a Suſpicion of the Maſters?

Mr. Lightboun. I did in general acquaint my Lord, as this Accident had happen'd, I did not know how ſoon it might happen again. The Year 1720. had made great Havock, and I did not know what Effect it might have had amongſt us.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire Mr. Lightboun may be ask'd, whether he can recollect that he had any Diſcourſe with my Lord Macclesfield to that Effect at any other Time before January 1723.

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, I can't confine my ſelf to a particular Time. I have had the Honour of many Converſations with my Lord Macclesfield on this Subject, and what paſſed at one particular Time

Time more than another, I can't remember I have often had the Honour to hear his Lordſhip mentioning the Methods which he thought of, to prevent it, and to propoſe ſuch Methods as I thought of, but I can't tell all the particular Times.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether from the Converſation which paſs'd between the Earl of Macclesfield and himſelf, it appear'd to him, that the Earl had any Suſpicion of a Want of Subſtance in the Maſters?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lord, when I mention'd it, ſeemed unwilling to think ſo. He ſaid he hoped not; he hoped there was no manner of Danger, they were all recommended to him for Men of Fortunes, or to that Effect. Latterly, this laſt Year, when my Lord was talking of this Matter, he ſeemed to think there was a Neceſſity that there ſhould be an enquiry into this Affair: and when the Maſters were ordered to bring in their own Accompts, I remember I told my Lord I queſtioned if they were able to do it. My Lord ſaid he hoped it, and wiſh'd it.

E. of Abington. If Mr. Lightboun be left to his own Diſcretion, to relate without Interruption whatever he can recollect that paſſed between him and Lord Macclesfield before January 1723. when this Declaration was made in Court, it may give your Lordſhips a fuller Light and Satisfaction.

Mr. Lightboun. I don't remember to have had any particular Converſation about the Abilities of the Maſters, farther then I have mentioned to your Lordſhips. I have told you that I did give ſome Hints in a doubtful Manner, that I was diſſatisfied; but it would very ill have become me to have mentioned particular People whom I was doubtful of.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we proceed now to examine ſome Witneſſes upon the Article relating to the Maſters coming in, and in what manner the Money was paid upon their Admiſſion, either on a Surrender, or Death of a former Maſter; and out of what Fund that Money was paid. We beg leave to call Mr. Kinaſton.

Mr. Kinaſton called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg leave he may be ask'd, in relation to his Treaty with Mr. Rogers, when he came into his Office? and in what Manner the Money paid for the Office was raiſed?

Mr. Kinaſton. It was in May 1721.

Mr. Com. Serj. Before Mr. Kinaſton anſwers to this, we hope the Managers ſhall intimate to your Lordſhips, that they have Evidence to apply this to the Lord who now ſtands accuſed; otherwiſe a bare Diſcourſe between Mr. Rogers and Mr. Kinaſton, cannot affect the Earl of Macclesfield.

Mr. Lutwyche. I apprehend this Interruption is very unneceſſary, It is the firſt part of the Article we are going to prove, that it was a Practice among the Maſters in Chancery, to pay the Money for their Places out of the Suitors Money; and that though the Chancellor had good reaſon to ſuſpect or know this, yet he applied no Remedy or Redreſs, but let it go on for his own Benefit: Therefore we muſt begin with the firſt part of the Article. They are not to examine and ask the Managers, whether they have any Proof of the latter part of the Article; we are beginning with the firſt part of the Article, and then ſhall bring it home to the noble Lord.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We ſhall prove the whole, that there was ſuch a Practice, and that it is reaſonable to think the noble Lord knew it, or had reaſon to ſuſpect it, and did not prevent it. We muſt firſt begin with the Practice.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire he may give your Lordſhips an Account of the Methods taken at the time he came into the Office, of ſelling and paying for thoſe Offices, and in what Manner the Agreement for his Office was tranſacted?

Mr. Kinaſton. My Lords, I treated with Mr. Rogers for the Sale of his Place in May 1721. I did underſtand them, and had heard before, that the Method was, that they retained ſo much of the Money belonging to the Office for their Places; and that ſuch had been the Practice. I did agree with him, and entered into Articles to pay him 6000 l. for his Place. I went for ſome time into the Country, and when I was there, he wrote to me, and told me that he deſigned to reſign the Place on the 9th of Auguſt. I did come up to Town, and on the 9th of Auguſt I gave him a Bond for 6000 l. Then I went with him to my Lord Macclesfield, and was ſworn in Maſter. There was a general Order for him to deliver over the Effects and Securities to me; after this, he delivered up the Bond which I had given him, and retain'd ſo much Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court, as amounted to 6000 l. He paid me nine Pounds, and delivered me up my Bond, and I gave him a Receipt for 6009 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire to know what was paid for his Admiſſion?

Mr. Kinaſton. 1500 Guineas were paid to Mr. Cottingham by Mr. Baily.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. How was it repaid?

Mr. Kinaſton. In February afterwards, I ſtated an Account with the Perſon that was my Caſh-Keeper and kept my Money, in relation to the Money receiv'd and paid, and he charged me with the 1575 l. and deducted it out of the Money of the Suitors which he had received.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, how much Caſh, what Sum of Money, came to his Hands from Mr. Rogers?

Mr. Kinaſton. Something above 20000 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether when theſe Effects were by the Order of Transfer delivered from Mr. Rogers to him, there was any Perſon preſent on behalf of my Lord Macclesfield, to ſee them delivered over?

Mr. Kinaſton. No.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was there any Account demanded of him afterwards, either by my Lord Chancellor or his Agent, of the Quantum of the Effects or Caſh?

Mr. Kinaſton. I don't remember there ever was.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I beg leave to ask, whether at that Time he had Money enough of his own to pay Mr. Rogers 6000 l. for his Place, and 1500 Guineas to my Lord Macclesfield for his Admiſſion?

Mr. Kinaſton. Yes, I believe I had more Money at that time, but it was out upon Security; I was worth more.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What was his Inducement to come into this Office?

Mr.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Or, I would ask it in other Words, whether the eaſineſs of his paying for his Place was not one Thing that induc'd him to Purchaſe?

Mr. Kinaſton. Yes, I believe it was one Inducement to me to purchaſe the Place.

Sir Wm. Strickland. I beg leave to ask another Queſtion. Mr. Kinaſton ſays he had more Money of his own at that Time, but I deſire to know, whether he could have paid 7575 l. which he gave for his Office, unleſs he had paid it out of the Suitors Money?

Mr. Kinaſton. No, I could not have paid the whole.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. If the Gentlemen have done, I deſire he may be asked, what Money he had of his own at that Time, either in Caſh, or in his Bankers Hands, or in Security?

Mr. Kinaſton. I really cannot tell, I believe I might have between 2 and 3000 l.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How much can you take upon you to ſay you had?

Mr. Kinaſton. Really I cannot tell.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Speak to the neareſt you can.

Mr. Kinaſton. I believe I had about 2000 l. very near three in Money and Effects.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. What other Eſtate had you? Had you any real Eſtate?

Mr. Kinaſton. I had an Eſtate ſettled upon me at my Marriage, no other Eſtate.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire you to give an Account, whether you had any other perſonal Eſtate?

Mr. Kinaſton. No, I do not remember I had, except you reckon Timber ſuch.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire, my Lords, he may be asked, what the annual value of his real Eſtate was?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I ſubmit, whether he be obliged to tell his whole Circumſtances?

Mr. Kinaſton. I am very willing to tell, it was about 400 l. a Year.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether he had not his Eſtate without Impeachment of Waſt?

Mr. Kinaſton. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Of what Value might the Timber be?

Mr. Kinaſton. I was once bid 2500 l. for it, but now they know I have an occaſion to ſell, they will not give me ſo much.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I beg leave he may be asked, whether at that Time his Father was living?

Mr. Kinaſton. Yes, he was at the Time of my purchaſing the Place.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. As the Caſh was above 20000 l. of what Value were the Securities?

Mr. Kinaſton. Really I cannot tell, I have given in an Account of the Effects.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. About what Sum?

Mr. Kinaſton. I have given it in in my Accounts what it was.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. To what Sum doth the whole both in Caſh and Securities amount?

Mr. Kinaſton. I believe under 50,000 l. about 46000 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The Securities as well as the Caſh?

Mr. Kinaſton. I mean the Securites and the Caſh together.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Upon this Evidence, we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether the Timber upon his Eſtate was a proper Security for 50,000 l. to be put into his Hands.

E. of Macclef. He now repreſents his Eſtate to be 400 l. a Year. How was it reputed?

Mr. Kinaſton. I believe about 500 l. per Annum.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to ask him, whether if he had felled every ſtick of Timber on his Eſtate, that and his perſonal Eſtate would have paid what he was to give for his Maſter's Place?

Mr. Kinaſton. No, it would not.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We make Uſe of this as a Proof of the former Article.

Mr. Thomas Bennet called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire he may be asked in what manner the Transfer of his Office was tranſacted, and how the Money was paid for his Maſters Place?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lords, When I treated with Mr. Hiccocks about the Surrender of his Office, one of the firſt Things he told me was, that I need raiſe no Money to come into this Office, for whatever Money we agreed for, ſhould be deducted out of the Money to be paid over to me, which I underſtood to be the Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What was done in purſuance of this?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. This encouraged me to go on and proceed, in order to come into this Office, I ſuppoſed this to be the Practice, elſe I had not gone in.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether that was generally reputed to be the Practice?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I own I thought ſo. I was a younger Brother, and had not Money enough of my own to come into that Office.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg leave, that he may inform your Lordſhips how much he was to pay, and how it was raiſed and paid?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. The Sum I agreed to pay Mr. Hiccocks was 7500 l. and the Sum to my Lord Chancellor was 1500 Guineas, which is 9075 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We hope that he ſhall inform your Lordſhips how it was raiſed and paid.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. As to the 1500 Guineas, I acquainted your Lordſhips I borrowed it of my Brother, and the next Day returned it him again out of the Money I received of Mr. Hiccocks. As ſoon as I was admitted, I went to Mr. Hiccocks, and demanded of him the Suitors Effects. He paid me 1500 l. and told me I muſt give a Receipt for 9000 l. I told him, it was hard to have no more Money paid me, when he told me there was much more Caſh in the Office, and that I had given my Lord Macclesfield more than he had offered to pay me: He ſaid, he ſhould pay me more afterwards, but he inſiſted on my taking of this now, ſo I took the 1500 l. and gave him a Receipt for 9000 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether upon any Occaſion he had any Diſcourſe with the Earl of Macclesfield relating to the method of his coming in, or about the re-payment of the 1500 Guineas he paid him.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. In order to give an account of this, I muſt acquaint your Lordſhips of the occaſion of my waiting on his Lordſhip. Mr. Holford told me, that my Lord Chancellor had ſent to him, and deſired that he or my Brother John Bennet would endeavour to accommodate matters between Mr. Hiccocks and my ſelf, on occaſion of the Deficiency of my Accounts. Mr. Holford ſaid he did not care to go, but my Brother did go to Mr. Hiccocks. He would do nothing, no Accommodation could be made; but my Brother told me that my Lord Chancellor would pay back to me the 1500 Guineas which he had received, ſo the matter with Mr. Hiccocks might be accommodated.

Mr. Serj.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was this?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. It was about the time of our giving in our Accompts.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was it before Chriſtmas, or after?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. It was before Chriſtmas laſt, in December, I think about the 7th of December. Upon that I asked my Brother, whether I might depend upon it, that my Lord Chancellor would pay back the 1500 Guineas? And he ſaid, Yes, he had it from his Lordſhip; and he did aſſure me I might depend upon it; but he ſaid nothing could be done with Mr. Hiccocks. Then I deſired them to acquaint my Lord with it; they both declined it, and deſired I would go my ſelf upon this Occaſion. I went, and I told my Lord, I was come to wait upon his Lordſhip to thank him for the kind Offer he had made to my Brother of returning the 1500 Guineas, and I wiſhed the ſame could be ſaid of Mr. Hiccocks, and I could prevail with him; but nothing could be done: I came to return his Lordſhip thanks; and I thought I ſhould have received the Money then. My Lord asked me to ſit down, and then told me if he had known I had been to give ſo great a Sum of Money for the Office, he would not have admitted me. I told him I did give ſo great a Sum, but immediately as ſoon as I was admitted, I enſured my Life to the Value of 8000 l. which coſt me 400 l. ſo that if I had died, no harm would have come to the Suitors. My Lord ſaid, it was very honourably done. Soon after that, he ſaid, he was very ſorry to ſee the Items that were put into my Accompt and Mr. Kinaſton's in Relation to Sums in the Hands of an honourable Perſon; for, ſays he, that hath diſcovered the Method of purchaſing theſe Offices, that the Money is deducted out of the Suitors Money, which, ſaid he, I have always taken pains to deny, when ever I have been asked the Queſtion.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg Leave now to ask him, how much the whole of the Caſh, and Securities transferred from Mr. Hiccocks to him, amounted to?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I believe near 100,000 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I apprehend he ſaid before, he was a younger Brother, and had but little Fortune of his own; I deſire he may be asked whether any Care was taken by my Lord Macclesfield as to the transferring the Effects of the Suitors in Mr. Hiccocks Hands over to him? and whether any Perſon was employed by my Lord to ſee the Effects transferred over?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether there was any other Security for this great Sum of Money depoſited in his Hands, beſides what was made by this Inſurance on his Life?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, my Lords, I know of no other Security. That was a voluntary Act of my own, and I paid for it.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, Mr. Bennet ſays, he had ſome reaſon to hope that the 1500 Guineas would be given him back again; I deſire he may be asked whether there was any ſubſequent Overture about paying the 1500 Guineas back again?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lord Chancellor diſmiſſed me at that time, and told me, I ſhould not know by what means, or by what methods I ſhould receive the Money, or by whoſe Hands; but his Lordſhip would take Care that one way or other I ſhould receive it: He would not ſay how, becauſe I might be called upon to anſwer what Diſcourſe paſſed between his Lordſhip and me in another place.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was there any thing done upon that?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Hearing nothing from my Lord Chancellor for a Fortnight after, I went to his Secretary, Mr. Dixon, and told him that I had uſed ſuch Expreſſions in my Accompt, that if the Money was not produced, it would oblige me to name my Lord Chancellor; and I deſired him to acquaint my Lord that I could not pay this Money, and that I muſt diſcover it in a Day or two. This was Sunday Night: The ſame Night Mr. Dixon returned from my Lord, and told me, that if Mr. Holford would be preſent the next morning at the payment of the Money at Mr. Kinaſton's Chambers, that Mr. Kinaſton and my ſelf ſhould receive it. We were there the next day. Mr. Dixon came, but brought no Money, ſaid my Lord expected ſome Indempnification. We ſaid, as to an Indempnification we could give none. He ſaid he would go to my Lord. I was in hopes he would have brought the Money; but when he came back, he ſaid it was an Holyday, and no Money could be had, and deſired we would go to the Judges, and deſire two or three days time to produce this Money. I told him we could not do it, for that very Night the Report was to be laid before the King and Council. He then returned again to my Lord Chancellor, as he told us, and when he came back, he ſaid my Lord Chancellor was gone out. Upon that we gave in my Lord Chancellor's Name to the Judges, and the Gentlemen of the Bank, and they gave it in to the Council, as I am informed.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, We deſire he may anſwer this Queſtion, Whether it was explained what that Indempnification was, which was expected, and in what manner it was to be?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lords, Mr. Dixon explained it thus,——

E. of Macclesfield. I hope whatever Mr. Dixon ſaid, ſhall not affect me; but that they will produce him: He is able to ſpeak for himſelf.

Mr. Lutwyche. Then I only deſire he may be asked, what Officer Mr. Dixon was under my Lord Chancellor?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Mr. Dixon was my Lord's Secretary.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether at that time that you had the Diſcourſe with my Lord Macclesfield, you mentioned or ſaid any thing of Mr. Dixon's having come to you, in my Lord Macclesfield name?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, My Lords, that was before Mr. Dixon's coming to me.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did you take Notice at any time to my Lord Macclesfield of Mr. Dixon's coming to you?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, I never ſpoke to my Lord Chancellor afterwards. This was the 27th of December, and it was the 7th of December that I waited upon my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We think it appears that Mr. Dixon was an Agent of my Lord Macclesfield's: I deſire to know what the Nature of the Propoſal of Indempnification was, that he made?

E. of Macclesfield. I can't think Mr. Serjeant is in earneſt. Have they proved that he was employed by me? I have heard no proof of it, only Mr. Serjeant hath ſaid it. Mr. Dixon himſelf is the proper Perſon to give an Account of what he told them from me. If they do inſiſt upon it, I muſt beg your Lordſhips Judgment.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If it is inſiſted upon by the Noble Lord, to diſavow the Proceedings of his own Agent, we will wave it.

E. of Macclesfield. I neither avow nor diſavow, but I object to the Evidence of this Gentleman about the Diſcourſe of what Mr. Dixon ſaid, who is living, and can ſpeak for himſelf.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If the Noble Lord will ask him any thing, he may, we have done.

E. of Macclesfield. I beg leave that Mr. Bennet may be asked two or three Queſtions: He has indeed given Evidence which greatly ſurprizes me. In the firſt place I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips, whether, when he was with me, he did not tell me that if Mr. Hiccocks would pay 2000 l. he would make good the whole Money?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, I did not ſay ſo; I could not make good the whole Money, or any thing like it. I ſaid that ſuch a Report had been ſpread, that I propoſed, that if Mr. Hiccocks would pay me 2000 l. I would anſwer the reſt; but I was not able.

E. of Macclesfield. I would be glad to know how he came to tell me of a Report of his own Act: Was it a Report without any Foundation?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I went to Mr. Hiccocks, and told him I wanted 6000 l. but he ſaid if 2000 l. would do, he believ'd he could lend me that. Lend it me, ſaid I; if you give me 2000 l. it is ſomething. And this was the Foundation of this Report.

E. of Macclesfield. I cannot give Evidence my ſelf to diſprove him in this; and therefore I deſire to know whether he has ſaid to any other Perſons, that if Mr. Hiccocks would pay him two thouſand, or three thouſand Pounds, or thereabouts, he would pay the reſt?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I might ſay, I would endeavour to raiſe the reſt; but I never ſaid I would pay the whole, for I knew I was not able.

E. of Macclesfield. Mr. Bennet underſtands my Queſtion, to which he hath given no Anſwer. My Queſtion is, Whether he hath not told ſome other People, that in Caſe Mr. Hiccocks would pay 2 or 3000 l. he would pay all the reſt?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, my Lords, I never told any Body that I would pay the reſt; but I believe I might ſay, if Mr. Hiccocks would give me 2 or 3000*l.* I would ſtand the Hazard; for I did not expect that all the Money ſhould be taken out of my Hand.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire he may be asked, whether at that time he was with me, I did not ask him, with what Conſcience and Honeſty he could buy a Place, when he had not Money to pay for it? or whether it was not in anſwer to that, that he told me that he had inſured his Life?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lord did ſay ſo to me. I anſwered, I had not Money; that I had not bought the Place, had it not been for the Caſh of the Suitors; and that I had ſince ſecured 8000 l. on my Life, in order to ſecure the Suitors.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know what viſible Eſtate the Gentleman then had, and of what yearly Value?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lords, when I came into the Office, I believe I had about 250*l.* a Year, or thereabouts.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know whether he was married before?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I was.

E. of Macclesfield. What Fortune had you with your Wife?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. The Fortune I had with my Wife, was in the Whole between 2 and 3000 l. part of it was an Houſe.

E. of Macclesfield. What was the Value of that Houſe?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I had not let it then, but ſince my coming into the Office I have let it for 90 l a Year.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know if he did not keep his Coach and Equipage at that time?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I did ſet up my Coach in the unfortunate Year 1720. I was once worth 20,000 Pounds, but loſt it all, and became much indebted; the Eſtate I had of my own was mortgaged for more than it was worth.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether he was married in the Year, 1720?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. No, I was not.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know what Eſtate he hath given into the Court of Chancery?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. That Accompt lies upon the Table.

E. of Macclesfield. What yearly Value is that?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. About 900 l. per Annum; part of it is ſettled, the reſt mortgaged, and an Annuity charged on it more than it is worth.

E. of Macclesfield. Has any Eſtate been purchaſed with your Money, or Money which came from you, ſince you was a Maſter?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Part of that given in was ſo, 68 l. per Annum, and 40 l. per Annum.

E. of Macclesfield. Has any other Eſtate been purchaſed with your Money, or Money which came from you, ſince you was Maſter?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. None, but what I have given in. I have given in every Shilling.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he was not at the Time of his becoming Maſter in Chancery, in Poſſeſſion of the Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, I was.

Mr. Com. Serj. Now, my Lords, it will be very proper to ask him what that was ſold for, that the Value of his Eſtate may be known.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. That may affect me, and my Succeſſor.

Mr. Lutwyche. I don't know whether we need put you in mind, that the late Act of Parliament only indempnifies the Maſters, but there is none to indempnify the Clerk of the Cuſtodies.

Mr. Com. Serj. Which way it will affect Mr. Bennet I don't know. I apprehend no Action can lye againſt him for the Money he received, nor any criminal Proſecution or Information. But that I may not miſpend your Lordſhips time; I deſire Mr. Bennet may inform your Lordſhips of the yearly Value of the Place.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. It is about 250 l. a Year.

E. of Macclesfield. A Patent for Life?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, my Lords.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. How much hath it been ſold for?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I can't tell what it hath been ſold for: It may have been once ſold for about 1200 l.

Mr. Serj.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. At that time when you ſurrendered, what might it have been ſold for?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I beg leave to ſubmit, whether I am obliged to anſwer that Queſtion.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. If it was not ſaleable by Law, it was not worth a Farthing. I beg leave to put your Lordſhips in mind, that Mr. Bennet was excus'd Yeſterday from anſwering a Queſtion of the ſame Nature: The Councel hope that this Day, being a new Day, they may have Liberty to ask the ſame Queſtion over again.

Mr. Com. Serj. There was another Ingredient in your Lordſhips Reſolution Yeſterday. I hope it is no Injury to him to anſwer how much he hath known it to be ſold for; without mentioning by whom.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We hope Mr. Bennet will anſwer the Queſtion, what is the moſt he hath known it to be ſold for?

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I object to his anſwering that Queſtion, becauſe if he did ſell it himſelf, that might be the greateſt Sum that he hath known to be given for it, and that will ſubject him to a Penalty.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We don't ask who gave it, or who received it; but what is the greateſt Price he hath known that Office to be ſold for?

E. of Macclesfield. He ſays he hath known it to be ſold for 1200 l. I deſire he may be asked whether he hath not known that it hath been ſold for more?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I believe it hath been ſold for more.

E. of Macclesfield. And how much more?

Mr. Weſt. This Queſtion is an indirect way to come at that Queſtion that was denied them Yeſterday.

Sir Will. Strickland. My Lords, with humble Submiſſion, the Queſtion asked by the Noble Lord, tends directly to make Mr. Bennet tell what he ſold his own Office for; for if his own Office was ſold, it is probable that he ſold it for the greateſt Price; and to tell that, is to make him ſay what he ſold his own Office for.

Mr. Lutwyche. By this Method your Lordſhips Reſolution of Yeſterday will be evaded. We took it then, that the Witneſs was not obliged to diſcover what he ſold the Office for. Now they are asking what is the greateſt Price he knew the Office ſold for? Then the next Queſtion may be, to whom was the Office ſold, and by whom was it ſold? Therefore we muſt humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that it is not a Queſtion to be asked.

Mr. Com. Serj. To object to a Queſtion becauſe another may follow, is odd arguing. When ſuch a Queſtion is made, it will be then time enough to oppoſe it: Therefore I hope that we ſhall go on.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I apprehend this Queſtion is proper, and the Anſwer to it is neceſſary.

Lord Lechmere. Your Lordſhips will obſerve ſome Rules in your Proceedings. An Objection hath been made: An Anſwer hath been given: Both Sides inſiſt upon your Lordſhips Judgment: That being done, they muſt withdraw. Therefore I deſire they may withdraw.

E. of Macclesfield. The Reply is not yet made; ſomething has been ſaid by the Gentlemen who are Managers by way of Objection to the Queſtion that was propoſed, which, if they inſiſt upon, I deſire my Councel who are to reply, may be heard before they withdraw.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. The Managers for the Houſe of Commons have been pleaſed to examine into the Circumſtances of Mr. Bennet, at the time he was admitted Maſter, in order to ſhew that he was then not of Subſtance fit to be intruſted with ſo great a Sum of Money. We are then in Duty obliged to examine him as to that Subſtance, and the Value of his Effects. He hath told your Lordſhips what Eſtate he hath in Land; we are now to examine him as to his Perſonal Eſtate: He hath told us he had an Office, the Clerk of the Cuſtodies; that he hath parted with it; the Money ariſing by that Office muſt be reckoned as part of his Perſonal Eſtate. To come at the Value of the Office, we do not ask him any Queſtion that makes him liable to a Penalty; but ſuch a Queſtion, where the Anſwer to it may be with Safety; and that is, what is the greateſt Sum he hath known to have been given for the Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies? He may anſwer this without involving himſelf in any Difficulties, for it is not asked what he himſelf hath ſold that Office for? No Anſwer to this general Queſtion can affect him with any ill Conſequence.

Dr. Sayer. I humbly apprehend this is no way irregular. We are inquiring about his Effects; it is owned he had the Clerk of the Cuſtodies, therefore that muſt be a part of his Perſonal Eſtate: The Anſwer to our Queſtion can't any way involve him in Danger, or ſubject him to any Penalty; becauſe it doth not neceſſarily follow that he ſold his Place at the greateſt Price that he ever knew it ſold for. We ſubmit it, whether it is not a Queſtion fair with regard to the Witneſs, and proper to be put to him.

Mr. Robins. We agree that where he may ſubject himſelf to a Loſs, there is no forcing him to anſwer; no Perſon is bound to accuſe himſelf. But this is only a Matter of Diſcovery what the Value of this Office is; the Anſwer cannot affect him; and therefore we hope we ſhall have an Anſwer.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I am ſurprized to hear it ſaid that this is not a Queſtion material for the Noble Earl's Defence: Surely it is as material for us to increaſe his Eſtate, as it is for them to diminiſh it. They have already examined into Particulars, to ſhew what ſmall Subſtance he was of, and what the Eſtate he had was mortgaged for: The proper Anſwer to be given to that, as far as it will go, will be to ſhew that he had other Eſtate and Effects, and we are not able to ſhew that without examining him. I humbly ſubmit it therefore that we are as proper to go into that Evidence, as they were; it is equally material; and as they have examined to it on behalf of the Commons, we are intitled to examine to it likewiſe on behalf of the Noble Earl.

E. of Macclesfield. I apprehend the Objection is, That he is not to be asked a Queſtion, which if he anſwers he will charge himſelf with a Crime or Penalty. Whatever Anſwer he makes to this Queſtion cannot charge him: Let him Anſwer and ſay that he hath known this Place ſold for 1000, 1500, or 2000 l. can that be given in Evidence ſo as to affect him? Therefore the Queſtion to Day is not the ſame as was asked Yeſterday: It was then asked, what he had received for his Place? and if he had had anſwered and ſaid what he had received, it would have been a Confeſſion, which would have convicted him: But if the Anſwer be, That he knows it was told for ſuch a Price, and that is given in Evidence, by that Anſwer it doth not appear that he ſold it: Therefore upon that I humbly ſubmit to your Lordſhips, and we are ready to withdraw.

Mr. Serj Pengelly. This is by a Side-wind to know your Lordſhips Opinion upon the 9th Article.

E. of Macclesfield. I beg leave to interrupt that worthy Gentleman. I agree that the Commons that bring in the Charge, have a right to Reply; but with Submiſſion this is an Objection ariſing from my Councel, and the Reply belongs to them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we apprehend the Objection ariſes from the Managers, and therefore the Reply belongs to them. The Managers made the Objection, therefore we beg Leave to obſerve, that this is in Conſequence to deſire your Lordſhips Judgment upon the 9th Article, Whether the Office of the Clerk of the Cuſtodies be ſaleable by Law, or no? If he is obliged to anſwer this Queſtion, it is upon a ſuppoſition that the Tranſaction is lawful: Therefore in an Affair of this Nature, there can be no other View but to get an Opinion upon this Article. My Lords, we apprehend this Proceeding is in Conſequence the ſame as if a Queſtion was propoſed to your Lordſhips, whether my Lord Macclesfield could by Law ſell the Place of Clerk of the Cuſtodies?

Mr. Lutwchye. My Lords, I muſt beg leave to mention this to your Lordſhips. When it is conſidered upon what Foundation this Queſtion is asked, and what it doth mean, it can be only to elude your Lordſhips Reſolution Yeſterday, and to make that of no Effect. My Lords, there ſhould be always the greateſt Candour uſed before your Lordſhips, that no Tricks or Methods ſhould be made uſe of to ask that which ſhould not be asked. Now, my Lords, what is the Queſtion they are examining to, and the Uſe to be made of it? Here is a Perſon that is alledged to be of mean Ability, and the Queſtion is, What Subſtance and Eſtate he hath? and they would reckon into Part of his Eſtate an Office not ſaleable by Law, and ask him, what that Office is worth? From whence the Inference muſt be, that he ſold it.

E. of Macclesfield. That is not the Queſtion, what it is worth; but a particular Fact, what is the moſt that it hath been ſold for?

Mr. Lutwyche. What doth that tend to? The Queſtion is, What Eſtate this Gentleman had that could enable him to pay this Money for this Office? They have examined him about his own Eſtate, and his Wife's Eſtate, but then there is another Part of his Eſtate; which was this Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies. What is that? It is that very thing which we ſay it is unlawful to ſell. Therefore we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips as no way material to the Defence of the Lord. We hope your Lordſhips will not admit that to be done by an indirect Method, which would not be admitted to be done by a direct one.

Ordered to withdraw. Which was accordingly done; and all Parties concerned being after ſome time call'd in again, ——

The Lord Chief Juſtice King declared to them, That it was the Order and Judgment of the Lords, that the ſaid Queſtion was not to be asked.

Mr. Plummer. I would ask Mr. Tho. Bennet one Queſtion, Whether every thing he had in the World at the Time of his Purchaſe of the Maſterſhip, was worth the Money he gave for it?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. All I had in the World was not worth it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, Mr. Bennet ſays he mortgaged his Eſtate for more than it was worth; I deſire he may be asked whether he knew at that time, that is was not worth ſo much as it was mortgaged for?

Lords. No, No.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I beg leave to ask this Queſtion, and I hope it will be very proper, that is, I deſire to ask Mr. Bennet, as he hath given an account of a Converſation with my Lord Macclesfield; I deſire to know if my Lord Macclesfield at the time of his Admiſſion into his Office, did ask him what he was worth?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lord Macclesfield never asked me any Queſtions in Relation to my Circumſtances, or any thing like it.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether I had any notice of his Loſſes by the South-Sea?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Not that I know of: I don't know that my Lord Chancellor had any Notice of it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, if the Councel have done, we ſhall not give your Lordſhips any farther Trouble on theſe two Articles: Both of them are as clearly and as fully proved and ſubſtantiated as it is poſſible. It comes out now upon the Examination, that, tho' ſeveral Maſters were intruſted with 40, 50, or 80,000 l. they were not of any competent Subſtance, not really worth what they paid for their particular Places. As to the manner of their paying for their Places, if we have not given a direct Evidence that his Lordſhip knew it, yet the Practice and Notoriety of the Fact being prov'd, and that it was thus generally underſtood, is a reaſonable Evidence in it ſelf, and by the Notice the Lord took of it himſelf by the ſeveral Queſtions he hath asked, we think it is yet clearer. We humbly ſubmit whether upon this Evidence every part of theſe two Articles is not ſufficiently proved? We depend upon the Examination already taken, and will take up your Lordſhips Time no farther.

Then the Managers and the Councel were directed to withdraw; and the Lords adjourned to the next Morning at Ten a Clock in the Forenoon.

Saturday May 8*th*. The Third Day.

THE Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms for Silence; and another Proclamation, That all Perſons concerned were to take Notice, that Thomas Earl of Macclesfield now ſtood upon his Tryal, and they might come forth in order to make good the Charge.

Lord Ch. Juſt. King. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, you may proceed in your Evidence.

Mr.

Mr. Gybbon. My Lords, Your Lordſhips having already heard what has been offered in Support of the preceding Articles, I am commanded by the Commons to aſſiſt in maintaining the 13th and 14th Articles of their Impeachmen againſt the Earl of Macclesfield.

The Charge in theſe Articles is, That the Earl knowing Mr Dormer (one of the Maſters in Chancery) had diſpoſed of great part of the Suitors Money for his own private Advantage, by which there became and ſtill continues a Deficiency of at leaſt 25000 l. and that Mr. Dormer abſconded upon that Occaſion; That application was made to the Earl thereupon, who inſtead of taking proper Methods to compel Mr. Dormer to make Satisfaction to the Suitors (from an Apprehenſion that a publick Diſcovery of the ſaid Deficiency might leſſen the unjuſt Gain the Earl propoſed to himſelf, by ſelling and diſpoſing of the ſaid Offices) did endeavour by many indirect Practices to conceal from the Suitors of the Court the true State and Condition of the ſaid Office, and did falſly and deceitfully declare that Mr. Dormer was only gone to take the Air; that he would return in a little time, and all would be well. That Mr. Dormer having towards a Satisfaction to the Suitors of the Court, aſſigned to Mr. Edwards (who ſucceeded him in his Office of Maſter) a Debt of 24046 l. 4*s.* 0*d.* due from Mr. Wilſon (a Banker) to Mr. Dormer, to the intent the Money received on that Account ſhould be applied as the Court of Chancery ſhould direct, the Earl of Macclesfield, for the unlawful Purpoſes aforeſaid, without regard to the Intereſt of the ſaid Suitors, by Colour of his ſaid Office, did in an unwarrantable, clandeſtine, and unuſual Manner, authoriſe, direct and eſtabliſh a precarious and trifling Compoſition with the ſaid Wilſon, upon his paying 1463 l. 2*s.* 1*d.* and aſſigning 10,000 l. part of a Debt of 22,060 l. 12*s.* 5*d.* pretended to be due to the ſaid Wilſon from Edward Poulter, in Diſcharge of the ſaid Debt; and to that End, on Mr. Hiccocks's Report, then one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court, without any Attendance ordered or had thereupon, and without Notice to the ſaid Suitors, did by a private Order, not made in open Court, order Mr Edwards to accept the ſaid Compoſition in full Diſcharge of the ſaid Debt; which ſaid Poulter was a Perſon Inſolvent, and has ſince abſconded for Debt, and none, or very ſmall part of the ſaid 10,000 l. has been, or is ever likely to be received.

Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to obſerve, that the Earl is charged with the higheſt Breach of Truſt in relation to the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, and to have committed that Breach of Truſt for the moſt unjuſtifiable End.

The Crimes, my Lords, ſtated in theſe Articles, are in themſelves ſo heinous, they need no aggravation; and I think the noble Lord's Anſwer ſhews they are capable of no Excuſe.

He is pleaſed to ſay, "That Mr. Dormer being out of Reach, his Effects unknown, except the Stock, which could not be transferred without his Concurrence, and the Earl ſeeing no other way open to get any thing for the Suitors, and being made believe, if a Deficiency ſhould happen, the ſame ſhould be made up by other Maſters; did agree, that in Caſe Mr. Dormer would come over, and make a full Diſcovery of all his Effects, and aſſign the ſame for the benefit of the Suitors, the ſaid Earl would allow him his Liberty on that Condition, and not otherwiſe.

The noble Lord ſays, No other way was open to get any thing. Sure, my Lords, the granting of a Sequeſtration would have been one and the ſpeedieſt way to have found out and ſecured the Effects; but it might have been a way too open; for it muſt have publiſhed the Deficiency of the Office; whereas Mr. Dormer's coming home, and quietly reſigning, huſhed all Enquiry.

What the Earl means by being made to believe the Deficiency ſhould be made up, I am at a Loſs, my Lords, to know; made believe! how, or by whom! It does not appear the Maſters entred into any Contract to do it; and could his Lordſhip think any Diſcourſe between him and the Maſters (if ſuch there was) could be a ſufficient Security for the Suitors of the Court?

But ſuppoſe the Maſters had contracted to ſupply the Deficiency, I ſubmit to Your Lordſhips how far that Contract would have been juſtifiable; for how ſhould that Supply ariſe? If out of the Suitors Money in the Maſters Hands, that was only ſupplying one Deficiency by making another; and if it was to be out of their own Eſtates, that likewiſe, by leſſening the Subſtance of the Maſters, would diminiſh the Security of their own Suitors; And what, my Lords, could induce the Maſters to enter into ſuch a Contract? I can imagine nothing, but to conceal the Deficiency, in order to raiſe a Value on their own Places upon their Reſignations. I therefore ſubmit to your Lordſhips, whether the Earl's Anſwer is not an implyed Confeſſion of an Endeavour to conceal this Deficiency, in order to keep up the price of the Office? Your Lordſhips obſerve on what Condition the Earl ſays he permitted Mr. Dormer to come over. But I do not find the noble Lord alledges, that in order to gain the End propoſed, Mr. Dormer was examined on Interrogatories touching the Debts due to the Suitors of the Court, or to what Eſtate or Effects he had to anſwer the ſame: We can ſhew your Lordſhips there was no ſuch Examination. We ſhall prove, that Mr. Dormer did not give a ſatisfactory Account of his Ballance, and with great Difficulty was prevailed on to convey his Eſtate for the Benefit of the Suitors: But yet, my Lords, he continued to have his Liberty. How the Earl will account for thoſe Proceedings, I leave to your Lordſhips Conſideration: I can ſee no poſſible Account can be given but this, that an Examination on Interrogatories touching the Debts of the Suitors, and Mr. Dormer's Anſwer and Confinement, muſt have publiſhed the Deficiency of the Office. The Earl is pleaſed to ſay, "He did not "doubt but the whole Debt upon the ſaid "Fleetwood Dormer would be paid.

I preſume he did not doubt but it would be, becauſe he knew in Juſtice it ought to be paid; and ſince it is before your Lordſhips, I likewiſe do not doubt but it will be paid.

The noble Lord in his Anſwer is pleaſed to quote on ſome Occaſions the Example of his Predeceſſors; I wiſh, for the Sake of the unhappy Suitors, and for the Honour and Juſtice of the Court of Chancery, he had here followed the Steps of his Predeceſſors in the Caſe of Dr. Eddisbury.

" The noble Lord inſiſts, He does not remember any Application made by the Maſters for any Aſſiſtance of the Court, touching the Perſon or Effects of Mr. Dormer, but what he granted, as far as he thought tended to the Benefit of the Suitors.

We ſhall offer Proof to the contrary: But had that been ſo, was that, my Lords, ſufficient? Was the Earl to wait the ſetting of a Proſecution on Foot, 'till Application made by the Maſters? It was not probable many of them (who had bought at high Prices, and on Reſignations, were to make the moſt of their Places) would apply for the ſecuring the Perſon or Effects of Mr. Dormer, they would not willingly have had a Maſter impriſoned; the Diſcovery of a Deficiency in him would have made other Suitors apprehenſive that the ſame might have happened to them; for every one knew how freely thoſe Gentlemen trafficked in the fatal Year of 1720. The very Notion of a Deficiency would have put the Suitors on an Inquiry, and upon calling the Money out of the Maſters Hands. Could then the Earl expect they would intereſt themſelves much in an Examination of this Kind? But was it leſs his Duty to enquire and give all neceſſary Orders, and take all proper Precautions for the Suitors Safety, becauſe the Maſters neglected it? No, certainly, unleſs for the Reaſon aſſigned in the Article.

The Earl ſays, " He did never endeavour to " conceal the true State and Condition of the " Office from the Suitors, nor did any of them, " until very lately, apply to him to look into " the ſame.

He well knew, that many of them called for their Money, and were ordered their whole Demands, while Mr. Edwards had wherewithal to pay; but thoſe unhappy Suitors, who did not know of the Deficiency, and from ſuch Orders for the whole Money might well be perſuaded there was no Deficiency, and conſequently did not complain, have now, I fear, a melancholy Caſe. And with what Grace the Earl can inſiſt, that no Suitors ever did, or at leaſt till very lately, complain, I leave to your Lordſhips Conſideration.

The Earl is pleaſed to ſay, " He remembers " nothing of his uſing the Expreſſion charged " in the Article, either before or after he knew " of Mr. Dormer's abſconding.

I believe the noble Lord, on a little Recollection, will eaſier call to Mind what he ſaid on this Occaſion, than be able to give a juſtifiable Reaſon for it.

He is pleas'd to ſay in his Anſwer to the 14th Article, " He quitted all the Advantage of the " Diſpoſal of Mr. Dormer's Office.

The Gentlemen, who have ſpoke before me, have, I hope, ſufficiently made it appear to your Lordſhips, that there could be no ſuch legal or juſt Advantage. Where then is the Generoſity? A Sum of Money, which he ought not to have taken, is given up towards anſwering the Debt of the Court, for which I take it his Lordſhip himſelf is anſwerable.

He is pleaſed to ſay, " That after Mr. Dor- " mer's aſſigning Mr. Wilſon's Debt to Mr. Ed- " wards, the Earl believes Mr. Edwards uſed " great Endeavours to obtain Payment and Sa- " tisfaction of the ſaid Debt from Mr. Wilſon; " but finding all Endeavours fruitleſs, and that " Mr. Wilſon had ſtopped Payment, and was in no " Condition of paying his Creditors the whole " of their Debts, but had offered to come to a " Compoſition, and to pay them in Proportion " the utmoſt he was able Mr. Edwards there- " upon petitioned his Lordſhip.

What thoſe great Endeavours were, I am, my Lords, at a loſs to know; for I can't find there was any Commiſſion of Bankruptcy taken out againſt Wilſon (though that was adviſed and preſſed as a ſafe and neceſſary Method) no Suit in the Court of Chancery, or in any other Court commenced againſt him, to get in this Debt, or that he was ſo much as ſerved with any Proceſs about it. How then the Earl can ſay, that all Endeavours were found fruitleſs, I leave to your Lordſhips Conſideration.

He is pleaſed to ſay, " Mr. Hiccocks reported, " 'twas his Opinion the accepting the ſaid Com- " poſition would be for the Benefit of the Per- " ſons entitled to receive the ſame.

My Lords, It does not appear Mr. Hiccocks had looked much into Wilſon's Circumſtances, had examined the Particulars of his Books on Oath, had called the Creditors before him to enquire into the Juſtice of their Debts, or to know the Amount; but yet took upon him to apportion Part of Poulter's Debt, as a Compoſition for the Suitors of the Court, though it will appear that Wilſon paid ſeveral of his Creditors afterwards their full Demands.

Strange Proceeding ſure in an Affair of this Nature! for which I will not pretend to Account. But, my Lords, I cannot but obſerve that the two Maſters, who were employed to take Care on this important Occaſion, for the innocent unhappy Suitors, were very ſoon (pending the Affair) allowed to ſell their Places at exorbitant Prices. Mr. Rogers, Auguſt 1721. for 6,000 l. and Mr. Hiccocks, June 1723. for 7,500 l. and which very Sums now remain a Debt to the Suitors of the reſpective Offices. Your Lordſhips have already heard what was demanded and paid on thoſe Reſignations.

The Earl is pleaſed to ſay, " That on Mr. Ed- " wards's ſecond Petition with Mr. Hiccock's Re- " port annexed (in which Mr. Edwards ex- " preſly prayed, that he might be ordered to " accept the ſaid Compoſition) the Earl in a " proper and uſual Manner ordered the ſame as " prayed, and was informed, and believes, that " the ſaid Compoſition was made and agreed to " on a Conſultation of all or moſt of the Ma- " ſters of the ſaid Court.

I have heard, my Lords, the proper and uſual Manner is to have Petitions of this Nature ſet down to be heard in Publick, and the Parties concerned to be ſummoned; Petitions relating to Bankrupts, to Lunaticks, to Ideots, I believe are ſo: The Statute in the Caſe of Bankrupts directs publick Notice to be given in the Gazette, for the Creditors to meet; they have an Opportunity there to make all proper Enquiries, and ſee every thing done that may be moſt for their Advantage; the Bankrupt is not entitled to his Liberty, nor any Benefit allowed him, without a Certificate that he has made a full Diſcovery of his Effects, and that there appears no Reaſon to doubt of the Truth of ſuch Diſcovery; and not then neither, unleſs four Parts in five in Number and Value of his Creditors ſign ſuch Certificate, and teſtify their Conſent. How the Earl could think it juſt that the Suitors of the Court of Chancery (whoſe Money was forced from them by the Power of that Court, and put into the Hands of a Bankrupt Maſter) ſhould have leſs Care taken of them, leſs Privileges allowed them for their Security, than any other Creditors in the Kingdom, I can no way comprehend, but muſt think, my Lords, this clandeſtine and unuſual Proceeding a ſtrong Proof of the Crime charged in theſe Articles.

" As to what the Earl ſays of the Compoſiti-
" on being agreed to by moſt of the Maſters; if that, my Lords, had been ſo (though we ſhall give Evidence to the contrary) I ſhould not at all have wondered at it; for any Compoſition obſtructed the Inquiry and Proceedings, which otherwiſe muſt neceſſarily have been publick: But, my Lords, had the Compoſition been agreed to on a Conſultation of all or moſt of the Suitors concerned, that indeed would have been a good Defence of the noble Lord.

" He is pleaſed to ſay, at the Time of Wil-
" ſon's Aſſignment of Poulter's Debt, that Poul-
" ter was looked on to be a ſubſtantial Perſon.

We ſhall produce to your Lordſhips Evidence to the contrary: And I muſt obſerve, that the Earl does not offer to ſhew any proper Inquiry was made touching his Solvency. Sure, my Lords, when that Debt was taken as a Payment for the Suitors of the Court, his Circumſtances ſhould have been carefully looked to, and a Recognizance with Securities taken in Court; but that could not be done without a publick Notice of the Deficiency.

When I conſider, my Lords, the long Experience and great Abilities of the noble Earl, I can never think the Remiſneſs in this Inquiry, theſe clandeſtine and unuſual Proceedings, this precarious and trifling Compoſition, could ever have happened through Inadvertency only: I therefore, my Lords, muſt inſiſt upon it as a manifeſt Proof of the Charge contained in theſe Articles.

The Gentleman, who ſpeaks after me on this Occaſion, will open the Evidence we ſhall offer, and I will therefore take up no more of your Lordſhips Time.

Mr. Hedges. My Lords, it falls to my Share to endeavour to be Aſſiſtant to the Gentleman who ſpoke laſt, in maintaining the 13th and 14th Articles; which I ſhall do, by ſtating the Evidence to your Lordſhips, as ſhortly as I can.

My Lords, The 13th Article ſets forth, that Mr. Dormer having embezled great Part of the Suitors Effects, to the amount of 25,000 l. or ſome other great Sum, and he thereupon abſconding, Application was made to the Earl of Macclesfield, then Lord Chancellor, to ſecure his Perſon and Effects, which his Lordſhip neglected and declined to do; and endeavour'd to conceal the true State of the Office, as well with reſpect to Mr. Dormer's Effects, as to the Debt due from him to the Suitors. And upon Motion made in the Court of Chancery (after his Lordſhip knew that Mr. Dormer had abſconded) that the Effects of ſome of the Suitors might be transferr'd to a more ſecure Office, his Lordſhip, in order to delude the Suitors into a Belief of the Safety of their Effects, and to prevent a publick Inquiry, then ſitting in open Court, did ſay, That the Parties need not be in haſte; falſely and deceitfully at the ſame Time declaring, that Mr. Dormer was only gone to take the Air in the Country, and that he would return in a little Time, and all would be well, or to that Effect. And, my Lords, notwithſtanding the Earl's Endeavour in his Anſwer to evade the Charge contain'd in this Article, I am perſuaded, upon hearing the Evidence, your Lordſhips will reſt ſatisfy'd, that it has been made out in every Particular. For, my Lords, as to the firſt Part of the Charge, where he denies that he was ever advis'd to ſecure Mr. Dormer's Perſon, it will be made appear to your Lordſhips, that Mr. John Bennet, and Mr. Lightboun, went from a Meeting of ſeveral of the Maſters, and in their Names acquainted the Lord Chanceſſor, that it was their Opinion, that Mr. Dormer had not fairly ſtated his Accounts; that there was a Deficiency of upwards of 20,000 l. and that it was neceſſary for Example ſake, he ſhould be committed, according to the Precedent ſet him by the Lord Cowper in Dr. Eddisbury's Caſe. But the Earl inſiſting on Mr. Dormer's Liberty, they again repeated the neceſſity of making ſuch an Example, but at laſt left the Earl fixed in his Reſolution of continuing Mr. Dormer at Liberty.

My Lords, this Promiſe of Freedom to Mr. Dormer was only conditional; IF he gave in a fair and juſt Account, and aſſiſted in getting in the Debts. But he was ſo far from complying with theſe Conditions, that when he gave an Account in Writing of the Ballance of his Caſh, amounting to 49,000 l. he only inform'd them, that 24,000 l. of it was due from one Wilſon a Banker, ſince broke; but as to the Remainder, the Maſter, to whom it was given, could never obtain from him any other Notice where it lay, or what was become of it.

Immediately upon this, the Maſters were ſummon'd, and acquainted with it; and the next morning that Account was left with Mr. Cottingham for the Lord Chancellor's peruſal.

Your Lorſhips will be farther inform'd, that Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hiccocks, being directed by the Lord Chancellor to procure a Conveyance of Mr. Dormer's Eſtate to them, for the Benefit of the Suitors, it was with the greateſt Difficulty that Mr. Dormer was prevailed upon to comply with it.

In the next place, my Lords, his Lordſhip, in his Anſwer, denies, that he endeavour'd to conceal the true State of the Office from the Suitors; or that he remembers any thing concerning ing the Expreſſion he is charg'd with; That Mr. Dormer was only gone into the Country to take the Air, and that he wou'd return in a little time, and all would be well.

My Lords, I muſt agree, that, ſince his Lordſhip is reſolv'd to deny that he endeavour'd to conceal the State of the Office, it were to be wiſh'd by him that he cou'd ſafely deny this Expreſſion, ſince if true, it proves that Endeavour directly upon him. But, my Lords, the Words were ſpoken by his Lordſhip in open Court, and can be ſworn to by a Perſon, whoſe Buſineſs in Court at that time was ſuch, as can poſſibly leave no room for a Doubt, or a Miſtake.

For farther proof, my Lords, of his Lordſhip's Endeavour to conceal the State of this Office, we ſhall ſhew, that a Meſſage was ſent from the Lord Chancellor to Mr. Lightboun with a Propoſal that he ſhou'd advance 500 l. towards this Deficiency: Acquainting him, at the ſame time, that it was for the Honour of the Court; and that the Appearance of a Deficiency won'd be attended with ill Conſequences. But Mr. Lightboun refus'd to comply with that Demand, which he thought won'd only skin over the Wound, and not effectually cure it. And yet, my Lords, this Propoſal, which Mr. Lightboun had the Honeſty and Courage to reject, was enforc'd by the impeach'd Earl with the Threats of a Parliamentary Enquiry; aſſerting, that if the Maſters did not contribute towards the Concealment of this Deficiency, it wou'd occaſion a publick Enquiry; wherein, if it ſhou'd appear, that they had bought their Places contrary to the Statute 5 and 6 of Edward 6. it might go ill with him, but that it wou'd fare much worſe with them; turning even that Parliamentary Enquiry, which he ought to have dreaded as his ſure Puniſhment, into means for extorting of Money. We have alſo Proofs that at another Meeting of the Maſters, a farther Demand was made upon them, in order to conceal the State of that Office; but all the Maſters then refuſing to contribute to a Concealment ſo unreaſonable in its own nature, the Lord Chancellor paid that Demand of 1000 l. himſelf; not out of any juſt regard to the Suitors, but for his own Profit and Advantage, well knowing, that the Notoriety of this Inſolvency, wou'd make the Maſters Places leſs valuable; and therefore was content to part with this Sum, to inſure to himſelf a greater proſpect of Gain at his next Sale. Nor was it neceſſary for thoſe, who dealt at this Auction, to bring any Money of their own to it; the mere admittance into the Office immediately giving them Poſſeſſion of a Caſh ſufficient to anſwer his Lordſhip's Expectations. And thus Beggars were his beſt Purchaſers; though ſure to be the worſt Truſtees for the Publick.

How great a Hardſhip muſt it be, my Lords, to the Suitors of that High Court, to be contending many Years for their juſt Property, at an Expence poſſibly no ways proportionable to their remaining Fortunes; and to find at laſt, when they had obtain'd a Decree in their Favour, that their Money was loſt in a Bankrupt Office, without hopes of recovery? This is a Conſideration in which every Man in Great Britain is more or leſs concern'd. For what Eſtate is there, which may not ſome way or other in the Courſe of a few years, come under the Direction of that Court? How much then does it concern every Individual, and even the Legiſlature itſelf, that all its Avenues of Juſtice ſhou'd be ſafe and open? But how much more does it concern the Honour and Conſcience of the Perſon, who preſides in it, if there ſhou'd be a dangerous Precipice in the way, to be the firſt in ſetting up a Mark for all the World to avoid it?

But, my Lords, if in this Article, which I have open'd to your Lordſhips, there appears a Criminal Endeavour to conceal the Deficiency of this Office, ſupported by a falſe Aſſertion made in open Court, in order to delude the Suitors into an Opinion that their Money was ſafe, and a great neglect in not ſecuring Mr. Dormer's Perſon; in the 14th Article, he will appear in a yet more guilty Light, not only neglecting, as in the former, to enquire into his Effects, but on Enquiry made, and Time had for mature deliberation, confirming a precarious and trifling Compoſition, and tying down the Suitors of the Court by his Authority, to the certain Diminution of one half at leaſt of their Effects, and in all probability to the irrecoverable loſs of the whole.

My Lords, in the Anſwer which his Lordſhip returns to this Article, he denies none of the Matters of Fact contain'd in it, but admits them as they there ſtand charg'd. I ſhall therefore only make ſome Obſervations on the nature of this Tranſaction, and on the Aſſertions in his Lordſhip's Anſwer.

In the firſt place, my Lords, he inſinuates that Mr. Edwards us'd great endeavours to obtain payment from Wilſon, but found them fruitleſs; Wilſon having ſtopp'd payment long before.

My Lords, I know not what endeavours his Lordſhip can prove Mr. Edwards to have us'd; but whatever they were, they were not unlikely to prove fruitleſs, ſince as his Lordſhip adds immediately, Wilſon had long before ſtopp'd payment: But this we can prove, That Wilſon's Books were never inſpected by Mr. Edwards; that he never knew what his Debts were; nor any thing more of him, than that Wilſon came voluntarily to Mr. Edwards, and propos'd of himſelf to pay him 1400 l. in ready Money, and to aſſign over to him a Debt of 10,000 l. due from one Poulter, whoſe Circumſtances were ſtill more precarious than his own.

In the next Place, his Lordſhip aſſerts, that he order'd this whole Affair of Wilſon's Compoſition in the uſual manner; and is inform'd, and believes, that this Compoſition was made and agreed to, upon a Conſultation of all, or moſt of the Maſters. But, my Lords, we ſhall make it appear, that the Delivery of the Petitions, the Orders made upon them, and the whole Tranſaction of this Affair, was carried on from firſt to laſt in a clandeſtine, private, and unuſual Manner.

As to the Conſent which his Lordſhip ſays he believes the other Maſters gave to this Compoſition, we ſhall prove, my Lords, that Mr. Edwards was the only Perſon concerned on behalf of the Suitors, and ſo far was he or any of the reſt of the Maſters from taking the beſt Care they could, that the firſt Draught of a Compoſition, which Wilſon brought, was accepted and ſettled between him him, and Mr. Hiccocks. And that when Mr. Edwards did mention this Compoſition to ſome of the Maſters, they were ſo far from approving of it, that Mr. Edwards acquainted the Lord Chancellor, that it was the Opinion of one of them, that a better Compoſition was to be had. And another of the Maſters was ſo far from agreeing to this Method at all, that he propos'd a Commiſſion of Bankrupcy as the only Means to bring this Matter to a proper Light.

But that Light, my Lords, was what his Lordſhip was moſt afraid of. That wou'd have diſcover'd the deficiency of this Office, which would have brought a diſrepute upon others, and conſequently have lower'd their Price. This was his Lordſhip's only Care; whilſt for the reſt he cou'd ſet unconcern'd, and ſee ſo great a Sum of the Suitors Money waſting away to nothing, as it paſs'd thro' the Hands ſucceſſively of three Bankrupts.

But, my Lords, we ſhall farther prove, that when his Lordſhip order'd a Petition to be prefer'd to himſelf, that he might approve of this Compoſition, he never order'd the Suitors to be acquainted with it, nor had they any Notice of it. Nor did his Lordſhip ask, if Wilſon had compounded with any other Creditors, nor ſo much as enquire if he had ſworn to his Circumſtances.

It will be made appear, that at this very time Mr. Edwards was inform'd, and did believe that Poulter's Circumſtances were very bad, and that neither he nor any one elſe attended the Commiſſion of Bankrupcy againſt Poulter on Behalf of the Suitors.

And, my Lords, to judge a little farther of this Matter, by a very ſure Rule of Juſtice; that, of doing as one wou'd be done by: Your Lordſhips will find that Mr. Edwards confeſſes, that if it had been his own Money, he wou'd have lookt more carefully after it.

Farther yet, my Lords, we ſhall prove, that notwithſtanding this Debt was compounded with Wilſon, yet he has paid the whole Amount of other Debts, with Intereſt, to ſeveral of his Creditors.

Laſtly, my Lords, his Lordſhip in his Anſwer ſays, that he believes Mr. Edwards has ſince got in one thouſand Pounds of Poulter's Debt. The Truth is, one thouſand Pounds has been recover'd; but it was by an accidental Diſcovery of conceal'd Effects belonging to Poulter; one thouſand Pounds of which was paid to Mr. Edwards by Wilſon, as Part of Poulter's Debt.

But does his Lordſhip ſeriouſly intend this for any Vindication of himſelf, or any Compenſation to the Suitors, that after four or five years expectation, inſtead of twenty four thouſand Pounds due to them, he believes one thouſand Pounds may have been ſince recover'd?

I cannot help obſerving here to your Lordſhips, how different a Care has appear'd throughout his Lordſhip's whole Behaviour, with Regard to his private Advantage, and the Safety and Protection of the Suitors of the Court.

In their Caſe, he could think it equitable to ſubject their Eſtates to the Loſſes of a Maſter in Chancery, who had ſquander'd and gam'd away their Subſtance and his own. But in his own private Affairs, how cautiouſly circumſpect was his Lordſhip? The leaſt Advantage was not neglected, and if a Maſter's Place was to be alienated, a difference of Guineas was meanly inſiſted upon, inſtead of the Pounds which had before been oppreſſively extorted.

But, my Lords, in this Impeachment, the Commons, with Regard to the Dignity of their own Proceedings, with Regard to this auguſt Judicature, are not deſirous to enlarge upon Matters of ſmaller Moment. His Lordſhip might have enjoy'd his hundred Guineas in quiet, had not a long Series of his Conduct in ſo high a Station, tended to deſtroy the Reverence due to the Laws, by an Execution of them inſtrumental to the Ruin of the Subject.——Againſt apparent Extortioners and Robbers, we guard ourſelves with a Caution proportionable to the Infamy of their Characters: But when the Sanctity of the Laws, and the Enſigns of Authority, deſign'd to defend and protect us, are made uſe of to invite us into Ruin, how ſure and extenſive muſt that Ruin be?

My Lords, The Commons have beheld with the deepeſt Concern ſuch corrupt Practices in this high Court; ſuch, as have deform'd the Beauty of Juſtice, and render'd the Adminiſtration of it grievous, and even fatal to the Subject. They have beheld that Miniſter of Juſtice, whom the Laws of the Land have inveſted with an extraordinary Power to puniſh Frauds and Deceits, himſelf carrying on a moſt pernicious Deceit, to the great diſhonour of the Court, and the ruin of its Suitors. The Guardian of Orphans become their Oppreſſor, the Keeper of the King's Conſcience proſtituting his own, and the Dignity of his high Station, to an ignominious Traffick with the beſt Bidder, and employing the Scales of Justice in the Buſineſs of an Uſurer.

But, my Lords, that Parliamentary Enquiry is now come, with the Terrors of which he forc'd the Maſters into Compliance with his arbitrary Demands. He then foretold it might poſſibly go ill with him, tho' it wou'd fare worſe with them. So juſt a Decree pronounc'd by himſelf againſt himſelf, is, we truſt, in no Danger of being revers'd; but reſt aſſur'd, that as far as it regards him, it will be unanimouſly confirm'd by your Lordſhips.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we ſhall now proceed to our Evidence on theſe two Articles together: To ſhew to your Lordſhips that the Deficiency of Dormer's Office was endeavour'd to be conceal'd by many indirect Practices; and firſt of all we ſhall call a Witneſs to prove Mr. Dormer's Deficiency to be about twenty five thouſand Pounds.

Mr. Thompſon called, and appeared.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Thompſon may refreſh his Memory, as this Matter was referred to him to examine, and that he would pleaſe to give your Lordſhips an Account how he found the State of Mr. Dormer's Office, and what Deficiency there was in it?

Mr. Thompſon. My Lords, I find in our Report the Debt due from Mr. Dormer's Office was ſtated at 49604*l.* 11*s.* 11*d.* and I find that Mr. Edwards, who ſucceeded Mr. Dormer in that Office, had paid to the Suitors 23725*l.* 15*s.* 9½ ſo that there remains due to the Suitors of the Court, ſuch as have paid their Money into Mr. Dormer's Office, the Sum of 25878*l.* 16*s.* 1*d.* ½ And this I believe to be a true State of the Account, from ſuch Evidence as was laid before us.

Mr. Lutwyche. If the Counſel on the other Side don't think fit to ask this Evidence any Queſtion, we beg Leave to call Mr. Edwards, who ſucceed-ed Mr. Dormer, and will give your Lordſhips an account of the State of that Office, and what the Deficiency was.

Mr. Henry Edwards ſworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Edwards may be asked, how much the Deficiency is in Mr. Dormer's Office?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, according to the Account given in, the Deficiency appears to be about twenty five thouſand odd hundred Pounds; but ſince that, there is diſcover'd about fifteen hundred Pounds more, which was not brought into the Account. It was diſcover'd about three Weeks or a Month ago, and not before.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be ask'd whether he knows of any other Deficiency diſcover'd?

Mr. Edwards. No, my Lords, I do not.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Edwards may be asked, that as there hath been a further Deficiency diſcovered, whether there hath not alſo been a Diſcovery of further Effects?

Mr. Edwards. Not as I know of. I am informed Adminiſtration hath been lately taken out to Mr. Dormer, that there hath been a Diſcovery of Effects, but to what Value I can't tell.

Mr. Strange. I would deſire he may be ask'd, whether he hath had any Account from the Adminiſtrator?

Mr. Edwards. I have ſeen Mr. Paxton, who I underſtand adminiſtred. He told me he had diſcover'd ſome Effects, but he did not tell me to what Value.

Mr. Lutwyche. If the Counſel for the noble Earl have done, we would beg Leave to ask another Queſtion, in Relation to this Matter. They examine what were the other Effects of Mr. Dormer, we deſire to know, if Mr. Edwards can inform us, how long ago this Diſcovery was?

Mr. Edwards. I can't certainly tell. I believe it is about two Months ago that Mr. Paxton hath had Adminiſtration; and ſince that he hath made this Diſcovery.

Mr. Lutwyche. It is proper from this Queſtion that hath been ask'd by the Counſel for the noble Lord, to call another Witneſs to prove that there have been Effects diſcovered, and that there have been Goods laid by three or four Years, and almoſt ſpoil'd, becauſe no Care was taken of his Effects.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, before this Gentleman goes, I beg Leave he may be asked one other Queſtion, whether he had not Notice before Chriſtmas laſt, that there were other Effects of Mr. Dormer, and from whom?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, I believe I had; and when I underſtood that Mr. Paxton was the Perſon who had taken out the Adminiſtration, I told him of it.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked who it was that brought him Notice of theſe Effects?

Mr. Edwards. It was a Gentleman that came out of the Country. I don't remember his Name. He was a Perſon that lived near the Place where Mr. Dormer's Country Houſe was. I have forgot his Name.

E. of Macclesfield. Can you recollect if you hear his Name? Was his Name Goodfellow?

Mr. Edwards. I believe it was.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire, if you can recollect, who he ſaid he came from?

Mr. Edwards. I think he ſaid he came from Mr. Cottingham; I don't know that he mention'd your Lordſhip. I underſtood your Lordſhip had been acquainted with it, but not that he acquainted you of it.

Mr. Campbel ſworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire that this Witneſs may be asked, whether he knows of any Goods or Effects of Mr. Dormer being diſcover'd, and at what Time, and how long they had lain in that Place where they were found?

Mr. Campbel. In the Year 1721, I did buy a Parcel of Hops, but who they belong'd to I did not then know; but ſince I find they were Mr. Dormer's. They were one hundred and forty eight Bags of Hops. I ſold ſixteen of them the ſame Year, one hundred and one ſince. I bought them of Countrymen; ſome of one Man, and ſome of another. I bought them by Commiſſion, but Mr. Dormer was not the Man that employ'd me, neither did I receive the Money from his Hands.

Mr. Lutwyche. We deſire to know how long the Goods did lye in that Place where they were; and whether there was any Loſs by the Sale of thoſe Goods, being left ſo long there.

Mr. Campbel. They had lain there above three Years, and I believe, modeſtly ſpeaking, there was above five hundred Pounds Loſs upon them.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire Mr. Campbel may be asked how he came to know they were Mr. Dormer's Hops?

Mr. Campbel. I never did know they were Mr. Dormer's Hops, nor ſtill do I know it, but as I am told.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked who told him ſo?

Mr. Campbel. This Gentleman told me ſo [pointing to Mr. Paxton.]

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we ſhall now call Mr. Paxton, who hath taken out Adminiſtration by the Direction of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Great Seal; and under that Adminiſtration he hath poſſeſs'd himſelf of thoſe Effects, which were ſcatter'd and lay waſte before.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I beg Leave this Witneſs may be firſt asked one Queſtion. I think he hath ſaid that he bought thoſe Hops by Commiſſion, not by the Order of Mr. Dormer, nor for Mr. Dormer: I deſire he may be asked, by whoſe Direction they were kept ſo long by him?

Mr. Campbel. He that gave me the Orders to buy them was not Mr. Dormer, neither did he pay me the Money. The Reaſon they lay ſo long was, I had no Orders to ſell them.

Mr. Serj. Prob. Who was the Perſon that gave you Orders to buy them?

Mr. Campbel. The Perſon's Name is one Mr. Longmead.

Mr. Serj. Prob. Where doth this Perſon live?

Mr. Campbel. He lives at Iſlington.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I deſire this Witneſs may be asked, whether or no about the Time that theſe Hops were bought, they were not very cheap, and at a low Price?

Mr. Campbel. They were at a low Price.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether a great Number of People have not kept Hops upon a Suppoſition that they would riſe?

Mr. Campbel. Yes they have, a great many.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I desire he may be asked, whether he did not keep other Hops as well as these by him, for the Advantage of a better Market?

Mr. Campbel. Yes, I had several other Hops bought in that Year that I kept for a better Market, and still had a worse. I have Hops by me cost me 5 l. a Hundred, not worth now 10*s.* a Hundred.

E. of Macclesfield. How much a Bag might that be?

Mr. Campbel. I can't tell how many hundred may be in a Bag: I can't tell, because they are not weighed

E. of Macclesfield. Whereabouts?

Mr. Campbel. Sometimes there are three hundred, sometimes 2 and a half, sometimes 2 and 3qrs.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, to explain this Matter I desire he may be asked, whether this Loss he speaks of, of 4 or 500 l. happened in the Difference of the Price, or by the Hops being spoiled?

Mr. Campbel. Both by the Difference of Price, Hops being cheaper, and by the Antiquity of the Hops.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we desire he may be asked who is this Mr. Longmead?

Mr. Campbel. He keeps a Shop in Islington, he keeps a Grocer's Shop.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I desire he may be asked, whether he is not Mr. Dormer's Servant, or an Agent for him?

Mr. Campbel. For any thing I know he was an Agent for Mr. Dormer.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we desire he may be asked, whether for ought he knows he was not an Agent for Mr. Dormer?

Mr. Campbel. I believe he was an Agent for him, and I have good Reason to believe it, because he paid me all the Money, and gave me Orders to buy the Goods.

E. of Macclesfield. I desire to know whether the Witness infers that Longmead was Mr. Dormer's Agent because he paid him Money; might not he have paid him the Money, tho' he had not been his Agent?

Ld. Ch. Just. King. Speak your own Knowledge, whether he was Agent for Mr. Dormer or no.

Mr. Campbel. I never did ask him whose they were: He employed me, and I bought the Goods, and did suppose they were for Mr. Dormer. I never asked him whether they were his Goods or not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Paxton may be called, to shew how he discovered these Effects.

Mr. Nicholas Paxton Sworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we desire Mr. Paxton may give your Lordships an Account what he knows of these Hops.

Mr. Paxton. After I had got Letters of Administration to Mr. Dormer granted me, I did make what Inquiry I could relating to the Effects of Mr. Dormer. This Mr. Longmead came and told me of some Hops; that he was Servant to Mr. Dormer, and had bought them by his Direction. Then we went to Mr. Campbel's who took out a Handful and said they were Saleable, and would bring in about 200 l. He told me they cost 800 l. and it would be best to dispose of them as fast as I could, that there might be no more Loss. They are not yet sold, they may be worth about 200 l.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, It is admitted by the Answer, that Mr. Dormer absented himself and absconded. It was notorious, and talked of by every Body: It will lye upon this Noble Lord to give an Account what he did thereon. My Lords, we will now proceed to give your Lordships an Account of this Composition made with Wilson who was indebted to Dormer. This Wilson was a Banker, the Person that Mr. Dormer intrusted with Money; and upon that Occasion, there being a great Debt due to Dormer, as is set forth in the Articles, a Composition is made with Wilson on Account of that Debt. There were such Dealings and Proceedings therein, as will appear to your Lordships to have been unusual and unwarrantable. We beg Leave therefore to shew your Lordships a written Evidence, an Order under the Hand of this noble Lord himself for this Composition though never drawn up: And indeed your Lordships will observe that through the whole Course of these Proceedings, there is not any one Affidavit, or any one Order, or any Report filed in the usual Manner. From whence we may infer, that it was intended to be a clandestine thing, that nothing might appear of it upon Record, as other things do. The first thing we shall beg Leave to shew is, an Assignment from Mr. Dormer to one of the Masters in Chancery of this Debt. When we have shewn that Assignment, then we shall beg Leave to give your Lordships an Account of the Methods and Proceedings thereupon.

Mr. William Green sworn, and the Assignment produced.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we desire this Witness may be asked, whether he saw this Deed executed, and by whom?

Mr. Green. My Lords, I did see this Deed executed by the late Mr. Dormer: I am one of the Witnesses to it, and John Jones is the other Witness.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we desire this Deed may be read.

Clerk reads. This Indenture made the six and twentieth Day of July, Ann. Dom. 1721, and in the seventh Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George by the Grace of God, King of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. Between Fleetwood Dormer of Lincolns-Inn in the County of Middlesex, Esq; late one of the Masters of the High Court of Chancery of the one Part, and Henry Edwards of Lincolns-Inn aforesaid, Esq; one of the Masters of the said High Court of Chancery of the other Part. Whereas William Wilson Citizen and Goldsmith of London, is and stands justly indebted unto the said Fleetwood Dormer upon Account, in the full and just Sum of twenty four thousand and forty six Pounds and four Shillings of lawful Money of Great-Britain, or upwards, as by the Books of the said William Wilson may and doth appear: And whereas the said Fleetwood Dormer is and stands justly indebted to divers Persons, Suitors in the said High Court of Chancery, in several considerable Sums of Money, for and on Accompt of Moneys brought before and paid to him as one of the Masters of the said Court: Now therefore for the more speedy getting in and recovering of the aforesaid Debt, due and owing by

and

and from the ſaid William Wilſon as aforeſaid; and alſo for the more ſpeedy and effectual Payment of all ſuch Sum and Sums of Money as are owing by the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer as aforeſaid: This Indenture witneſſeth, That for the Ends and Purpoſes aforeſaid, and for and in Conſideration of the Sum of ten Shillings of lawful Money of Great-Britain to the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer in Hand paid by the ſaid Henry Edwards, at or before the enſealing and delivery of theſe Preſents, the Receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged: He, the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, hath granted, aſſigned, transferred, and ſet over, and by theſe Preſents, doth grant, aſſign, transfer, and ſet over unto the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns, the ſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, and all and every Part thereof, and all and every other Debt or Debts, Sum or Sums of Money any ways due or owing by or from the ſaid William Wilſon to the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer and every Part thereof, and all Intereſt due or to grow due for the ſame, and all Bonds, Bills, Notes, and other Securities, for the ſame or any Part thereof. And all the Right, Title, Intereſt, Property, Benefit, Advantage, Claim, and Demand whatſoever, both in Law and Equity, of him, the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, of, in, to, or out of the ſame, and every or any Part thereof, to have, hold, receive, perceive, take, and enjoy the ſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, and all ſuch other Debts and Sums of Money as are due or owing to the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer by the ſaid William Wilſon as aforeſaid, and every Part thereof, and all the Benefit thereof, and all and ſingular other the Premiſſes unto the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns upon truſt. Nevertheleſs, and to the Intent and Purpoſe that he, the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns, ſhall and do iſſue, pay, apply, and diſpoſe of the ſame, or ſuch Part or Parts thereof, as ſhall from time to Time be by him or them got in and received in ſuch manner as the ſaid High Court of Chancery ſhall in that Behalf order or direct, for and towards Payment and Satisfaction of ſuch Debts and Sums of Money as are now due and owing by the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, for or on Account of Monies brought before and paid to him, as one of the Maſters of the ſaid Court. And in the mean time, after Receipt thereof, and until the ſame ſhall be ſo paid, applied, and diſpoſed of, ſhall and do depoſit, lend, or place out the ſame, or any Part thereof, in ſuch Manner as the ſaid Court of Chancery ſhall in that Behalf order or direct. And for the better enabling the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns, to get, call in, and receive the aforeſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, and other the ſaid hereby aſſigned Premiſſes upon the Truſts aforeſaid: He, the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, hath made, ordained, conſtituted and appointed, and in his Place and Stead put and deputed, and by theſe Preſents doth make, ordain, conſtitute and appoint, and in his Place and Stead, put and depute the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns, his true and lawful Attorney and Attornies irrevocable for him the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, and in his Name; but upon the Truſts aforeſaid, to ask, demand, ſue for, recover, and receive of and from the ſaid William Wilſon, his Heirs, Executors, or Adminiſtrators, and all and every, or any other Perſon or Perſons whom it may concern, the aforeſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, and other the ſaid hereby aſſigned Premiſſes, and every or any Part thereof upon the Truſts aforeſaid, and likewiſe to compound for the ſame, and every or any Part thereof, as he or they ſhall in their Diſcretions think fit, and upon non Payment of the ſame Debt or Sum, Debts or Sums, or any Part thereof, to bring, commence, and proſecute ſuch Action or Actions, Suit or Suits, either at Law or in Equity, or elſewhere, for the Recovery thereof, as he or they ſhall be adviſed, and on Payment thereof, or any Part thereof, to give Receipts and Diſcharges for the ſame, and one or more Attorney or Attornies for the Purpoſe aforeſaid, to make and conſtitute, and at Pleaſure to revoke, and generally to do and act in the Premiſſes for the recovering and obtaining of the ſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, and other the ſaid hereby aſſigned Premiſſes, and every or any Part thereof, as fully and effectually to all Intents and Purpoſes as he the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, his Executors or Adminiſtrators might have done; giving and hereby granting unto the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators and Aſſigns, the full and whole Power and Authority of him the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, in and about the Premiſſes upon the Truſts aforeſaid; hereby ratifying, confirming, and allowing all, and whatever the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns, or his or their Attorney or Attornies ſhall lawfully do or cauſe to be done in or about the Premiſſes by Vertue of theſe Preſents. And the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer doth hereby for himſelf, his Heirs, Executors, and Adminiſtrators, covenant, promiſe, and agree to and with the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns in Manner following: That is to ſay, that he, the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, hath not received, compounded, releaſed or diſcharged, or conſented to the receiving, compounding, releaſing, or diſcharging the ſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds and four Shillings, and other the hereby aſſigned Premiſſes, or any Part thereof, and that he, his Executors, or Adminiſtrators ſhall not, nor will at any time hereafter, receive, compound, releaſe, or diſcharge the ſame or any Part thereof, without the Conſent of the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns, firſt thereunto had and obtained in writing under his or their Hands. And further, That he the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, his Executors and Adminiſtrators, ſhall and will at the Requeſts, Coſts and Charges of the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns, make, do, and execute, or cauſe and procure to be made, done, and executed, any further or other lawful and reaſonable Acts, Deeds, Powers and Authorities, for the better enabling him, the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns, to ſue for, recover, and obtain the ſaid Debt and Premiſſes hereby aſſigned, and every or any Part thereof upon the Truſt aforeſaid. And it is hereby declared and agreed that the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, or Aſſigns ſhall not be charged or chargeable with, or accountable for any more Monies than he or they ſhall actually receive, or ſhall come to his or their Hands by Vertue of theſe Preſents; and that it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Henry Edwards, his Executors, Adminiſtrators and Aſſigns, in the firſt Place, by and out of the Premiſſes, to deduct and reimburſe him and themſelves all ſuch Loſſes, Coſts, Charges and Expences as he, they, or any of them ſhall ſuſtain or be put unto, by Reaſon of the Truſt hereby in him repoſed, or the Management or Execution thereof, or any other thing in any wiſe relating thereunto: In witneſs whereof, the ſaid Parties to theſe Preſents have hereunto interchangably ſet their Hands and Seals the Day and Year firſt above written.

Fleetwood Dormer.

Mr. Lutwyche. The next thing we ſhall trouble your Lordſhips with in relation to this Matter of the Compoſition, is a Petition of Mr. Edwards, to which there is an Anſwer. The Anſwer is writ by Mr. Cottingham, and ſigned by the noble Lord. I mentioned to your Lordſhips that no Order is drawn up upon it: Nothing appears in publick: Therefore we muſt beg Leave to prove the Earl's Hand to this Order made upon this Petition.

E. of Macclesfield. After taking the Petition in his Hand and looking upon the Name ſubſcribed to the Anſwer written upon it, ſaid, My Lords, this is my Hand.

Clerk reads,

To the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, Lord High Chancellor of Great-Britain.

The humble Petition and Repreſentation of Henry Edwards, Eſq; one of the Maſters of the high and honourable Court of Chancery.

Sheweth,

THAT William Wilſon, Citizen and Goldſmith of London, is and ſtands juſtly indebted to Fleetwood Dormer, Eſq; late one of the Maſters of this Court upon Account, in the full Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds, four Shillings, as by the Books of the ſaid William Wilſon doth and may appear.

That the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer is and ſtands juſtly indebted to divers Perſons, Suitors in this Court, in ſeveral conſiderable Sums of Money. And for the more ſpeedy getting in and recovering the ſaid Debt, and effectual Payment of all ſuch Sum and Sums of Money as are owing by the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer as aforeſaid, the ſaid Fleetwood Dormer, for that End and Purpoſe, hath by Indenture bearing Date the 26th of July 1721, granted, aſſigned, transferred, and ſet over to your Petitioner, his Executors, Adminiſtrators, and Aſſigns, the ſaid Debt or Sum of twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds four Shillings in Truſt, and to the Intent that your Petitioner ſhall pay, apply, and diſpoſe of the ſame, or ſuch Part thereof as ſhall from time to time be by him got in and received of and from the ſaid William Wilſon, in ſuch Manner as this Court ſhall order and direct.

That it appears to your Petitioner, that the ſaid William Wilſon is indebted to divers other Perſons in great Sums of Money, and for ſome time hath not been able to carry on his Buſineſs, or able to make good and pay the ſaid Debt ſo aſſigned to your Petitioner; but hath lately offered to your Petitioner and his other Creditors to come to a Compoſition, and to pay them in Proportion the utmoſt he is able. And your Petitioner doubting whether he can with Safety to himſelf, agree to any ſuch Compoſition, Humbly prays your Lordſhip would be pleaſed to refer it to one of the Maſters of this Court, to ſee if ſuch Compoſition ſo propoſed by the ſaid Wilſon be for the Benefit of the Perſons intituled to receive the ſame.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.

30th of June 1722.

Be it as is prayed, and to that End let it be referred to Mr. Hiccocks one of the Maſters of this Court, and let the Maſter ſpeed his Report: After which, ſuch further Order will be made as ſhall be juſt; of which give Notice forthwith.

Macclesfield C.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I beg Leave to take Notice, that in this Petition it is expreſly recited, that Dormer was indebted to the Suitors of the Court, and that being ſo, we apprehend the greateſt Care ſhould have been taken for their Benefit. Your Lordſhips ſhall ſee in the Progreſs of this thing, how it was tranſacted. I believe any Perſon that is concerned in the Court of Chancery, hath not known ſuch a Proceeding in the moſt trifling Matter whatſoever. My Lords, the next thing is a ſecond Petition, ſaid to be with a Report annexed, but we can't find it filed; here is a Paper of Mr. Hiccocks not ſtampt nor filed, which we do apprehend to be the Report meant, and therefore we deſire that may be firſt read.

Clerk reads 26th of July 1722.

WHereas by an Order made by the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, the thirtieth of June laſt, upon the humble Petition of Henry Edwards, Eſq; one of the Maſters of this Court, I am directed to ſee if the Compoſition in the ſaid Order mention'd, to be offer'd or propos'd to be made by William Wilſon, Citizen and Goldſmith of London, to the ſaid Mr. Edwards, as Aſſignee of Fleetwood Dormer, Eſq; late one of the Maſters of this Court, who was a Creditor of the ſaid William Wilſon, for the Sum of 24046 l. 4 s. 0 d. in the ſaid Petition mention'd: I have been attended by the ſaid Mr. Edwards, and by the ſaid William Wilſon, and conſidered of the ſeveral Matters by the ſaid Petition and Order to me referred. And the ſaid William Wilſon hath under his Hand in Writing propos'd to assign over to the said Mr. Edwards (as a Composition for, and in full Discharge of the said Sum of 24046 l. 4 s. 0 d.) the Sum of 10000 l. part of a larger Sum due to the said William Wilson, from Edward Poulter of Hackney, in the County of Middlesex, Gent. and to pay to the said Mr. Edwards in Specie the Sum of 1463 l. 2 s. 1 d. over and above the Sum of 560 l. already paid to the said Mr. Dormer in part of the said Composition. And upon Consideration had of the Circumstances of the said William Wilson, and the said several Matters, I am of Opinion that the accepting the said Composition will be for the Benefit of the Person or Persons entitled to receive the same. All which I humbly certify and submit to his Lordship.

Hiccocks.

Mr. Lutwyche. Now read the Petition of Mr. Edwards, and the Order thereupon.

Clerk reads.

To the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain.

The humble Petition of Henry Edwards, Esq; one of the Masters of the high and honourable Court of Chancery.

Sheweth,

THAT upon your Petitioner's former Petition prefer'd to your Lordship relating to William Wilson, Citizen and Goldsmith of London, your Lordship the 30th of June last was pleas'd to refer it to Mr. Hiccocks, one of the Masters of this Court, to see if the Composition mention'd in the said Petition and Order to be proposed by the said Wilson, would be for the Benefit of the Persons entitled to receive the same.

That the said Mr. Hiccocks having been attended by your Petitioner, and the said Wilson hath pursuant to your Lordship's said Order, made his Report dated the 26th of July last, whereby he certifies that he is of Opinion that the accepting of the Composition in his Report mention'd, will be for the Benefit of the Person or Persons entitled to receive the same, as by the Report annexed.

Wherefore your Petitioner most humbly prays your Lordship to take into your Consideration the Matter of the said Report, and to order your Petitioner to accept of the said Composition upon the Terms therein mention'd, if your Lordship shall so think fit, or to make such other and further Order in the Premisses, as to your Lordship shall seem most meet.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

3d of August, 1722.

On the Report annexed be it as is prayed. Of which give Notice forthwith,

Macclesfield, C.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I must beg Leave to make one Observation upon this, that the noble Lord may explain it, for I believe there is no Precedent for it; when there is a Composition thus to be made, and thus referred, and a Report hath been made, The Prayer of the Petition is, that Mr. Edwards may be order'd to accept of this Composition, or to make such other Order, as his Lordship should think fit. The Answer to it is, Be it as is prayed, of which give Notice forthwith; by which I suppose the Parties understood that it was ordering Mr. Edwards to accept of this Composition. Now it is wonderful to me, if he was order'd to accept of the Composition, why it is said, give Notice forthwith? What? when the thing is done? Besides, there is another thing more material, to whom should such Notice be given? surely to the Suitors of the Court. But it is well known his Lordship had not appointed any Sollicitor for the Suitors of the Court, and they had no Notice, tho' here is a Semblance or Shew of what is done in other Cases. We shall beg Leave to shew next to your Lordships, that these Orders on these Petitions, this Report, and these Proceedings, were not one of them entred or filed as Orders usually are.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I beg Leave to make one Observation before this Matter goes over. The Petition is by Mr. Edwards only, one of the Masters, and it is that my Lord Macclesfield would be pleas'd to order him to accept of the Composition. None of the Suitors of the Court, who were the Persons entitled to receive the same, are Petitioners.

Clerk reads two Certificates from, and signed by Edward Goldsbrough, Deputy Register, that there were no such Orders entred, nor no such Report filed.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, the Composition is signed by William Wilson. I desire Mr. Edwards may be asked whether he knows Mr. Wilson's Hand?

Mr. Edwards. This is signed by Mr. Wilson; it is Mr. Wilson's Hand.

Clerk reads,

WHereas a Suit in Chancery is now depending between Mr. Edward Poulter of Hackney, and myself, for the Sum of 22060 l. 12 s. 5 d. which he agreed to pay me for and upon closing all Accounts between us: And whereas Fleetwood Dormer, Esq; late a Master in the high Court of Chancery, being indebted to divers Persons, Suitors in the said Court, in several considerable Sums of Money, for and on Account of Money brought before and paid to him as one of the Masters of the said Court, he the said Fleetwood Dormer, for the better Payment thereof, did by Assignment dated the 26th of July 1721, assign over to Henry Edwards, Esq; one of the Masters of the said Court, a Debt or Sum of 24046 l. 4 s. which was and is due and owing from me to him the said Fleetwood Dormer: And whereas I being incapable of paying the said Debt of 24046 l. 4 s. did lately propose as a Composition for and in full Discharge of the same, to assign to the said Henry Edwards the Sum of 10000 l. part of the Sum of 22060 l. 12 s. 5 d. due to me from the said Edward Poulter, as aforesaid; and likewise to pay to him the said Henry Edwards, the Sum of 1463 l. 2 s. 1 d. in Specie, over and above the Sum of 560 l. before paid to the said Mr. Dormer, in part of the said

ſaid Compoſition: And whereas on a Petition preſer'd to the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, by the ſaid Henry Edwards, repreſenting the Matter of the ſaid Propoſal; and after ſeveral ſubſequent Proceedings had upon the ſaid Petition, his Lordſhip was pleaſed, by Order dated the third of Auguſt, 1722, to order the ſaid Henry Edwards to accept of the ſaid Compoſition: And the ſaid Henry Edwards having thereupon agreed to accept of the ſaid Compoſition, accordingly I do hereby, in Conſideration thereof, aſſign over to the ſaid Henry Edwards the Sum of ten thouſand Pounds, part of the Sum of twenty two thouſand and ſixty Pounds, twelve Shillings and five Pence, due to me from the ſaid Edward Poulter as aforeſaid, having already paid him the ſaid Mr. Edwards, the other Sum of 1463 l. 2 s. 1 d. before-mention'd. And I do hereby promiſe to pay to the ſaid Henry Edwards, Eſq; or his Order, the ſaid Sum of ten thouſand Pounds, on my recovering the Sum of twenty two thouſand and ſixty Pounds, twelve Shillings and five Pence aforeſaid, or otherwiſe to pay him a like Proportion of what I ſhall recover, more or leſs, from the ſaid Edward Poulter. And I do hereby further promiſe, that I will not do any Act to incumber or diſcharge the Demand I now have againſt the ſaid Edward Poulter, without the Conſent of the ſaid Henry Edwards. And whereas the ſaid Mr. Edwards does now accept of the ſaid Compoſition, I do hereby declare and agree, that if I do not on Demand pay him the before-mention'd Proportion of what I ſhall recover from the ſaid Edward Poulter as aforeſaid, or do any ways diſcharge the Demand I now have againſt him, without the Conſent of the ſaid Henry Edwards, that then the ſaid Compoſition ſo made by the ſaid Edwards, ſhall be void, and of no effect, as if it had never been made. And I do hereby further promiſe, I will at my own Charge proſecute the ſaid Suit, and alſo do and execute all further and other Acts that ſhall be neceſſary for the better aſſigning to the ſaid Henry Edwards, Eſq; the before-mention'd Proportion of what I ſhall or may recover as aforeſaid, from him the ſaid Edward Poulter, as he the ſaid Henry Edwards ſhall at any Time require. Witneſs my Hand this twenty eighth Day of Auguſt, 1722.

William Wilſon.

31ſt of October, 1724. Paid to Henry Edwards, Eſq; the Sum of one thouſand Pounds, in part of this Note or Aſſignment.

William Wilſon.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, this Compoſition which hath been read to your Lordſhips, is recited to be in full Satisfaction and Diſcharge of Wilſon's Debt. Now we beg Leave Mr. Edwards may be asked, whether he made any Application to the Earl of Macclesfield, before the firſt Petition was preferr'd?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I had received Propoſals from Mr. Wilſon. He came to me and told me, he had a Sum of Money in his Hands, and was willing to pay the Debt to Mr. Dormer, in Proportion with his other Creditors, and asked me whether I would accept of a Compoſition, and give him a Diſcharge in full. I told him I had no Power to make a Compoſition, but however I would repreſent it to ſome of the Maſters; and accordingly I ſpoke to Mr. Hiccocks, who was then ſenior Maſter, and told him the Propoſal Mr. Wilſon had made; and I believe I mention'd it to others, but eſpecially to Mr. Hiccocks, he being the ſenior Maſter, and more particularly concerned in Mr. Dormer's Affairs. Mr. Hiccocks was of Opinion I could not ſafely make a Compoſition. I asked, What Method then was the moſt proper to be taken? if that was really all he had to pay, I had better ſecure that than have nothing. He ſaid he did not ſee why it might not be in this Caſe as in other Caſes; whether upon a Petition to my Lord Chancellor, he might not direct an Enquiry to be made by a Maſter, whether it was for the Benefit of the Parties to make ſuch Compoſition or not. Upon that I waited on my Lord Chancellor, and acquainted him with Mr. Wilſon's Propoſal. I told his Lordſhip, I thought I had not Power to do it. He ſaid, I think ſo too; I don't ſee that you have Power to do it. Said I, I am informed that it is uſual in Caſes of this Nature, to apply to the Court by Petition, that it may be referred to a Maſter, to ſee whether the accepting of this Compoſition be for the Benefit of the Parties concerned or not. Yes, ſays my Lord, I think that is very proper, that will indemnify you, I would have you prefer a Petition; which accordingly I did.

Mr. Lutwyche. I would beg Leave to ask in Relation to what he mentions, that it was taken Notice of that he had no Power to make ſuch Compoſition, whether any thing was ſaid whether my Lord Macclesfield had ſuch a Power?

Mr. Edwards. No, there was nothing ſaid of that.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether any of the Suitors were acquainted with this intended Compoſition?

Mr. Edwards. No.

Mr. Sol. General. Did my Lord Macclesfield give any Direction to give Notice to any of the Suitors?

Mr. Edwards. No.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked if he himſelf attended Mr. Hiccocks when Mr. Wilſon was before Mr. Hiccocks?

Mr. Edwards. I am not ſure I was there at any time with Mr. Wilſon.

Mr. Plummer. If he knows what Methods were taken to know what Mr. Wilſon was worth?

Mr. Edwards. I underſtood that Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers, the two ſenior Maſters, upon Mr. Dormer's abſenting himſelf, had Mr. Dormer's Accompts laid before them, and that they were directed to inſpect thoſe Matters; and I was informed they did look into Dormer's Books, and had alſo the Peruſal and Inſpection of Mr. Wilſon's Books, to ſee how Mr. Dormer's Affairs ſtood in thoſe Books.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Edwards may be asked if any Body was employ'd for the Suitors on their Behalf?

Mr.

Mr. Edwards. I was before Mr. Hiccocks, but not preſent with Mr. Wilſon.

Mr. Plummer. I ask if any Body on the Suitors Behalf was before Mr. Hiccocks, when Mr. Wilſon was there, to ſee and croſs-examine him?

Mr. Edwards. I don't remember there was.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Edwards may be asked whether this Petition is of his own Hand-writing?

Mr. Edwards. No, my Lords.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Do you know whoſe it is?

Mr. Edwards. It is my Clerk's Hand.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether the two laſt Lines were ſtruck out before the Anſwer to the Petition, and by what Hand?

Mr. Edwards. I don't know when they were ſtruck out.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we will beg Leave to mention what it is. At the End of the firſt Petition, the Maſter deſires an Indemnification by the Order of the Court: Part of the Petition is, that he may be indemnified and ſaved harmleſs in making ſuch Compoſition. But that is ſtruck out before the Anſwer, which ſhews, as I humbly apprehend, the very Notice that the Earl of Macclesfield himſelf took, how dangerous and hazardous that Tranſaction was.

Read the Words.

Clerk reads. And that your Petitioner may be indemnified and ſaved harmleſs in making ſuch Compoſition.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Do theſe Words ſtand now in the Reading?

Clerk. No, they are razed out.

Mr. Edwards. I remember this was a Paper that I laid before the honourable Committee. I was a little ſurprized to ſee thoſe Words ſtruck out; but when they were ſtruck out I can't ſay, nor by whom.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, if they were ſtruck out before he delivered the Petition into the Committee?

Mr. Edwards. Yes they were.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, we deſire he may be asked how much he hath received of this Compoſition?

Lord Lechmere. I deſire him to explain himſelf, whether theſe Words were ſtruck out after the Petition delivered, and before the Order made by the noble Earl?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I don't remember ever to have taken Notice, that thoſe Words were ſtruck out, till I had Occaſion to look for it to lay it before the Committee.

Lord Lechmere. Whether he hath any Doubt whether they were ſtruck out before they were delivered into the Committee?

Mr. Edwards. They were ſtruck out before I delivered them into the Committee.

Mr. Sol. Gen. In whoſe Cuſtody was this Petition?

Mr. Edwards. I believe part of the Time in Mr. Hiccocks's; Mr. Hiccocks ſent it to me, and I have had it ever ſince.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether he ſtruck out theſe Words that were inſerted for his own Indemnification?

Mr. Edwards. No, upon my Oath I did not.

Earl of Abingdon. As I apprehend, there was no Commiſſion of Bankrupcy againſt Wilſon, therefore I would know what Method was taken to inform the Court of the real Subſtance and Ability of Wilſon before this Compoſition was made?

Mr. Edwards. I know of no other Application made to the Court by Mr. Wilſon.

Earl of Abingdon. Was Wilſon examined upon Oath?

Mr. Edwards. Mr. Hiccocks told me that Mr. Wilſon had made an Affidavit, that this Sum of Money which he propoſed as a Compoſition, was what he was able to pay in Proportion with the reſt of his Creditors, and that he grounded his Report thereupon.

Mr. Lutwyche. Was this Affidavit ever filed?

Mr. Edwards. No, my Lords.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, we deſire he may give an Account how much he hath received of this ten thouſand Pounds.

Mr. Edwards. The firſt Sum was fourteen hundred and odd Pounds, and the Sum of one thouſand Pounds ſince.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How much of this was of the ten thouſand Pounds?

Mr. Edwards. Only the one thouſand Pounds.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What is become of Poulter?

Mr. Edwards. Wilſon hath told me that he is in Holland or France.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was his Character, as to Subſtance, at the Time of his Compoſition?

Mr. Edwards. I never met any Body that could give an Account of his Character. All I heard of him was from Mr. Wilſon himſelf.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he would acquaint your Lordſhips when the one thouſand Pounds was paid?

Mr. Edwards. I can't recollect exactly the Time.

Mr. Lutwyche. As near as you can, before or ſince Chriſtmas?

Mr. Edwards. I believe it was in September or October laſt; I believe in October.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I deſire Mr. Edwards may inform your Lordſhips what he thought of Poulter, at the Time of the Compoſition, whether he looked upon him as a Man of Subſtance?

Mr. Edwards. I could make no Judgment of the Man, I never ſaw him before; I know nothing of him, otherwiſe than as Mr. Wilſon told me.

Mr. Sol. Gen. That is no Anſwer to my Queſtion, which is what his Opinion was as to his Subſtance at the Time of the Compoſition, whether he would have truſted him with one hundred Pounds?

Mr. Edwards. I can't tell what Anſwer to give to it; Wilſon repreſented him to me as a Man able to pay the Debt; and from his Repreſentation I believed that Poulter was ſufficient.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Whether he enquired into Poulter's Character?

Mr. Edwards. There was no Body I knew to enquire of.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he enquire, or did he not?

Mr. Edwards. I asked Mr. Wilſon as many Queſtions as I could, and what his Opinion was about him. He told me he believed he was able to pay his Debts, and he told me one Helbut a Jew, who was his Bail, could tell his Subſtance. I happen'd to meet Helbut at the Rainbow Coffee-Houſe, and I asked him if he knew Poulter. He ſaid Yes. Says I, is he a Man of any Subſtance, What is he? No, ſays he, I believe he is in very mean Circumſtances. This is all I ever asked.

Sol. Gen. What was your Opinion of this Man's Abilities?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I told you that as to the account I had of him, Mr. Wilſon gave me a great aſſurance that he was a Man of Ability.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether Mr. Wilſon hath not paid his whole Debt to ſeveral other Creditors?

Mr. Edwards. I am inform'd he hath paid his full Debt to ſome Creditors.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire he may be ask'd, what Directions he received from my Lord Macclesfield to inquire into this Man's Circumſtances?

Mr. Edwards. I had no Directions.

Mr. Plummer. Whether any Inquiry was made by the Earl of Macclesfield?

Mr. Edwards. Not as I know of.

Mr. Lutwyche. I think he mentioned one Helbut as his Bail: I deſire to know whether there was a Suit commenced for this Debt aſſigned?

Mr. Edwards. I underſtood it was for this Debt aſſigned, which Wilſon recovered at Law.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether Mr. Poulter hath appeared here and been eſteemed ſolvent, or a Perſon quite gone away?

Mr. Edwards. I have not ſeen Mr. Poulter, nor any that have ſeen him, for ſome conſiderable time.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I beg Leave to make one Obſervation, and it is to ſave your Lordſhips time; that is, That you would be pleaſed to obſerve in the Proceedings upon this Article, the ſeveral Acts and Orders made by the Earl of Macclesfield relating to this Deficiency of Dormer's, do take Notice of his Deficiency, and you'll find the Earl himſelf doing one Act which makes a Deficiency; that is, compounding a Debt due from Wilſon to Dormer; and therefore thoſe Orders having been read before your Lordſhips, you will pleaſe to retain them in your Memory, till we come to the 6th Article, wherein it is charged that there was a Deficiency in Dormer's Office, and there we ſhall ſhew that this noble Lord declared that he never knew of any Deficiency; and by an Order made in Court, pronounced by himſelf, he then did direct that a Maſter ſhould inquire if there was any Deficiency in this Office; ſo that thoſe publick Acts won't be neceſſary to be read over again upon that Article, but as now produced, will be ſufficient to prove the Notice the noble Earl had of this Deficiency, and that even he made part of the Deficiency himſelf.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we have done upon theſe two Articles we have opened.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, if the Gentlemen have done, we deſire to ask ſome Queſtions, and firſt we beg Leave that he may be askt, whether any of the Maſters were acquainted with this Agreement or Compoſition with Mr. Wilſon?

Mr. Edwards. I don't remember that any were, but Mr. Hiccocks.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire he may recollect whether there was any Conſultation between him and any other Maſter, as to the Manner that this Compoſition ſhould be made, before it was accepted, and whether it was a reaſonable Compoſition or not?

Mr. Edwards. I mentioned it to two or three other Maſters at the publick Office, but I can't charge my Memory particularly who they were.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Was that before the time that the Compoſition was made?

Mr. Edwards. Before the time I applied to my Lord Macclesfield.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I deſire that Mr. Edwards may inform your Lordſhips from whom it was that he received this Information, that ſeveral of the Creditors of Wilſon were paid their full Debts?

Mr. Edwards. The firſt Perſon that informed me was Sir Laurence Carter; I happened to be at his Chambers, and naming to me the Affair of Wilſon, he told me his Brother Mr. Thomas Carter had received 120 l. which Mr. Wilſon owed him, and which was his whole Sum.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire to know when it was that he received that Sum?

Mr. Edwards. There was no time mentioned when that was paid him: As near as I can recollect the time, when Sir Laurence Carter told me this, it was ſoon after the Compoſition.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I deſire he may recollect, whether this Payment was made before the Compoſition or after; did not he ſay it was before the Compoſition?

Mr. Edwards. No, I don't remember that.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether he knows any thing of this Payment to Mr. Carter of his own Knowledge?

Mr. Edwards. No, I don't know it of my own Knowledge, but I believe it to be very true.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Since he had this Information of one Debt being paid intirely, tho' he had compounded with others, I deſire he may be ask'd whether he ever charg'd Mr. Wilſon with it?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, my Lords, I did: A little after I went to Mr. Wilſon, and I told him that I was informed he had paid Mr. Thomas Carter his full Demand, and it was rumoured about that he had paid ſeveral others their full Debts, and that it look'd unfair. Says he, this Money was lent me by my particular Friends, to pay off ſome little ſtraggling Debts to keep me up in my Buſineſs, and therefore I was unwilling he ſhould loſe it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Whether did he apprehend this to be a new Debt contracted ſince his Failure, or an old one due before?

Mr. Edwards. I don't know when the Debt was contracted.

Mr. Com. Serj. I apprehend he ſays, that this Money was lent him by ſome Friends to ſet him up again?

Mr. Lutwyche. Really, my Lords, we would not interrupt the Gentlemen, but I take it, what they are going on with is not Evidence. We muſt ſubmit it, whether what Mr. Wilſon ſaid is Evidence, either on the one Side or on the other?

Mr. Com. Serj. We muſt humbly be in your Lordſhips Judgment, whether this kind of Evidence be not as proper on our Side as on the other? moſt of the Evidence Mr. Edwards has given to affect the noble Earl, has been only Informations he has had from Wilſon or Sir Laurence Carter, and yet now the learned Manager objects the ſame Information muſt not be admitted as Evidence on the other Side. I apprehend if any Favour is to be ſhewn on either Side, it ſhould rather go on in the Support of Innocence.

Lords. Go on, go on.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, we don't oppoſe their going on, we only beg Leave to ſet your Lordſhips right. We did not give a tittle of Evidence of what Mr. Wilſon ſaid: We have proved the Petitions, we have proved the Orders, we have proved the Facts; we did not mention a Word of Sir Laurence Carter, it ſprung from this Examination; but we are willing they may go on, if your Lordſhips think fit.

Earl of Macclesfield. My Lords, I apprehend there is no Occaſion to give your Lordſhips any trouble. If what this Gentleman hath ſaid, with relation to Mr. Wilſon's Payment to his Creditors is no Evidence, it needs no Anſwer.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Edwards may inform your Lordſhips, whether or no there was any Conſultation among the Maſters relating to this matter, and what their Opinion was?

Mr. Edwards. I don't know of any Conſultation about it.

Mr. Com. Serj. We deſire that he may inform your Lordſhips, whether he made any Acknowledgment for his being admitted into his Office, and to whom this Money was paid, and to what Purpoſe, and how applied?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, the Steps I took to be admitted into my Office, if your Lordſhips will give me leave to trouble your Lordſhips with the Narrative, were theſe. Firſt, I applied to Mr. Godfrey one of the Maſters, with whom I had moſt Acquaintance: I told him I heard Mr. Dormer's Office would be diſpoſed of; he told me he believed it would. Says I, if I could be accepted I have ſome Thoughts of treating for it, what is the uſual method in thoſe Caſes to be recommended to my Lord Chancellor? Says he, you muſt apply to my Lord's Secretary Mr. Cottingham; accordingly I did, and I told Mr. Cottingham that I had heard Mr. Dormer's Office was to be diſpoſed of. Mr. Cottingham told me it was to be diſpoſed of. I then talk'd to him about the Terms. Mr. Cottingham told me as to the Price and the Perſon, my Lord Macclesfield had left it intirely to the other Maſters; for whatſoever that Place could fetch, was intended to go towards making up Mr. Dormer's Deficiency. Upon that, my Lords, I went again to Mr. Godfrey, and after a Meeting or two, I concluded to give five thouſand Pounds if I could be admitted. Whether Mr. Godfrey, or Mr. Cottingham, or who went to my Lord I can't tell. I had not the Honour to ſee my Lord till I was admitted: But upon theſe Terms I was approved. I had Direction, I can't ſay whether Mr. Godfrey or Mr. Cottingham gave me the Directions, that I ſhould pay my Money into the Hands of Mr. Rogers the then ſenior Maſter; accordingly I did pay five thouſand Pounds, and in three or four Days after I had the Honour to be admitted and ſworn in.

Mr. Strange. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether at the time of his Admiſſion any Preſents was made by him to the Earl of Macclesfield or to his Secretary?

Mr. Edwards. None at all, but the Secretary's Fees as uſual in thoſe Caſes.

Mr. Strange. Whether at the time he agreed to pay the Sum of five thouſand Pounds for the Office, he knew how the Money was to be apply'd?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, Mr. Godfrey told it me when I went back to him from Mr. Cottingham; I remember to have asked him ſeveral Queſtions, and made him ſeveral Propoſals relating to the Office, for we differed a great deal about its Value; I think I firſt propoſed three thouſand Pounds for it; but he diſliking that and ſome other Offers I made him, I deſired to know how much it was that my Lord Macclesfield inſiſted upon? to which he anſwered, that it was not my Lord's Intention to take any thing for the Admittance, but that he had left it to the Diſpoſal of the Maſters, to make the moſt of it for the Benefit of the Office.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether he knows how this Money was diſpoſed of, and to what Uſe employed?

Mr. Edwards. I can't remember the time, but ſome ſhort time before Mr. Rogers ſurrendred his Office, he paid me back this five thouſand Pounds which I in a little time paid to the Suitors of the Court.

Mr. Strange. Whether before he ſurrendred his Office, he had any Diſcourſe with the Maſters how Mr. Dormer's Debts were ſecured?

Mr. Edwards. No otherwiſe than upon this Treaty. I told Mr. Cottingham, I hear there is a Diſcourſe of a Deficiency in Mr. Dormer's Office; ſays he, I believe there is, but how much I can't tell; but that can be no Objection to you, becauſe you are to anſwer for no more than you receive. Matters are all ſettled and taken Care of, that what Deficiency ſoever there is ſhall be made good.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. By whom?

Mr. Edwards. He did not ſay by whom, or in what Manner.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Had you any Diſcourſe with any other Maſter?

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I beg leave to make one Obſervation. The Counſel ſays with any other Maſter, and the Gentleman at the Bar ſays it was Mr. Cottingham told him ſo.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. This Gentleman I am examining amining is one of the Masters, therefore it is not improper to ask whether he had any Discourse with any other of the Masters?

Mr. Edwards. I made the same Objection to Mr. Godfrey, and he answered me much the same. Mr. Godfrey said he could not tell what the Deficiency was, but whatsoever it was, that would be all settled and made good.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. As he had this Discourse with Mr. Godfrey, I desire he may be ask'd, whether he hath not likewise had some Discourse with Mr. Rogers how this Deficiency was to be made good?

Mr. Edwards. No, I don't remember I had any Discourse with Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I desire he may inform your Lordships, whether at any other time he had any Discourse with any of the Masters about this matter?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I often talk'd upon this Subject with the Masters, as a matter which very much concern'd my Office. This I mentioned at the time I came in. They were then all of Opinion that this Deficiency was to be made good. I don't remember that any Body told me in what method or particular way it was to be made good.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he would inform your Lordships, as near as he can remember, whether it was said that it would be made good, or that it was to be made good?

Mr. Edwards. I can't remember the distinct Words, I took it to have the same tendency and meaning.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I desire he may be ask'd, whether he hath not several times and on many Occasions heard the Masters declare, that this Deficiency was to be made good, and by the Masters?

Mr. Edwards. I have heard them several times declare, that they did not doubt but it would be made good; but I never heard them say that it would be made good by the Masters. I have often heard the Masters say they would not make it good.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I desire he may be ask'd, whether about the time that the Masters advanced the five hundred Pounds apiece, he did not hear them declare how this Deficiency of Dormer was to be made up?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, when I came into the Office, I think the very Day that I was admitted, Mr. Rogers paid five hundred Pounds; eight more paid five hundred Pounds apiece, some at one time, some at another; they did not all pay at the same time. That I heard was to go towards making up this Deficiency; but how far the Masters intended to contribute further I can't say.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he may inform your Lordships, whether he did not apprehend that the making up of this Deficiency was a great Concern to him?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, I think it hath been of a great Concern to me.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire to know then how it comes to pass that he inquired no more into it?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I remember I was once asking some Questions relating to that Account, and it was told me, that the State of this Deficiency had been laid before my Lord Chancellor before I was admitted. Upon that I did conclude, that this Contribution of the Masters, of five hundred Pounds apiece, had been in Concert with my Lord Chancellor. I understood it to be so; I don't know whether my Lord gave Orders that it should be so.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire he may be asked who it was that told him so?

Mr. Edwards. I think Mr. Hiccocks told me so.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we have done.

Mr. Robins. I desire to know what Answer Mr. Hiccocks gave to the Questions he asked?

Mr. Edwards. Only that my Lord was acquainted with it, and had the State of Mr. Dormer's Office laid before him.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, if they have done, we only beg leave to observe, that they have been establishing the Notice of this whole Deficiency on the Earl, upon the first Vacancy in the Office, even before Mr. Edwards came in; so that the whole Transaction afterwards proceeded upon a full Notice of the Circumstances and State of the Office. The Evidence of the Contribution of the Masters, and of the Earl of Macclesfield, towards making good this Deficiency, prevents, in a great measure, our bringing any Proof to the fifteenth Article, which is now going to be opened.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, if they have done, I only beg leave to observe, that the very letting Mr. Edwards pay his five thousand Pounds to the Deficiency of the Office, and my Lord Macclesfield's not taking it to his own Use, is a sufficient Proof of his Knowledge of the Deficiency. And as to this Composition, I have one Question more to ask. I think he says he mention'd it to two or three Masters; I desire to know if he did so, and whether they approv'd it?

Mr. Edwards. I think one of the two or three Masters was Mr. Lightboun. He was there, and he did say, as I remember, that he thought we might as well lose the whole, as take so small a part of such a Debt.

Mr. Plummer. I desire another Question, and that is, if he consulted any of Mr. Wilson's Creditors before he made this Composition?

Mr. Edwards. No, my Lords, I did not know any of them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. How much did he receive in the whole from the Masters?

Mr. Edwards. I received five hundred Pounds from nine of them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Did any of the Masters, and which, refuse?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, Mr. Lightboun refused.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. For what Reason?

Mr. Edwards. That I can't tell; he did not give any particular Reason.

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I believe it may be necessary to trouble your Lordships with asking another Question: Whether this Discourse in Relation to this Composition, was before or after the Composition made?

Mr. Edwards. I believe it was before.

Mr.

Mr. Com. Serj. Then I desire to know whether Mr. Edwards, upon that or any other Occasion, acquainted the noble Earl of it?

Mr. Edwards, No, I don't remember I did.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, I believe we have done with these two Articles.

Sir John Rushout. My Lords, the Commons proceed to the fifteenth Article against Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, and they have entrusted me to lay open to your Lordships the Subject matter of this, and the two ensuing Articles, and the Nature of the Evidence they think proper to produce to make good the Charge in these Articles; by which it will appear to your Lordships very fully, that the Crimes charged upon the Person at your Bar, which have already been manifested in so many Instances, did not proceed from Mistake, or mere Negligence; altho' these would have been Faults not excusable in a Person placed in so high a Station, but that they were the Effects of Art and Contrivance, formed to carry on and promote a corrupt and illegal Gain and Advantage to himself.

It may seem at first sight very surprizing, and may not readily obtain Belief with your Lordships, that a Person rais'd by his Majesty's abundant Goodness, to Stations of so great Honour and Profit, who had received large Additions to a plentiful Income by successive and repeated Grants from the royal Bounty, that such a Person should condescend to receive, much more that he should use Arts and Stratagems to obtain further Supplies to his insatiable Thirst of Lucre.

But this your Lordships will plainly see to be the Case, when we have given our Proofs to the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth Articles. Your Lordships have already heard that there was a very great Deficiency and Loss of the Suitors Money in the Office of Mr. Dormer, a late Master in the Court of Chancery; that the Earl at your Bar then presiding in that Court, well knew that there was such a Deficiency; that instead of applying Remedies to redress the Evil, he made use of several Methods to cover and conceal it; it being very obvious for him to reflect, that if such a Deficiency was publickly known, and not effectually remedied, none would ever after purchase a Master in Chancery's Place, at least not at such exorbitant Prices to which the Purchase had lately been raised.

What then must be done? here was like to be an entire Stop put to this Branch of Revenue which had yielded so plentifully, and proved so beneficial to his Lordship.

The Contrivance therefore is to oblige the Masters, who had already paid for their Places, to pay again towards making good this Deficiency, and by an artful drawing them to a Compliance in this Point, to conceal and continue the Mischief.

This is what the Commons charge in the fifteenth Article, that the Earl of Macclesfield, to conceal the Deficiency in Mr. Dormer's Office, did order several Masters of the Court to bring in their Accounts of the Cash, Effects, and Securities belonging to the Suitors which were in their Hands, with Intent to terrify the Masters thereby, so far, as to oblige them to contribute large Sums to answer the Demands of that Office: And further to engage them to a Compliance in that Respect, he represented to them, that unless they would do it, the Money and Effects of the Suitors would be taken out of their Hands: That by this means he did induce nine of the Masters to contribute five hundred Pounds apiece, which several of them did out of the Suitors Money in their Hands; and this being done, they were never obliged to bring in their Accounts.

What Answer is given to this Charge? The Answer hath been read, and I need not trouble your Lordships with a Recital of it. But the Earl admits that he gave such Orders that the Masters should bring in their Accounts:

That several Masters did afterwards pay and contribute as is charged:

That they were not afterwards obliged to bring in their Accounts.

But then in Excuse he alledges, That this was not done to terrify the Masters to make any Contribution to the Demands on Dormer's Office:

That what they did contribute, he believes they paid freely, and out of their own Money:

That he believes he follow'd therein a Precedent of the like Nature in the Failure of Dr. Edisbury.

That he continued to call for the Accounts, but was convinced how tedious a Work it would be, what Obstruction it would give to the Business of the Court, so he laid it aside; and observes, that what is lately done with respect to the Accounts of the Masters, shews the insuperable Difficulties of such an Undertaking.

From this Answer your Lordships may reflect, how just the Observation is, that the Commons have made in their Replication, when they say, the Earl of Macclesfield hath industriously avoided giving a direct and particular Answer to several matters positively and certainly alledged against him, which from the Nature of the Facts themselves must necessarily lye in his own Knowledge.

For he admits the Fact charged upon him by the Article; but to that part of it which charges that this was done to conceal the Deficiency in Dormer's Office, he makes no Answer at all.

And where the Article charges, that in order to obtain what is own'd to be done, he did represent to the Masters, that unless they would comply, the Money and Effects of the Suitors should be taken out of their Hands; to this likewise he makes no Answer.

My Lords, It may be difficult for me who am little conversant in Law Proceedings, to lay this matter in its strongest Light before your Lordships. But I take the Case to be this.

The Commons charge, that the Earl of Macclesfield, to conceal the Deficiency in Dormer's Office, ordered the Masters to bring before him their Accounts of the Suitors Effects, and threatned that unless they would contribute towards that Deficiency, those Effects should be taken out of their Hands: They contribute, the matter is dropt, and no Accounts are ever brought before him.

The

The Earl acknowledges that he order'd those Accounts to be brought before him; that upon his giving that Order several Masters contributed 500*l.* apiece, and that afterwards the bringing the Accounts was dropt; that this was done to conceal Dormer's Deficiency, and procured by the Menace of taking the Effects of the Suitors out of the Hands of the Masters cannot be denied: What part of the Charge then remains unadmitted? I must submit it to your Lordships, whether, upon what the Earl hath allowed in expres Terms by his Answer, as well as what he hath admitted by not answering at all, the whole Charge of this Article doth not stand confessed, and the Commons might demand Judgment against the Earl, upon this Article, upon his own Confession.

But the Earl adds some things by way of Excuse, I suppose, or Extenuation of the Offence; how immaterially and how evasively your Lordships will soon observe.

He denies, that the ordering the Masters to bring in their Accounts, was done to terrify them to make any Contribution towards Dormer's Deficiency, and yet there is not the least Appearance of any other End, or Design, for which it could be done; nor does he mention, or so much as pretend to any other End which with the least Colour of Reason could be intended by it; he says, indeed, he had a Mind to know the State and Condition of the several Offices, that he might be able to make proper Regulations concerning them; but the thing was dropt before he had this Knowledge given him, and before he made any one Regulation in the matter; and yet he solemnly declares that this was his real and whole Intention: If it was his Intention how came he to alter it so soon? Could it not last till one Regulation was made in a Matter which wanted it so much?

Your Lordships will from hence judge, That the Crime which the Commons charge upon the Person at your Bar was not a Sin of Ignorance; he was informed of the Miscarriage of the Officers of his Court, he was conscious that it needed Regulation, he had sometime a Thought and Intention to make such Regulation; but, alas, it soon proved abortive, and the intended Reformation, however necessary for the Honour of the Court, as well as the Safety and Advantage of the Subject, was soon laid aside: A Conduct so weak and so greatly inconsistent, as not to be accounted for in any Person, who had not been capable of pleading Innocence and Pardon to the same Fact.

However his Lordship having found it necessary to excuse this proceeding with the Masters, by pretending an Intention to make some Regulations concerning them; it became as necessary, in the next Place, to make some Apology for not proceeding to such a Regulation.

And for this he says, that it would be a difficult and tedious Work:

That it would be an Obstruction to the Business of the Court:

That what has been lately done shews the insuperable Difficulties of the Undertaking.

I may reasonably fear I should grow tedious to your Lordships if I should attempt to take notice of all the Inconsistences, Inconsequences and Evasions in the Answer to this single Article.

Upon what Account was the Person now at your Bar advanced to the highest Station of the Law; intrusted with the distribution of Justice and Equity in his Majesty's supreme Court in Westminster-Hall, if it was not to secure the Property of the Subject to those to whom it did in Conscience belong? And upon what Account were the Moneys brought into Court deposited with the Masters, but only for safe Custody, till it appeared to whom Equity wou'd determin the Right?

But when it was once manifest that those, who were employed in this Trust, had shamefully broken it, and by notorious Mismanagement were likely to bring Ruin to all the Suitors of the Court, was it fit to cherish and cover up the Evil because it was a difficult and tedious Work to redress it? Was it likely to be less difficult by the Delay, or rather did not every Day propagate and increase the Mischief, and make it less capable of Remedy? Or could any thing be more proper for the Business of the Court?

Your Lordships have too great Sagacity not to discern the Weakness of such an Excuse, nor will you easily be persuaded to believe, That the Earl of Macclesfield was only going on in a Path his Predecessors trod before him, or that he is to be sheltred, because what hath been since done hath met with Difficulties in the Undertaking.

It is known, how upon the first Failure, in the Time of his Predecessors, an effectual Remedy was immediately applied; and that those, who have since attempted to give an helping Hand, have prevented any new Eruption of the Evil complained of; and if the Undertaking was attended with Difficulties, their Care and commendable Zeal for the publick Service have already been able to surmount them in some Measure; altho' the gross Encouragements given by the Earl of Macclesfield had laid such a strong Foundation for those Difficulties, as if he had designed really to make them insuperable, that they might serve for such a Sort of Excuse as he now endeavours to draw from them.

But the Earl alledges further, that he believes the Masters, who contributed towards Dormer's Deficiency, did it freely and out of their own Money; and that in bringing them to contribute he followed the Precedent in Dr. Edisbury's Case.

I need not trouble your Lordships long upon this Branch of the Article, since no one besides his Lordship can well believe the Masters contributed freely; and the Proof we shall lay before your Lordships upon this Head will give full Satisfaction, that none of them did it freely, nor all of them out of their own Money; nor is it the Crime the Commons charge, that the Masters were prevailed on to contribute towards the Deficiency; but that the Earl, whose high Station made it his Duty, when he was inform'd of the Deficiency, to take Care to redress it, did not, as in the Case of Dr. Edisbury, provide that the whole Money belonging to the Suitors should be effectually answered; but instead of following that Precedent in the just and honest Use of it, he turned it to answer his own corrupt Purposes, and to conceal from public Notice, that Loss to the Suitors which it was his Duty to have wholly prevented.

The next Article we proceed to is the sixteenth, which charges, that one Elizabeth Chitty having obtained an Order of the 17*th* of March, in the tenth Year of his present Majesty, whereby Mr.

Edwards, who ſucceeded in Mr. Dormer's Office, was order'd to pay 1000 l. part of a very large Sum due to her, which had been paid into Dormer's Hands; Mr. Edwards complained of this as an Hardſhip to him, who had never received the Money; upon this the Earl would have perſuaded the reſt of the Maſters to pay the Money to prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry, and they refuſing, he paid it himſelf to one Mr. Lochmann for the Uſe of the ſaid Mrs. Chitty; with Intimations however, that ſhe muſt not expect any more of the 10000 l. which had been paid on her Account into Dormer's Hands.

Your Lordſhips will be ſurprized at the Detection here made both of the Guilt and the Boldneſs of the Offender; that the Perſon, who is ſo ſenſible of his Crime, as to tell the Maſters this Matter would affect both himſelf and them, who diſcerns the monſtrous Conſequences of the Miſchief before him, who foreſees the Puniſhment of that Crime by a Parliamentary Enquiry; that this Perſon, inſtead of applying Remedies to the Evil, ſhould uſe little Artifices only to conceal it.

What Anſwer gives the Earl to this Charge? He admits the Order made, and that Mr. Edwards refuſed to pay the 1000 l. that he himſelf paid the Money, and told Lochmann that was all they muſt expect from him; but he does not believe he had any Diſcourſe with the Maſters to perſuade them to pay the 1000 l. to Lochmann.

Your Lordſhips muſt be convinced of the Guilt when the Offender himſelf hath not the Aſſurance to deny it; he cannot deny but that he knew and repreſented the Conſequences that would enſue what was done; that it would produce a Parliamentary Enquiry; that it would affect himſelf as well as the Maſters, and that it would hazard the Forfeiture of their Offices. Your Lordſhips have now an Opportunity to vindicate the Honour of Parliaments, and to have this Inſtruction to Poſterity; that thoſe who foreſee their unwarrantable Actions will give Occaſion for a Parliamentary Enquiry, ſhall not be able by any Contrivances, by any Means whatever, to evade the Juſtice of it.

As to the laſt Part of this Article, which charges, that, on a Motion in a Cauſe, Harper againſt Caſe and others, relating to 260 l. which having been paid into Mr. Dormer's Hands was in danger of being loſt, the Earl falſly and deceitfully declared he had heard there was a Deficiency in Dormer's Office, but knew nothing of it only as public News: The Commons will give ſufficient Evidence to your Lordſhips of the Truth of this Charge.

The Earl indeed gives a large Account of this Cauſe and the Orders made in it, and then concludes, he believes he expreſſed himſelf to this Effect, That he had indeed heard of Dormer's Deficiency, but that it had never come judicially before him upon Complaint of any of the Suitors of the Court; that ſeveral Circumſtances taken Notice of at large had concurr'd thereto, and adds, that he ſaid he did not know how all theſe things would come out, and expreſſed himſelf to that effect and no other; and upon all this Circumlocution in the Anſwer, without any denial of the Words as they ſtand charged, we have reaſon to believe your Lordſhips would be very well ſatisfied without further Proof, that the Words mentioned in the Article were undoubtedly uſed by the Earl of Macclesfield.

It is further obſerv'd by the Earl, that this happened after ſuch time as the Maſters Accounts had been laid before the Lords of the Council, and had been under the Examination of the Judges and others to whom they had been referr'd by his Majeſty; and there may be ſome reaſon to doubt whether the Knowledge of a Deficiency had been ſo ſoon declared by his Lordſhip, if the Examination under which his Majeſty's abundant Goodneſs and Care for his People had put thoſe Accounts, had not already laid open and made a public Diſcovery of it.

The ſeventeenth Article charges, that tho' the Earl of Macclesfield knew of the great Deficiency in Dormer's Office, yet to conceal it, in order to carry on his corrupt and unjuſt Deſigns, he made Orders upon Mr. Edwards for the payment of ſeveral Sums, which were paid without Regard to the Proportion the reſt of the Suitors were juſtly entitled to out of Dormer's Effects, and conſequently to their great Loſs and Prejudice: To this the Earl anſwers with his uſual Candour, That he never endeavour'd to conceal the Deficiency, but as he was under a full Perſuaſion it would in due time be made good; that he did not think it incumbent on him ex officio to make a Declaration of an Average; that he doth not know any Order was made by him for Mr. Edwards to pay Money lodged with Mr. Dormer, but believes ſeveral Orders were made by the Court for that Purpoſe.

Your Lordſhips upon the bare reciting the Words of the Anſwer, will perceive the Art and Fallacy of the Anſwerer; he doth not know any Order was made by him, but believes ſeveral were made by the Court; as if he could hope to make your Lordſhips believe, he was a Stranger to, and unconcern'd in the Orders made by the Court, of which he was the only Judge.

He admits he did endeavour to conceal the Deficiency, but was perſuaded it would be made good in due time, without acquainting your Lordſhips with any Grounds for that Perſuaſion, or even mentioning when he thought that due time would come.

He intimates it was incumbent to make a Declaration of an Average, but thought it not incumbent upon him to make it ex officio: He could not deny it to be the moſt equal Rule, that if a Loſs was inevitable, an Average ought to be made; that the Loſs might be born equally and in Proportion among all: He could not deny the making Orders to pay ſome was inconſiſtent with, and deſtructive to this Equality; and he could not however think it incumbent on him to do this ex officio, and yet it belonged to to no body's Office but his own to effect it.

Thus your Lordſhips may obſerve how, to every Article, the Anſwer either admits the Charge or uſes looſe, general, or foreign Circumlocutions to evade it, when the Evidence of the Fact will not allow him to deny it; yet he would be thought to ſay ſomething at leaſt in excuſe: But his Knowledge of your Lordſhips ſuperiour Underſtanding, ought to have deterred him from all Expectations of impoſing upon your Lordſhips by any little Shifts and Artifices of this kind; nor ſhould he hope to paſs here the Anſwer as ſufficient, which muſt have been reported contrary, if I am rightly informed of the Practice, by any of the Maſters of his Court.

But I shall not longer detain your Lordships with Observations in matters in themselves so evident; what is admitted to every one of these three Articles is sufficient to justify the Charge of the Commons, and whatever remains but imperfectly admitted, we doubt not, by Witnesses and other Proofs, to make out to your Lordships intire Satisfaction.

Mr. Sandys. My Lords, It is a Province enjoined me likewise, to maintain the Charge exhibited by the Commons of Great Britain, in the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth Articles of their Impeachment against Thomas Earl of Macclesfield. And it is with the greater Chearfulness I undertake that Province, since I come to demand that Justice, which your Lordships are always disposed to administer, to every Subject of Great Britain; and therefore I cannot but be fully assured of your just Inclinations, to do equal Right where it is demanded by the House of Commons, the Representative Body of the whole united Kingdom.

It is very strange, that the Earl now under Prosecution; who hath been so many Years within the Walls of this House; who hath so long been Witness of your Lordships great Integrity and Wisdom, should not thereby be deterred from attempting what might subject him to your Censure. But it is still more unaccountable, that a Person, who hath had so long Experience of that Judgment and Sagacity, whereby you skilfully distinguish between right and wrong, should hope, by the Artifice of Words, and loose, general, evasive Expressions; that he should ever hope, I say, My Lords, by such Fig-Leaves as these, to hide himself from the Eyes of your Lordships impartial Justice.

The worthy Gentleman, who hath preceded me upon this Head, hath so fully open'd the several Articles now under Consideration, and hath so clearly detected the Sophistry, and Insufficiency of the Answers that are given to them, that I shall not need to be long upon that Head; it would indeed be difficult to add any thing new to what hath already been observed, did not the innumerable Fallacies and Inconsistencies with which his Answer abounds, continually supply fresh Materials for Observation.

But I shall content my self only to take notice upon the Answer to the fifteenth Article, that the Earl stands in a Manner convicted by his own Confession: He admits the Fact, but would avoid the Consequence by saying, that he really intended to make the Masters bring in their Accounts, altho' he did not do it: If it was intended, why was it not done? It was a difficult and a tedious Work.

I am surprised, my Lords, to find that any Person should expect to satisfy your Lordships, by so weak, and frivolous an Excuse.

A Person who presides in the highest Court in Westminster-Hall, is informed of some unwarrantable Practices of the Officers to whom the Money of the Suitors is intrusted, which for want of due Care hath already proved very pernicious, and must in time prove destructive to the Property of all the Suitors of that Court, unless some speedy Check be put to this growing Evil: is convinced the Matter needs Regulation; but he lets it go on, because it would be a difficult and tedious Work to redress it.

In moral Evil, my Lords, the Continuation of the Practice of an ill Habit, because it is difficult to break it, is so far from extenuating, that it is justly esteemed to aggravate the Fault; and I don't doubt but that your Lordships will have the same Sentiments in this Case; for since it was necessary to apply a Remedy, the sooner it was done the better, and the Difficulty of the Work should have been a Spur, rather than a Check to a vigorous Endeavour for redressing it.

In his Answer to the sixteenth Article, your Lordships will observe the same Prevarication spread through the whole: The Widow Chitty having a considerable sum of Money, to which she was intituled, brought into Court, and deposited in Mr. Dormer's Hands for the safe Custody of it only, petitions for 1000*l.* part of her own Money; such a Petition could not be denied intirely, without bringing on a speedy Inquiry of the Causes and Occasions of the Embezzlement which had happen'd in that Office; and the Discovery must have brought on a Necessity of remedying the Evil, that would thereby have been made so publick, and so notorious.

An Order therefore is granted, that the 1000*l.* should be paid, but then the Difficulty is renewed, how to make that Payment without discovering to the Publick the Mismanagement; which must have put a stop to the Sale of the Masters Places, which were disposed of at exorbitant Prices, and brought in an immense, tho' illegal Gain. Mr. Edwards would not pay it; he had no Money of Mr. Dormer's in his Hands; the next Application was made to the Masters of the Court, to see if they could be prevailed on once more to raise a Sum by Contribution amongst them; to this End they were told, that if they did not comply, Dormer's Deficiency would be discovered; and that might occasion a Parliamentary Inquiry, the Consequence of which might be, the Forfeiture of their Offices, bought contrary to the Statute of Edward the sixth: that this might affect himself a little, but them much more; all this, my Lords, is charged in this Article, and not denied by the Earl, but in such a lamentable, evasive Manner, as betrays more Guilt than an open, an ingenuous Confession.

It passes my Observation, in that little View I have been able to make of past Times, that any Judge of a Court in Westminster-Hall, should own the Knowledge of so great a Crime in the Officers of his Court, as that they came into their Places contrary to Law, without any Censure, or Blame for it.

But that a Person raised by the unmerited Bounty of his Majesty, to preside in the highest Court there, to conduct the Administration of Justice agreeable to the Rules of Equity and good Conscience, as his Majesty's Vicegerent in that great Station; that such a Person should not only be conscious of the Illegality, of the Masters obtaining their Places, and a Party to such Illegality, but should have the Assurance to make use of that as an Argument, to extort Money from them, in order to prevent the Discovery, and the Punishment consequent thereto, will, I persuade my self, stir up in your Lordships the greatest Indignation.

It seems he apprehended the Terror of a Prosecution by Parliament might have some Effect upon them, and engage them to comply with his Demands, minds, altho' it had not the least Effect upon himself. It was a proper Expedient to bring them in to a Contribution of a 1000*l.* but it was not sufficient to deter him from those Practices, which justly merited such a Prosecution.

Our Ancestors thought it became them to keep in Awe the greatest Subjects in the Realm, and none were too big to be called to Account for the Wrongs and Injuries they did the Publick; the Case of Michael de la Pole in Richard the Second's Time, and Card. Woolsey in Henry the Eighth's, with many others, some of which have been already mentioned to your Lordships, are flagrant Instances of it. And we have now a just Opportunity of shewing, that we have the same regard for the Honour of Parliaments, and the Good of the People; that no one ought to presume to transgress the Laws, be his Station, or his Power never so highly advanced, upon prospect of Impunity; since a British Parliament can reach the most lofty, and punish the most insolent, corrupt Offender: So that he who is not restrained within the Limits and Boundaries of the Law out of Awe and Reverence to it, must expect to fall a Sacrifice to the Power of their Justice.

Your Lordships have here an Instance of one placed at the Head of the Law, who is conscious that his Actions are contrary to it; who makes no Scruple of avowing this, where it may serve his Interest, defies a Parliamentary Inquiry, and goes on in Practices which he knows, and professes to be illegal. Your Lordships will observe how he endeavours to shelter himself from Danger, and by an infamous Degree of Dissimulation; what he openly avows to raise a Contribution from the Masters of the Court, he more publickly denies, with design to carry a plausible Appearance in this Affair to the People.

The Deficiency of Dormer at last became a publick Clamour; it was not Mrs. Chitty only, but many others wanted their Money deposited and entrusted in the Hands of the Court, and by the Court entrusted to the Custody of the Master; and the Suitors then made open Complaint upon this Subject. In the Cause therefore of Harper and Case, a Motion being made, that 260*l.* lodged in Dormer's Hands might be paid before the Execution of the Conveyance, directed by the Court; he who had been so long informed of the shameful Embezzlement of the Money of the Suitors in Dormer's Office, who had invented so many artful Contrivances to conceal the Knowledge of it from the publick, in order to serve his own private, unjust, corrupt Designs, the Matter being now declared in open Court, he could no longer deny the Knowledge of what he was so plainly inform'd of; that therefore all By-standers might imagine his Care and Concern for the publick Good was so extraordinary, that he could not have forborn to have remedied the Mischief if he had been before apprized of it; he then publickly and falsly declared that he had heard there was a Deficiency in Dormer's Office, but that he knew nothing of it but as publick News. In the Earl's Answer, my Lords, he explains this Expression, by saying, that it never came judicially before him upon the Complaint of any of the Suitors of the Court: This I am perswaded your Lordships will think a very poor Excuse, that he who was the Protector of all the Fortunes of the Fatherless and Lunaticks, should not upon the first Intimation, or even Suspicion that they were like to be Losers, cause a strict Examination to be made into it.

It can scarce be believed a Person who has so great a Capacity to judge in what manner he ought to act, should ever descend to so low a Degree, so unworthy the Station in which he was placed, so unworthy the Dignity and Honour to which he had been advanced, as to deny the Knowledge (otherways than as News and accidental Discourse) of what he had been so frequently informed, and what he had taken Pains so long, and so deliberately to conceal.

I need not use any Words to represent to your Lordships the Indignity of such Prevarication, who will upon the first Intimation be sensible of every thing that may seem in the least Degree to depart from the Rules of Honour: It is indeed almost inconceivable, that a Person advanced to be a Part of your noble Body, should so far forget himself and you; it is what, if he could have expresly denied by his Answer, we must have despair'd to have gain'd Credit in, tho' we could have proved it by inferior Witnesses; but his Answer will sufficiently convince your Lordships of the Truth of the Allegation; for he who could not directly deny a Charge of so gross a Crime, must by his own Silence, in a Matter of so heavy a Nature, be concluded to be guilty of it.

I have already detained your Lordships so long upon this sixteenth Article, that I shall not take the liberty of trying your Patience by making any Observations upon the Seventeen, but shall leave it to the Gentleman that is appointed to assist in it.

It contains only repeated Instances of a corrupt Endeavour, still to conceal the Knowledge of that Deficiency from the Publick, which it was his Duty to have prevented; or at least to have supplied, and rather to have made it good, than have conceal'd it. What Ground or Reason could there possibly be, why a Mischief of this Kind, if it did happen by Accident, should with so much Industry be covered and continued? when that Concealment could answer no good or honest Purpose, but must by the Delay increase and grow more desperate and tend to bring Destruction and Ruin to the Suitors of the Court?

But as your Lordships, by the Proofs upon the former Articles, had an Opportunity to take notice what large Sums of Money had been paid for the Purchase or Exchange of the Places of the Masters of the Court of Chancery; it is natural to conclude from thence, that the Masters were necessarily to be indulged in making use of the Suitors Money in their Hands in order to make up the vast Sums they had given for their Offices; and if there had been Miscarriages in Attempts of that kind (which in bold Adventures for such Ends could hardly be avoided) the Discovery of such a Mischief would have made it absolutely necessary to have removed the Money from those who had proved such unfaithful Stewards, or at least to have obliged them to have given proper Securities to indemnify those, whose Fortunes were intrusted to their Care, from any Loss which might happen by their Mismanagement; the Consequence of which Caution must unavoidably have drawn on a Retrenchment of the exorbitant Prices which of late have been given for thoſe Places.

But I need not give your Lordſhips any further Trouble, by enlarging more upon this Topick, who ought rather to make Apology for having been already ſo long upon it; the Gentleman who went before me, and he that will follow me upon this Head, will be ſufficient to give your Lordſhips more ample Satisfaction; and the Certainty of the Facts (which the Earl himſelf ſeldom hath the Aſſurance to deny, but only attempts by falſe Colours to avoid the Inferences from them) will, where-ever there is need or occaſion, be ſupported, and made good, by full Evidence.

Mr. Thompſon. My Lords, I am commanded by the Commons to aſſiſt in maintaining the fifteenth, ſixteenth, and ſeventeenth Articles of their Impeachment. The Gentlemen who have gone before me, have acquitted me from giving your Lordſhips any Trouble upon two of theſe Articles; and I count it my good Fortune that the Third is fallen to my Lot, ſince the Evidence to prove the Charge contain'd in it, is ſo very clear and direct, that little need be ſaid, either to ſhew the Neceſſity of the Accuſation, or the Truth of the Facts alledg'd by the Commons.

My Lords, I will avoid, as much as I can, recapitulating any Evidence which has been opened before; but the Crimes of the unfortunate Earl of Macclesfield are ſo interwoven, that it may be ſometimes neceſſary for me to look back upon Circumſtances that have been ſpoken to upon other Articles.

The Commons in the ſeventeenth Article ſet forth, "That the Earl very well knew there was "a Deficiency in Mr. Dormer's Office, and "that Mr. Edwards (his Succeſſor) had not ſuffi- "cient in his Hands to pay the whole Money due "to the Suitors." My Lords, as to the Earl's Knowledge of this Deficiency, he admits it in his Anſwer, by ſaying, "He never endeavour'd to "conceal it:" and Mr. Edwards has not only declar'd upon Oath this Day at your Bar, there was a Deficiency, but alſo, "That it was laid before my "Lord before he was admitted."

Yet "Notwithſtanding he very well knew it," the Commons aver, "That he did from time to "time make Orders for the Payment of ſeveral "Sums out of this Office," and in ſupport of this Charge, we ſhall produce divers of his Lordſhip's original Orders.

And, my Lords, I appeal to the Teſtimony of every Maſter in Chancery, who has been, or may be examined before you; I appeal to your Lordſhips Obſervations upon the Evidence you have already heard, whether or no ſuch Proceedings were not calculated, "to carry on his unjuſt Deſigns, and to "prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry."

As to the latter part of the Article, "That Sums "were paid without any regard to, or conſiderati- "on of the Proportion the reſt of the Suitors were "entitled to," we ſhall not only prove the Fact, but ſhew likewiſe that this Partiality was not carried on inadvertently, but deliberately; that this unequal Diſtribution of Right did not flow from a ſupine Neglect, or careleſs Overſight, but ſprung from a deprav'd Intention, and determin'd Corruption.

Mr. Edwards will acquaint your Lordſhips, that he forewarn'd the Earl of the Conſequences that muſt follow from his Payments, who ſtill bid him "continue paying," and Mr. Lightbown (reaſoning with him as became a Perſon aſſociated to the Chancellor) urg'd, "That he did not think any "Meaſures juſtifiable in a Court of Equity, where- "by any undue Preference might be given, and "ſome have their whole Money and others be left "in the Lurch."

So that this Miſdemeanor, this Fraud, was in "ma- "nifeſt and wilful Violation of the Truſt repos'd in "him," a Truſt, my Lords, (when faithfully executed) wherein conſiſts the Glory and Happineſs of this Kingdom. It is the Security of all our Properties, a Refuge for diſtreſt Widows, and a Protection to helpleſs Orphans; and when the Commons ſaw that Oppreſſion had poſſeſt the Seat of Juſtice, that Partiality had uſurped the Throne of Equity, that the Guarantee for our Fortunes was become the Invader of them, they beheld it with Indignation and Horror, and have applied to your Lordſhips to demand Redreſs and Vengeance.

Now, my Lords, I beg your Attention, whilſt I take a view of the Earl's Anſwer.

He ſays, "He never endeavour'd to conceal Dor- "mer's Deficiency." You will hear that he did, and alledg'd, "It would be for the Honour of the Court "to conceal it.

The accus'd Earl proceeds, "As he was under a "full Perſuaſion the ſame wou'd be made good." I dare ſay the Earl of Macclesfield will at a proper time acquaint you what were the Grounds of this "Perſuaſion." The Commons obſerve with the deepeſt Concern for the miſerable Suitors, that they have met with no Foundation, no Colour of Reaſon to induce "Them" to entertain ſuch Hopes. On the contrary, the Maſter who ſucceeded to Mr. Dormer's Office frequently repreſented to the Lord Chancellor, "The Hazards the Suitors were in from "this Deficiency."

Yet the Earl boldly aſſerts, that this very Maſter "Mr. Edwards was under a firm Perſuaſion the "whole would be made good." We ſhall convince your Lordſhips he never had the leaſt Proſpect, the leaſt Glimpſe of it; and I'm afraid the Earl and he had juſt the "ſame full and firm Per- "ſuaſion of the State of this Office."

The noble Lord goes on. "And as no Applica- "tion was made to him by Perſons concern'd to "ſtop Payment." I ſuppoſe he means before that remarkable Motion which produc'd his extraordinary Declaration in open Court.

Perhaps the learned Lord will here make another notable Diſtinction, and explain by the Words "Perſons concern'd," the "Suitors only;" and have recourſe to his old Subterfuge, "That it never "came judicially before him." We think, and no doubt your Lordſhips will think ſo too, that "Mr. "Edwards was a Perſon concern'd"; that his preſſing Applications ought to have been ſufficient, and that our Evidence is not to be defeated by ſo weak an Evaſion.

But admitting, my Lords, "That the Earl had "this full Perſuaſion, and that no Application was "made to him to ſtop Payment:" What Juſtification does he draw from thence? "That he did "not think it a Duty incumbent upon him, "ex officio, to make a Declaration of an Ave- "rage."

How contradictory, my Lords, How inconsistent is this with his Answer to the fifteenth Article! There he pleads the Case of Dr. Edisbury, and in that Case an Average was declar'd. The Precedent was follow'd to encourage Contribution, but was laid aside when it directed him to secure the Suitors their Proportions. Here I can't help observing, that as the Earl has thro' the whole Series of his Actions copied Precedents from the worst Views, so he has now quoted them in the most disadvantageous Manner. When his Predecessors took small Sums, he ventur'd by their Examples to swell his Demands to exorbitant Prices; but when their Patterns shou'd have led him to a nice and scrupulous Caution in the Choice of his Officers, he disdain'd to tread in their Footsteps. And, my Lords, This Precedent was good for the corrupt Purpose of concealing a Deficiency, but ceas'd to be so, when it was to do Justice to the injur'd Suitors. He has turn'd his Weapons upon himself, and if Dr. Edisbury guards him in one Article, he must of necessity wound him in another.

What I shall next take notice of in his Answer is, "That he does not know any Orders were "made by him except in the Case of Chitty." That Case is attended with such Circumstances, and may be follow'd by such Consequences, that he has not yet, nor will, I dare say, soon forget it: However, I presume he will recollect others when we produce his own original Orders for three several Payments, one of 400 l. another of 642 l. and a third of 2000 l.

This Evidence alone, my Lords, would support this Article, but the Earl has thoroughly confirmed the Charge in his next Sentence. "He believes "Orders have been made by the Court."

Tho' his own Orders were criminal, Orders from the Court were innocent, till they received his Stamp of Guilt, who knowing the Condition of the Office, commanded "Payments to be made as Orders came "in." The impeach'd Lord (and were this his only Offence, therefore justly impeach'd) commanded these Payments.

His Defence is again become his Accusation. Orders from the Court wou'd have ended, had he suffer'd the Master to stop Payment, but that would have dissolv'd what he took such unwarrantable Pains to conceal; and from that Concealment arose the Injuries to the Suitors; that was the malignant Ground-work of his infamous Designs, and is now the Subject of our just Charge.

Certainly the Earl did not mean here obliquely to insinuate that he had a Sharer in his wicked Administration, or to bring another great Name in question with his that were not for his Service. Characters, my Lords, receive their Lustre from their Foils.

My Lords, I have open'd to you, that we shall prove the Accusation contain'd in the Article, and enforce it from the Earl's Answer. If your Lordships find we have made good our Charge, I submit it to your Lordships what Judgment you will pass upon such "manifest and wilful "Violations of the Rights of the Subject."

Far be it from me to add Load to the Guilty; here indeed it is impossible. Crimes committed by a Lord Chancellor are capable of no Aggravations; his Station enhances his Guilt. Such Crimes are now become a Parliamentary Enquiry, as the Chancellor's conscious Heart long since pressag'd; and the Commons think they have shewn good Reason why your Lordships should convince the Earl of Macclesfield that he flatter'd himself with vain Hopes, when he menac'd the Masters, "That this Enquiry would affect him, but "them much more."

The Commons are sensible, that he who has so long been a Stranger to Justice, will at last meet with it here; and that your Lordships providential Wisdom will never suffer such Reproaches to be cast upon this, as have been thrown out upon another Nation. "That a Judge is an Evening Wolf, "that Justice standeth afar off, and Equity can-"not enter.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, We beg leave to call our Witnesses in support of these Articles. We desire Mr. Conway may be call'd.

Mr. Conway call'd and sworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We beg leave that Mr. Conway may be ask'd, whether he paid any Money in the Nature of a Contribution, and when? We have the Receipt here (shewing it to Mr. Conway.)

Mr. Conway. My Lords, This is a Receipt given me by Mr. Edwards, Aug. 11, 1721. for the Sum of 500 l. contributed by me.

He reads the Receipt.

Aug. 11, 1721.

Receiv'd then of Master Edward Conway, Esq; the Sum of 500 l. voluntarily contributed by him in Aid of the Deficiency of my Predecessor Fleetwood Dormer, Esq; in the Cash of his Office, which I promise to repay in case the same shall at any time hereafter be otherwise made good.

H. Edwards.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We desire he may be ask'd in what manner he paid it, whether it was out of his own Money or stopt out of any other Money paid into Court?

Mr. Conway. Soon after, my Lords, I was admitted a Master, Mr. Dormer's Deficiency broke out; and the Contribution of the Masters being then spoken of, I was among the rest applied to, to contribute: I was sworn in in January 1720, and this Receipt is in August 1721, when Mr. Edwards came to me to bring me some Junior Masters Money, which he was to deliver to me, out of which he stopt this 500 l. upon account of the Contribution which I had promis'd to come into.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg leave that Mr. Conway may be askt, whether the 500 l. was allowed or deducted at that time out of the Suitors Money?

Mr. Conway. Yes, my Lords, it was stopt by him at that time.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Persuasions were made use of to induce the Masters to contribute to pay this Money?

Mr. Conway. When the Affair of Mr. Dormer came out, what I can remember is, that Letter that came from him from Holland was sent to Mr. Hol- ford to be read before the Masters in the publick Office, and there the Masters spoke of it what they thought proper.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Intimation was there from him, or from any other Person, of any Direction from my Lord Macclesfield relating to the Payment of this 500 l. Contribution?

Mr. Conway. I think my Lord Macclesfield's Secretary was there at the time Mr. Dormer's Letter was read. I think he had spoken what he had principally to say before I came in, but I think he said the Consequence might be fatal to the Masters, if we did not take take care of this Deficiency.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We would not presume to interrupt the learned Managers; but I think the particular time when this was done, and the particular Sums that were paid by each Master should be stated. I remember Mr. Edwards was pleas'd to say the first 500 l. that was contributed was paid upon the Day he was sworn in, which I think was in May 1721. We desire therefore that he would please to express the Day when every other Sum was paid in.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We only desire this Gentleman to speak to his own Payment.

Mr. Conway. The Receipt is dated August 11, 1721. Then Mr. Edwards stopt so much Money.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We desire he may be ask'd how he paid that Money, whether voluntarily, or freely, or upon what Ground?

Mr. Com. Serj. I beg Pardon, but I must beg leave that the Witness may declare at what time this Transaction was.

Mr. Conway. It was the Day the Receipt bears Date, the Transaction happen'd Aug. 11, 1721.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We desire he may be ask'd what induced him to pay in this Sum?

Mr. Conway. It was stopt as a Contribution towards making up Mr. Dormer's Deficiency.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, We desire that this Witness may be ask'd, whether there was any preceding Promise or Agreement to pay this Money?

Mr. Conway. My Receipt mentions a Promise.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Then I desire to know how long before this Promise was made?

Mr. Conway. Soon after the Deficiency was spoken of in Mr. Dormer's Office, in February 1720. about three Weeks after I was admitted.

Mr. Edwards called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We only call Mr. Edwards to ascertain the time when he received the Money of Mr. Conway for his Contribution.

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, According as I have taken it out of my Book, it was the 11th of August 1721.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Now, my Lords, we shall shew the manner how this Payment was made.

Then Mr. Lightboun was called and appeared.

Mr. Plummer. I desire Mr. Lightboun may be ask'd if he was ever press'd to pay 500 l. by whom, and for what?

Mr. Lightboun Not long after Mr. Dormer's Failure, Mr. Cottingham——

Mr. Com. Serj. My Lords, I hope Mr. Lightboun shall mention the time as he goes along.

Mr. Lightboun. Not long after the Failure of Mr. Dormer, I met Mr. Cottingham by accident at my Lord Chancellor's Room at Westminster, and he ask'd me, whether there had been mentioned to me a Proposal of paying or advancing 500 l. a piece towards making up the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's Office, for carrying on the Business there? I said I had heard it; he said it was proposed that it should be immediately raised, that the Business of the Office might be carryed on, till Mr. Dormer's Effects could be disposed of and sold; and some Intimation was given, that possibly we might have our Money again as Dormer's Effects came in. I have heard such a Thing talk'd of, says I, but I will never come into it; I thought it attended with dangerous Circumstances, and a dangerous Precedent, and therefore I was resolved I would not contribute.

Mr. Plummer. Can you recollect what passed afterwards?

Mr. Lightboun. He said all the rest would. I said I would not, and I continued the same Resolution when I talked with the Masters about it.

Mr. Plummer. I desire he may be ask'd if my Lord Macclesfield ever pressed him to pay this Money, and when?

Mr. Lightboun. It was often mention'd to me by the Masters, why I did not contribute as the others did, and I was made not a little uneasy for not having done it. I think in the beginning of the Summer 1722, as near as I can remember the time, my Lord Chancellor coming out of Court at his own House, (where I had the Honour to have been sitting with him) said, Mr. Lightboun, I would speak with you. I followed his Lordship into his House up into his Study, where my Lord was pleased to say, Mr. Lightboun, I am very sorry to hear that you have not contributed your 500 l. towards making up Mr. Dormer's Deficiency; for, says he, it must be considered, that it will be attended with ill Consequences, if that Matter is not taken care of. I asked him, was it your Lordship's Proposal? He said it came from the two senior Masters, but he approved of it. I answered, that if it had came from your Lordship, it might have had a different Consideration, but as it was theirs, and to serve their own Purposes, I hop'd his Lordship would not insist upon my coming into it. The two senior Masters had been long in their Offices, were grown in Years, and were willing to get out, and sell at high Prices; one of them had slipt out, and the other was about it; that I was but lately come into the Office, and intended to continue in it, and said, I will not concern my self in this Affair, unless the Office can be put upon such a Foot that the Suitors may be made safe and easy.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I desire he may be ask'd, whether at this time my Lord Macclesfield made use of any Reasons, Arguments or Promises towards prevailing upon him to pay this Money?

Mr. Lightboun. I can't say my Lord press'd me; he left me to my own Inclination, but advis'd me to pay it, and not to stand out, to do as the rest did, and not to stand alone in it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether did he mention of what Consequence or Advantage it would be to the Masters?

Mr. Lightboun. His Lordship said, if there were not some Measures taken it might be of ill Consequence, and that this was the only Expedient he though thought of. I told his Lordſhip, I thought there were many others, but this was one I would not come into; but that it was not for me to preſume to dictate to his Lordſhip, I thought it did not become me.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be ask'd, if after theſe Diſcouragements my Lord Macclesfield did not again demand Money of him, and when?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, In the Year 1724, about the latter end of July, I met Mr. Cottingham by accident at the Tavern. He came in and deſired me to go into a Room, for he had ſomething to ſay to me. He told me, that my Lord Macclesfield had ſent him to tell me, that he wonder'd that I had not paid my 500 l.; that there was 1000 l. to be paid to Mrs. Chitty, or to Mr. Lockmann, that muſt be immediately paid; that my Lord had been apply'd to, and much preſs'd, and it muſt be forthwith paid, and he expected that I would advance the 500 l. and the reſt of the Maſters 50 l. apiece, which would make up the Sum. I ſaid to Mr. Cottingham, I cannot think my Lord Macclesfield would ſend you on ſuch an Errand to me, I told my Lord formerly I would not pay it, I was with his Lordſhip this Morning, and he ſaid nothing of it, and ſhall have the Honour of waiting upon him in a Day or two, and if he then think fit to talk to me about it, I ſhall give him a proper Anſwer; but I don't care to ſend my Meſſage to him by you, becauſe Meſſages are liable to be miſtaken and miſrepreſented, and I will give my Anſwer my ſelf. Upon that Mr. Cottingham began to be angry at my diſtruſting him, and thinking that he came of his own Accord, and averr'd to me that he came with my Lord Chancellor's Privity. I repeated the ſame Anſwer again to him, that I would give my own Anſwer to his Lordſhip, and would return none by him. In a Day or two after there was an Intimation given that my Lord Chancellor expected all the Maſters to attend him at ſix a Clock in the Evening: We imagined that it was a Call upon the other Maſters for more Money, and for my five hundred Pounds. They had all declared to me they would never contribute any thing more, and therefore I deſired them that in caſe that were the Buſineſs, they would freely declare their Thoughts before my Lord himſelf. I believe it was the ſenior Maſter I preſſed to do it, ſaying to him, it beſt becomes you to give the Anſwer; ſays he, if the Queſtion be put, I ſhall propoſe that we may have time to conſider of it. I deſired he would not do that, it would encourage my Lord, and he might think that if he importuned it further we would comply, and for my part I am determined not to do it; ſo we went on to my Lord, and were carried up Stairs; when we came there, my Lord ſaid, there hath been an Application made to me on the behalf of Mrs. Chitty or Mr. Lockmann, I think he was the Perſon expreſly named, and that he had been much preſſed by Perſons of Diſtinction; and then he turned to me, and ſaid, Mr. Lightboun, I am extremely ſurprized you have not paid the 500 l. as the reſt have done. After he had us'd a good many Perſuaſions and Arguments, I told his Lordſhip it was with great Concern that I refus'd to do any thing that his Lordſhip could deſire of me; but this was a Thing of ſuch a dangerous Conſequence, that I would not contribute one Farthing, and that I had given his Lordſhip my Reaſons before; if he would hear them again, I would repeat them again; but this one was of moſt Weight with me, that it might be a Precedent, and look'd upon as an Undertaking for one another, if ever there ſhould be a national Inquiry into theſe Matters; and that I would be anſwerable only for my own Debts: That as I had not contributed towards the Misfortunes of others, I would not contribute towards Payment of their Debts; that I did not know but the paying Contributions to make good the Demands on other Offices might make Deficiencies in our own; I had always refus'd it, and never repented it, and I had the pleaſure of hearing every Maſter repent the doing it. I called upon the reſt of the Maſters to deal ingenuouſly with my Lord, to tell him what they had ſaid when they had talk'd over the Matter among themſelves, that they would not contribute any more; upon that Mr. Holford got up and ſaid, he would never do it. Then my Lord ſaid, he either would pay it himſelf, or take care it ſhould be paid.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be ask'd if my Lord Macclesfield uſed any Inſinuations with reſpect to the Parliament?

Mr. Lightboun. I forgot that my Lord Macclesfield was pleas'd to ſay, that the Conſequences of not contributing to raiſe a Sum of Money to pay the Debt of Mr. Dormer, might be that the Money and Securities would be taken out of our Hands. I told him I was ready to deliver both the Money and Securities the next Day if his Lordſhip made the proper Orders, and I was properly indemnified. I think his Lordſhip ſaid further, this may produce a Parliamentary Enquiry, and ſhould it be reſolved that purchaſing a Maſter's Place is contrary to the Statute of the fifth and ſixth of Edward VI. you might loſe your Places; to that I replied, I would quit my Office rather than hold it upon thoſe Terms of paying other Maſters Debts. He went on further about a Parliamentary Inquiry; I ſaid, let the Conſequence be what it will, I would not pay it. Then I called upon the other Maſters, who ſaid they would not pay it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, As to the paying of the 1000 l. to Mrs. Chitty or Mr. Lockmann, I deſire Mr. Lightboun may be ask'd whether the late Lord Chancellor was pleaſed to ſay that he had or would take Care to pay the 1000 l. himſelf, or what the particular Expreſſion was that he then made uſe of, that he had taken Care or would take Care?

Mr. Lightboun. I can't remember at this diſtance of time, whether he ſaid he had, or would take Care to pay it. There is ſo little Difference, that I cannot ſay which. I do not pretend to ſay thoſe were the very Expreſſions my Lord uſed to me, or I to him. I ſpeak as to the Tenor or Purport of our Converſation, I would neither aggravate nor ſoften Matters.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The next Witneſs we call is Mr. Holford, who was preſent at this Converſation.

Mr. Holford ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire Mr. Holford may be asked, whether he was preſent at this Time, as is mentioned, when the Maſters were required by the Earl of Macclesfield to raiſe this 1000 l. for Mrs. Chitty or Mr. Lockmann.

Mr. Holford. My Lords, I was preſent at that Meeting. It was deſir'd, as I apprehended, by my Lord Macclesfield, for us to attend him at Six o' Clock. When we came up there, I think, the firſt thing that my Lord Macclesfield ſaid was, he asked Mr Lightboun why he would not pay his 500 l. as others had done. Mr. Lightboun did give this Anſwer: That he had told him ſeveral Times before, that he would not do it; he had given his Reaſons, and it was in vain to repeat thoſe Reaſons again, he was of the ſame Mind ſtill. My Lord then ſpoke of a Demand there was of 1000 l. on Mr. Dormer's Office for one Mrs. Chitty and Mr. Lockmann, and I apprehended, my Lord mentioned it as if he intended that the Maſters ſhould contribute towards making it up; but he after ſaid he would take Care of it. After that my Lord did not mention the 1000 l. but, in general, ſpoke of the Deficiency in Mr. Dormer's Office, and it ought to be made up; and he propoſed, as I did apprehend, that the Maſters ſhould make it up. Mr. Lightboun did call upon me to declare; upon that I told my Lord, it was very unadviſeable to contribute towards a Deficiency which no Body knew what it was; and the doing ſo would only be ruining one's ſelf, for fear of being undone; and, for my Part, I was unwilling to do it; any Body elſe might do as they thought fit.

Mr. Plummer. In what Manner did my Lord addreſs himſelf to Mr. Lightboun, did he do it in gentle Terms, or how?

Mr. Holford. He ſpoke pretty ſharply to him.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What was ſaid by the Earl of Macclesfield, to perſuade the Maſters to come into this Contribution?

Mr. Holford. My Lord ſaid it was a grievous thing, there had not been that due Care taken there ought to have been; that thoſe who came firſt had all their Money, and thoſe that came after would have none; which would make a great Clamour upon the Maſters.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What was ſaid upon that?

Mr. Holford. I don't remember what in particular.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What was ſaid, as to a Parliamentary Enquiry?

Mr. Holford. I remember my Lord did ſay, it might perhaps occaſion a Parliamentary Enquiry. Suppoſe, ſaid he, the Parliament ſhould reſolve, that the Office of a Maſter in Chancery is a Place relating to the Execution of Juſtice, and reſolve that every Body that hath purchaſed thoſe Offices is within the Statute of the 5th and 6th of Edward VI. It may affect me in ſome Degree, in the Loſs of the Diſpoſition of the Offices; but it will affect you in the Loſs of the Places themſelves.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether any Perſon then ask'd my Lord, in what Manner it might come before the Parliament?

Mr. Holford. I ask'd my Lord myſelf, and ſaid it would be a Favour if he would give us his Opinion, in what Manner it might come before the Parliament, and in what Way. He ſaid, it might come in by the Committee for Courts of Juſtice, appointed by the Houſe of Commons at the Beginnning of every Seſſion. But when I came out of the Room, I ſaid, it was more likely to come by Way of Complaint than that Way.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether, at this Time, the Maſters agreed to come to a Contribution to pay this 1000 l. and what was ſaid about it.

Mr. Holford. It was diſagreed to; and when it was ſo, my Lord did ſay, that he himſelf would pay the 1000 l.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We leave that as a Circumſtance of my Lord's endeavouring to prevent a Parliamentary Enquiry.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Holford may be asked, whether he can be poſitive as to the Time of this Meeting?

Mr. Holford. I believe it was in July, or Auguſt, 1724.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. You can't be poſitive?

Mr. Holford. No, I can't be poſitive.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Whether there was, at that Time, any Propoſal made to raiſe Money, by any annual Sum or Payment out of the Offices, towards paying the Deficiencies by degrees.

Mr. Holford. I do not remember any ſuch thing.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Was ſuch Propoſal made at any other Time.

Mr. Holford. I don't remember that it was ever propoſed by my Lord. I have heard Talk among the Maſters of a great many Schemes and Propoſals; but they never did agree in any one thing.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may refreſh his Memory, and that he may inform your Lordſhips if there was not a Propoſal made, that if they might be maintain'd in their Offices, as they then were, they would not then conſent that a Contribution ſhould be rais'd among the Maſters.

Mr. Holford. No, I don't remember that; I believe it was mentioned, that ſuppoſing the Maſters might be continued on the Foot they were, whether they would not think it worth their while to do it. I ſaid it was a Matter fit to be conſidered, and I did not know but it might; but there was no Method propoſed but what ſeemed difficult; and I don't remember that any thing was agreed to.

Mr. Strange. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether, after they had contributed the 500 l. a piece, their Accompts were called for by my Lord Macclesfield, in the Manner they were called for before?

Mr. Holford. I don't know but they might. The Manner of calling for thoſe Accompts was thus: There was a Writing left in the publick Office, in which there were a great many Items in what Method thoſe Accompts ſhould be brought in. I had prepared mine, and waited till they ſhould be called for; but they were not called for, nor demanded; ſo I laid mine by.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether this Diſcourſe, in relation to the raiſing of Money, was to pay off the whole Deficiency, or confin'd to pay off this Demand of 1000 l.

Mr. Holford. I don't remember any Propoſal, but only a Diſcourſe that was ſtarted. I did not apprehend the whole Deficiency was intended to be paid; for I never knew any Body that could tell what the whole Deficiency was, 'till of late.

Mr. Com Serj. I desire to know, whether he speaks this from his Memory?

Mr. Holford. I can speak from nothing but my Memory.

Mr. Com. Serj. I desire that he will inform your Lordships, whether he doth not remember, that in November last there was a Signification to the Masters, and to him in particular, to bring in their Accompts?

Mr. Holford Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Com. Serj. If there was such an Intimation in November last, to deliver in their Accompts, how comes it that you say you have them by you still?

Mr. Holford. This is a Mistake; you misapprehend me. The Accompt, that I mentioned before, was what was immediately called for, after the Failure of Mr. Dormer; but the Accompt in November last was what was called for by the Judges, and delivered into the Council.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I desire to know, whether Mr. Holford can remember what the particular Directions, as to those Accompts, were, and whether the Accompts he prepared were drawn up according to those Directions?

Mr. Holford. Those Directions were many; in in drawing up my Accompt, I did not draw it up exactly according to those Directions; but I drew them up to shew the Balance of Cash and Securities in my Hands.

E. Macclesfield. I would desire to know, whether they were not the like Directions as in November last, and whether the Masters did not think it impracticable to draw it up accordingly?

Mr. Holford. Yes, my Lords, they did; they thought it difficult, I thought it was not practicable without a great deal of Trouble.

Sir George Oxenden. I desire to know, whether it was required by my Lord Chancellor to look into Dormer's Deficiency, to see what the true State of it was at that Time?

Mr. Holford. All I heard of it was: I heard that my Lord had ordered Mr. Edwards to deliver in an Accompt of Mr. Dormer's Office to me and Mr. Bennet: He did deliver one; but it was an Accompt done in Haste, and did not shew what the Deficiency was. For some of the Payments said to be made, no proper Vouchers were produced; there were Mistakes, and it was not a proper Accompt; and without examining it we could not depend on it.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. He mentions, that at this Meeting it was said, supposing the Masters might be continued on the same Foot they then stood, &c. I desire Mr. Holford may explain what he meant by the Foot they then stood on; what Liberties and Privileges were meant by that Expression?

Mr. Holford. I understood it was their continuing in the Possession of the Money.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether that was to lock the Money up in a Cabinet, or to have Power of the Money to make use of it?

Mr. Holford. For my own Part, I should not have lock'd it up.

Mr. Lutwyche. I would beg Leave to ask him, as he hath mentioned the Calling for the Accompts, whether he delivered any Accompt to the Earl of Macclesfield, till the Order made by the Council?

Mr. Holford. My Lords, I did deliver an Accompt to my Lord Macclesfield, or to Mr. Cottingham, of my Money, but not of the Securities.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We desire Mr. Edwards may be called again.

[Accordingly Mr. Edwards was called and appeared.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave that Mr. Edwards may give your Lordships an Account; because he was immediately concerned in a Demand made upon this Office, what Application was made to him for this Mrs. Chitty's Money; and what Application he made to the Earl of Macclesfield on that Occasion.

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, there was an Order brought to me, that was made by my Lord Macclesfield, for the Payment of 1000 l. to Mrs. Chitty. I told the Party, I had not Money in my Hands of Mr. Dormer's, sufficient to answer the Demand upon the Office. I then went to my Lord Macclesfield. I told him (I had been forced to trouble him pretty often upon that Occasion) that it gave me a great deal of Uneasiness, that there was no Fund in my Hands to answer those Demands that were upon my Office. I hoped his Lordship would take Care that there should be a Supply, or that he would not be pleased to make Orders upon me for Payment of Money.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Give an Account of the Whole that passed, the whole Conversation.

Mr. Edwards. My Lord Macclesfield, in answer to that said, at least, it was what I understood by his Answer, that, if the People would but have a little Patience, he was doing every thing necessary, and making proper Regulations for that Purpose.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be ask'd, whether my Lord Macclesfield, at that Time, directed him to proceed to make any further Payments, or encouraged him to go on to make Payments?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, we apprehend that is too leading a Question.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What Directions he had, in general.

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I had no other Directions that I remember.

Mr. Serj Pengelly. I desire he may acquaint your Lordships, whether he said any thing relating to the State and Condition of the Suitors of the Court?

Mr. Edwards. Several Times that I had the Honour to wait on my Lord Macclesfield, I told him there was like to be a great Deficiency in Mr. Dormer's Effects: All that had been raised out of Dormer's Effects was exhausted and gone, and there were a great many Demands; and I hoped Provision would be made to answer them: It was for me to do it else; and I hoped it was not expected that I should.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was any thing represented at that Time, concerning paying some of the Suitors of the Court, and not others?

Mr. Edwards. About that Time, or rather since, as I remember, I told my Lord Macclesfield that I saw the Masters were determined not to make any further Contributions; and if that were to be the Case, and there was to be no further Supply of Money, it would be very hard for some to have all

all their Money, and others none at all. My Lord Chancellor ſaid, I do not know what to ſay to it, I think it is very hard it ſhould be ſo; I will take all the Care I can, and hope to make every Body eaſy.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he had not paid all the Money, or near all, when this Diſcourſe happened?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, My Lords.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether he was preſent at the Meeting of the Maſters, when this 1000 l. was inſiſted upon, and on what Occaſion it was?

Mr. Edwards. It was upon a Summons that all the Maſters ſhould attend his Lordſhip; I am not ſure, as to the Day; I think it was the latter End of July: We waited upon his Lordſhip about ſix of the Clock in the Evening, and my Lord mentioned it to Mr. Lightboun, that he was ſurprized that he had not contributed his 500 l. he wonder'd that he ſhould be ſo backward in doing what others thought right to do, and that there was Occaſion at that Time for the Payment of 1000 l. he mentioned, either to Mrs. Chitty or Mr. Lockmann. Mr. Lightboun told him, that he did not expect to be asked again upon this Subject, he had ſo often told his Lordſhip he would not contribute; other People might do what they pleaſed, but, as for his Part, he was determined not to do it.

Mr. Lutwyche. We deſire to know what paſſed, and what was ſaid by the Earl, at that Meeting?

Mr. Edwards. When this was refuſed by Mr. Lightboun, there was a Diſcourſe in the Company, that if the reſt of the Maſters would advance 50 l. a piece, and Mr. Lightboun his 500 l. it would make up the Sum. The Maſters, moſt of them, ſpoke their Mind, and ſhewed an Unwillingneſs to contribute any more. My Lord Macclesfield was pleaſed to ſay, this is a Thing of Conſequence, a Matter that ought to be conſidered; here is a very preſſing Occaſion for a Sum of Money to be immediately paid, if not paid, I don't know what the Conſequence may be; Clamours begin to grow pretty ſtrong, I don't know but it may occaſion a Parliamentary Enquiry; or to that Effect.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether there was any further Diſcourſe what the Parliament might do?

Mr. Edwards. My Lord Macclesfield was pleaſed to ſay further, I don't know, if this Matter comes into the Conſideration of Parliament, how far it may affect your Offices, the Sale of them is againſt an Act of Parliament: Suppoſe it ſhould be reſolved by the Houſe, that theſe Places, being bought contrary to the Act of Parliament, are forfeited, I can't ſay how far it may affect me in ſome Meaſure, but it will affect you much more.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Theſe are the very Words of the Article, and we may rely upon the Opinion of of the Earl himſelf, when he was in the Poſſeſſion of that great Office?

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Edwards may be asked, whether the Subject Matter of this Diſcourſe was the Payment of this 1000 l. or making good the Whole of Dormer's Deficiency?

Mr. Edwards. I underſtood the only Subject to be this 1000 l.

E. of Macclesfield. You underſtood it ſo?

Mr. Edwards. And the Reaſon why I undergoon it ſo was, becauſe if Mr. Lightboun would have been pleaſed to have paid his 500 l. and the other Maſters 50 l. a piece, it would have made up the Sum.

E. of Macclesfield. Was the Propoſal of paying 50 l. a piece, after Mr. Lightboun had refuſed the Payment of 500 l?

Mr. Edwards. I believe it was.

E. of Macclesfield. What Occaſion was there for the Propoſal to pay 50 l. a piece, when the Payment of 500 l. was abſolutely refuſed?

Mr. Edwards. I believe it was underſtood by ſeveral, that, if the other Maſters would have contributed 50 l. a piece, it would have been an Inducement for Mr. Lightboun to have come in and paid his 500 l.

E. of Macclesfield. Some Body muſt propoſe this that had that Apprehenſion?

Mr. Edwards. I can't ſay who propoſed it, nor whether it was propoſed by my Lord Macclesfield, but 50 l. a piece was mentioned.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire to know of Mr. Edwards, whether the Maſters did not at any Time agree to make good Dormer's Deficiency?

Mr. Edwards. My Lords, I think I remember a Meeting of the Maſters at your Lordſhip's Houſe, not long before this, where they ſeemed inclinable to agree, that if they were continued in the Rights of their Office in all Reſpects, and on the ſame Foot as they had enjoyed them, that then they would have endeavoured to have made this Deficiency good.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know if he hath not ſaid, that on his coming into the Office, the Maſters told him, they would make good the Deficiency?

Mr. Edwards. I can't ſay the Maſters ever told me, they would make good the Deficiency; I can't ſay I ever heard them ſay, that they would make it up.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire you would recollect yourſelf, whether, when you was with me, and I deſired you to give an Account of this Matter, you did not ſay, that the Maſters did promiſe to make it good, or elſe you would not have come into the Office?

Mr. Edwards. I don't remember I told your Lordſhip ſo; I believe it was deſigned by the Maſters to have it made up, if not the Whole, the greateſt Part of the Maſters, were inclinable to make up the Deficiency.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire an Anſwer to the Queſtion, whether he did not ſay, that the Maſters did promiſe him to make good the Deficiency?

Mr. Edwards. I don't remember that I ſaid ſo directly; I told your Lordſhip, that unleſs I had had Aſſurances, that the Deficiency of the Office would have been made up, I never would have meddled with it. Theſe Aſſurances I had from Mr. Cottingham and Mr. Godfrey.

E. of Macclesfield. I think you ſay, the Maſters did ſeem to agree, that if they were kept in Poſſeſſion of the Rights of their Offices, they would contribute. Had you two Meetings with me in July, or Auguſt?

Mr. Edwards.

Mr. Edwards. I think there were two in the ſame Month of July: Within a Month the two Meetings were.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether the Maſters have not made ſeveral Complaints to me, of the Invaſion of their Right in their Offices, and deſired me to make an Order to redreſs them?

Mr. Edwards. Not only Complaints of that Sort were made, but I believe thoſe Complaints were reduced into Writing, and laid before your Lordſhip; there were frequent Complaints by Concurrence of all the Maſters.

E. of Macclesfield. How long before that Time were Complaints made to me, of the Maſters being injured in the Profits of their Office?

Mr. Edwards. I believe near a Twelvemonth.

E. of Macclesfield. Was it not more?

Mr. Edwards. It was full a Year.

[Earl of Macclesfield ſhews Mr. Edwards a Paper.

Mr. Edwards. This is what I mentioned, a Repreſentation in Writing laid before your Lordſhip.

E. of Macclesfield. Pray look upon that.

[Shews another Paper, which Mr Edwards looks upon.

E. of Macclesfield. Are thoſe two Papers ſigned by you, and the other Maſters whoſe Names are at the End of them?

Mr. Edwards. Yes.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know in the next Place, whether I was not much preſſed by the Maſters to have made ſome Alterations in the Proceedings of the Court? And what Anſwer did I give?

Mr. Edwards. Upon this Repreſentation there were a great many Applications made to my Lord Macclesfield. I went ſeveral Times myſelf. Sometimes two or three would make Application to him, that he would be pleaſed, if he thought the Matters repreſented to be Grievances, that he would redreſs them. My Lord did ſay, that he thought, that the Matter of our Complaint was juſt, and that thoſe Matters were proper to be rectified, and he would take all proper Meaſures to do it.

E. of Macclesfield. And why were not all theſe Things ſet right?

Mr. Edwards. I remember one Circumſtance that I believe will be an Anſwer to the Noble Lord's Queſtion. Thoſe Matters were not laid together all at once before my Lord Chancellor, but ſome at one Time, and others at another Time; and my Lord Macclesfield did ſay, I would have you draw up a State of all theſe Grievances you complain of, and then I ſhall ſee them better under one View, and take them together.

E. of Macclesfield. Was there any Order made in Favour of the Maſters, and to redreſs theſe Grievances?

Mr. Edwards. I remember we were a little impatient that there was no Order made; we often ſollicited on ſeveral Accounts before they were made.

E. of Macclesfield. For what particular Reaſons were you ſo impatient?

Mr. Edwards. It is impoſſible to recollect the particular Reaſons; they were, in many Inſtances, relating to the Proceedings at the Rolls, and the Innovations there to the Prejudice of the Maſters Offices.

Mr. Plummer. My Lord Macclesfield hath asked ſeveral Queſtions, and I would make an Obſervation upon this Evidence, That theſe Gentlemen applied to Lord Macclesfield to redreſs Grievances, but he would not promiſe them a Redreſs till they paid this Debt.

Sir George Oxenden. I deſire to know what he means by the Profits of the Office?

Mr. Edwards. The principal Thing that I mean is, the keeping of the Money; but there were ſeveral other Things in which we thought our Offices leſſened, by taking away the cuſtomary Fees which uſually belonged to the Maſters.

Sir George Oxenden. If the Profits of the Office was the keeping of the Money, I ſuppoſe they made uſe of it?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, my Lords, I believe it was not underſtood by any Body, that the Money was deſigned to be locked up. By the Profits of the Money is meant the putting out the Money at Intereſt for ourſelves. But that is not all, the placing the ſame out at Intereſt for the Suitors occaſions ſeveral Perquiſites, as Reports and other Things, which would be loſt by taking away the Money.

Mr. John Bennet called again.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, we deſire Mr. John Bennet may be asked, whether he was preſent at the Meeting at the Lord Chancellor's, when Propoſals were made for the raiſing this 1000 l.

Mr. Bennet. My Lords, I was there, and my Lord Macclesfield was earneſt in perſuading Mr. Lightboun to pay his 500 l. Mr. Lightboun ſaid he had much rather bring in all the Money and Securities he had in his Hands, and deliver them up, than pay this 500 l. Upon which my Lord Macclesfield ſaid, delivering up the Money and Securities too might be the Conſequence, but that was not the worſt; there might be Votes of the Houſe of Commons, that the Office of a Maſter in Chancery did concern the Execution of Juſtice, and that the Maſters in Chancery, by purchaſing their Offices, had incurred the Penalty of the Statute of Edward the VIth, and thereby forfeited their Places, and that a new Set of Maſters might be put in; it might redound to ſome Loſs to his Lordſhip in diſpoſing of thoſe Offices, but it would redound much more to their Loſs, the Loſs of their Places.

Mr. Lutwyche. When the Maſters refuſed to contribute to this of Chitty, what ſaid my Lord?

Mr. Bennet. My Lord ſaid, he would take Care of it himſelf, or that he would pay it himſelf, I can't ſay which.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether any thing was ſaid concerning the Conſequence of not paying this 1000 l. and whether any Mention was made of Dormer's Deficiency?

Mr. Bennet. There was Mention made of Mr. Dormer's Deficiency, and one Maſter mentioned, that it was a bottomleſs Pit; and as my Lord had deſired me and Mr. Holford to take ſome Account of it, we both declared, we had not received ſuch a ſatisfactory Account from Mr. Edwards, as could be depended upon, and that the Deficiency appeared to us to be very uncertain.

Mr. Lut-

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked, whether any mention was made of any Fear of the Discovery of that Deficiency?

Mr. Bennet. I can't say by whom it was said, but it was said in Discourse, If this 1000 l. was not now paid, the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's Office would be discovered.

Mr. Lutwyche. Pray recollect who was that said by?

Mr. Bennet. I can't take upon me to say whom it was said by, but it was said in the Conversation that passed at that Time.

Mr. Lutwyche. Who were then present?

Mr. Bennet. I believe, all the Masters.

Mr Lutwyche. And who besides?

Mr. Bennet. My Lord Macclesfield.

Mr. Lutwyche. Were not all the Masters against making up the Deficiency?

Mr. Bennet. Yes, all of them.

E. of Macclesfield. Was Dormer's Deficiency then known?

Mr. Bennet. It was known abroad, but it was nor known how much.

E. of Macclesfield. Were there two Meetings between me and the Masters in July, or the Beginning of August?

Mr. Bennet. I believe within a Month there were two Meetings.

E. of Macclesfield. What was the Subject Matter of the other Meeting?

Mr. Bennet. The first Meeting was to put us all in mind of our Duty, and to admonish us to avoid any Complaint?

E. of Macclesfield. That was the first Meeting. Was there any thing said about Dormer's Deficiency?

Mr. Bennet. I don't remember there was.

E. of Macclesfield. What Admonition was it that was given to the Masters, and what was said to them, if they did fail in their Duty?

Mr. Bennet. The Admonition was generally to take Care to perform our Duty, not to give any Cause of Complaint, and, in particular, not to go out of Town, till a Week after the last Seal.

E. of Macclesfield. Do you not remember, that I said in my Admonition, that, if any Master failed in his Duty, I owed it to the rest to punish him, and to make him an Example?

Mr. Bennet. I believe you did say so.

Mr. Lutwyche. At the Time when this Admonition was given, was any thing then said about your Accompts?

Mr. Bennet. No, I don't remember that any thing was then said on that Subject.

E of Macclesfield. In Point of Regularity, when these Gentlemen speak of this 1000 l. they should produce the Order?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. It is here, and it is admitted in the Answer.

[The Order produced, proved by Mr. Ralph Paxton, who swore it to be a true Copy of the Order taken from the Report-Office.

Mr. Paxton begins to read,

Martis decimo septimo Die Martii Anno Regni Georgii Regis decimo, inter Prideaux Sutton Cler. & Annam Uxorem ejus, Mercy Sheldon Spinster & Egidium Laurence Executor. Winifred Sheldon Spinster Defunct. Quer. Elisam Chitty, Johannem Russel & alios Defendentes.

Whereas the Defendant, Elizabeth Chitty ——

E. of Macclesfield. It is not necessary to trouble my Lords in hearing the whole Order, only the ordering Part?

Mr. Paxton reads again,

His Lordship doth order, that the said Master do, out of the said Money in his Hands, pay unto the Defendant Eliz. Chitty the Sum of one Thousand Pounds, and to the Plaintiffs the Sum of five Hundred Pounds, subject to the further Order of this Court.

Mr. Lovibond sworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, we desire that Mr. Lovibond may be asked, whether he was at the Meeting, when the Masters attended my Lord Macclesfield about July last, and what passed at that Meeting?

Mr. Lovibond. I was at that Meeting with several of the other Masters, I think most of them: As to what passed then, according to the best of my Recollection, the first Thing was, my Lord Macclesfield turned to Mr. Lightboun and ask'd him, why he had not paid the 500 l. as well as the rest of the Masters; to which he replied, he never would, and gave my Lord some Reasons why he would not. Then my Lord Macclesfield was pleased to say, there was a Matter that required Expedition, a further Demand was made of a Sum of Money, by one Mr. Lockmann, who belonged to to the Prince's Court, and it did behove us to find out some Way to make him easy. He proposed that the Masters should raise that Money among them. The Masters in general said, that they could not do it.

Mr. Lutwyche. What Arguments were made use of by my Lord Macclesfield, to persuade them to it?

Mr. Lovibond. I remember that Mr. Lighboun said, rather than pay it, he would deliver up all the Money and Effects in his Hands, and my Lord Macclesfield did reply, Perhaps that is not the worst of the Matter, it may be worse than that; suppose there should be a Parliamentary Enquiry, and the Parliament should come to a Resolution, that you have forfeited your Offices, by having bought them against the Statute of Edward the VIth.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked, whether any Encouragement was given, in case they would pay this Money?

Mr. Lovibond. I don't remember there was any thing spoke by way of Encouragement to the Masters, for Payment of that Sum of Money.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire to know what was the Result of this Matter, as to this Sum of Money being to be paid, and who it was that said it should be paid?

Mr. Lovibond. Upon the Refusal of the Masters, my Lord Macclesfield said, Well, I will take Care of that Part myself.

Mr. Lutwyche. I desire he may be asked, whether any thing was then said in relation to the Deficiency of Dormer's Office?

Mr. Lovibond. Yes, there was some Discourse about that Matter, and my Lord Macclesfield did express himself as though it would be an unlucky Thing, and it muſt be made up one Way or other, and he deſired the Maſters to think of a Way to make it up. My Lord Macclesfield ſaid, if you can have the Enjoyment of your Places, as you have had them theſe Forty Years, will you come into ſome Terms to make up that Debt? Some ſaid they could not come into it; ſome ſaid there be a might Means of paying it by Annual Inſtallments out of their ſeveral Offices; ſome ſeemed to agree to it; others ſaid we may as well make good the Bankers Debts, as make good this Debt.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire he may be asked, whether he did not agree, that this Deficiency ſhould be made good by Annual Payments?

Mr. Lovibond. No, I did not.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether the reſt of the Maſters did not?

Mr. Lovibond. I believe ſome of the Maſters did.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether they did all agree?

Mr. Lovibond. I believe the major Part did. I did not.

E. of Macclesfield. Do you believe any beſides yourſelf diſagreed?

Mr. Lovibond. Indeed I can't tell. The greateſt Part did agree. I can't ſay I heard any Body refuſe.

E. of Macclesfield. Some, he ſays, did agree to it, the major Part, and none that he heard refuſed. I deſire to know, if it was not endeavoured to find out a Way to make up whatever Deficiency there was; and whether this was the Subject Matter, the making good the 1000 l. or the Whole of the Debt?

Mr. Lovibond. The making good the Whole of the Debt, as I underſtood it.

E. of Macclesfield. I think he ſaid, that I ſaid then, I would take Care of the 1000 l. whether was that after they had agreed that the Deficiency ſhould be made good, or before?

Mr. Lovibond. No, I think it was before.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to know, if my Lord Macclesfield did ſay, he would take Care of it, when the Maſters refuſed to contribute?

Mr. Lovibond. To the beſt of my Remembrance, it was upon their Refuſal, that he ſaid ſo.

Mr. Thomas Bennet called again.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lords, before the Managers propoſe a Queſtion, I beg the Favour to mention a Thing that my Memory ſlipp'd me in Yeſterday. My Lord Macclesfield then asked me, what Eſtate I had purchaſed? I ſaid 68 l. a Year in Kent, and 40 l. per Annum in Suffolk. I forgot a Houſe I bought for 700 l. which is mortgaged for the ſame Sum. The Accompt lies upon the Table, I forgot it then, and I did then refer to my Accompt that lies upon the Table, that I might not be miſtaken.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I deſire he may be asked, whether he was preſent at this Meeting at my Lord Macclesfield's.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, I was ſummoned to attend my Lord Macclesfield on this Occaſion. I dined that Day with my Brother and Mr. Lovibond and one more; and my Brother told me, that there was a Propoſal come from my Lord Macclesfield by Mr. Cottingham. He ſaid it was, that the Maſters ſhould advance 50 l. a piece, towards a Demand in the Court of Chancery; and in caſe we would do it, my Lord Macclesfield would make Mr. Lightboun pay his 500 l. We, who were then preſent, ſeemed to agree, that if my Lord would make Mr. Lightboun pay his 500 l. we would pay our 50 l. a piece. In the Evening, when we attended my Lord Macclesfield, his firſt Application was to Mr. Lightboun, and as ſoon as we came, he ſaid to him, Mr. Lightboun, I am ſurprized you have not paid your 500 l. as the reſt have done, I wonder at it; and he uſed ſome hard Expreſſions, that I wonder he could ſtand it, I could hardly have done it; but Mr. Lightboun did ſtand it, and refuſed to pay it, and gave his Reaſons for it, and ſaid he had given them over and over again.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Reaſons were laid before you to pay it?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. The Reaſons laid before us by my Lord Macclesfield were, that there was a Deficiency in Dormer's Office, which he was afraid would break out; for here was a Demand of a Sum of Money by one, for whom he had been ſpoken to, by a Perſon of very great Diſtinction. I did not know who it was then, but I afterwards underſtood it was Mr. Lockmann, that was the Perſon that was to have the Money; and he asked, if we did not think it for our Intereſt to make ſuch a Perſon our Friend?

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any thing more ſaid?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lord Macclesfield ſaid, that in caſe this Money was not paid, and ſome Method found to make up the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer, he believed it might occaſion a Parliamentary Enquiry, which might hurt him very much, but, ſaid he, I believe it will hurt you Gentlemen much more.

Mr. Lutwyche. Were there any of the Maſters that asked him any Queſtions, how he apprehended it would come into Parliament?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. Yes, Mr. Holford asked him the Queſtion, Can your Lordſhip imagine, in what Method this may come into Parliament? My Lord anſwered, Upon the Meeting of every Parliament, Committees were choſen by the Houſe of Commons, and among the reſt there was a Committee of the Courts of Juſtice, and he thought it very likely, that That Committee might take this under Conſideration.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was ſaid upon the Maſters Refuſal to raiſe the 1000 l.?

Mr. Thomas Bennet. After Mr. Lightboun refuſed to pay towards the 1000 l. my Lord then ſaid he would make up that.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any Talk of Dormer's Deficiency?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. There was ſome Diſcourſe about making up Mr. Dormer's Deficiency. Several of the Maſters were againſt it. No Scheme could be found that would make it up. I ſaid upon that Occaſion, that it was a bottomleſs Pit, and Mr. Edwards had not given Satisfaction to any of the Maſters what the Deficiency was.

Sir George Oxenden. Was there any mention made at this Meeting of the Statute of Edward VI.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lord Chancellor ſaid, He did not know but our Offices might come within the Statute of Edward VI: And, if that ſhould be

ſo

ſo reſolved by Parliament, we muſt forfeit our Offices; and therefore had we not better do ſomething than forfeit our Offices?

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave to call Mr. Lockmann, to whom this 1000 l. was paid, and to ſhew your Lordſhips the Declaration that was made by the Earl of Macclesfield at that Time.

Mr. Lutwyche. We beg Leave firſt to read the Order in the Cauſe of Harper and Cate.

[The Order is proved.

Mr. Ralph Paxton reads.

Sabbati quinto Die Decembris, Anno Regni Georgii Regis undecimo, inter Jana' Harper vidua' Quer' Thoma' Caſe Clericu' & Sara' Maria' uxor' ejus, Henricu' Halſey, & alios Defendentes.

UPON opening of the Matter this preſent Day unto the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, by Mr. Sollicitor General and Mr. Williams, being of Council for the Plaintiff; and Mr. Benjamin Jackman, in the Preſence of Mr. Talbott, of Council for the Defendants: The Caſes. It was alledged, That it being, by the Order made on the hearing of this Cauſe (inter alia) ordered and decreed, that the Sum of 500 l. Pounds, Part of the Marriage Portion of the Plaintiff, receiv'd by Thomas Harper Clerk, her late Husband, ſhould be made good to her with Intereſt from his Death, at the Rate of 5 l. per Cent. per Annum, together with her Coſts of this Suit, to be taxed by Mr. Dormer, then one of the Maſters of this Court, out of the ſaid Thomas Harper's Eſtate (for which, and other Purpoſes, in the ſaid Order, ſo much as ſhould be neceſſary of the ſaid Thomas Harper's Eſtate was to be ſold to the beſt Purchaſer that could be got for the ſame, with the Approbation of the ſaid Maſter:) And the ſaid Maſter having, by his Report, (made purſuant to the ſaid Order, and) dated the 12th of December, 1716, certified the Sum of 557 l. 16 s. 05 d. to be due to the Plaintiff for Principal and Intereſt, beſides Coſts. And the ſaid Defendants having been ſerved with a Writ of Execution of the ſaid Decree, the ſaid Maſter, by his Report dated the 9th of November, 1717. allowed the ſaid Jackman the Purchaſe of three Houſes at Kenſington (Part of the Premiſes directed to be ſold) at the Sum of 260 l. And the ſaid Maſter's Report being afterwards abſolutely confirmed, the ſaid Jackman obtained an Order of the 19th of December, 1717. whereby it was ordered, That the Writings belonging to the ſaid Eſtate, purchaſed by the ſaid Jackman, ſhould be delivered to his Council, and that the Tenants of the ſaid Eſtate ſhould attorn to him, on bringing his Purchaſe Money before the ſaid Maſter. And the ſaid Jackman did accordingly, on the 24th of the ſame December, bring his ſaid Purchaſe Money before the ſaid Maſter, as by his Certificate of that Date, now read, appears, and the Tenants attorned to the ſaid Jackman: But the Defendants have ever ſince, by trifling Pretences and Excuſes, put off the executing proper Conveyances to the ſaid Jackman, although the ſame have been long ſince ſettled and allowed by Mr. Edwards, one of the Maſters of this Court, the ſaid Mr. Dormer's Succeſſor, as by the Affidavits of Joſeph Herring and Thomas Atwood appears. It was therefore prayed, that all Parties may forthwith execute Conveyances of the ſaid Houſes to the ſaid Mr. Jackman, or as he ſhall appoint: And it was on the Plaintiff's Behalf prayed, that the ſaid Purchaſe Money may be paid to her, towards Satisfaction of what is due to her, by vertue of the ſaid Decree: Whereto the Council for the Defendants had Caſes alledged, that they are intitled to the Reſidue of the ſaid Tho. Harper's Eſtate, after ſuch Payments, as are directed by the ſaid Decree to be made out of the ſame, are made, and the Defendants Caſe and his Wife were always ready to join in executing the ſaid Conveyances, upon an Application being made of the ſaid Jackman's Purchaſe Money towards what is due to the Plaintiff; but being apprehenſive of a Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's Eſtate, to anſwer the Monies brought before him, purſuant to the Orders of this Court; and conceiving they ought not to be Sufferers, though ſuch Deficiency might appear, and the Delay being occaſioned by the Purchaſer, and not by the Plaintiff, and the ſaid Maſter not having ſettled the ſaid Conveyances, they did therefore ſcruple to execute the ſaid Conveyances, until the ſaid Jackman's Purchaſe Money ſhould be applied to the Purpoſes in the ſaid Decree; but are willing, if the Court ſhould ſo think proper, on Payment of the ſaid 260 l. Purchaſe Money to the Plaintiff, and the ſaid Tho. Harper's Eſtate being diſcharged of ſo much, to execute the ſaid Conveyances. Whereupon, and upon hearing of the ſaid Affidavits of the ſaid Joſeph Herring and Thomas Atwood, and an Affidavit of Notice to the Defendant Halſey read, and what was alledged on both Sides: His Lordſhip doth order, that it be referred to the ſaid Mr. Edwards, to examine, whether the ſaid 260 l. was depoſited with the ſaid Mr. Dormer, for the Benefit of any particular Perſon, and whom, and what was the Occaſion of the Delay, that the ſaid Conveyances were not executed, and the ſaid 260 l. Purchaſe Money paid out before the Year 1720. and whether there is likely to be a Loſs of any Monies depoſited with the ſaid Mr. Dormer: And, upon the ſaid Maſter's Report, ſuch further Orders ſhall be made, as ſhall be juſt.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, this Order was made in December laſt: It is a Direction to Mr. Edwards to ſee, whether there was likely to be any Loſs of any Monies depoſited with Mr. Dormer: We pray that Mr. Lockmann may be ſworn.

Mr. Lockmann ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg Leave that Mr. Lockmann may be asked, whether he attended upon the Earl of Macclesfield at any Time relating to a Sum of Money, and where.

Mr.

Mr. Lockmann. I received an Order from the Earl of Macclesfield upon Mr. Edwards for 1000 l. but not being able to receive it of Mr. Edwards, I went to Kenſington to wait upon the Earl of Macclesfield, and told his Lordſhip the Neceſſity I had for this 1000 l. which belonged to Mrs. Chitty, but the Benefit of it was made over to me; that I had the Misfortune to be backwards in my Affairs, and had ſome South-Sea Contracts to make up, and had made a Compoſition of my Debts, for which I had about three Weeks to pay it in, and therefore I deſired the Favour of his Lordſhip to order me the Payment of this 1000 l. His Lordſhip was pleaſed to tell me, that if I attended him in Town, and applied to him there, I ſhould have the Money paid. Upon which I waited upon his Lordſhip in Town; and when I had the Honour to ſee his Lordſhip, he told me, that he had enquired into the Affair relating to that Money upon which the Order was made, that it was in Mr. Dormer's Office, where there was a Deficiency, that he could not yet bring all the Maſters to ſettle that Matter; but if I would come a few Days after, he would ſee what he could do for me. Thereupon I attended ſeveral Days, and went to Weſtminſter-Hall, and ſpoke to Mr. Cottingham, and he ſaid great Pains had been taken by my Lord, but he had not yet been able to bring any thing to bear, but he did not doubt but in a little Time he could bring it to bear to his Satisfaction; there had been ſome Motions made by Serjeant Cheſhyre, &c. which had frightened the Maſters from raiſing Money; but if I attended in a few Days, he would do what he could for me. I waited ſome Days, and at laſt I took the Freedom to wait upon my Lord Macclesfield at his own Houſe in Lincoln's-Inn Fields, and I told his Lordſhip I had attended many Days in Town, and had neglected my Duty and Service; that the next Day was the laſt Day appointed to pay my Compoſition, and having depended upon this Money, I had made no other Proviſion. Whereupon his Lordſhip ſaid, he had taken a great deal of Pains, and had ſpoken to the Maſters, and that I ſhould attend his Lordſhip next Day at Weſtminſter at Ten, and he would ſee what he could do for me, but that there was none of the Eſtate of Mr. Dormer left. I waited upon his Lordſhip accordingly the next Day at Weſtminſter. His Lordſhip called me into his Room, and told me that Mr. Cottingham ſhould pay me the 1000 l. but he believed there would come no more, that this would be the laſt of the Money, or the laſt Sum that Mrs. Chitty would receive; and that if ſhe had nothing elſe, I might, by marrying her, in Expectation of a Fortune, make myſelf worſe than I was.

Mr. Dodington. I deſire Mr. Lockmann may be asked, what the whole Sum was that was paid in?

Mr. Lockmann. I took it to be about 10000 l.

Mr. Serj Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, if the Earl of Macclesfield gave any further Reaſons, why it was like to be the laſt Sum?

Mr. Lockmann. The Earl of Macclesfield did not, at that Time, give me any Reaſon; but the Day before, when I had the Honour of ſeeing his Lordſhip, at his Houſe in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, and once before that, his Lordſhip told me that the Maſters in Chancery were apprehenſive of loſing a great deal of their Privileges and Profits of their Places; and therefore ſome of them were not willing to advance any Money.

Mr. Weſt. My Lords, I beg Leave to ask Mr. Lockmann, whether he received any Direction or Intimation, as to the keeping of this private, the telling, or not telling it?

Mr. Lockmann. I did receive no Intimation at that Time; afterwards, when the Sollicitor met me, he ask'd me, Pray, ſays he, Mr. Lockmann, have you received the 1000 l. you ſollicited for? Yes, I have received it. Pray, who then paid it you? I told him Mr Cottingham; ſays he, Mr. Cottingham denied it to me. Upon that I met Mr. Cottingham ſome Time afterwards in the Court of Requeſts. He told me I ſhould ſay nothing of it: Beſides this, I received no Intimation to keep it ſecret.

Mr. Weſt. What did he ſay to you then?

Mr. Lockmann. He ſaid ſaid at firſt meeting me, You can't fare well, but you muſt cry out Roaſt-meat. I, being not well acquainted with that Phraſe, did not know what he meant. I did not know that I had ever eat Roaſt-meat or boil'd Meat with him either; ſo I told him, if that was in relation to his paying me the 1000 l. it was only what was due, and I hoped there would be Care taken to anſwer the Remainder. He anſwered, he could not tell what the Conſequence would be, whether ever it would be made up, or not, he could not tell, he was very uncertain.

E. of Macclesfield. Sir, I deſire to know off you, whether you did not repreſent yourſelf to me to be in the utmoſt Diſtreſs, if this Money was not paid to you, that in ſuch Caſe you muſt be ruined?

Mr. Lockmann. I remember I told his Lordſhip, that this Money, I had borrowed it of Mrs. Chitty, that I had ſettled a Compoſition with my Creditors and wanted this Money to ſatisfy them; that it muſt be paid the next Day; and if I did not then pay it, it would be a great Damage to me; but I preſſed his Lordſhip more, as I depended upon his Lordſhip's Promiſe, and that was the Reaſon I preſs'd it the more.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire he may be asked, whether I ever promiſed to pay him at any Time before that?

Mr. Lockmann. When I went to wait upon your Lordſhip at Kenſington, your Lordſhip promiſed me it ſhould be paid; that, aſſoon as you came to Town I ſhould apply to your Lordſhip, and you would give Orders, and it ſhould be done.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether he did not look upon it, that I did this out of Compaſſion to him?

Mr. Lockmann. I took it as Part of a Sum of Money due, and I did not look upon it as Charity, or out of Compaſſion.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether he did not intreat it of me as an Act of Compaſſion to him?

Mr. Lockmann. I don't underſtand the Engliſh Terms, I did not uſe the Word Compaſſion; I begg'd that your Lordſhip would be ſo good as to order me the Money.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether the firſt Time he applied to me I promiſed to pay the Money?

Mr. Lockmann.

Mr Lockmann. Your Lordſhip promiſed the Order ſhould be given to the Maſter, and that I ſhould be paid.

E of Macclesfield. When was that Promiſe?

Mr. Lockmann. When you promiſed to order the Maſter, and I ſhould have the Money.

E of Macclesfield. How long before?

Mr. Lockmann. I can't very well remember; becauſe the Sollicitor waited ſeveral Times upon the Maſter, and the Maſter told him there was nothing. I went to the Maſter's Houſe, and then to the Rolls, and there I ſaw him; and he told me there were no Aſſits in his Hands of Mr. Dormer's.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether he did not deſire a further Sum, after this 1000 l. was paid by Mr. Cottingham, and how much?

Mr. Lockmann. My Lord, I ask your Lordſhip's Pardon, I don't remember I then ask'd any other Sum. When I ſaw your Lordſhip afterwards, I asked your Lordſhip, if it was not poſſible to have another 1000 l. You was pleaſed to tell me, there could be no more paid.

E. of Macclesfield. Did not you ſollicit for a further Sum, till Mr. Cottingham chid you?

Mr. Lockmann. Mr. Cottingham was a little angry, when I preſs'd him. I went out of Doors, Mr Cottingham followed me. I ſtood in the Yard, Mr. Cottingham came out, and told me he had an Order from my Lord Chancellor to call the Maſters to a Meeting, and ſee what could be done. I ſaid, ſtill this is uncertain, how ſhall I do if I have not this Money? it will be a great Prejudice to me.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether he did not ask a further Sum of 500 l. or 570 l.

Mr. Lockmann. There was an Order, on a Letter of Attorney from Mrs. Chitty, for that Sum. But never, after I was at your Lordſhip's Houſe at Kenſington, did I ask if I could have a thouſand Pounds more.

E. of Macclesfield. When was that 500 l. paid?

Mr. Lockmann. I don't know.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know, whether between the Time you ſay you was promiſed the 1000 l. and the Time of paying it, you did not deſire to have the Sum of 574 l. advanced for Mrs. Chitty's Uſe.

Mr. Lockmann. When your Lordſhip had told me that 1000 l. was all that could poſſibly be obtained, I made no further Sollicitations.

E. of Macclesfield. How long was it that you came to Kenſington, to ask me for that 1000 l. before the other 1000 l. was paid?

Mr. Lockmann. Three Weeks before.

E. of Macclesfield. Then after that Time you never demanded any more?

Mr. Lockmann. After your Lordſhip had told me that was all that could be obtained, then I deſiſted from asking any more.

E. of Macclesfield. And that was about three Weeks before the Time you received the Money?

Mr. Lockmann. I believe, between a Fortnight or three Weeks, or thereabouts.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire he may be asked, whether he can be certain as to the Expreſſion, whether this was the laſt Money that was like to be paid, or that my Lord would pay.

Mr. Lockmann. It was, as I remember, in theſe Words: If the Lady hath no other Fortune than what is in Chantery, in the Maſter's Hand, this will be the laſt of it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We deſire Mr. Atwood may be called.

Mr. Atwood ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Atwood may be asked, whether he was in Court at the Time a Motion was made upon an Order in a Cauſe between Harper and Cate.

Mr. Atwood. My Lords, I was at my late Lord Chancellor's Houſe, where, about the 5th of December laſt, the Motion was made. I was Sollicitor for Mrs. Harper in the Cauſe. The Occaſion of it was, There was an Eſtate decreed to be ſold, and the Money was to be paid into the Maſter's Hands, who was Mr. Dormer: The Money was accordingly paid, and the Conveyances approved of by the Council, and a Fine agreed upon; but at laſt the Parties would not execute, unleſs the Money was paid them; objecting there would be a Deficiency in Dormer's Office: Therefore they mov'd that they might not be obliged to execute the Conveyance, till the Money was applied and paid to the Plaintiff. My Lord Chancellor was pleaſed to declare thereon, that he had heard there would be a Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's Effects; but it had never judicially come before him; and what Knowledge he had of it was only as publick News, and referred it to Mr. Edwards to examine, whether there was likely to be a Deficiency, or not. I was near two Months before I could get this Order paſſed; and then the Impeachment came on. The Regiſter told me, he was afraid this Order would do ſome Miſchief. When I had got the Order, I was told by ſeveral People about the Town, that Mr. Dormer's Effects were very defective; and that my Lord Chancellor had directed a Compoſition to be made with one Wilſon who was a Banker; and had directed Mr. Hiccocks to compound for Half a Crown in the Pound, and that others had twenty Shillings. Lord Chancellor had directed an Enquiry to be made, whether any Deficiency. I was adviſed to put in theſe Words: By what Means; becauſe I was told then it was, by reaſon of compounding that Debt with Wilſon; but the Regiſter would not let them ſtand.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. The making of the Order, in this Caſe, confirms the Evidence of Mr. Atwood, that his Lordſhip declared he had heard of it no other-ways than as publick News; becauſe by this Order he directs Mr. Edwards to enquire, whether there was likely to be a Deficiency, or not, although it had been ſo well known to his Lordſhip ſome Years before.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. He ſays there are Words ſtruck out of the Order; I deſire to know, whether thoſe Words were not added by himſelf to the Order?

Mr. Atwood. Yes, they were added by me before it paſſed.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. When?

Mr. Atwood. After I had the Order from the Regiſter.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was that?

Mr. Atwood. It was near two Months before I could get the Order paſſed.

E. of Macclesfield. Had you the Order paſſed before the Impeachment?

Mr. Atwood. Yes, I believe I had.

E. of Macclesfield. Had you it paſſed before this Matter came into Parliament?

Mr. Atwood. I don't particularly know; I believe it was before your Lordſhip was impeached.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether was it after I had parted with the Seals?

Mr. Atwood. I believe after.

E. of Macclesfield. How long was it before you added thoſe Words?

Mr. Atwood. Two or three Days after I had got the Order.

E. of Macclesfield. When was it the Regiſter ſtruck out thoſe Words?

Mr. Atwood. I can't ſay, I believe it was before the Impeachment. The other Side had let thoſe Words be in; but yet the Regiſter ſtruck them out.

E. of Macclesfield. Was it after I had ceaſed to be Chancellor?

Mr Atwood. I believe it was.

E. of Macclesfield. Was any thing ſaid, at that Time, of the Accident of Wilſon's breaking and Poulter's going off?

Mr. Atwood. I do remember your Lordſhip ſaid Wilſon was become Bankrupt, and that he had Money of Mr. Dormer's; and you ſaid ſomething of a Perſon that was ſued by Wilſon, and of a Recovery againſt him, and of an Action brought for an Eſcape; and you concluded, upon the Whole, that all you knew of the Matter was only as publick News. This was after you had given an Account of the Matter of Wilſon and of the Marſhal.

Dr. Sayer. I deſire he may be asked, whether my Lord did not expreſs a Doubt, how theſe Matters might come out?

Mr. Atwood. I don't know what his Lordſhip was pleaſed to doubt of.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire Mr. Atwood would recollect himſelf, whether there was any Notice taken, how this might come out, when the Report of the Maſters ſhould be made?

Mr. Atwood. I don't remember any thing tending to that.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether he took any Memoranda of theſe Words, and when?

Mr. Atwood. No, I took no Memoranda of them, till I was ſummoned to attend the Committee.

Mr. Com. Serj. I deſire Mr. Atwood may give a Reaſon, how he comes to forget Facts, and remember a Form of Words?

Mr. Atwood. I don't remember all the Facts that have been asked.

Mr. Robins. Whether my Lord did not mention a particular Sum that was owing from Wilſon to Dormer?

Mr. Atwood. I believe my Lord did mention a Sum, and I believe it was 18000 l.

Mr. Robins. Whether he did not mention that Wilſon had brought an Action of Eſcape againſt the Marſhal?

Mr. Atwood. Yes, that Wilſon had brought an Action of Eſcape againſt the Marſhal?

Mr. Robins. Whether he did not mention, that Wilſon had recovered a Judgment againſt the Marſhal?

Mr. Atwood. Yes, that Wilſon had recovered a Judgment.

Mr. Robins. Whether was there any thing ſaid of the Eſcape of Poulter?

Mr. Atwood. Yes, my Lord did mention, that there was an Action brought againſt the Marſhal, for that very Eſcape.

Mr. Com. Serj. Whether my Lord having mentioned theſe Particulars, he did not from thence infer, he could not then tell, how Matters might come out?

Mr. Atwood. I do not remember any thing of that.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I ſhall only make one ſhort Obſervation. The Lord Macclesfield ſaith in his Anſwer, that he doth not believe that he had any Diſcourſe with the Maſters about the Payment of this 1000 l. I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether there are not four or five Witneſſes to it. We have now done with the Sixteenth Article.

Mr. Sol. Gen. We ſhall proceed to our Proofs on the Seventeenth Article. And it will be neceſſary to lay before your Lordſhips three or four Orders, for the Proof of this Article.

Mr. Ralph Paxton, being called, appeared, and proved the ſeveral Orders following, which were then all read.

An Order, dated 18 January, 8° Georgij Regis.

Another, dated 8 March, 8° Georgij Regis.

Another, dated 5 July, 8° Georgij Regis.

Another, dated 22 December, 9° Georgij Regis.

Jovis decimo octavo Die Januarij Anno Regni D'ni Georgij Regis octavo, inter Jonathan' Jones Infant' per Eliza' Jones Vidua' prox' Amit' & dicta' Eliza' Jones Quer' Thoma' Jett Arm' & Petru' Wiſe, Defendentes.

UPON opening of the Matter, this preſent Day, unto this Court, by Mr. Serjeant Cheſhire, of Council with the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, in the Preſence of Mr. Ketleby, of Council with the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones; and the Defendant Wiſe, and Mr. Horſeley, of Council with the Defendant Jett. The Council for the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones alledged, that Jonathan Jones deceaſed, late Father of the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, and Husband of the Plaintiff Elizabeth, by his Will, deviſed one Moiety of his Eſtate, which was wholly perſonal, after Payment of his Debts and Funeral Expences, to the Plaintiff Elizabeth, and the other Moiety to the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, when he ſhould attain his Age of One and Twenty Years, together with the Produce thereof, and made the Defendants, Jett and Wiſe, Executors in Truſt for the ſaid Plaintiffs, who duly duly proved the ſaid Will. That the Plaintiffs having brought their Bill in this Court, to have an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, for a Maintenance for the Plaintiff Jonathan, during his Infancy, and a Performance of the ſaid Will: Upon the Hearing of this Cauſe, it was referred to Mr. Dormer, then one of the Maſters of this Court, to take an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate; and the Surplus thereof, after the Deductions therein mentioned, was to be divided into Moieties; and the Plaintiff Elizabeth's Moiety was to be forthwith aſſigned to her; and the other Moiety was to be placed out at Intereſt, by the ſaid Maſter, for the ſaid Infant's Benefit. And the ſaid Maſter was to aſſign a Maintenance for the ſaid Plaintiff, for the Time paſt; and was alſo to conſider what was proper to be allowed for his Maintenance, for the future. That the ſaid Maſter, having proceeded to take an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, it appeared, that ſo much thereof was raiſed by the Sale of Bank and South-Sea Stock, and brought before the Maſter, as amounted to Five Thouſand, Nine Hundred, and Eighty-five Pounds, Three Shillings, and Four Pence, one Moiety whereof, after Payment of her Share of the Coſts of this Suit, belongs to the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones, and has been accordingly paid to her. And the other Moiety belongs to the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, and is now in the Hands of Mr. Edwards, one of the Maſters of this Court, who ſucceeded the ſaid Mr. Dormer, and to whom the Reference, in this Cauſe, hath been transferred. That the Plaintiff, Jonathan Jones, hath now attained his Age of One and Twenty Years, as by Affidavit and Certificate appears, and is intitled to receive his Moiety of the ſaid Monies, after Deduction of his Share of the ſaid Coſts. And having contracted ſome conſiderable Debts, for his Maintenance, and otherwiſe, during his Infancy, for which he is threatened no be arreſted, in caſe the ſaid Debts are not ſpeedily paid: It was therefore pray'd, that the ſaid Maſter may, out of the Monies in his Hands, pay to the Plaintiff, Jonathan Jones, the Sum of Four Hundred Pounds, which, upon reading the ſaid Affidavit and Certificate, and upon hearing the Council for the Plaintiff, Elizabeth Jones, and the Defendant, Wife, who conſented thereto, and the Council for the Defendant, Jett, who did not oppoſe the Payment thereof, is ordered accordingly.

Jovis octavo Die Martij Anno Regni D'ni Georgij Regis octavo, inter Jonathan' Jones & Eliza' Jones Quer' Thoma' Jett Arm' & Petru' Wiſe, Defendentes.

UPON opening of the Matter, this preſent Day, unto the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, by Mr. Serjeant Cheſhire, being of Council for the Plaintiff, Jonathan Jones, in the Preſence of Mr. Ketlebey, of Council for the Plaintiff, Elizabeth Jones, and for the Defendant, Wiſe: It was alledged, that Jonathan Jones deceaſed, late Father of the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, and Husband of the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones, by his Will, deviſed one Moiety of his Eſtate (which was wholly perſonal) after Payment of his Debts and Funeral Expences, to the Plaintiff Elizabeth, and the other Moiety to the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, when he ſhould attain his Age of One and Twenty Years, together with the Produce thereof; and made the Defendants, Jett and Wiſe, Executors in Truſt for the ſaid Plaintiffs; and the ſaid Defendants duly proved the ſaid Will. That the Plaintiffs exhibited their Bill into this Court againſt the Defendants, to have an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, and a Performance of his Will. And, upon the hearing of the Cauſe, it was referred to Mr. Dormer, then one of the Maſters of this Court, to take an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate; and the Surplus thereof, after the Deductions therein mentioned, was to be divided into Moieties; and the Plaintiff Elizabeth's Moiety was to be forthwith aſſigned to her. And the other Moiety was to be placed out at Intereſt, by the ſaid Maſter, for the ſaid Infant's Benefit. That the ſaid Maſter having proceeded to take an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, it appeared, that ſo much was raiſed by the Sale of the Bank and South-Sea Stocks, and brought before the ſaid Maſter, as amounted to Five Thouſand, Nine Hundred, and Eighty-five Pounds, Three Shillings and Four Pence, one Moiety whereof, after Payment of the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones's Share of the Coſts of this Suit, belonged to her, and had been accordingly paid to her. And the other Moiety belonged to the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, and was in the Hands of Mr. Edwards, one of the Maſters of this Court (who ſucceeded the ſaid Mr. Dormer.) That the Plaintiff, Jonathan Jones, has attained his Age of One and Twenty Years, as by Certificate and Affidavit appears, and is intitled to receive his Moiety of the ſaid Money, after Deduction of his Share of the ſaid Coſts: And he had contracted, for a Poſt in the Army, which, with his Equipage, will amount to Two Thouſand Pounds, which he is adviſed will be very advantageous for him to purchaſe; and therefore it was pray'd, that the ſaid Maſter may pay to the Plaintiff, Jonathan Jones, out of the Money in his Hands, a Sum not exceeding Two Thouſand Pounds, to be laid out in the Purchaſe of a Commiſſion, and for other Purpoſes. Whereupon, and upon hearing of the Plaintiff, Elizabeth Jones, and Defendant Wiſe's Council; and hearing an Affidavit of Notice of this Motion to the Defendant, Jett, read, and what was alledged by the Council on both Sides: It is ordered, that the ſaid Maſter do, out of the Money in his Hands, pay unto the Plaintiff, Jonathan Jones, the Sum of Two Thouſand Pounds; the Plaintiff, Elizabeth Jones, and the Defendant, Wiſe, having ſubſcribed the Regiſter's Book, ſignifying their Conſent thereto.

Jovis

Jovis quinto Die Julii Anno Regni D'ni Georgii Regis octavo, inter Jonathan' Jones & Eliza' Jones Quer' Thoma' Jett Arm' & Petru' Wife, Defendentes,

UPON opening of the Matter this preſent Day, unto the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, by Mr. Serj. Chehne, being of Council for the Plaintiff, it was alledged, That Jonathan Jones deceaſed, Father of the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, and Husband of the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones, by his Will deviſed one Moiety of his Eſtate (which was wholly perſonal) after Payment of his Debts and Funeral Expences, to the Plaintiff Elizabeth, and the other Moiety to the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, when he ſhould attain his Age of One and Twenty Years, together with the Produce thereof, and made the Defendants, Jett and Wife, Executors in Truſt for the ſaid Plaintiffs, and the ſaid Defendants duly proved the ſaid Will. That the Plaintiffs exhibited their Bill into this Court againſt the Defendants, to have an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, and a Performance of his Will, and upon the hearing of the Cauſe, it was referred to Mr. Dormer, then one of the Maſters of this Court, to take an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate; and the Surplus thereof, after the Deductions therein mentioned, was to be divided into Moieties, and the Plaintiff Elizabeth's Moiety was to be forthwith aſſigned to her, and the other Moiety was to be placed out at Intereſt, by the ſaid Maſter, for the ſaid Infant's Benefit. That the ſaid Maſter having proceeded to take an Account of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, it appeared by ſeveral Certificates from the ſaid Maſter, that ſo much thereof was raiſed by the Sale of the Bank and South Sea Stocks, and brought before him, as amounted to Five Thouſand nine Hundred and and eighty five Pounds three Shillings and four Pence, that one Moiety thereof, after Payment of the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones's Share of the Coſts of this Suit, hath been in purſuance of ſeveral Orders of this Court paid to her, and the other Moiety, which belonged to the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, was paid over to Mr. Edwards, one of the Maſters of this Court (who ſucceeded the ſaid Mr. Dormer). That the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, having attained his Age of One and Twenty Years, and being intitled to receive his Moiety of the ſaid Money, after Deduction of his Share of the ſaid Coſts, and he having contracted for a Poſt in the Army, which, with his Equipage, will amount to two Thouſand Pounds, he did, on the eighth Day of March laſt, apply to the Court for that Money, and it was then ordered, That the ſaid Maſter ſhould, out of the Money in his Hands, pay unto the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones the Sum of two Thouſand Pounds, the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones, and Defendant Wife, having ſubſcribed the Regiſter's Book, ſignifying their Conſent thereto; that purſuant to the ſaid Order, the ſaid Maſter paid the ſaid two Thouſand Pounds, and there now remaining in his Hands of the Plaintiff Jonathan Jones's Share of the ſaid Money, about the Sum of ſix Hundred and forty two Pounds. That the ſaid Plaintiff Jonathan Jones, having preſent Occaſion for the ſaid Money, hath executed a Letter of Attorney to the Plaintiff Elizabeth Jones, his Mother, dated the Five and Twentieth of May laſt, impowering her to receive all Monies due to him from the ſaid Maſter, and the Intereſt thereof, for the Purpoſes therein mentioned. It was therefore prayed, that the ſaid Maſter may pay to the ſaid Plaintiff, Elizabeth Jones, the Remainder of the Money which is in his Hands, belonging to the ſaid Jonathan's Share, purſuant to the Letter of Attorney, executed for that Purpoſe, which, upon hearing of Mr. Horſeley, of Council for the Defendant Jett, and what was alledged on both Sides, his Lordſhip held reaſonable, and doth order the ſame accordingly.

Sab'ti viceſſimo ſecundo Die Decembr' Anno Regni D'ni Georgii Regis nono, inter Prideaux Sutton Cler' & Anna' Uxor' ejus Mercy Sheldon Spinſtr' & Egidiu' Lawrence gen' Extor' Winifred Sheldon Spinſtr' Defunct', Quer' Elizam Chitty & Joh'em Ruſſell & al' per Billa' ad revivend' & Supplement' Defend'.

WHEREAS the Defendant Elizabeth Chitty, on the Eleventh of this Inſtant December, preferred her Petition to the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, ſhewing, That the Plaintiff and Winifred Sheldon, ſince deceaſed, having executed their Bill for an Account of the Eſtate of Ralph Sheldon, who died in the Eaſt-Indies; and to have their Shares and Proportions thereof, purſuant to his Will: It was on the hearing of this Cauſe, the eight and twentieth of May, One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Fifteen, declared, That the Defendant Elizabeth Chitty was intitled to one Third of the ſaid Eſtate, under the Will of the Teſtator Sheldon, her ſecond Husband, in her own Right, and to a Moiety of the other two Thirds, in right of, or, as ſurviving the Children ſhe had by the ſaid Sheldon, who were dead, and that the other Moiety of the ſaid two Thirds belonged to the Plaintiffs, or thoſe whom they repreſented, and decreed the ſame, after juſt Allowances, to be paid and diſtributed accordingly; and Sir Robert Nightingale, Bart. ſince dead, having, by his Anſwer, admitted to have in his Hands Ten Thouſand Four Hundred and Seventy Pounds, three Shillings and Six-pence, Part of the Teſtator's Eſtate: It was ordered, That he ſhould carry Ten Thouſand Pounds thereof, before Mr. Dormer, then one of the Maſters, to be by him placed out at Intereſt, on Government, or ſuch other Security as he ſhould approve of, for the Benefit of the Parties to whom the ſaid ſhould belong. In purſuance whereof, the ſaid Sir Robert Nightingale carried the ſaid Ten Thouſand Pounds before the ſaid Maſter, who placed the ſame out at Intereſt, and on the Nine and Twentieth of July,

July, One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Nineteen, though the ſaid Ten Thouſand Pounds, with the Intereſt, which had been received by the ſaid Maſter, amounting to Eleven Thouſand three Hundred and fifty nine Pounds, ſeven Shillings, and three Pence, the ſaid Maſter, by his Report, certify'd, That he had placed eleven Thouſand three Hundred Pounds, Part thereof, out on the Land Tax, for the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Nineteen, at four Pounds per Cent. and that the Nine and Fifty Pounds ſeven Shillings and three Pence remained in his Hands; that on the third of Auguſt, One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Twenty, the Plaintiffs, by Petition, applied to his Lordſhip, That the Maſter might pay them ſome Money to carry on this Cauſe, and for their other Occaſions; upon hearing whereof, they were ordered Six Hundred Pounds out of the Money in the Maſter's Hands, which they have received accordingly. That the Defendant, Elizabeth Chitty, had, ever ſince the Death of her late Husband, Joſiah Chitty, wanted Money, not only to defend the ſaid Cauſe, but alſo for her Support, and other neceſſary Occaſions, and that neither ſhe, nor her late Husband, had received any Part of the Principal or Intereſt before the Maſter, nor any other Part of the Teſtator's Eſtate, except ſome Jewels which were delivered up by the Truſtees of the Teſtator's Will in India, to her and her late Husband, which, or the greateſt Part thereof, ſhe claimed as her Paraphernalia, but that ſhe had no Benefit or Advantage thereof, her Husband having ſold and diſpoſed of them in his Life-time. Therefore, and for that the Money in the Hands of Mr. Edwards, one of the Maſters of this Court, who ſucceeded the ſaid Mr. Dormer in his Office, were conſiderably encreaſed by the Intereſt which had been received by him, and for that the ſaid Mrs. Chitty was, as aforeſaid, intitled to two Thirds of the ſaid Teſtator's Eſtate, except what ſhould be decreed thereout to her Children, by her firſt Husband, who were intitled to one Moiety of their Father's Eſtate, which was poſſeſſed by the ſaid Ralph Sheldon, and for that ſhe was obliged to maintain them, it was prayed, That the ſaid Mr. Edwards might, out of the Money in his Hands, and which ſhould be paid in upon the coming in of any of the Securities taken for the ſame, pay unto the Defendant Mrs. Chitty ſuch Sum of Money as his Lordſhip ſhould think fit, to enable her to carry on the ſaid Cauſe, and for her immediate Support, and other Occaſions. Whereupon all Parties were ordered to attend his Lordſhip, on the then next Day of Petitions. And whereas the ſaid Plaintiffs, on the eighteenth Day of this Inſtant December, alſo preferred their Petition to his Lordſhip, ſhewing, inter al' That they were, thro' their great Occaſion for Money, forced to apply the greateſt Part of the Money, ordered them as aforeſaid, towards their Support; and that the ſaid Cauſe had been long depending, and very expenſive, and was likely to undergo greater Travail before the ſaid Maſter, before the ſaid Account could be taken, ſo that they had great Occaſion for more Money, not only to carry on the ſaid Cauſe, but alſo for their Support, and other neceſſary Occaſions; and therefore praying, that the ſaid Maſter might alſo out of the Monies in his Hands, and which ſhould be paid in, upon coming in of any of the Securities taken for the ſame, pay unto the Plaintiffs, or their Sollicitors, ſuch Sums of Money as his Lordſhip ſhould think fit, to enable them to carry on the ſaid Cauſe, and for their immediate Support and other Occaſions; and the Matter of the ſaid Petition, being ordered to come on with the Defendant Chitty's Petition; and Council on both Sides this Day attending accordingly. Whereupon, and upon hearing both the ſaid Petitions read, and of what was alledged by the Council on both Sides: His Lordſhip doth order, That the ſaid Mr. Edwards do, out of the Money in his Hands, pay unto the Defendant, Mrs. Chitty, the Sum of Six Hundred Pounds, and alſo unto the Plaintiffs One Hundred Pounds a-piece, and it being now alledged, that John Wyvill, Eſq; having exhibited his Bill againſt the ſaid Giles Lawrence, for Payment of a Legacy of two Hundred Pounds bequeathed to him by the Will of the ſaid Winifred Sheldon. It was on the hearing the ſaid Cauſe, the firſt Day of December, One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Twenty One, decreed, That the ſaid Mr. Wyvill ſhould be paid the ſaid Legacy and Intereſt, together with the Coſts of that Suit, out of the Aſſetts of the ſaid Ralph Sheldon. It is further ordered, That the ſaid Maſter, do, out of the Money in his Hands, pay the Plaintiff, Lawrence, the further Sum of Three Hundred Pounds, to enable him to ſatisfy the ſaid Decree.

Mr. Lutwyche. Pray ſhew Mr. Edwards thoſe Orders.

[The Orders ſhewn to Mr. Edwards.

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Edwards may be asked, whether he hath paid any Money in that Cauſe?

Mr. Edwards. Here are two Cauſes, which is it you mean, that of Jones and Jett.

Mr. Lutwyche. Yes, that of Jones and Jett?

Mr. Edwards. The Money ordered, by thoſe ſeveral Orders, hath been paid by me.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire to know, whether Mr. Edwards can inform your Lordſhips, whether it is the whole Money, or but in part?

Mr. Edwards. It is the whole Money in the Cauſe.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether the Money was paid out of Mr. Dormer's Effects, or out of his own?

Mr. Edwards. Out of Mr. Dormer's Effects.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, Mr. Edwards is a little miſtaken, pleaſe to put the Orders in; here are three Orders in one Cauſe, and one in another; I deſire to know, whether in both Cauſes the whole Money was paid out?

Mr. Edwards. In that in Jones and Jett, the whole Money was paid out, in the other between Sutton and Sheldon, the Whole was not paid, but only Part.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg Leave to ask Mr. Edwards, whether he did not pay the Whole that was ordered by thoſe ſeveral Orders?

Mr. Edwards. Yes, my Lords.

Mr. Lutwyche. Mr. Edwards did tell your Lordſhips before, that all the Money, ariſing by Mr. Dormer's Effects, was paid out and gone.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we have gone through theſe three Articles that have been opened, and we ſhall call no more Proof to them.

Then the Houſe adjourned to Monday next at Ten o' Clock in the Forenoon.

The FOURTH DAY.

MONDAY, May 10.

The Lords being ſeated in their Houſe, and the Managers being come, and the Earl ſitting on a Stool, as before, and his Council and Sollicitors at the Bar, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as alſo another Proclamation, That all Perſons concerned were to take notice, that Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield, now ſtood upon his Tryal, and they might come forth in order to make good the Charge.

L. Ch. J. King. GEntlemen of the Houſe of Commons, you may proceed.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I am commanded by the Commons, to aſſiſt in maintaining their Impeachment againſt Thomas, Earl of Macclesfield; and when I conſider how neceſſary it is for the Honour of his Majeſty's Government, that an impartial Examination ſhould be made into the Behaviour of this Earl, while he enjoyed the High Office of Chancellor; I am perſuaded, that every good Subject muſt with Pleaſure obſerve, in what Manner this Proſecution is carried on; it muſt be a Satisfaction to them, to ſee the Commons placing a Confidence in your Lordſhips Juſtice, and proceeding in the Legal Parliamentary Method by Impeachments, and your Lordſhips meriting that Confidence, by laying aſide all uſeleſs Ceremonies, and making the Proſecution practicable and eaſy, a Harmony between the two Houſes of Parliament always to be wiſhed for, and which alone can bring Impeachments to a happy Iſſue, and deter great Offenders from oppreſſing their Fellow-Subjects.

My Lords, In former Reigns, Proſecutions of this Kind, have met with other Obſtructions, and the Crown has often interpoſed its Authority to ſave a Favourite Miniſter; but, his Majeſty, who has no other Views, but the Welfare and Happineſs of his People, and who is always attentive to their Intereſt, was the firſt who took notice, that the Earl of Macclesfield had abuſed the Truſt and Confidence repoſed in him. And who can (without the deepeſt Senſe of Gratitude) conſider the Conduct of his Majeſty in this Affair, who immediately diſmiſſed him his Service, and left him to the Juſtice of an injured Nation? And the Earl of Macclesfield himſelf will have this Advantage by it, that His Name will be delivered down to Poſterity, as a Monument of his Majeſty's Paternal Goodneſs to his People. The immenſe Liberalities, the great Honours, the high Dignities conferred on him by his Majeſty, will be ſo many Marks of his Royal Munificence to the Earl, while he appeared to be his Worthy and Faithful Servant. And Poſterity will with due Veneration obſerve, that neither the greateſt Favour, the neareſt Acceſs to his Sacred Perſon, nor any former Merits towards Himſelf, and his Royal Family, could in his Majeſty's Reign, ſhelter the Higheſt Officer of the Crown from Juſtice, who, preſuming on thoſe Advantages, would venture to oppreſs his Majeſty's Loyal and Faithful People.

My Lords, The particular Province, aſſigned me in this Proſecution, is to make good the 18th Article, wherein I ſhall have the Aſſiſtance of a Gentleman, who will amply ſupply all the Defects or Omiſſions I ſhall be guilty of.

As this Article has been read by your Lordſhips Clerk, I ſhall not miſpend your Time in a needleſs Repetition of it; but will obſerve, that the Subſtance of the Charge contained in it, Is a wilful Neglect of the High Truſt repoſed in the Earl of Macclesfield, as Chancellor, That he did not reſtrain the Maſters of the High Court of Chancery, from trafficking with the Suitors Money and Effects, but did permit and encourage that Practice, tho' he was adviſed to put a Stop to it, and fully informed of the Dangers, which were then likely to enſue, and which have ſince actually enſued, to the great Loſs and Injury of the Suitors of the ſaid Court.

My Lords, As this wilful Neglect is highly criminal in itſelf, ſo it is greatly aggravated by the unjuſt and corrupt Views which induced him to be guilty of it, and the pernicious Conſequences which have neceſſarily attended it; and, my Lords, ſince you have heard the Evidence that has been given on the former Articles, of the exorbitant Sums of Money which he exacted for the Diſpoſal of the Offices of Maſters in Chancery, even after Dormer's Failure, we don't doubt but your Lordſhips are convinced that he left the Maſters, with that unreaſonable unlimited Power, over the Effects of the Suitors of the Court, with no other View, but as a Bait and Incitement to others, to purchaſe thoſe Offices (when Vacancies ſhould happen) at the ſame, or greater Prices.

As I have ſtated the Charge contained in this Article, in as clear a Manner as I am able; I beg Leave, my Lords, to make ſome Obſervations on the Earl's Anſwer. He begins with an abſolute Denial of his knowing, how the Maſters kept or diſpoſed of the Money and Effects belonging to the Suitors of the Court. This Anſwer, my Lords, was a Surprize to the Commons, as well becauſe ſuch an Ignorance would have been criminal in the Perſon, who ordered ſuch prodigious Sums of Money into their Hands, and who ſhould be ſuppoſed to have had ſome Care of the Suitors, as alſo becauſe We have the cleareſt Proofs imaginable, that he did know it, and it has already been proved by the Examination of ſeveral of the Maſters before your Lordſhips. But what Want can we have of Proofs? when the Earl of Macclesfield himſelf, in his farther Anſwer to this Article confeſſeth it, by ſaying, that after Mr. Dormer's Misfortune, he thought of ſeveral Methods, and ſeveral Propoſals were made to him by Perſons he conſulted on that Occaſion, to prevent any Inconvenience on the like Accident, for the future. Pray let us conſider, What was Mr. Dormer's Misfortune? What was this Accident? Why truly, Mr. Dormer had trafficked with the Suitors Money and Effects, and had loſt near 30000 l. And this the Earl of Macclesfield knew, and this made him think how to prevent ſuch Inconveniencies, for the future. My Lords, here is one of thoſe Inconſiſtencies the Commons take Notice of in their Reply, and on which (without any farther Proofs) they might ſafely demand your Lordſhips Judgment.

But to conſider his Anſwer farther: He ſays, he believes it will not be held criminal in him, not to have eſtabliſhed any of the Propoſals that were made to him by the Perſons he conſulted on that Occaſion: Some Things were propoſed that he thought impracticable, ſome inſufficient, and ſome inconſiſtent with that compleat Regulation he hoped to make: The Objects, he propoſed to himſelf, were, to make good Mr. Dormer's Deficiency, to ſecure the Suitors from any future Loſs, and to make ſeveral Regulations relating to the Offices of the Maſters: And he thought theſe would be beſt done together; nor had he perfected the Scheme of any of them to his own Satisfaction.

My Lords, I am unwilling to make any Obſervations on this Part of his Anſwer; it is in itſelf ſo groſs, I am afraid, if I took it in Pieces, I ſhould appear ludicrous, which I ſhall take great Care to avoid on ſo ſolemn an Occaſion.

But I appeal to your Lordſhips, if a Perſon was to read this Anſwer, who was not acquainted with the Times of theſe Occurrences, whether he muſt not imagine that the Earl of Macclesfield had quitted the Great Seal within ſome very ſhort Time after Mr. Dormer's Failure. Whereas it has appeared to your Lordſhips, that Mr. Dormer went away from that Office in the Year 1720. and that the Earl of Macclesfield continued Chancellor till January laſt, which is more than four Years after, during all which Time (by his own Confeſſion) he knew the Affairs of the Maſters of the Court of Chancery to have been in great Diſorder, and to have wanted ſeveral Regulations: But, becauſe he could not think of a Scheme perfectly to his Mind to anſwer all his Deſigns, he therefore has done nothing. This Anſwer muſt be left to your Lordſhips Judgment, but, I am afraid, my Lords, the letting the Maſters go on, without any Check, was the Scheme the moſt to his Satisfaction, and moſt effectually obtain'd the Ends he really propos'd to himſelf, which were the making an exorbitant Gain by the Sale of their Offices, which muſt have fallen in their Price, if a Stop had been put to their trading with the Suitors Money.

My Lords, he farther anſwers, That he remembers no Propoſal that he thought would take it totally out of the Power of the Maſters to diſpoſe of the Securities or Effects, or effectually ſecure the Caſh. I can't omit taking Notice of the wording this Paragraph; and I believe your Lordſhips will agree with me, that the Words HE THOUGHT, TOTALLY, AND EFFECTUALLY, are thrown in with great Caution. My Lords, We think we can prove to You that a Propoſal was made to him, that would have taken it out of the Power of the Maſters to have diſpoſed of the Securities and Effects, and to have ſecured, in great Meaſure, the Caſh; and this Evidence the Earl of Macclesfield muſt be well aware of, for He has it in his Hands as well as We; and I foreſee the Strength of his Defence, in this Point, lies in the Caution of his Anſwer: But, my Lords, if any Propoſal was made to him, which would have cured the greateſt Part of the Evils the Court laboured under, I am ſure your Lordſhips will hold it criminal in him not to have made uſe of it, and the rather, becauſe he ſubſtituted no other in its Room.

My Lords, He admits he took no Security of the Maſters, and ſays, he was never asked ſo to do. My Lords, We will prove that he was asked ſo to do, and that taking Security was Part of the Propoſal I have mentioned. In this Place he takes Notice of his Predeceſſors, who (as he ſays) were wiſer Men than himſelf, and who took no Security of the Maſters. My Lords, We don't accuſe his Predeceſſors, nor are we obliged to juſtify them; but, if I may be permitted to give my own private Opinion, It is, that if ſuch Misfortunes had happened in his Predeceſſors Days, and ſuch Application had been made to them, they were ſo wiſe, they would have applied a proper Remedy: His not doing ſo, under theſe Circumſtances, We look on as a plain Permiſſion, and a ſtrong Encouragement to the Maſters to traffick with, and employ the Suitors Money for their own Gain and Profit. And it muſt appear ſo in a ſtronger Light, when your Lordſhips are acquainted that Mr. Lightboun, who is himſelf a Maſter in Chancery, was the Perſon who made thePropoſal, and who muſt (by my Lord's not uſing it) plainly ſee, that my Lord was reſolved to lay no Reſtraint on them, which might have tempted Mr. Lightboun himſelf to have made an ill Uſe of that Power: But as he profeſſed to my Lord Chancellor his Abhorrence of the Maſters abuſing their Truſt, by alienating the Suitors Effects, and deſired my Lord to put a Stop to that Practice; ſo it appeared by his Accounts given in before the Judges, that he had appropriated the ſpecifick Securities of the Suitors to every particular Cauſe. And, my Lords, we look on it as a great Aggravation of the Crimes contain'd in this Article, which I have now gone through, That my Lord Macclesfield ſhould continue to act with ſuch mean, low Views, as were unbecoming a Maſter in Chancery, when he had the Aſſiſtance of a Maſter, who behaved himſelf with a Prudence, Integrity, and Reſolution, which would have been becoming the Lord Chancellor.

Mr.

Mr. Cary. My Lords, It is my Province to aſſiſt the Gentleman, that ſpoke before me, in ſupporting the Charge of the Commons in the 18th Article, which he has open'd with ſo great Force and Perſpicuity, that it is unneceſſary for me to give your Lordſhips more Trouble upon it, than by making an Obſervation or two on the moſt material Parts. The Beginning of this Article ſets forth, That the Earl of Macclesfield very well knew, or was inform'd, that the Maſters did, or that it was in their Power to diſpoſe of, and employ the Suitors Money and Effects, to which, he is pleaſed evaſively to anſwer, "That he never knew "how the Maſters kept, or diſpoſed of the Mo-"ney and Effects belonging to the Suitors of "the Court." The contrary of this will be abundantly prov'd, in the Manner the Gentleman has already ſtated it.

But were it not, my Lords, ſo ſtrong in Proof, the Guilt to me appears ſelf-evident; 'tis much the ſame, whether he knew it, or knew it not; his Lordſhip may take the Alternative. What! did He, Lord Chancellor, ſupreme Director of the Court, the great Truſtee of England (who order'd the Money into the Maſter's Hands, who order'd it out of their Hands) did He know nothing of their Power over it? Was he the only Man in England that knew nothing of their Deficiency? And if he was, my Lords, Is that Ignorance an Excuſe, or Aggravation? But we ſhall prove to your Lordſhips, that he not only was told of this Traffick with the Suitors Money, but was foretold the Conſequences of it, the Danger of future Loſſes was pointed out to him, and Propoſals for preventing 'em were given him in Writing.

And who was it, my Lords, that made theſe Propoſals? Who gave him this Warning? One of the Maſters of the Court, One intereſted in the Traffick of the Suitors Money, a Gameſter at the ſame Table with the impeach'd Earl. Advice from ſuch a Hand muſt be ſincere and unſuſpected; nothing but Juſtice, or a ſtrong Apprehenſion of their common Danger, could have extorted it; nothing but the blindeſt Avarice could have prevented the Compliance with it. But what ſtill renders this Conduct more amazing is, that the impeach'd Lord had not the Advantage of a ſingle Propoſal only, and from a ſingle Maſter, but of ſeveral Propoſals, and from ſeveral of 'em. Mr. Kynaſton will inform your Lordſhips, That he and other Maſters waited on the Lord Chancellor, and propos'd to give Security in Land, or Money, for their Cash, and to make their Truſt leſs by putting the Securities in two Maſters Names, or in the Names of the Parties and one of the Maſters, with which he then appear'd pleas'd, tho' he afterwards did nothing in it, and expreſs'd his Diſlike of the Propoſal. Yes, my Lords, the Propoſal was too reaſonable to be refus'd, and too ſelf-denying to be follow'd. So far was the unfortunate Lord from following it, or acting in any Manner conſiſtent with it, that ſoon after the Failure of Mr. Dormer, after theſe Propoſals were made to him, he ſells the Offices of ſeveral Maſters at moſt exorbitant Prices. And was this what my noble Lord ſets forth in his Anſwer, as one of the Expedients he thought of, after Dormer's Misfortune, for preventing any Inconvenience, on the like Accident, for the future? Was this the only Method of Cure the noble Earl brought to ſuch Perfection, as to venture to put it in Practice.

My Lords, the Gentlemen, embarqu'd in the ſame Bottom with this unhappy Lord, ſaw the Ship ſinking, and propos'd throwing over-board Part of their unjuſtifiable Gains, to prevent their general Wreck; but the impeach'd Earl does not only boldly ſteer on the ſame Courſe, but takes in Lading, more Weight of Guilt, if not in Defiance of the Danger, certainly in the Neglect of it.

And how, my Lords, does his Anſwer excuſe this Conduct? He admits that ſeveral Propoſals were made on that Occaſion, but ſome he thought impracticable, ſome inſufficient, ſome inconſiſtent with that compleat Regulation he hop'd to make. And becauſe ſome were inſufficient, ſome inconſiſtent, and not anſwering the full Idea of Perfection propos'd by his Lordſhip, Muſt therefore nothing be attempted? Muſt we have no Relief, becauſe we deſpair of an abſolute Cure? Muſt no Remedy be apply'd to a dying Perſon, becauſe it is not certain it will reſtore him to his perfect Strength? Thus far indeed is certain, It is much better to do nothing, than to continue ſuch Methods, as firſt brought the Diſtemper upon him. We muſt therefore leave it with your Lordſhips to judge, whether the Inconſiſtency of the Propoſals with the Earl's private Views was not the true Reaſon of their being thought impracticable and inſufficient. And what thoſe Views really were, the whole Tenor of our Evidence has, and will ſhew Views beneath the Dignity of his high Office, and far below a Member of this Auguſt Aſſembly.

My Lords, the Commons farther charge this unhappy Earl, that he not only knew, but conniv'd at, and encourag'd this deſtructive Traffick: And in anſwer to this, He ſays: "That he gave no "Permiſſion nor Encouragement to the Maſters "of the Court, to employ or traffick with the "Suitors Money." We have ſhew'd your Lordſhips, he knew it, and knew it in the moſt affecting Manner, by the Ruin it had produced. We need not ſhew you that He had Power to prevent it. And ſurely, my Lords, to know it and not prevent it, in his Situation, was to permit it. And as His not preventing it was a Permiſſion, ſo his Example was an Encouragement: And when the Maſters ſaw him (the greateſt Object in the Compaſs of their View) taking every indirect Method to make the moſt of His High Office; ſure, they muſt think that Example (join'd to the Neceſſity he Himſelf laid them under by the exorbitant Prices he exacted) a ſufficient Encouragement to authorize them in the like Practices in theirs. The Examples of great Men, my Lords, are Encouragements, and the Aſſembly I ſee before me is an illuſtrious Proof, they ought to be ſo, and will do Honour to thoſe who follow them: And from the Influence thoſe Examples have, and ought to have over the reſt of Mankind, it has been ſuppos'd, that the only Paſſage to Honour was through the Temple of Virtue; but, my Lords, tho' there be but one Paſſage to it, there are many from it; and ſo many are the Frailties of human Nature, that the Building would be imperfect, without a Back-Door to let out, whatſoever ſullies ſullies or pollutes it: A Door, my Lords, your Anceſtors have open'd to former Lord Chancellors.

But we ſhall call our Evidence, and ſubmit the Whole with the greateſt Security and Satisfaction to your Lordſhips Judgment.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire Mr. Lightboun may be called.

[Mr Lightboun being called appeared

Mr. Plummer. I deſired Mr. Lightboun may inform your Lordſhips, whether he had any Diſcourſe with my Lord Chancellor, about putting the Offices of Maſters of Chancery into a better Regulation?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, in order to anſwer this Queſtion it will be neceſſary for me to repeat ſome Part of the Account I gave when I was laſt at your Lordſhip's Bar. I then acquainted your Lordſhips, that in the Beginning of the Summer, in the Year 1722, the Lord Macclesfield, having directed me to attend him, told me that he had heard I had not contributed my 500 l. towards making up Mr. Dormer's Deficiency, as the other Maſters had done; that he did not expect I would have ſtood out, and was ſorry to hear of it, as he had a more particular Regard to my Conduct than any of the reſt, becauſe I was the only Maſter of his immediate Choice; and on his Lordſhip's telling me that it was firſt propoſed by the Maſters, and not by his Lordſhip, I told him I was not willing to comply with it, and thought it a dangerous Expedient; that it might be hereafter looked upon as an Undertaking one for another, and therefore I would not come into it; and that as this Accident had happened to Mr. Dormer, the like might happen again to others, and might be the Ruin of us all, if ſuch a Conſtruction were put upon it. My Lord was pleaſed to ſay, it was the only Expedient he could think of for making good the Deficiency. I told him I had as much at Heart the doing of that as any Body; and that if a proper Expedient could be found out to pay Mr. Dormer's Deficiency, and prevent the like Accident among us for the future, by putting the Offices on ſuch a Foot, that the Maſters might execute them with Honour to the Court and themſelves, and with Safety to the Suitors, I ſhould be glad to contribute to ſuch Regulations. His Lordſhip ſaid he ſhould be glad if any ſuch Thing could be thought of, and asked me, if I could think of any Method by which that might be done. I told him I believed I had, at which he expreſs'd great Satisfaction; and we being then ſtanding, his Lordſhip deſired I would ſit down. He then asked me, in what Manner it was that I propoſed the Suitors ſhould be made ſafe: I told his Lordſhip that I apprehended it was impoſſible to expect, that the Maſters could give a Security adequate to ſuch a Truſt; that there were many Inſtances of great Officers, whoſe Truſt was ſo great as to be above giving ample Security, particularly the Tellers of the Exchequer, and the Treaſurers of the South-Sea and Eaſt-India Companies: But if a competent Security were taken, and ſuch I apprehended might be given, I hoped it would anſwer the Intent, and give Satisfaction, ſince ample Security for ſo great Truſt could not be expected. I then told his Lordſhip, that if the Cauſes of Mr. Dormer's Misfortunes were conſidered, they would be found not only to proceed from Squandering or Miſapplication of the Caſh, but from Power over the Securities in his Hands; for that the Money could not be ſo much, but the Securities amounted to a greater Sum. He ſaid it might be ſo, but how to prevent it he would be glad to know. I told his Lordſhip, that if the Securities, for the future, were to be taken in the Names of the Maſter, and one or more of the Parties, the Suitors would be ſafe. It was then obſerved, but whether by my Lord, or me, I do not remember, that an Objection might ariſe to this Method, for that if either the Maſter or the Party ſhould die, the Truſt would ſurvive; and thereby either the Court loſe its Power over the Security, or the Maſter's ſole Power over it be reſtored; but, to prevent that, I propoſed that they might be taken in the Name of two or three, or more of the Maſters, with or without the Perſons intereſted, as the Court ſhould think proper; and that it was hardly to be imagined that all the Maſters would betray their Truſt, and riſque their Fortunes to oblige any one, by ſuffering him to traffick with the Securities of the Court, taken in their joint Names; eſpecially, if Care was taken, that ſuch Maſter, as was to be joined, or be a Check upon another Maſter, ſhould have a Third to be a Check upon him. My Lord Macclesfield objected, That there was a great Number of South-Sea and India Bonds, and other Securities, payable to the Bearer, that could not be in the Names of any particular Perſons, and ſo could not be ſecured in that Manner; and that it would be troubleſome to lock them up. To which I replied, I knew no occaſion for putting out Money on South-Sea or India Bonds, or ſuch Securities, ſince there were other Securities ſufficient, which might be under a proper Reſtriction, and which were not partable, but are transferrable in Books at the Bank, or elſewhere, viz. Stocks, Bank-Annuities, Civil-Liſt Annuities, Four per Cent Annuities, Land and Malt Tallies, and Lottery Orders, which were aſſignable by Indorſement; and that, if theſe Securities were taken in the Names of ſeveral Perſons, it would be impoſſible for any one Perſon to diſpoſe of them, without the Knowledge and Conſent of all. My Lord expreſſed great Satisfaction at this Propoſal; and then asked me, in what Manner Mr. Dormer's Deficiency would be provided for? I then acquainted his Lordſhip, that there was always a conſiderable Caſh in each Maſter's Hands; and that if ſome Part of that was placed out at Intereſt, in the Name of all the Maſters, it would be no Injury to the Owners, if it was ready, when called for; and the Produce would raiſe a Fund to pay Mr. Dormer's Debt; and that it was very likely the Lords of the Treaſury might, on ſuch an Occaſion, give us the Preference, and let us chuſe a proper Part of the Loans on the Land and Malt-Tax, to lend the Money upon; that if any Maſter wanted any Part of the Money he had placed out on that Occaſion, to anſwer the Suitors Demands, ſuch Securities were eaſily converted into Money. I was unwilling to fix any Sum for each Maſter to advance; but believe I did mention 3, 4, or 5000 l. for his Lordſhip's Conſideration; and took Notice that would amount to 40 or 50000 l. and would, in due Time, raiſe a Sum of Money ſufficient to anſwer the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer. My Lord made ſome Doubts; but ſaid he would be exceeding glad to give his Aſſiſtance; but was afraid he could not properly order the Suitors Money to be laid out, but for their Benefit whoſe Money it was. I ſaid, I thought that might be done without any Order, if his Lordſhip approved it, and the Maſters all came into it, and placed it out in all their Names; and that at any Time, by diſpoſing of the Security taken for it, the Money might be raiſed, when wanted. My Lord made ſome Doubt, whether it could well be done; but was pleaſed with the Propoſal: And many other Things were ſaid, which I cannot, at this Diſtance of Time, recollect. I had, my Lords, two Views in it, but won't be poſitive that I mentioned them to my Lord. I apprehended it would not only raiſe a Fund to pay Mr. Dormer's Debt; but that it would diveſt each Maſter of the Power over 5000 l. of the Suitors Money, which he had in his Hands. I alſo took Notice, that if ſome ſmall Security was taken from the Maſters, but am not certain that I mentioned any Sum; but believe I might ſay 5000 l. and that ſuch a Security, with our Offices, valued at about 5000 l. a-piece, would, with the Money placed out for the Payment of Mr. Dormer's Debt, be a Security for the Money in our Hands, were we but diveſted of the Power over the Securities, which was four Parts in five of the Truſt: And tho' 15000 l. will not anſwer the Money which a Maſter may ſometimes have in his Hands; yet, where a Man gives a Security for 14 or 15000 l. he'll ſcarce run away for 20000 l. This, I thought, might be of Service to the Publick, and deſired my Lord to conſider of it: And his Lordſhip ſaid, that ſomething might be graſted on this Plan; and deſired me to put it in Writing. I told his Lordſhip, I did not know, whether this Scheme might be agreeable to every Body; that I came into the Office but very lately; and that it was neceſſary for me to have a good Correſpondence with my Brethren; and that I was afraid, if it ſhould be known that I propoſed any thing without their Privity, I ſhould be uſed more unkindly among them than I had already been; and therefore hoped his Lordſhip would not let them know, that it was my Propoſal, nor ſhew them any thing of mine in writing; and took my Leave of my Lord at that Time. The other Maſters knew I had been with my Lord; but I did not communicate the Occaſion of my going to him, or the Propoſal; but I ſounded the reſt of the Maſters, how any Propoſal of this Kind was agreeable to them: Moſt of them were averſe to it, particularly that of diveſting them of the Securities; becauſe that ſhew'd a Diſtruſt of them, and, they ſaid, would diminiſh the Reputation of the Office. They were againſt placing out any ſuch Sum as 5000 l. ſome were rather willing to contribute annually, than to pay ſuch a Sum of Money down: And finding them averſe to it, I was a little cautious how I put this Propoſal into Writing. It was near a Month before I ſet about it; and then did it by way of Letter, in which I took Notice in the Beginning, that it was in Obedience to his Lordſhip's Command.

Mr. Plummer. I beg Pardon for interrupting the Witneſs; I deſire he may be asked, if he did not ſend that Letter to my Lord Macclesfield?

Mr. Lightboun. I wrote a Letter, to the ſame Purport or Effect with what I had propoſed, except in ſome Inſtances which I found other Maſters averſe to, and was cautious of carrying it too far; and believe, inſtead of 5000 l. to be placed out, I only mentioned 2000, or ſuch other Sum as ſhould be agreed on. And though I mentioned a larger Sum, when I was with my Lord, and a ſmaller by Letter, I left that to my Lord's Direction, as his Lordſhip ſhould think neceſſary. I don't remember, or believe, that I took notice in my Letter of the ſmall Security I propoſed to be taken, the rather, becauſe the Maſters differed much in their Thoughts about that: Some of them were for giving none; therefore I ſaid nothing of it. I thought that was my Lord's Province more than mine; but I ſtuck the more cloſely to that of placing out of the Money, for Payment of Mr. Dormer's Deficiency, and taking the Securities in ſeveral Maſters Names. And when I had writ the Letter, I ſent it to my Lord about June, or July, 1722, by my Clerk, who told me he delivered it to my Lord's Servant.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to know, if he kept any Copy of that Letter?

Mr. Lightboun. I kept the original Draught, which I apprehend I writ the Letter from. I can't ſay it is an exact Copy; becauſe in tranſcribing, I might alter Words which I diſliked, and put in others; and therefore I am not ſure it is a true Copy; it may vary in Form, but not in Subſtance.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be asked, whether ever he ſpoke to my Lord about it, and that my Lord acknowledged the Receipt of this Letter?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, I think I did ſay, in the Preſence of ſome of the Maſters, when my Lord talked of taking Security in ſeveral Maſters Names, that, if his Lordſhip would look into the Letter I writ to him at ſuch a Time, he would find that Propoſal made: I don't remember my Lord made any Reply, he did not deny it. But not long before Chriſtmas, my Lord did mention this Letter to me, upon this Occaſion: When I was paſſing my Accompt before the Judges, and the Directors of the Bank, I had told them of this Letter; which his Lordſhip, having heard of, asked me, what I had ſaid about it? I told his Lordſhip, I had acquainted them with the Contents of the Letter I wrote: Says He, I have that Letter by me.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire Mr. Lightboun may produce the Letter.

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, I have not the Letter.

Mr. Plummer. The original Draught you mention.

[Mr. Lightboun produces the Draught.

Mr.

Mr. Plummer. Is that your own Hand-writing, and the Subſtance of the Letter you ſent to the Lord Chancellor?

Mr. Lightboun. It is my Hand-writing, and the Subſtance of that Letter.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire it may be read.

[Mr. Baily reads the Draught.

My LORD,

IN Obedience to your Commands, I here lay before your Lordſhip my Thoughts upon the Affair you were pleaſed to mention, when I had laſt the Honour to wait upon your Lordſhip; and muſt own, that a Proviſion, for the Demand upon Mr. Dormer's Office, might anſwer our preſent Purpoſe: But, with great Submiſſion, I think it concerns the Honour of the Court of Chancery, to find out ſome proper Expedient to prevent the like Accident for the future: And I beg Leave to obſerve, that the great Difficulty, which this Gentleman has brought upon himſelf and the Court, proceeds not only from his Squandering or Miſapplication of the Court Caſh in his Hands (were that all, his Eſtate and Office would much more than have anſwer'd the Demand) but I am afraid it is too obvious, that his Power over the Government Securities, that had been transferr'd to, or brought before him, or upon which he had placed out the Money of the Suitors of the Court in his own Name, has been the Occaſion of this great Deficiency, which I hope may be provided for, and the Credit of the Court retrieved and ſupported, by every Maſter's advancing 2000 l. or ſuch other Sum as ſhall be agreed on, out of the Caſh of the Court in his Hands; which being placed out at Intereſt, the yearly Income thereof, together with the Produce of Mr. Dormer's Eſtate, will anſwer the Demands that may be expected on his Succeſſor; and will, in due Time, make good the Debt upon the Office, provided the Money that has already, or may hereafter be raiſed, from his Eſtate, or any other Way, for that Purpoſe, be forthwith apply'd to diſcharge ſuch Demands as carry Intereſt, or be inveſted in ſuch Securities as have been diſpoſed of by Mr. Dormer, belonging to the Suitors, to anſwer the ſame and the accruing Intereſt, which I hope the Gentleman that ſucceeds him has already taken Care of, if not, the Demand will rather encreaſe than diminiſh

And having before obſerved, from whence this great Deficiency has aroſe, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether the taking all Government Securities for the future, in the Name of two or more Maſters, may not prevent the like Misfortune hereafter: And the Depoſit to be put out to Intereſt, to raiſe a Fund for the Payment of Mr. Dormer's Debt, together with our Office, wou'd in a great Meaſure, be a Security for the Caſh with which we ſhould then only be intruſted.

I expect it will be objected, againſt the Depoſit, that ſome Maſters may not always have that Sum in their Hands; but I will venture to ſay, 'tis ſcarce probable that can happen, if the Money be directed as uſual, to be brought before the Maſters, both by Your Lordſhip and the Maſter of the Rolls, without which the Maſters can't think themſelves much intereſted in the Event of Mr. Dormer's Affair.

It may alſo be objected, that the Alteration, propoſed, in the future taking Government Securities, will ſhew a Diſtruſt, and cauſe Reflections upon the Maſters; but I ſhall think it a Happineſs, to be diveſted of a Power never to be uſed, without the greateſt Violation of the Truſt repoſed in us that can well be imagined; and I think it evident, that it had been a much greater, if we had never been intruſted with it; and as this Variation may be begun by ourſelves, without any publick Direction or Alteration in future Orders, I think it will rather turn to our Reputation than Diſadvantage, and will certainly eaſe the Minds of the Suitors, which ought to have ſome Conſideration in this Affair. I am unwilling to treſpaſs longer on your Lordſhip's Time; but if I have the Happineſs to have offered any thing thought practicable by your Lordſhip, when I have the Honour to be admitted to wait upon you, I hope to ſatisfy your Lordſhip, that I ſhall, with Pleaſure, contribute, as becomes me, to facilitate any Undertaking of this Kind. And that I have as much at Heart the Reputation of the Office I had the Honour to be placed in by your Lordſhip, as any of my Brother Maſters. But as we have different Views, it is not ſurprizing that we think not alike; which makes me fear that nothing of this Kind will be approved of, unleſs recommended by your Lordſhip; and am,

My LORD,

July 19. 1722.

Your Lordſhip's

Moſt obedient Servant,

J. LIGHTBOUN.

Mr. Plummer. What Date is it?

Mr. Lightboun. I did not expect, when I wrote this Letter, that I ſhould have been called upon to give any Account of it, and did not put any Date to it; but, to the beſt of my Knowledge, it was in June, July, or Auguſt, 1722; but it is from Circumſtances I recollect that, rather than from any Remembrance I have of the exact Time.

Mr. Lutwyche. I only deſire that Mr. Lightboun may recollect the Time, when he firſt mentioned this to my Lord Macclesfield, and this Letter was taken Notice of to him?

Mr. Lightboun. Indeed, my Lords, I cannot do that. I believe it was at a Meeting of ſeveral of the Maſters, at my Lord's Houſe. I often had the Honour to be admitted to him, with or without other Maſters. His Doors and Ear were always open to me; and I was often troubleſome to his Lordſhip. But I cannot recollect the Time, when this was firſt mentioned.

Mr. Plummer. I think he ſays the Maſters might have different Views. I deſire he would explain himſelf, what he meant by that?

Mr. Lightboun. I meant by that to put my Lord in mind of what I had ſaid, when I had the Honour to be with him laſt, when his Lordſhip told me, that the Propoſal of a Contribution came from the two ſenior Maſters, I then ſaid that their Deſign was only to skin over this Wound, till they could get out: That one of them had ſlipp'd his his Neck out of the Collar already, and another was about getting out. I told his Lordſhip, that, as I was but lately come into the Office, I propoſed to ſpend my Days or wear myſelf out in the Service of the Court. Therefore, that their Deſign was to get out, and mine to continue in, was what I meant by different Views.

Mr. Plummer. Mr. Lightboun hath given your Lordſhips an Account of his Propoſals and Arguments uſed with my Lord Chancellor; I deſire to know, whether he uſed any other Inducements to perſuade my Lord to make ſome Orders relating to the Maſters?

Mr. Lightboun. It was a long Time before I heard any more of this Affair. As they were quiet, without any Application to me for the 500 l. or to come into any Contribution, which I was reſolved againſt; ſo I did not think it prudent for me to make any Buſtle amongſt my Brethren. I thought I had done my Duty, I had given my Opinion when it was required, and I did not ſtir in it till the Maſters apprehended themſelves very much aggrieved, by the Variation the Maſter of the Rolls was pleaſed to make in the Practice of the Court, by directing all the Money of the Suitors to be brought before his Uſher, and ſometimes to be put out by him without the Maſters Approbation; which not only deprived the Maſters of any Advantage from thence, but of thoſe Fees that were due to them, on the receiving and placing out at Intereſt, or paying it out again; and, as I took it, it no Way anſwered the End, nor was for the Benefit or Security of the Suitors: Becauſe if the Truſt was too great, and the Suitors Property not ſafe in eleven Men's Hands, much leſs was it ſafe in the Hands of one. Therefore I apprehended there was Reaſon for Complaint. On this Account we had ſeveral Meetings; I was always ready to come into any Repreſentation to my Lord, in hopes that Grievances of all Kinds might be looked into, and, I believe, often complained to my Lord of theſe Matters. We went to my Lord Chancellor, and acquainted him of our Grievances; my Lord deſired us to put them into Writing, we all readily concurred in that: Accordingly we drew up our Complaints of theſe, and other Incroachments on our Offices, by Way of Repreſentation, which was delivered to my Lord Chancellor, and after my Lord had had it ſome Time, and nothing done, we frequently importuned my Lord, to conſider the declining State of our Offices: and, I concluded, that would bring the other Matters on the Stage, without which, nothing effectual could be done. My Lord ſaid he would have a Conference with the Maſter of the Rolls, and the Maſters, in order to debate theſe Matters; and I did not doubt, but, upon that Occaſion, the Deficiency of Dormer's would come out, and that ſomething might be done for us, conſiſtent with the Honour of the Court, and the Suitors Safety. But that Conference was delayed; the Grievances in all Reſpects grew greater; we grew more troubleſome to my Lord Chancellor; my Lord then ſaid, there was a Neceſſity of redreſſing all the Grievances; he mentioned the Maſters giving Security, that of taking Securities for the Suitors in other People's Names, and continuing the Maſters in the Enjoyment of their Offices, as they had uſed to have them, and ſaid it would be beſt to do all together. With this we were put off for ſome Time, but, on further Sollicitation, my Lord ſaid, he was now determined to do ſomething in this Affair, and his Lordſhip deſired a more particular Account of the Grievances complained of by the Maſters, and their Reaſons, and the Inconveniencies to the Suitors that accrued from the new Methods, which the Maſter of the Rolls had turned the Buſineſs of the Court into; and that the Matter, both with reſpect to the Suitors and the Maſters, might be fully underſtood, his Lordſhip preſſed, that ſomething of that Kind might be drawn up in Writing and laid before him, and he would make Orders proper to make a thorough Reformation in the Court: And, I remember his Expreſſion to me was, It would ſave him much Trouble, if what was drawn up by the Maſters, not only contained the Things which they had Grounds to complain of, but was put into the Form of Orders neceſſary to be made, for him to conſider of, and alter, and add ſuch others as he had prepared, or thought neceſſary. And ſoon after, a ſecond Repreſentation was prepared and was delivered to my Lord. And after his Lordſhip, had had it ſome ſhort Time, there was a Meeting at my Lord Chancellor's, where the Maſter of the Rolls and the Maſters were preſent, and at that Time there was a good deal of Diſcourſe about the Money. But when the Maſter of the Rolls began the Topick of his Juriſdiction, excluſive of the King's Commiſſion, Heats aroſe, and little was done at that Meeting. I think ſome Perſons of Quality came to ſpeak with my Lord, and that broke it up. I was ſoon afterwards with my Lord, and I asked his Lordſhip what he intended to do: He ſaid he was ſorry Matters were got to that Heighth, but that he found if the Maſters would give up the Judicature, they might be made eaſy in their Demands, and Things put upon the old Foot, and the Suitors made ſafe too; upon that Occaſion, I did take the Liberty to ſay, if there was a judicial Power in the Maſters by Vertue of the King's Commiſſion, as it was his Majeſty's Prerogative to grant, we could not give it up; and that, for my Part, I would not exchange or barter it for the Cuſtody of the Suitors Money. I believe my Lord propoſed, at this Meeting, to have had the Aſſiſtance of the Maſter of the Rolls in making theſe intended Orders; and I recollect, that after the Deficiency of this laſt Repreſentation, which I was preſent at, I heard that my Lord had ſhewn it to the Maſter of the Rolls before the Meeting, which I took amiſs, my Lord deſiring it for his own private Uſe: Upon which I went to him in order to withdraw it, and told him it was done in ſuch Haſte, that all the Maſters had not conſidered it; but whether I alledged to him, or He to me; I don't remember. but it was ſaid, that it was very proper the Maſters ſhould all ſign it; and I think I carried it back to the Maſters, and that we all ſigned it; and then it was delivered back to my Lord. And, I believe, upon the Face of that Repreſentation it will appear, that it was drawn up at my Lord Chancellor's Requeſt.

The

The firſt Repreſentation was chiefly confined to ſuch Grievances as affected our ſelves, the ſecond is more at large; I don't know whether his Lordſhip will produce it. Some things in it may ſeem to bear hard upon his Honour the Maſter of the Rolls, and may give Offence; but it will be conſidered, that it was written at a time when there were great Differences between the Maſter of the Rolls and the Maſters. Nay, I think I may ſay, the whole Court of Chancery was in a State of War.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire he may be asked, if he ever laid before my Lord Chancellor, the Expectations of the World, that he would reform theſe Abuſes and Grievances?

Mr. Lightboun. I have often mentioned that to my Lord, and preſſed it rather more and oftener than became me. I was aſhamed to be ſo troubleſom, and I was ſurprized that my Lord did not do ſomething in it; tho' I ſoon found, and have often told one or other of the Maſters and others, that my Lord would do nothing in it. However, I continued to perſevere in preſſing it; and expreſly mentioned the great Inconveniencies the Court would be run into, for want of a proper Regulation, and with what an ill Grace we could apply to his Succeſſors to redreſs theſe Grievances, in Caſe his Lordſhip grew weary of the fatigue of Buſineſs, and quitted the great Seal; that they would tell us, we had long acquieſced under them, and that his Lordſhip not having ſo much as looked into them, they would not care to meddle or interfere in it. I preſſed it home to his Lordſhip, and thought he made Doubts and Difficulties where there were none. Indeed I thought in this his Lordſhip wanted his uſual Reſolution, and almoſt ventured to ſay ſo (tho' I know not whether it is very proper to mention it) but I did take the Liberty to tell his Lordſhip, that if he did not redreſs theſe Grievances, unleſs my Lord Lechmere ſucceeded him, I deſpaired of ſeeing them ſettled on any better Foot. I hope my Lord will pardon my mentioning his Name.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We have done with Mr. Lightboun.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, when the firſt Application was made by the Maſters to redreſs their Grievances?

Mr. Lightboun. I really can't tell. I went ſo frequently to my Lord, that I cannot diſtinguiſh one time from another; I believe other Maſters that went ſeldomer can tell better; but I believe it muſt be a Year and a half, or 2 Years ago, or more: I cannot tell the Time.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether there was any ſecond Application, before the Repreſentation was put into Writing?

Mr. Lightboun. Immediately upon the Maſter of the Rolls's varying the Method of the Court, and Directing the Money to be paid into the Uſher, the Maſters went to my Lord Chancellor's, which I believe muſt be before Chriſtmas, 1722. I believe Mr. Holford remembers it better; and that from time to time, I have often told him that my Lord Chancellor would do nothing in it.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire to ask him, when that meeting was between the late Lord Chancellor and the Maſter of the Rolls?

Mr. Lightboun, That I believe was the beginning of laſt Summer.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We deſire he may ſay who was then preſent at that meeting with the Maſter of the Rolls?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, At that meeting with the Maſter of the Rolls the Lord Chancellor was there, had the great Seal before him; and the two Senior Regiſters were there, with Pen Ink and Paper before them, in proper Habits, the Maſter of the Rolls, and all the Maſters in their Gowns, and the Secretary was there, and the Maſters all hoped the Orders were to be then pronounced; but I can't remember that the Regiſters ſet Pen to Paper. The Uſher was likewiſe there.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may, if he can recollect it, give a particular Account of what paſſed at that meeting.

Mr. Lightboun. The Maſters inſiſted they had a Right by Cuſtom to have the Money brought before them, where there was any Reference to a Maſter, whether it was by Orders made upon hearing, or by Interlocutory Orders, or if there was a Direction in that Order, by which the Money was brought in for the Payment, or Application of it; in theſe Caſes they alledged, that the Money had, time out of Mind, been brought before the Maſter, to whom the reference was directed; and they did admit, that where Money was brought in upon Bills of Interpleader or Interlocutory Orders, where there was no Reference to a Maſter, the Money had uſually been directed to be brought into Court, in Order to be kept till it could be determined whoſe it was, or to what Uſe it was to be applied; and there they admitted the Money was formerly kept by the Uſher. This I apprehended was inſiſted upon by the Maſters as their undoubted Right, and it was expected an Order would have been then made declaring it ſo.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire to know what further paſſed relating to Facts only, without any Account of his own Expectations?

Mr. Lightboun. Some Debate aroſe about the Maſter of the Rolls's Judicature, ſtarted I think firſt by himſelf.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to put Mr. Lightboun in Mind of ſome things, and firſt to ask him, whether upon that Application they had made to me in relation to the Alteration or Variation, as he calls it, in the Practice of the Court, by the Orders made by the Maſter of the Rolls, whether I did not require them to lay Precedents before me, that I might be ſatisfyed how that Matter ſtood?

Mr. Lightbourn. Your Lordſhip did, but it was long before that meeting, I believe a Year and more.

E. of Macclesfield. Whether there had not been like Directions, that the Uſher ſhould lay Precedents before me?

Mr. Lightboun, I don't know of any ſuch Directions to him, but I remember my Lord Chancellor called for his Precedents, and wondred he had not brought them, if he had any for his purpoſe.

E. of Macclesfield, I deſire Mr. Lightboun may recollect whether the queſtion was not put to the Uſher, with relation to the Uſage of the Court, to put the Money into the Maſters Hands, in all Caſes where the Money was brought into Court, to be diſpoſed of, either to be put out at Intereſt, or paid to Creditors, or Legatees, whether he had any one Precedent to the contrary?

Mr. Lightboun. I remember he had none, and I apprehended the Uſher did not make out any ſort of Claim to keep ſuch Money.

E. of Macclesfield. I don't ask what the Uſher made out, but what Queſtions were asked him about the Uſage and Precedents.

Mr. Lightboun. I believe they were asked for, and I am ſure he then produced none.

E. of Macclesfield. Pray recollect, and conſider; did I ſpeak to him, as to one that had not any Precedents to produce; or did I make mention as if he had brought Precedents, and ask him if he could ſay, that among thoſe Precedents there was one to the Purpoſe, to make out that the Uſage was not ſo?

Mr. Lightboun. I ſay your Lordſhip blamed him for not bringing theſe Precedents. I believe your Lordſhip asked him, if he could bring any Precedent to the Point? and, to the beſt of my Remembrance, he ſaid he had none, or gave no ſatisfactory Anſwer, but ſuch as I thought Evaſive; but I cannot remember particularly what your Lordſhip and he ſaid to each other.

E. of Macclesfield. This is a very indifferent Account; ſince Mr. Lightboun hath ſo good a Memory, I deſire to know whether the Uſher was not told, that his Precedents had been read, and poſſibly might have overlooked ſome that were Material; and therefore deſired him to ſhew whether there was among them any one Precedent, that related to Money brought in, in theſe Caſes?

Mr. Lightboun. He produced none.

E. of Macclesfield. Did it not appear that he had produced Precedents before, and they had been read, and that poſſibly I might have overlooked ſome of them?

Mr. Lightboun. On your Lordſhip's mentioning of it, I do recollect ſomething did appear, that your Lordſhip had ſeen his Precedents, and did expect he ſhould have brought more.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire he may be asked whether he did pretend he could produce more?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords, I cannot be particular in that.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire to know whether he did not own that he had no ſuch Precedents?

Mr. Lightboun. In Anſwer to that, my Lords, I cannot ſay poſitively he did or did not; for I believe I have ſeen ſome few Orders of antient Dates, that were Precedents of Money being brought into the Uſher's Hands, in Order to be diſpoſed of after hearing. But there were but few of them.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, I deſire Mr. Lightboun may be asked whether the Regiſters were not asked about the Practice of the Court and if in all their Obſervation and Experience the Money in the caſes before ſpecified was ordered to the Uſher?

Mr. Lightboun. They were, my Lords.

E. of Macclesfield. And what Anſwer did they make?

Mr. Lightboun. They anſwered, that the Money, after hearing, and on interlocutory Orders, where the Application was directed, had been uſually ordered to the Maſters.

E. of Macclesfield. I deſire Mr. Lightboun may be asked, whether it was not after this, that the Maſter of the Rolls began to ſpeak with relation to the Judicature, and how that was introduced?

Mr. Lightboun. I have forgot the Circumſtances and Manner of its being introduced by the Maſter of the Rolls. But I remember one Expreſſion of his Honour's, That he would have the Maſters conſider how proper it was for them to inſiſt upon a Judicature, which would impower them to order Money into their own Hands. But how he introduced that Diſcourſe I don't know; but I ſaw the Lord Chancellor had not a Mind that Topick ſhould be touched upon, and that the Maſter of the Rolls brought it in much againſt his Lordſhip's Inclination; but how I don't remember. If your Lordſhip puts me in mind, I may recollect.

E. of Macclesfield. The Uſher, was not he apprized of this meeting?

Mr. Lightboun. Yes.

E. of Macclesfield. Did the Maſter of the Rolls give any Opinion relating to this Matter of the Money being paid to the Uſher?

Mr. Lightboun. He inſiſted on his own Judicature, and both introduced and ſtuck to that Diſcourſe.

E. of Macclesfield. Do you remember his ſaying that the Maſters muſt not expect favour at the Rolls, if they contended for Juriſdiction?

Mr. Lightboun. My Lords I do not.

E. of Macclesfield. You ſpoke of my irreſolution: Was it not with reſpect to the Diſpute between you and the Maſter of the Rolls?

Mr. Lightboun. I could not tell where it ſtuck, there was ſome Difficulty made of determining that Matter; but your Lordſhip did not communicate to me your Reaſons why you did not proceed upon that or any other of the Maſters Affairs.

E. of Macclesfield. I preſume, Mr. Lightboun, you did not every time you came to me, ſpeak to me of the Affairs wherein the Maſters thought themſelves hurt?

Mr. Lightboun. No, my Lord, I did not.

E. of Macclesfield. You ſometimes ſpoke to me about the Money, and at other times relating to the Maſter of the Rolls; I deſire to know, when you applied to me with reſpect to the Diſputes with the Maſter of the Rolls and the Innovations made on your Offices; if it was not upon that you found me irreſolute?

Mr. Lightboun. Your Lordſhip always ſaid it was proper to ſettle all at one time, that ſome ſecurity ſhould be given by the Maſters, and ſomething done to make it reaſonable to expect it from them; which was to eſtabliſh the Maſters in their juſt Rights, and upon that occaſion your Lordſhip mentioned taking Securities in different Perſons Names, and upon that Score the old Propoſal of mine was revived.

E. of Macclesfield. I have no further Queſtion to ask.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire Mr. Holford may be called.

Mr. Holford called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire Mr. Holford may be asked, whether at any time, and when, he heard of a Propoſal made by Mr. Lightboun, and whether it was made publick?

Mr. Holford. My Lords, a good while ago, I believe two or three Years, Mr. Lightboun and I had a great deal of Diſcourſe about the Condition and Circumſtances the Court of Chancery was then in; and about the Confuſion that was like to happen by the unfortunate Accident that had happen'd to Mr. Dormer. We did talk of a great many things that were proper to remedy it. A great many were the ſame that are mentioned in the Letter that hath been read. I think I told him, it was very right, eſpecially as to the matter of the Securities, which was the greateſt power a Maſter was truſted with; for, as the Securities were above three Parts in four of the whole truſt, if there could be a way found out to ſecure that, it would be a taking away three Parts in four of our Truſt; and conſequently would not leave ſo great a Power in the Maſters; but as long as they were taken in the Name of one Perſon, and no truſt declared, he could diſpoſe of thoſe things, and no body could hinder it. Therefore I thought it proper to be taken in two or three Names. I believe when it was propoſed to be in two Maſters, it was mentioned there might be a third, and then no harm could happen to the Suitors, unleſs Corruption ran through the whole Office. I remember ſometime after, that Mr. Lightboun did ſhew me the rough Draught of this Letter, which he ſaid he had ſent to my Lord; and we read it over together at my Houſe: I told him, it was very right, and that he had put it upon as good a Foot, as upon the firſt Conſideration it could be put upon: That every new Method was liable to Inconveniencies, but for my part I thought it looked fair, in that, as to the Matter of the Securities, the Money in the Maſters Hands was left pretty much to the Direction of my Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Serj Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether theſe Propoſals that were made were agreeable to him, ſo far, that if they were directed by my Lord Chancellor, he would have ſubmitted to them?

Mr. Holford. Yes, my Lords, I ſhould have readily ſubmitted to them.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether he remembers any Diſcourſe of theſe Propoſals before my Lord Chancellor in his Preſence?

Mr. Holford. I don't remember I ever had the Honour of ſpeaking to my Lord Chancellor about any of them; nor to have been at any meeting where they were ſpoken of before my Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he can recollect when he had this Diſcourſe with Mr. Lightboun, and when this Draught of the Letter was ſhewn him?

Mr. Holford. About two Years ago; ſome time after it had been written, and ſent to my Lord, Mr. Lightboun told me, ſays he, I have writ to my Lord to the Effect of what we talked of; and I will ſhew you the Letter; and he pulled out the Copy and ſhew'd it me.

E. of Macclesfield. Was you at that meeting which Mr. Lightboun hath mentioned, when the Maſters and the Maſter of the Rolls were there? And what paſſed, as near as you can remember?

Mr. Holford. My Lords, I think it was upon Midſummer Day, if I remember right, and the Maſters, the Uſher, the Regiſters, and the Maſter of the Rolls, were all there. My Lord Chancellor declared there had been ſome Diſputes in the Court of Chancery, and he had called them together to adjuſt thoſe Diſputes, eſpecially in relation to the Money of the Court. I believe the Uſher was called upon to know whether he had any Precedents to offer in Juſtification of his own Right, or of what he claimed as a Right? and the Uſher, I think, ſaid at that time, he had no more than he had already delivered to his Lordſhip; I believe his Lordſhip ſaid thoſe Precedents were not much to the purpoſe; the Uſher ſaid he had no more, and delivered no more; and after ſome Diſcourſe, there were ſeveral People ſpoke, the Uſher inſiſting there were ſome Precedents to the purpoſe. Then a Diſpute aroſe about the Juriſdiction of the Maſter of the Rolls; and ſo the Affair broke up at that time. I think nothing more was done.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Kinaſton may be called.

Mr. Kinaſton called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We deſire that Mr. Kinaſton may give your Lordſhips an Account, whether he knows of any Propoſal made to the Earl of Macclesfield, relating to the ſecuring the Effects of the Suitors?

Mr. Kinaſton. Yes, My Lords, I do; there were ſeveral Meetings among the Maſters privately before they came into an Agreement. I think they all did agree, that they would go to my Lord Macclesfield, and propoſe to him to give Security, and to ſettle the Matter of the Securities ſo, that it ſhould not be in the Maſters power to diſpoſe of them. I remember it was agreed upon, that it ſhould be ſo repreſented to my Lord, and I believe all, or moſt of the Maſters, went to my Lord Macclesfield, and did propoſe it to my Lord. I am very poſitive ſome Propoſals were laid before him. Some propoſed to get People to be bound with them, but there might be ſome Difficulty in that; others propoſed that they ſhould give Land Security, but it was thought likewiſe that might meet with Difficulties in relation to the Title.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was there any Propoſal made as to the Securities in their Hands?

Mr. Kinaſton. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. In what manner was it propoſed that the Securities ſhould be taken?

Mr. Kinaſton. I am not poſitive, but it was to this purpoſe; they ſhould be put in one or two of the Maſters Names, and of the Perſons concerned. I am not certain how that was, but it was ſomething of that Kind.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I beg leave to ask this Witneſs when this was?

Mr. Kinaſton. I do not remember the time exactly. I believe it was ſometime about Chriſtmas was twelve Month.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We ſhall call no further Witneſſes upon this particular Article; but beg leave to refer to your Lordſhips recollection of what paſſed Yeſterday, from the Examination of all the Maſters, relating to the Encouragement and Inducement that proceeded from my Lord Macclesfield, to the Maſters, to perſuade them to make up Dormer's Deficiency, if their Offices ſhould be eſtabliſhed on their old Foot; which ſufficiently proves the Notice the Earl had of their Trafficking and dealing with the Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court. In the next place we ſhall lay before your Lordſhips an Order, made by the Earl of Macclesfield, of the 17th. of December, 1724. Tho' as to the ſeveral Propoſals made to his Lordſhip by the Maſters, he doubted of the Power he had to make any Order, yet when it was too late, or after the Loſſes had happened, when the Affair of this great Deficiency appeared, then doth he make an Order, that looks with ſome Care, but with this Introduction, that it was not uſual for the Maſters to give Security; tho' it appears to your Lordſhips that they had offered it, and were willing to do it.

Mr. Ralph Paxton proves the Order.

Clerk reads, Ordo Curiæ Jovis Decimo Septimo die Decembris, 1724.

WHereas his Majeſty has been pleaſed to appoint a Committee, of ſeveral Lords and others, of his moſt Honourable Privy Council; to make ſome Inquiries concerning the Court of Chancery, Chancery, and particularly concerning the Monies of the Suitors of that Court, in the Hands of the Maſters or other Officers of that Court, and to conſider which way the ſame may be beſt ſecured; and the Lord Chancellor having at their Deſire ordered the ſeveral Maſters to give in their reſpective Accompts, which they accordingly did; and Mr. Baron Gilbert, Mr. Juſtice Denton, and Mr. Juſtice Raymond, and likewiſe Sir Nathaniel Gold, Mr. Thompſon, and Mr. Hanger, three of the Directors, and one of them Deputy Governor of the Bank, having been appointed and deſired by the ſaid Committee, to inſpect and examine the ſaid Accompts, and who have proceeded ſo to do, and after having been ſeveral Times attended by the ſaid Maſters, have made a Report thereof to the ſaid Committee of Council; whereby it appears, that, tho' all the Maſters of the ſaid Court have produced before them all the Securities and Certificates of their having the Stock and Annuities in their Names; which upon their Accompts, they appear to be chargeable with as belonging to the Suitors of the Court, and much the greater Part of the Maſters have brought before the ſaid Mr. Baron Gilbert, and other Perſons above named, their Caſh or Securities eaſily convertible into Money, Certificates of Stock, and Annuities ſufficient to make good the Ballance of their Accompts: Yet upon the ſaid Report it appears that there are yet conſiderable Deficiencies of Monies, which were in the Hands of ſome Maſters, who are dead; and that ſome of the preſent Maſters have not produced the Ballance of their Caſh, nor given a ſatisfactory Accompt how the ſame is to be made good, and it not having been uſual for the Maſters of the ſaid Court to give Security for the Money in their Hands, the ſaid Committee thought adviſeable, that till this Affair could be more maturely conſidered, and proper Methods eſtabliſhed for ſecurity of the Suitors of the ſaid Court, the Effects herein after mentioned, which have upon this Occaſion been produced, ſhould be at preſent ſecured in the Manner herein after mentioned, and recommended to the Right Honourable the Lord Chancellor, to take ſuch Order therein, as ſhould be proper; all which being communicated to all the ſaid Maſters, and the ſaid Report now read in the Preſence of them all, except Mr. Kinaſton, who is indiſpoſed, and thereby prevented from attending; and upon hearing what was alledged by the ſaid Maſters, and the Facts of the ſaid Report, ſo far as concerns their reſpective Securities in their Hands and Power, and the Ballance of Caſh in their Hands not being controverted, his Lordſhip therefore doth think fit, and ſo order, that the ſaid Maſters, Mr. Holford, Mr. Lovibond, Mr. John Bennet, Mr Godfrey, Mr. Lightboun, Mr. Conway, Mr. Edwards, Mr. Thomas Bennet, Mr. Elde, and Mr. Thurſton, all now preſent, and likewiſe Mr. Kinaſton, do forthwith prepare and ſend to the Bank of England, every one a Cheſt with one Lock, and Haſps for two Padlocks; the Key of the Lock to be kept by the Maſter, and the Key of one of the Padlocks by Mr. Smith, and Mr. Malthus, two of the Six Clerks of this Court, or one of them, and the Key of the other by the Governor, Deputy Governor or Caſhire of the Bank; and that all the Bonds, Exchequer Annuities and Orders, and other Securities given in upon their ſaid Accompts, as Securities belonging to the Suitors of this Court, or as the proper Securities of the ſaid Maſters, towards making good the Ballance of their reſpective Caſh; and likewiſe the Bank Notes and Caſh ſo given in, and not ſince paid to, or laid out for the Suitors of the Court, be depoſited in the ſaid Cheſts, under the Inſpection of Mr. Baron Gilbert, and the other Perſons appointed, as aforeſaid, to inſpect the Maſters Accompts, or of ſome of them; and that then the Cheſts be locked up, and left in the Cuſtody of the Bank of England; but ſo to be kept, as that the Maſters may have eaſy Acceſs thereto, to comply with the Orders of this Court, till further Order may be taken concerning the ſame; and whereas the Maſters have in their ſeveral Accompts given in particulars of Stock, and of Annuities, transferrable in the Books of the ſeveral Companies, ſtanding in their Names, which belong to the ſeveral Suitors of this Court, or as their own proper Stock and Annuities, by which part of the Ballance of Caſh in their Hands may be made good or ſecured; it is further ordered, that they do each of them forthwith deliver into the reſpective Company, a Declaration in writing, wherein ſuch Stock in each reſpective Company, or the Annuities there transferrable, as by their reſpective Accompts, appear to belong to the Suitors of the Court, and likewiſe the Stock and Annuities by them reſpectively propoſed towards making good, or ſecuring their Ballance of Caſh, or ſo much thereof, as ſhall equal the Ballance of their ſaid Accompt; in Caſe they have in their Names more than ſufficient for that Purpoſe, it ſhall be declared to be upon Truſt, to attend the Orders of this Court; and the ſaid reſpective Companies are to take care, that proper Entries be made thereof in their Books, ſo that ſuch Stock or Annuities be not Transferred, but by Order or Leave of this Court, and the ſaid Maſters upon performing the Order above, are to take proper Certificates, Signed by Mr Baron Gilbert, and the other Perſons appointed as aforeſaid, to inſpect the ſaid Accompts, or ſome of them; and by the Perſons keeping the Keys of the ſaid Cheſts, of the Particulars of the Bonds, or other Securities, and Caſh Notes, depoſited and locked up in ſuch Cheſts, as aforeſaid, and Certificates Signed by the ſame Perſons, and by a proper Officer of the Bank, that ſuch Cheſts are depoſited in the Bank, and Certificates ſigned by the proper Officers of the reſpective Companies, of the Declarations made as aforeſaid, by the reſpective Maſters, and of the Entries thereof; and it is further ordered that the Goldſmiths Notes, produced by the ſaid Maſters, in giving in their Accompts, be by them turned into Bank Notes, and ſo depoſited as aforeſaid; and the ſaid ſeveral Maſters are forthwith to give Mr. Baron Gilbert Poſt-Accompts of their Receipt, and Payments ſince the former Accompts, and a Copy hereof is to be delivered to Mr. Kinaſton, he not being now preſent; and another Copy left at the publick Office of the Maſters, with their Clerk there, for their more eaſy recourſe thereto, in order to their exact Compliance therewith.

EDW. GOLDESBROUGH
Deputy Regiſter.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. By this Order your Lordſhips will obſerve, that ſome of the inſuperable Difficulties

Difficulties were ſurmounted, and ſome of the Evils Cured; and tho' that Method will not take it totally out of the Power of the Maſters, yet why the noble Lord could not have proceeded ſo far before, is left to your Lordſhips Determination; we ſhall not call any further Witneſſes on theſe Articles, we apprehend we have fully made them out. The honourable Gentleman who opens the next Article, will proceed.

Lord Morpeth, My Lords, It falls to my Lot, to open to your Lordſhips the 19th Article of this Impeachment, and, it being ſometime ſince 'twas read at your Table, 'twill be neceſſary for me ſhortly to recollect it.

The Article charges, 'That his Majeſty, having in Novemb. laſt, directed an Inquiry into 'the Accounts of the Maſters, to the intent, that 'proper Methods ſhou'd be taken, for the Security of the Suitors, the Earl of Macclesfield, being 'then Lord Chancellor, and one of the Privy Counſel, in order to obſtruct the ſame, and to prevent a parliamentary Inquiry into the Condition 'of the Offices of the Maſters, did, in the firſt 'Place, adviſe the Maſters to aſſiſt each other with 'Money and Effects; and for their Incouragement, 'repreſented it to them, that it wou'd be for their 'Honour and Service to appear Able and Sufficient, and that if they made a bold ſtand now, it 'wou'd prevent a Parliamentary Inquiry. In the next Place, 'That the Earl perſuaded ſeveral of 'of them, to make falſe Repreſentations of their 'Circumſtances to his Majeſty, by adding a Subſcription to their Accounts, that they were able 'and willing to Anſwer the Effects in their Hands, 'tho' the Earl then knew, or had good reaſon to 'believe the contrary; and that ſeveral of the 'Maſters, according to the Earl's advice, did 'ſupply others with Money and Effects, to make 'a falſe Shew, and appearance of their Abilities.

Your Lordſhips take notice, that the time mentioned in the Article, is November laſt; at which time, and for ſome Years before, the Kingdom had rang of the Abuſes and Corruptions of the Court of Chancery, with little hopes of Redreſs, but from the Juſtice of Parliament: The Earl cou'd not but foreſee, that the Period was then drawing near, when the Cries of the Oppreſſed and the univerſal Diſſatisfaction, rais'd againſt his Adminiſtration, wou'd, ſome way or other, force its Relief.

This cry for Juſtice having reach'd his Majeſty's Ear, He was pleaſed to direct the Inquiry mention'd in the Article, and whilſt this was depending, the Impeach'd Lord finiſh'd that Scheme of Iniquity, he had carried on ſo long without controul.

The Facts charg'd in this Article contain in themſelves the vileſt Deceit and Treachery; heighten'd, and aggravated by the wicked Purpoſes, for which they were contrived; Firſt, to have miſled the Council Board into a groundleſs Belief of the Maſter's ſufficiency to Anſwer the Suitors; and on this Foundation he built a more impious, but more fatal Project, the preventing a Parliamentary Inquiry.

The Anſwer given by the Earl to this Article deſerves a particular Notice; He ſays, 'That upon great Conſideration of Dormer's Deficiency, 'and the Danger there might be of further Inconveniencies with relation to the Suitors Effects, of ſome Diſputes in the Court, and of 'ſome Practices of the Maſters, which he thought 'ought to be Reform'd, he was convinced, it was 'a work of too great Conſequence, for him ſingly 'to Attempt; and being highly ſenſible of his 'moſt ſacred Majeſty's paternal Goodneſs, did preſume humbly to beſeech his Majeſty, as the Fountain of Juſtice, to Depute ſome of his Privy 'Council to take the Matters into Conſideration.

My Lords, Seven Years, and more had paſs'd ſince he was made Lord Chancellor, three Years, ſince Dormer's Deficiency, without one honeſt thought, for any thing that has yet appear'd, or one ſincere Step taken by him, for the Honour of the Court, or the ſafety of the Suitors; if the Examination order'd by his Majeſty, did ſpring from his Lordſhip's Requeſt, his real intention, in deſiring it, will be beſt known from his former Conduct, and from the Uſe, we ſhall prove, he intended to have made of that Inquiry; his paſt Behaviour has already appear'd to your Lordſhips, to have been a Series of Extortion and Oppreſſion, conſtantly attended with the vileſt and meaneſt Artifices to keep it Secret; the King's paternal Goodneſs was moſt notoriouſly abuſed, by him, who was intruſted to Diſpenſe it; and that Fountain of Juſtice polluted, which he now dares to name in his Defence.

I think my ſelf juſtified in charging this Part of his Defence, as an Act of high Diſſimulation before your Lordſhips; and a preſumptuous Attempt, to cover his own Guilt under his Majeſty's ſacred Name, and the Orders he was pleaſed to give for that Inquiry. The Earl has, indeed, acknowledged one Truth, in this part of his Anſwer, 'That the great Deficiencies, and Danger to the 'Suitors, and the Practices of the Maſters (which 'he does not name, but ſays) ought to be reform'd, had convinc'd him, that the Reformati'on of them was a Work too great for him, 'ſingly, to Attempt,

My Lords, The many Proſtitutions of the Dignity of that great Office, which have been proved upon him, had doubtleſs greatly wounded the Honour, and Authority of the Court it ſelf; and the Earl had bound himſelf ſo faſt to thoſe Maſters, whom he had admitted, by the Bands of Corruption, which he had not Power to break thro'; that nothing which tended to the Honour of that high Court, or the Advantage of the Suitors, cou'd be expected from his Hands.

The next Paſſage of his Anſwer is a wretched Mixture of the moſt abject Flattery of ſuch of your Lordſhips, as attended that Committee, to whom, I believe, his Lordſhip very truly Declares, he was entirely ſubſervient; and of falſe Praiſes of himſelf, for the great Services he contributed to that Inquiry: However, after this Introduction, the Anſwer goes on and declares, 'That he is greatly ſurprized, to find himſelf 'charged with Obſtructing the taking thoſe Accounts, which he had thus deſired might be taken, and had promoted with all his Power.

This is a poor Evaſion and Affectation of Innocence, and the more ſurprizing, to come from his Lordſhip, whoſe Miſconduct had ſo notoriouſly been the Occaſion of that Inquiry. And the Charge is not, as he inſinuates, for obſtructing the taking the Accounts, but, for procuring falſe Accounts, and Repreſentations to be laid before the Council, by which means that inquiry might have been fruſtrated.

But he proceeds in his Anſwer to a Declaration, the moſt aſtoniſhing of all others, 'That he never 'thought of preventing a Parliamentary Inquiry, any 'otherwiſe, than by making it unneceſſary, and procuring to the Suitors a full Redreſs of all their 'Grievances, and rectifying whatever he found a'miſs; and that he lookd upon to be his Duty

'and begs leave to ſay it here, once for all, in Anſwer to all the Inſinuations of that kind contained in any of the Articles.'

By the laſt Words the Earl, in a very ſummary Manner, pronounces his own Acquittal; but your Lordſhips will obſerve, that the Article charges him, in plain Words, with actual adviſing the Maſters to miſrepreſent their Accounts, in order to prevent a Parliamentary Inquiry, and that, if they made a bold ſtand now, it might prevent one; His Lordſhip Anſwers, that he never thought of preventing it, otherwiſe, than by procuring full Redreſs, &c.

By this he confeſſes, he did think of preventing the Inquiry of Parliament.

He has not dared to deny the Facts charged, from which this Deſign was manifeſt, becauſe he knew they would be fully proved: But the Subterfuge he flies to, viz. that he did intend to prevent it, by rendring it unneceſſary, is impoſſible to be believed, tho' the Commons ſhou'd offer no Proofs at all to this part of the Article; unleſs his Lordſhip imagines, that he is able to carry on the Impoſition ſo far, as that the concealing from his Majeſty the true Condition of the Suitors, by the Methods he was then practiſing with the Maſters, ſhould be taken by your Lordſhips to be the Means of procuring them full Redreſs; and it is ſelf-evident, that if his Contrivance had taken place, the immediate and full Relief of the Suitors, which was his Majeſty's gracious Purpoſe, had thereby been wholly defeated: The Commons therefore may inſiſt upon it, that this flagrant Circumſtance is eſtabliſhed by his own Confeſſion, eſpecially ſince your Lordſhips find, that in the following parts of his Anſwer the Earl declares, 'That Mr. Holford having ſubſcribed his Accounts, 'with a Declaration of his Abilities, and Readineſs to anſwer the Suitors, and ſome of the Maſters having uſed Expreſſions, as he thought, not 'ſo proper, others of them having made no Concluſions at all; he did adviſe them all to write 'the ſame Words under their Accounts, as Mr. 'Holford had done, and did tell them, in great 'Sincerity and Friendſhip, that at a Time when 'ſo many Mens Mouths were open againſt them 'as Inſolvent, it would be for their Honour and 'Intereſt to make it appear that they were Able.'

Thus far the Anſwer is a full Confeſſion, that he adviſed all the Maſters to add Mr. Holford's Concluſion to their Accounts.

His Lordſhip ſays, he was induced to do this from their aſſuring him they were able; this Aſſertion will appear to be notoriouſly falſe; however, if it had been true, his Lordſhip, it ſeems, took their bare Words for it, at the ſame Time that he declared to them, that ſo many Mens Mouths were open againſt them as Inſolvent: But here, unhappy Man, he flies again for Sanctuary to the Integrity of his own Heart, and aſſures your Lordſhips, 'That he never thought of a Contrivance to 'have them deceitfully appear to be what they 'really were not; tho' this Declaration of the Innocence of his Mind ſtands alſo in direct Contradiction to the Fact he had juſt before confeſſed; and in the very next Lines he again confeſſes, that ſome of the Maſters, purſuant to his own Directions, did withdraw to add the ſame Words to their Accounts, as Mr Holford had done to his; which he carried to the Council without looking into them, and, when they were read there, the Maſters, it ſeems, were honeſter Men than the Earl expected, or would have had them to be; for, notwithſtanding his Advice, all of them did not make theſe Subſcriptions to their Accounts.

To the other Charge in the Article, of his adviſing them to ſtand by one another and appear able, his Lordſhip has given a particular Anſwer, 'That an Order being made upon the Maſters, 'to produce their Securities and Caſh, and the 'Maſters complaining of the ſhort Time to produce ſuch great Sums, he confeſſes, he did ſay, 'that he required them to beſtir themſelves, and 'might, ſay that ſome of their Brethren might perhaps be able to let them have Money, till they 'could raiſe it another Way.'

The Excuſe he offers for this Advice, is a very unjuſtifiable one, it is, that the Maſters declared to him, that they had not the Suitors Effects ready, which, by the Duty of their Offices, his Lordſhip knew they ought to have had, but had Effects ſufficient to raiſe the whole, if they could have had more Time. By his own Account of this Matter 'tis plain, that the Maſters did at that Time diſcloſe to him one of the Practices, which 'twas his Duty to have reformed; and yet your Lordſhips ſee what Conſideration he had of it; even at this Juncture he adviſed them to ſupply one another, which they accordingly did, and the Deceit prevailed, till the Order for carrying the Securities and Caſh to the Bank made the Diſcovery.

Perhaps, my Lords, I have dwelt too long on the Earl's Anſwer; but, I think, it will appear to your Lordſhips to betray ſuch a Confuſion of Mind, as nothing but the heavieſt Preſſures of Guilt could have produced, and is a ſtronger Conviction of him than a thouſand Witneſſes.

I will, in the next Place, give ſome ſhort Account of our Evidence to this Article. The Maſters themſelves will prove the Earl's Directions, either given by his own Mouth, or by his Secretaries, when they were required to make up their Accounts to be laid before the King in Council, that they ſhould ſtand by one another, and give the beſt Account, they could, to prevent a Parliamentary Inquiry, and that they need only to produce or ſhew Bank or Goldſmiths Notes; and that it was a critical Juncture, and that the Strong ſhould aſſiſt the Weak, and that they muſt make a Stand, and defeat the Deſigns of their Enemies.

We ſhall farther prove his Lordſhip's expreſs Directions to the Maſters, to add the ſame Concluſion to their Accounts, as Mr. Holford had done to his, which was, that they were able and ready to anſwer their Balances; tho' the Earl did not ſo much as ask any of them whether they could make it good, and ſome of them declar'd the contrary; and at that Time alſo he told them, that it would be for their Honour and Service, and that it would look well to the Council to appear able and willing.

We ſhall alſo prove, that this falſe Advice of the Earl was followed by ſeveral of the Maſters, in both Reſpects; and that afterwards, when the Suitors Effects were to be carried into the Bank, ſeveral of them who had before appeared able, now proved deficient in great Sums, and Bank and Goldſmiths Notes, and other Effects, to a great Value, with which ſeveral of them had been accommodated, and which they had produced to the Perſons appointed to examine the Accounts, and which, as appears by the Reports on your Lordſhips Table, they had ſworn to be their own, and not lent them for the Purpoſe of accounting, now vaniſhed, and a Deficiency appeared of fourſcore thouſand Pounds and upwards, which ſtill continues.

This Evidence will fully maintain our Article, and, if any Proof is neceſſary, will ſufficiently clear up the Earl's Intentions.

My

My Lords, The Part which ſtill remains to me is ſuch, as I own my ſelf utterly unable to perform, I mean, to aggravate this Offence in ſuch Manner as it deſerves; the amazing Scene this Article has opened, muſt not be judged of ſingly, and by it ſelf; nor can it be accounted for but as the Off-ſpring of a Mind thoroughly debaſed, and flowing from the moſt incurable Corruption: And tho' they have iſſued from that Source, as from an unexhauſtible Fountain, yet it can't be denied, but as the Earl's thirſt for Lucre grew ſtronger upon him, with that his Invention alſo has conſtantly improved into ſome new Device or Management for ſecuring his exorbitant Advantages, by preſerving the Secret. 'Twas a remarkable Law, in one of the wiſeſt of the Grecian Governments, ariſing from their Dread and Abhorrence of a corrupt Judge, That no Man, bred up to Merchandize, ſhould be admitted into any Office of Judicature, till he had quitted that Employment for at leaſt ten Years; and the Reaſon was, becauſe the Fingers of Merchants had been too much uſed to Traffick.

The Earl's Adminiſtration, in the higheſt Seat of Juſtice in this Kingdom, has appeared to your Lordſhips to have been one continued pyratical Trade; during the Courſe of which, from Time to Time, as Opportunities have offer'd, he has prey'd alike upon Maſters and Suitors; his craving Appetite was, in no Sort, check'd by the approach of Death it ſelf; and the Hand of a dying Chancellor, as he expreſs'd himſelf to one of the Maſters, was open'd to receive that unjuſt Gain he had ſo plentifully fed upon in full Health: To which, and his other Misbehaviours, your Lordſhips now ſee, that not only the Ruin of many even of the Maſters, but the Diſhonour, Diſtreſs and Confuſion ſtill remaining in that part of the publick Juſtice muſt be imputed; and how groundleſs and unaccountable ſoever the repeated Aſſertions in the Earl's Anſwer, that the Maſters freely and voluntarily parted with their Money to him now, appear to him to be; yet, from the Unwillingneſs and other conſcious Circumſtances, with which he has ſince, at ſeveral Times, refunded ſome parts of his extorſive Gains, tho' the Guilt is not leſſen'd, his Lordſhip is thereby Self-condemn'd.

The Fund out of which he has raiſed his unwarrantable Profits, ought to have been held by him as ſacred and inviolable, being depoſited in the Sanctuary of his own Court: His Extortions therefore muſt be judged of, not as private Violations of Property, but as Pillage taken from the Treaſure of the Publick; the Livelihood of the Widow and Fatherleſs, under the Protection of the Law, in a Court of Juſtice; great part of it, perhaps, dedicated to Charities: And how far your Lordſhips may, in this Reſpect, conſider it as a ſacrilegious Plunder, is left to your Judgment: However, the injuries done to diſtreſſed, ſhipwreck'd Sufferers, have been always eſteemed the higheſt Barbarity.

But the Methods the Earl has uſed from Time to Time to excuſe and cover his Crimes, tho' they were the natural Refuge of an obſtinate unrelenting Mind, yet are more heinous than the Crimes themſelves. Your Lordſhips can't forget the Oath of his Office, which he has ſet forth at large in his Anſwer; he was ſworn to do Right to all manner of People, poor and rich, according to the Laws and Uſages of the Realm, and not to do or ſuffer the Hurt of the King, if he could hinder it; if not, clearly and expreſſly to make it known to him, with his true Advice and Counſel. 'Tis ſurprizing to find his Lordſhip to have ſo utterly abandon'd all Regard to this ſolemn Obligation, as the whole Courſe of his Behaviour fully demonſtrates. You have alſo heard the Oath he cauſed to be adminiſter'd to the Maſters, immediately after he had ſhared with them the Eſtates of the Suitors; by which Oath they were likewiſe ſworn neither to do Hurt to the King, nor to do any Fraud to the Hurt of any of the People; and it has appear'd in what Manner they have ſince been practiſed and tamper'd with by the Earl himſelf, in order to conceal and ſuppreſs the Knowledge of the Grievances of the Subject, which he had procur'd; ſometimes they were threaten'd, at other Times cajoled and ſeduced, but always deceived; and this Artifice, deſcribed by this Article, was his laſt Shift. When he ſaw the Storm began to ariſe, he deliberately contrived to turn the fatherly Goodneſs of his bountiful Maſter to the Deſtruction of his People, and, by this moſt unparallelled Attempt, to have render'd the Throne it ſelf the Shelter of his Iniquities, and acceſſary to his Oppreſſions; but 'twill now appear, that this was conducted to another Point, to skreen himſelf from the Juſtice of Parliament.

My Lords, There have been Crimes ſo unexampled, and of ſo horrid a Nature, that the Malefactors have been try'd at Midnight, and immediately drown'd, and the Journal Books burnt, in Compaſſion to Mankind, that the Memory of the Proceeding being deſtroyed, the Crime it ſelf might not be propagated.

The Offences of the impeached Lord are ripened to a Fulneſs ſurpaſſing all Belief, too big indeed for the ordinary Hand of Juſtice; but the Commons of Great Britain, whoſe Inquiry he vainly flattered himſelf he could prevent (tho' the Terrors of it had long lain upon his Breaſt) have, by this Time, I preſume, convinced his Lordſhip; and his Example will, I hope, convince the World, that no Offender, how great or ſubtil ſoever, can eſcape their Juſtice, of which this publick Proceeding will be an eternal Monument, as well as of the Shame of the unfortunate Earl.

The Lord Bacon, one of his Predeceſſors, made a frank Submiſſion to your Lordſhips Anceſtors upon the Accuſation of the Commons, and taking Comfort to himſelf from his Afflictions, uſes theſe Words, 'That hereafter the Greatneſs of a 'Judge or Magiſtrate ſhall be no Sanctuary or 'Protection to him againſt Guilt; and that, after his Example, it was like, that Judges would 'fly from any Thing in the Likeneſs of Corruption, tho' at a great Diſtance; which tends to 'purging the Courts of Juſtice, and reducing 'them to their true Honour and Splendor.' He did, indeed, urge it as no ſmall Excuſe for himſelf, that Bribery and Corruption, the Vices of which he ſtood impeached, were the Vices of the Times; but the Commons rejoyce to find, that the Earl, now before your Lordſhips in Judgment, has no Ground to claim the ſame Excuſe.

The Admonitions left by that penitent great Man, and the juſt Puniſhment he underwent, have, I believe, conduced to prevent the like Evil for near an hundred Years, tho' they had not an immediate Effect: For an eminent Hiſtorian of thoſe Times has recorded, that ſome Time after his Sentence in Parliament, meeting the Earl of Middleſex, then Lord Treaſurer (whom he had Ground to ſuſpect to have been inſtrumental in his Diſgrace) in Diſcourſe with him he recommended it as a Rule to be obſerv'd by the Earl, and all great Officers, to Remember a Parliament will come.

And the ſame Author further obſerves, that tho' the Lord Bacon had not the Spirit of Divination, and tho' the Treaſurer deſpiſed and laughed at his Advice, yet, within two Years after, the Treaſurer alſo was condemned in Parliament for Bribery, Extortions, Oppreſſions, and other grievous Miſdemeanors.

I will conclude with one Obſervation more: It may, my Lords, be too juſtly apprehended, that the moſt dangerous Symptoms of a declining Commonwealth do then appear, when Men in the higheſt Stations in Government, eſpecially thoſe which concern the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, ſhall be ſo far loſt to all Senſe of Virtue, as to be guilty of ſuch odious Crimes as thoſe now charg'd upon the Earl; yet, we promiſe our ſelves, that your Lordſhips Juſtice, in the Puniſhment of thoſe Crimes, will afford us a hopeful Proſpect of a reviving State; and that whenever the Crimes and Miſdemeanors of this unfortunate Earl ſhall hereafter be mentioned, it will be remembred at the ſame Time, for the Honour of your Lordſhips, and the Benefit of the whole Nation, that he received a Condemnation ſuitable to his Guilt.

Mr. Snell, My Lords, I would gladly have been excuſed this Service, becauſe I have been extreamly indiſpoſed, ever ſince I receiv'd the commands of the Houſe of Commons, and becauſe I am otherwiſe truly ſenſible of my Inability to execute thoſe Commands, in the manner they ought to be executed. But theſe Reaſons, being thought inſufficient by others to prevail for my abſence, it is no longer a Matter of Choice, and I muſt comply with the duty impoſed upon me. Your Lordſhips therefore wil be pleas'd to conſider (as the Truth is) that what I have to ſay is only the Product of a few Hours, and that it is impoſſible for me, in ſo ſhort a time, to offer any Obſervations, any Arguments, but ſuch as will appear crude and indigeſted on this great and important Subject.

The Earl then at the Bar ſtands under an Impeachment of all the Commons of Great Britain, of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors in his late Office of Lord high Chancellor, and tho' the Charge againſt him in the Article now under your Lordſhips conſideration, be of a different Nature, yet in every Circumſtance it is as highly criminal, as any of thoſe that have gone before it. The Accuſation hitherto has generally run upon Corruption in the ſale of Offices, Extortion, and a Series of foul Practices to cover and conceal the deficiency in Dormer's Office, which had drawn upon him an Univerſal Cry for Redreſs. All the little Arts, that had been play'd over and over again upon the Maſters, either by applying to their Hopes, or Fears, as opportunity offer'd, had prov'd ineffectual; and ſome other expedient muſt be found out, ſome new Stratagem invented, to quiet the clamours of the injur'd Suitors. Theſe clamours had juſtly ariſen from a Suppoſition of the Maſters Inſolvency, and no Method could be ſo likely to ſerve his turn to appeaſe them, as one, that would make the Maſters ſeem to be ſolvent. He therefore ventur'd to adviſe them to aſſiſt one another, to repreſent their Circumſtances in a falſe Light, by Subſcribing their Accounts as Mr. Holford had done; and thus he propos'd to deceive the Suitors, and to make the Maſters appear to the World able to anſwer the Monies and Effects in their Hands: But this laſt Effort was as unſuccesful as his former. For if the Maſters were able and ſufficient, what reaſon could he have for his Apprehenſions of a Parliamentary Enquiry? If they were not able, he had indeed reaſon for ſuch Apprehenſions, which leaves your Lordſhips no room to doubt, but that this Advice was given with a View only to keep the Affair out of Parliament; and the conſtant Anxiety he labour'd under to ſecure that main Point, does more than decypher the Secret of the whole Tranſaction.

Now, my Lords, this extraordinary Step could not proceed from any Doubt the Earl could have, whether the Parliament was able and willing to redreſs theſe Grievances and Inconveniencies, or whether it would contribute its Aſſiſtance to the Relief of the Suitors: No, my Lords, he knew very well, that the Parliament was the proper Place for redreſſing Abuſes in the Courts of Juſtice. He was ſenſible too, that it had always interpos'd with Accuſations and Impeachments, and that ill Actions had, in no Age, met with Favour there. He could have no Hopes that his Ambiguity of Expreſſion, his Dexterity in playing upon Words, in wreſting their proper Senſe and Meaning, could ſtand him in any Stead; or that all his Subtilty could be a Match for the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature: But, perhaps, he might imagine, that a Committee of Council might be wrought upon, and miſled by Appearances, at leaſt ſo far, as to protract the evil Day; and who could tell what Time or Accident might bring about? Another Act of Grace might come, and expunge the whole Score.

I ſhould have congratulated your Lordſhips and the Houſe of Commons, and even the accuſed Earl himſelf, if the juſt Apprehenſions he conceiv'd of a Parliamentary Inquiry had raiſed in him a compaſſion equal to the Sufferings of the Suitors: If it had begot a Repentance of his former Miſdeeds and Crimes, and a reſolution of future Innocence and Uprightneſs: But your Lordſhips find, it had a very different Effect; it only produced a vile Contrivance to guard himſelf againſt Puniſhment for what was paſt, and to make it more difficult hereafter, to detect him in the ſame Practices. This is a behaviour my Lords, which is ſo far from deſerving your Mercy, that it calls aloud for your Indignation, as well as Juſtice. This is a Circumſtance, which is not only a high aggravation of his Guilt, but a great Indignity to the Authority and Honour of Parliament; which I hope will never be eluded by the Artifice of the moſt cunning and ſkilful, nor controul'd by the influence of the moſt powerful and favour'd Miniſter of State.

But, if the impeach'd Earl's Actions may be allow'd to be any Proof of his Intentions, the Fact ſtated in this Article goes further, and implies a bold and deſperate Attempt to miſlead his Majeſty, and to Obſtruct his gracious Endeavours to find out proper Methods for ſecuring the Money and Effects of the Suitors, which is an Inſtance on one Hand of his baſeneſs and ingratitude to his Sovereign, to whom he ow'd every thing; on the other of his injuſtice and barbarity to thoſe of his fellow Subjects, whom he had injur'd, whom he had oppreſs'd, during the whole courſe of his Tyrannick Adminiſtration.

What, my Lords, muſt have been the Conſequence, if this Contrivance had paſs'd? And it would have paſs'd upon a Prince of leſs Diſcernment than his Majeſty. Whenever it had been diſcovered, all the Obloquy would have been thrown upon his Sacred Perſon, as if he had been engaged in a Confederacy to ſkreen that guilt which he was labouring to detect. But the Earls avaricious Temper had ſet ſo wrong a Biaſs upon his Actions, that the Means by which he propoſed to ſhelter himſelf, and to conceal his Depredations, have brought upon him (what he ſo long dreaded) this juſt and neceſſary Proſecution.

As to the Earl's Anſwer to this Article, I hope I may be excuſed the Liberty of ſaying, that it is either vain, evaſive, or falſe.

He begins with enumerating the many Inconveniencies and Abuſes, which he thought neceſſary to be reformed in the Court of Chancery, and with aſſuring your Lordſhips of his good Intentions to contribute to the Reformation of them; but your Lordſhips will beſt judge of this pretended Zeal, and of the Sincerity and Candour, with which it is urged, by conſidering the conſtant Tenor of his Actions, by examining whether he can produce any Inſtance of his having endeavoured to correct theſe Abuſes, or to remove theſe Inconveniencies. Now I don't find thro' his whole Anſwer, nor have I heard it aſſerted, that he ever attempted any Thing of that Kind. On the Contrary, it is too apparent, that many of them took their Riſe while he preſided in Chancery.

In

In the next place, my Lords, he arrogates to himself the Merit of that Enquiry, which his Majesty had directed to be made by a Committee of his Privy Council; and insists, that it was the Effect of his Application.

How true this Assertion is, some of your Lordships may know. But the Part he acted in that Enquiry, might have oblig'd him to Silence, or at least have restrained him from boasting of his Conduct. The Commons charge him directly with obstructing the Methods then proposed for securing the Property of the Suitors; and it is not a sufficient Answer, to say, that this Enquiry was begun at his Instance, and that he press'd the Masters to bring in their Accompts: For all this may be true, and yet he might give them the Advice I have already mention'd, and complain'd of to your Lordships. Surely, my Lords, it is a Justice due to his Majesty, to observe upon this vain-glorious Part of the Earl's Answer, that, whatever Share He had in setting this Enquiry on foot, all the good Fruits, to be hop'd for from it, are the Result only of his Majesty's Paternal Care of his People.

He further says, That he never thought of preventing a Parliamentary Enquiry, any other ways, than by making it unnecessary, and by procuring the Suitors a full Redress of all their Grievances, &c.

This is another Instance of his Disingenuity: For the Grievances complain'd of, could no where be redress'd but in Parliament; and therefore nothing more can be understood by the Words [Any other ways, than by making it unnecessary] than by making it SEEM unnecessary; which is a poor and mean Prevarication.

Nor is there any Credit to be given to what he urges in Excuse for his Fraudulent Proposal to the Masters, viz. That while the Accompts were taking, all the Masters, at least all that he saw, except Mr. Kinaston, had declared that they had Effects sufficient to answer their whole Accompts, &c.

For we shall prove to your Lordships by Mr. Thomas Bennet, and Mr. Kinaston, that it is false, unless you'll suppose them perjur'd: For they are very positive, That the Earl never ask'd them whether they had Effects to answer, or not, or were able to pay in their Cash-Ballance: Nay, they are sure they did not tell him so, because in Fact it would have been false, if they had.

Besides, Your Lordships will have the concurrent Testimony of almost all the Masters to prove, that (while they were making up their Accompts to lay before the Committee of Council) they were directed by Cottingham and Dixon to assist one another in making a Shew of their Abilities; and that some of them, viz. Mr. John Bennet, Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Conway, complied with this Direction, which we must ascribe to the Earl himself, as being given by his Two Chief Agents and Ministers.

Who is it, my Lords, that has been guilty of the Crimes laid in this Impeachment? It is a Peer of Parliament! A Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain! And how precarious must be the Property, how deplorable the Condition of the Subjects of this Kingdom, if such Crimes should not be punish'd in so exemplary a manner, as to carry down Terror to all succeeding Chancellors?

My Lords, If I have express'd my self with too much Acrimony on this occasion; if what I have said, has any way offended the Impeached Earl, I hope he will do me the Justice to believe, that I meant it only in Detestation of his Crimes, and not in Disrespect to his Person. For I assure him, I should have been heartily sorry for the Misfortune he has brought upon himself, if it had proceeded from Ignorance or Neglect, and not from an insatiable Appetite after illegal Gains, which he is pleased to mis-call Voluntary Presents, and for which I must ever entertain the Utmost Abhorrence. I will therefore conclude with a Word of Advice out of the Scriptures for his future Conduct, That he shall receive no Gift; for a Gift blindeth the Wise, and perverteth the Words of the Righteous.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg leave that Mr. Thomas Bennet may be examin'd, and that he may give your Lordships an Account of what pass'd after this Inquiry directed by his Majesty, begun; what Order and Direction the Masters receiv'd from his Lordship in the Execution of that Inquiry?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. My Lords, I think, on the 3*d* of November last we receiv'd an Order from my Lord Chancellor, to make up our Accompts. It was a very particular Order, express'd abundance of Items, and Columns, in what manner those Accompts were to be made up. The Masters had a Meeting on this occasion; and a great many, if not all of them, agreed, that the making up of the Accompts in that manner as my Lord Chancellor had directed, was impracticable in so short a time; for we were directed to do it forthwith. It was represented by some of the Masters to Mr. Cottingham, and I believe, by him to my Lord Chancellor, that it was impossible to do it in so short a time, and it would take up a Month or two, or more. I did not know what other People could do: Ih ad begun to make up my Accompts; I could have done it in a short time, having been in but a little while: Others, indeed, that had been in twelve Years, and must have given an Accompt of the whole Proceedings of that time, could not do it. I was inform'd by my Brother, that he could not have done it in a Year: But soon afterwards I was told, that the Order was dispens'd with by my Lord Chancellor; and all we were to do, was to make up an Accompt of the Ballance of the Money and Securities that were in our respective Offices distinctly, the Money and Securities in Two Distinct Columns, only the Sum total at the Bottom. This Order the Masters all comply'd with, as appears by their Accompts: And between that and the 9*th* Day of November following, we had several Messages from my Lord Chancellor by Mr. Cottingham to dispatch these Accompts; for they were much wanted, being to be laid before the Committee of Council. On the 10*th* of November we had express Orders to appear at my Lord Chancellor's House with our Accompts ready. All the Masters, except Mr. Conway, were there.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I desire he may be ask'd, if there was any other Meeting before that of the 10*th* of November?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I think there were some Meetings at Mr. Edwards's House by Mr. Cottingham's Direction, before, and after That at my Lord's House. At those Meetings, at one of them, I particularly remember (which was the most material of all) Mr. Cottingham brought Mr. Dixon with him, and introduc'd him, saying, we need not be afraid of Mr. Dixon; for he brought him there by my Lord's Direction, because he himself was deaf, and could not well hear what was ſaid. Upon that he began his Meſſage, and ſaid, Our Accompts were then laid before the Council juſt at that time: But, ſaid he, ſuppoſe my Lord Chancellor or the Council ſhould expect, that the Bonds and Securities ſhould be inſpected, would you be willing, that any Officer from him ſhould inſpect your Books and Securities? The Maſters anſwer'd, They were ready and willing to do it; I don't remember any body that oppos'd it. The next Queſtion Mr. Cottingham ask'd, was, Whether we could produce the Ballance of our Caſh, and ſhew that we had the Money? To that all the Maſters ſpoke in general, that they were under a great Concern and Surprize, and deſir'd to know what Mr. Cottingham meant by that: Whether it was only to produce the Money, or the Money to be taken from us? and whether there was any Danger of that? Says Mr. Cottingham, You are only to produce the Ballance of Caſh, and ſhew it. We ask'd, whether we ſhould produce it in Goldſmiths Notes, or Bank-Notes? Says he, I believe Goldſmiths Notes will ſerve: You are to ſhew the Ballance of your Caſh; but I think, Bank-Notes will do better. Upon that, Mr. Lightboun ſaid, I don't know what the Conſequence of this may be. Suppoſe, when we have produc'd theſe Notes, they ſhould be detain'd from us, I am afraid moſt of the Goldſmiths Shops about Temple-Bar would be ſhut up the next Day, and Inquiry would be made what Holiday it was, and Thouſands of Families might be ruin'd by this Tranſaction. Mr. Cottingham propos'd, You may ſtand by, and aſſiſt one another. Mr. Kinaſton ſaid, I find, we are like to be ſacrific'd, and given up; for my part, I will neither borrow, nor lend: Any one that borrows is a Knave, and he that lends is a Fool. Upon this, the Maſters were in great concern. Mr. Cottingham and Mr. Dixon went back to my Lord Chancellor, and ſtaid about an Hour and half, and then return'd to us, and ſaid, my Lord was very buſie, and diſmiſs'd us, and ſo we went home.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When was the next Meeting?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I don't remember; we had ſeveral Meetings. I don't remember when the next was.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. What paſs'd on the 10*th* of November in the Preſence of my Lord Macclesfield, at his Houſe?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. When we came to my Lord Chancellor's Houſe, upon the 10*th* of November, all the Maſters then preſent carry'd up their Accompts: Two or three had not their Accompts ready; my Brother and Mr. Conway had not theirs; but all that were ready, carry'd them up to my Lord, and, according to Seniority, deliver'd them to his Lordſhip. The firſt was Mr. Holford: He had added to his Accompt, a Letter, I don't remember the Words, or that it was read; but I remember a Subſcription, which my Lord Chancellor read, and that he ſaid it was very good, and he lik'd it very well, and, I think, he laid it down upon the Table. The next Maſter gave his Accompt, and ſo all the reſt. My Lord look'd them all over; ſome of the Maſters he objected to. I remember, I had written at the Bottom of my Accompt, as near as I can remember, I am ready and willing that the Bonds and other Securities in my Hands, may be inſpected by ſuch Perſon as your Lordſhip ſhall appoint. My Lord, after looking them all over, ſaid, he lik'd Mr. Holford's Subſcription, and, ſays he, I wiſh you would all make uſe of that; For it would be for your Honour and Service, to make your ſelves appear able and ſufficient to anſwer the Effects in your Hands. Somebody ask'd my Lord, what might be the meaning of this Commiſſion being appointed by his Majeſty? This, ſays he, I apprehend, will prevent a Parliamentary Inquiry.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We deſire that Mr. Bennet may repeat the Expreſſion my Lord made uſe of to perſuade them to ſubſcribe, as Mr. Holford had done.

Mr. Tho. Bennet. That they might appear able and ſufficient. I think, thoſe were the Words.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be ask'd, whether my Lord had at that time made an Inquiry of the Maſters, whether they were able and ſufficient?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I can only anſwer for my ſelf. My Lord did not ask me, whether I was able and ſufficient; but only directed me to write that Subſcription that Mr. Holford had done; and I did go down, and write, in effect, that Subſcription. I did ſubſcribe thus: 'My Lord, I have 'all the Securities ſtanding in my Name, as in 'the within mention'd Accompt are ſpecified; 'as alſo the Tallies, Orders, and Bonds in my 'cuſtody; and as to the Money, I am ready to 'give your Lordſhip ſatisfaction, that I am able 'to anſwer it to every Perſon that is entitled 'thereto. The Words, to a Demonſtration, which are in Mr. Holford's Subſcription, I omitted, becauſe I could not make it out to the Lords of the Council.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, We beg leave to produce theſe Acompts, and ſhew to your Lordſhips that Subſcription of Mr Holford, that was to be followed by the other Maſters, and the firſt Subſcription of Mr Bennet.

Mr. Onſlow. Pray, tell my Lords, if you can remember, was there any other Expreſſion made uſe of at that time?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. The Expreſſion was, It would be for our Honour and Service, to appear able and ſufficient.

Mr. Onſlow. No other Words?

Mr. Tho Bennet. And it would be a means to prevent a parliamentary Enquiry.

Mr. Onſlow. Was there nothing mentioned relating to a Stand?

Mr. Tho. Bennet. I don't remember that then; Mr Cottingham ſaid ſomething of that at a Meeting at Mr. Edwards's.

(The Subſcription ſhew'd to Mr Bennet. And proved by him to be Mr. Holford's Hand.)

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg leave, that this Subſcription may be read, which was to be follow'd by all the Maſters.

Clerk reads.

'I have all theſe Securities ſtanding in my 'Name, as in this Accompt is ſpecified, and will 'procure Certificates from the proper Offices, that 'I have, and had them before the Account, if 'your Lordſhip requires it. And as to the Money, I am ready to give your Lordſhip ſatisfaction, to a Demonſtration, that I have it in my 'power to anſwer it to every Perſon, that ſhall 'appear to be entitled to it, and who can give me 'a Legal Diſcharge.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. We beg leave to read Mr. Tho. Bennet's Firſt Subſcription, that my Lord was not ſatisfy'd with.

Clerk

Clerk reads.

'My Lord, I am ready and willing the Securi-
'ties in the foregoing Account mention'd, ſhall be
'inſpected by ſuch Perſon or Perſons as your
'Lordſhip ſhall be pleas'd to appoint.

Tho. Bennet, 10*th Novemb.* 1724.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Your Lordſhips obſerve, there is nothing in this Subſcription, as to the Caſh, and the producing it. Now we beg leave to ſee the ſubſequent Subſcription.

Clerk reads.

'10 Nov. 1724. My Lord, I have all the Secu'rities ſtanding in my Name, as in the within
'mention'd Accompt are ſpecify'd; as alſo the 'Tallies, Orders and Bonds in my cuſtody. And
'as to the Money, I am ready to give your Lord-
'ſhip ſatisfaction, that I am able to anſwer it to
'every Perſon that is entitled thereto.

Tho. Bennet.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Your Lordſhips obſerve, he hath left out the Words To a Demonſtration, becauſe he thought that he could not ſo clearly make it out. I beg leave to mention, that theſe Accompts and Subſcriptions thus alter'd, were actually deliver'd in, and laid before the Council, and are the Original Accompts.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I would ask Mr. Bennet, when this Propoſal was offer'd to him, that he ſhould ſubſcribe as Mr. Holford had done, whether he made any Excuſe, or pretended he was not able to do it?

Mr. Thomas Bennet. No, I did not; I did as the reſt of the Maſters did.

Mr. Common Serjeant. I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips when this was?

Mr. Thomas Bennet. I think, it was the 11*th* or 12*th* of November; I can't be poſitive as to the Day.

Mr. Kinaſton called.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. Kinaſton may give your Lordſhips an account, whether he was preſent at this Meeting on the 10*th* of November, and what paſſed there relating to their Accompts?

Mr Kinaſton. Yes, my Lord, I was there the 10*th* of November.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. What paſſed at that time at the Earl of Macclesfield's?

Mr Kinaſton. I think I came there before the reſt of the Maſters, or only two or three were there before me. We gave my Lord an account, that we had drawn out our Accompts of the Securities and Caſh, and the Ballance in each Maſter's Hands. Soon after the reſt came. My Lord firſt receiv'd Mr Holford's Accompt, being the Elder Maſter. A Letter at the End of his Accompt was read: My Lord ſeem'd to be affected with, and to approve very well of it. There was ſome Writing at the End of it relating to the Ability. My Lord ſaid, it would do very well to have ſomething to the ſame purpoſe at the End of the other Maſters Accompts, and mention'd to us to go down and write it; accordingly we did go down, and moſt of us, if not all, did write to that purpoſe.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Can you recollect what Expreſſions the Earl of Macclesfield uſed, to recommend it to the Maſters?

Mr Kinaſton. My Lords, I can't juſtly recollect; I think it was, It would look well before the Council, and prevent a further Enquiry, or a Parliamentary Enquiry, I am not poſitive which: But that I underſtood to be the meaning of it.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. What was it that would look well to the Council?

Mr Kinaſton. What Mr Holford had writ at the Bottom of his Accompt, That they were ready, &c.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether there was an Enquiry made by the Earl of Macclesfield, as to his Ability or Sufficiency?

Mr Kinaſton. No, I am ſure as to my ſelf; and I don't know as to any body elſe.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he would inform your Lordſhips, what Subſcription he had firſt made, and what was added, or what Advice was given?

Mr Kinaſton. I had writ before: 'My Lord,
'the Perſon I employ'd to write out this Ac-
'compt, has only gone thus far as to the Num'ber of the Bonds. I have brought the Bonds with 'me, and deſire you'll appoint any Perſon to in-
'ſpect them, and the other Securities I have here
'given an account of.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. What was writ afterwards? This is wrote with a different Ink than that before: And as to the Money, I am ready to pay it to the Perſons entitled thereto. That is with a different Ink.

Mr Kinaſton. I believe, upon looking upon it, I went down with the reſt, and writ that in the Parlour at my Lord's Houſe.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he may be aſked, whether he, or any other of the Maſters then receiv'd any Explanation how this Sufficiency or Ability was to appear?

Mr Kinaſton. Not then, I don't remember any thing of it.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. Or at any other time?

Mr Kinaſton. Some time after this, this was the 10*th* of November, and I believe, between that and the 16*th*, when we were to attend the Judges, the Maſters were ſummon'd to meet at Mr Edwards's Houſe: I underſtood, it was a Summons from my Lord Macclesfield; and when we were here, there came Mr Cottingham and Mr Dixon. I don't remember all the Diſcourſe; but they were telling us what was to be done: Firſt, we were to produce our Securities, and there would be no great Nicety in producing them: And then, next, we were to produce the Ballance of Caſh: And I remember, on that, Mr Cottingham ſaid, You muſt ſtand by one another, and aſſiſt one another. Bank-Notes, ſaid he, will be beſt; but if you can't get them, then Goldſmiths Notes. You muſt get one ur other to produce and ſhew.

Mr Lutwyche. I deſire he may be ask'd, what hhe thought he meant by the Propoſal of getting Goldſmiths Notes, or Bank-Notes?

Mr Kinaſton. I did take the meaning in the worſt ſenſe, to be, for the Maſters barely to make a Shew of them; and that made me complain; and I ſpoke warmly, and ſaid, I ſaw what the Deſign was; and whoever borrow'd any Money on that Occaſion, was a Knave, and he that lent it was a Fool.

Mr Lutwyche. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether there was any Recommendation by Mr Cottingham or Mr Dixon, and in what particular Expreſſions thoſe Recommendations were made?

Mr Kinaſton. I believe, Mr Lightboun expreſs'd himſelf, That if they borrow'd Goldſmiths Notes, and they were detained, the Goldſmiths Shops would would be ſhut, and People would be enquiring what Holiday it was.

Mr Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, what was ſaid about making a Shew? if Mr Cottingham own'd what was the meaning of thoſe Words?

Mr Kinaſton. I don't remember: They were pretty warm, and ſaid they would go to my Lord Macclesfield, which they did, and return'd again.

Mr. Plummer. My Lords, I deſire he may be ask'd, whether it was generally underſtood among the Maſters, that giving of Bank-Notes and Goldſmiths Notes was to be underſtood Borrowing?

Mr Kinaſton. I underſtood it ſo my ſelf, and I believe ſeveral others did; Mr Lightboun, and Mr Holford, and ſome of the others did ſo, by what they ſaid.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, we have done with this Witneſs.

Mr Serjeant Probyn. My Lords, I deſire to ask this Witneſs the ſame Queſtion that I asked the other; and that is, whether at the time when this Propoſal was made to him, that he ſhould ſubſcribe as Mr Holford had done, he made any Objection to it?

Mr Kinaſton. No, I did not make any Objection to it. I had been there firſt, and with my Lord, and at the farther end of the Room, that I remember leſs what happened at that time, than other People did.

Mr Lightboun called.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. My Lord, we deſire that Mr Lightboun may give an account of what paſſed at this Meeting, relating to the bringing in of the Accompts?

Mr Lightboun. What Meeting? that at Mr Edwards's, or that at the Earl of Macclesfield's?

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. That at Mr Edwards's.

Mr Lightboun. I was at Mr Edwards's about that time, at ſome Meeting when our Accompts were talked of, but whether it was before they were delivered in, or afterwards, I cannot tell. We had ſo many Meetings about that time at Mr Edwards's, that I don't remember exactly, which was before, and which was after. I remember, at the Meeting when Mr Cottingham and Mr Dixon both were there, there was ſome Diſcourſe relating to the Producing of the Securities, and of the Ballance of the Caſh. I then asked, whether we ſhould produce it in Bank-Notes, or Goldſmiths Notes, and I underſtood, it was hinted that the Goldſmiths that we had dealt with, would aſſiſt any Maſter that wanted Money, but by whom it was ſaid, I can't recollect. The Anſwer I made to that, was, that I ſhould be ſorry that any Maſter ſhould borrow Notes of a Goldſmith, and that they ſhould be ſtay'd or ſecur'd when produc'd, which I apprehended would be done; and next morning ſeveral Goldſmiths would be forc'd to ſhut up their Shops, and it would look like a Holiday in Fleetſtreet.

Mr Lutwyche. Do you remember any thing concerning a Net?

Mr Lightboun. I don't remember the Expreſſion of a Net.

Mr Lutwyche. What application was made to any of the Maſters to carry in their Accompts, and to whom?

Mr Lightboun. My Lord Macclesfield one morning ſent for me, and deſired me, that when the Accompts were brought into the Council, I would be thereabouts, that if there was any occaſion to clear up or explain any thing, or give farther ſatisfaction to the Council, I might be ready. I told his Lordſhip, I would give no ſatisfaction about any one's Accompts but my own. But if his Lordſhip pleaſed that I ſhould attend, I would be thereabouts; and if his Lordſhip pleaſed, I would have another Maſter with me: I nam'd Mr Holford, and my Lord deſir'd me to acquaint Mr Holford with it, which I did; who ſaid, he was ready to go with me to anſwer any Queſtions that ſhould be ask'd, ariſing on the Peruſal of his Accompts.

Mr Lutwyche. What did he deſire you to attend for?

Mr Lightboun. To reſolve any Queſtion or Difficulty that ſhould ariſe before the Council. After this, Mr Cottingham told Mr Holford at Mr Edwards's, that my Lord deſir'd that Two of the Maſters ſhould attend the Council with the Accompts of the whole, and that Mr Holford being the ſenior Maſter, ſhould be one, and he was to chooſe whom he would have go along with him; and I having given Mr Holford intimation before of my Lord's Inclination, Mr Holford deſir'd me to go with him. I told him, I did not care to carry in any other Accompts than my own; as I had not concern'd my ſelf in other Maſters Accompts, I would not then begin; I would not carry any but my own, and no body elſe ſhould carry mine; I would not be a Repreſentative of the Body. Upon that, Mr Holford recollected himſelf, and ſaid, nor he neither; he would carry no Accompts but his own. I ſaid, the Accompts were call'd for by my Lord Chancellor, and not by the Privy Council, and thereupon I thought it proper to wait upon my Lord Chancellor, and deliver them to him.

Mr Lutwyche. Your Lordſhips will obſerve, the Perſons thought moſt proper to appear for the reſt of the Maſters, Mr Holford and Mr Lightboun, were ſo apprehenſive of the Maſters being deficient, that they did not care to appear for them. I deſire Mr Lightboun may be ask'd, what paſs'd on the 10*th* of November, when the Accompts were deliver'd to the Earl of Macclesfield?

Mr Lightboun. My Lords, upon the 10*th* of November my Accompt was not ready at the time I was to deliver it. I rather choſe it ſhould not be ready; becauſe I did not care that it ſhould be carry'd in by any body but my ſelf. However, I waited at the proper time; and when we came there, Mr Holford deliver'd in his Accompt, and a Letter he had writ to his Lordſhip, and fix'd to his Accompt, which was there read. My Lord ſeem'd to like the Letter, and took notice of it; and I think, another or two, who were my Seniors, deliver'd in their Accompts. When it came to my turn, I acquainted my Lord, that mine was not ready; but I would go home and finiſh them, and attend his Lordſhip with them at the Cock-pit by Eight of the Clock. Accordingly I did, and ſent it in to his Lordſhip.

Mr Lutwyche. What paſs'd farther relating to their ſigning of the Accompts?

Mr Lightboun. I know nothing of it; for I went away to finiſh my own.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, we deſire that Mr John Bennet may be call'd.

Mr. John Bennet appear'd.

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, we deſire that Mr. John Bennet may be ask'd, whether he was at this Meeting at Mr Edwards's Houſe, and what paſs'd at that time?

Mr J. Bennet. My Lords, I was at that Meeting at that time, when Mr Cottingham and Mr Dixon came in, and told us they came from my Lord Chan-

Chancellor; and Mr Cottingham ſaid, he had brought Mr Dixon with him, becauſe he was deaf, and could not well hear. Mr Cottingham ſaid, he had Two Queſtions to propoſe; firſt, whether we were willing that all our Bonds, and other Securities in our Cuſtody, ſhonld be inſpected by him or any other? All of us were willing, and agreed to that. The ſecond was, whether we were willing, or would produce the Ballance of Caſh in our hands before the Council? To this the Maſters made a Stand, and ſaid, The Caſh was conſiderable; and it could not be preſum'd that they kept it lock'd up in Cheſts or Trunks in their own Houſes; that was the way to have our Throats cut: But we believ'd we could do it in a reaſonable time. To which Mr Cottingham ſaid, Can't you produce it in Bank-Notes or Goldſmiths Notes? Bank-Notes, ſaid he, will be beſt; but do it in Goldſmiths Notes, if you can't get Bank-Notes. To which Mr Lightboun ſaid, If we produce them in Goldſmiths Notes, and there ſhould happen to be a Net thrown over 'em, and they ſhould be ſecur'd, the Goldſmiths might be oblig'd to ſhut up their Shops, and People would be enquiring what Holiday it was; and it might be a great Damage to thoſe Goldſmiths.

Mr Lutwyche. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether any thing was ſaid of aſſiſting one another?

Mr J. Bennet. Mr Cottingham preſs'd us very much to help and aſſiſt one another, as far as we were able.

Mr Lutwyche. Whether was any other Expreſſion made uſe of by him?

Mr J. Bennet. I don't remember there was: But he repeated it ſeveral times, that we ſhould ſtand by, and aſſiſt one another with Caſh.

Mr Plummer. My Lords, I deſire to ask this Witneſs, if, in purſuance of the Advice given by Mr Cottingham, he did aſſiſt any of the Maſters, or was aſſiſted by any of them?

Mr J. Bennet. One of the Gentlemen did aſſiſt me with Caſh, which is lock'd up in the Cheſt: I gave him Security for it. And as to my aſſiſting any body, Mr Conway inform'd me, he had a Real Security for 9000 l. and begg'd, if I could, that I would aſſiſt him with 5000 l. and in two or three Days I ſhould have it again: I told him, I had in my Accompt mention'd my Caſh, and that I had offer'd to make up the Ballance by my Real Eſtate, and ſo could not aſſiſt him with any Caſh. He ask'd me, if I had any Bonds by me? I told him I had 2000 l. Bonds; and if he could engage to bring them back to me in two Days, he ſhould have them: And upon lodging a Bag of Writings with me, which he told me was a Real Security for 9000 l. I accordingly did lend him them, and he brought them back again to me in two Days time.

Mr Plummer. I deſire he may be ask'd, what his Inducement was for lending the Bonds?

Mr J. Bennet. The Real Inducement was the Real Security which was given me: But it had been recommended by Mr Cottingham too.

Mr Plummer. I deſire to know whether he open'd the Bag, to ſee what the Security was, or took it by Content?

Mr J. Bennet. No, I did not open it; Mr Conway aſſured me it was ſo.

Mr Plummer. What uſe did he make of thoſe Bonds?

Mr J. Bennet. Indeed I don't know.

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be ask'd, whether thoſe Bonds belong'd to the Suitors of the Court?

Mr J. Bennet. They were brought in by the Suitors of the Court after my Accompt was deliver'd in, and I muſt give them in my Poſt-Accompt: Therefore I ſaid, I muſt have them again in two Days time.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether this was after he had given in his own Accompt?

Mr J. Bennet. Yes, it was after I had given in my own Accompt of my Money-Securities, and the Accompt of my Eſtate.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire to know what Subſcription Mr John Bennet made to his Accompt at firſt, and what afterwards?

Mr J. Bennet. I came to my Lord Macclesfield juſt after the Gentlemen had been delivering in their Accompts; and they were below, writing their Subſcriptions to their Accompts. I had then made no Subſcription to my Accompt; they told me what my Lord had recommended to them to write; and I had one of them laid before me. I took my Pen and Ink, and varied it in ſome meaſure, and made the Subſcription in this Manner: 'I have all the Securities in my Name, as 'ſpecified on the other ſide; and all the Bonds 'and Orders are in my Cuſtody; and I am 'ready to ſatisfy your Lordſhip, that I am able 'to anſwer the Money to every Party, that is 'Entitled, or ſhall have a Right to receive it.

J. Bennet.

Mr Lovibond Called.

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, I deſire he may be asked, whether he was preſent at this Meeting (that hath been ſo often mention'd) at Mr Edwards's?

Mr Lovibond. My Lords, I was there but a very little while.

Mr Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, while he was there, whether any thing was propoſed, and by whom, for the Maſters to lend one another Money or Notes?

Mr Lovibond. There was Mr Cottingham and Mr Dixon, and one of them ſaid, that the Maſters ſhould ſtand by one another, and recommended it to them to Aſſiſt one another with Bank-Notes or Goldſmiths-Notes.

Mr Serj. Pengelly. To what purpoſe?

Mr Lovibond. Neither of them ſaid to what purpoſe.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. What was the Diſcourſe about at that time?

Mr Lovibond. The Diſcourſe was about the Accompts, and how every Man's Ballance was to be made up.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire to know, during that time, whether Mr Lovibond obſerv'd that Mr Cottingham or Mr Dixon went to my Lord Chancellor?

Mr Lovibond. Yes, my Lords, they both went, and I came away, and did not ſtay till they return'd.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire to ask, Whether Mr Lovibond did not lend ſome of the Maſters ſome Money?

Mr Lovibond. I lent ſome Money to Mr Bennet.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. How much was it?

Mr Lovibond. It was 10,200 and odd Pounds.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. I desire to know, whether Mr Lovibond was present upon the Delivering in of the Accompts on the 10th of November last?

Mr Lovibond. Yes, my Lords, I was.

Mr. Serjeant Pengelly. I desire he would look upon that Subscription he at first made upon the Accompt, when he deliver'd it in.

Mr Lovibond. It is here.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly Read it.

Mr Lovibond reads 'All which before-'mention'd Particulars I am ready to answer on 'Demand, or to give Security so to do, whenever 'requir'd. H. Lovibond.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I desire he may be asked, whether my Lord Macclesfield made any Objection to any part of that Subscription, and what Part in Particular?

Mr Lovibond. He made an Objection to the latter Part of it, because that might imply that my Effects were not ready.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Whether did you alter it afterwards, or was it recommended to you to alter, and in what manner?

Mr Lovibond. My Lord Macclesfield mention'd, that Mr Holford's Conclusion of his Accompt was most proper; and I had best alter it to that, and make that the Form; accordingly I did, I went down Stairs, and alter'd it as it now stands.

Mr Lutwyche. Read this Subscription.

Clerk reads.

'All these Securities standing in my Name as 'in this Account is specified, I am ready to pro-'cure Certificates from the proper Offices, 'that I have, and had them before this Account, 'if your Lordship requires it; and as to the Mo-'neys, I am ready to answer it upon Demand to 'every Person entitled thereto, and who can give 'me a Legal Discharge.

November 10*th* 1724. H. Lovibond.

Mr Lutwyche. My Lords, I beg leave to make one Observation upon this: I would not trouble your Lordships with observing upon every one of them; but there is something very particular and remarkable in this Case of Mr Lovibond's. Mr Lovibond had said, as the Truth of the Case was, when he deliver'd in his Accompt, and this Subscription, that he was able to produce or give Security, &c. That would have look't before the Council as if the Money was not ready to be produc'd, it was only giving Security; and for that Reason this Alteration is to be made, to make it look as if he had the actual Ballance in his hands.

Mr Serjeant Probyn. My Lords, we desire he may be asked, whether at the time that he wrote this Subscription, he was not able to produce the Ballance?

Mr Lovibond. My Lords, I did in my Conclusion offer it; and I could have done it the next Day.

Mr Strange. I desire he may be asked, whether he could have done it out of his own Estate, or Effects?

Mr Lovibond. I could have done it out of my own Estate.

Mr Strange. Did not you mention the Sum of [illegible] and odd Pounds lent? I desire to know, whether you took Real Security for it?

Mr Lovibond. Yes, I have a Real Security.

Mr Strange. In Land?

Mr Lovibond. Yes, in Land.

Mr Plummer. I desire he may be asked, if my Lord Macclesfield asked him any Questions about his Ability?

Mr Lovibond. No, my Lord did not ask me any Questions about my Ability.

Dr Sayer. I desire he may be asked, whether at that time he did not believe, that all the Masters were sufficient and able to make good their Accompts?

Mr Lovibond. I did believe so, from what Discourse I heard pass among themselves. I had no Knowledge of their Affairs, or of their Estates.

Mr Edwards called.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. My Lords, I desire Mr Edwards may give your Lordships an account of what passed at this Meeting at his House?

Mr Edwards. My Lords, I received a Message from Mr Cottingham, to know if I would give Leave for the Masters to meet at my House? to which I consented. Some came before Mr Cottingham, and asked me if I knew what this Meeting was about; I could give them no Account of it. Mr Cottingham soon after came, and the rest of the Masters. Mr Cottingham said, he had two or three Matters to lay before them; One was, whether we were willing that our Bonds and Securities should be inspected, by my Lord Chancellor, or by any Person he should Appoint? Every body consented hereto. I think, another thing was, my Lord Chancellor thought it proper, we should carry our Accompts to the Council: There were some objected to that, and we thought it not proper; and the Conclusion of that was, we were to deliver them to him, as being most proper for my Lord Chancellor to carry them to the Council.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Was that all that was offer'd at that Meeting?

Mr Edwards. Really I don't know but that there was a third thing mention'd. I can give you but a very imperfect Account of this Meeting; and that for this reason, it was not thought proper that my Servants should come in, and they oblig'd me to go often out, which I did; and afterwards I heard the chief Substance of this Meeting. And I remember, that after I had heard the main Matter, I said, Gentlemen, the chief Consideration is to get your Money ready as soon as you can; I think the intent is plain to get the Money away from you.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Whether do you remember any Advice that was then given, relating to the making up of the Ballance?

Mr Edwards. No, my Lords, I do not remember: I heard something afterwards by the Masters, about producing Notes; but if any thing was mention'd about it, it was when I was out of the Room.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Whether on the 10*th* of November you was present at the Earl of Macclesfield's?

Mr Edwards. Yes, my Lords, I was.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Look upon that Accompt and Subscription.

Mr Edwards looks upon it.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I desire he may be asked, what Subscription he first made, when he gave it in, and whether any Alteration or Addition was made by him afterwards?

Mr Edwards. Some of the Masters were at my Lord Chancellor's before me: I did not think it necessary, nor had written any thing to my Accompt before I came there: So I went into a Room,

Room, and writ this that was firſt writ: 'My 'Lord, I am ready and willing, the Securities in 'the foregoing Accompt mention'd, ſhall be in-'ſpected by ſuch Perſon or Perſons as your Lord-'ſhip ſhall be pleaſed to appoint.

H. Edwards.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. What other Subſcription was made after that?

Mr Edwards. After I had made this Subſcription, I carried my Accompt, and deliver'd it to my Lord Chancellor; who looking upon this Subſcription, did not ſeem to approve of it: But he thought Mr Holford's more proper, and deſir'd me to alter it, that all might be as Mr Holford's was: I then went out of the Room, and tranſcribed the Subſtance, if not the Words, of Mr Holford's upon my Accompt, and then I delivered it to my Lord again.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Read that Subſcription.

Mr Edwards reads.] The ſeveral Sums of Mo-'ney and Securities mention'd in this Accompt 'are what have come to my hands ſince I was ad-'mitted a Maſter, ſeparate from what were in the 'hands of Mr Dormer during the time he was a 'Maſter (the Account whereof, by reaſon of the 'Shortneſs of time, I have not been able to ſet-'tle; but will as ſoon as poſſible) and for which 'I am ready to procure Certificates from the 'ſeveral Companies and Offices, if your Lord-'ſhip requires it. And as to the Moneys, I am 'ready to pay it to every Perſon lawfully 'intitled thereto, having a proper Diſcharge for 'the ſame.

Nov. 10. 1724. H. Edwards.

Mr Serjeant Probyn. My Lords, if they have done with this Witneſs, I deſire he may be asked, if he was not ready to pay his Ballance according to his Subſcription?

Mr Edwards. Yes, I was; I could have paid it in a Week ſooner than the time requir'd.

Mr Conway called.

Mr Soll. Gen. My Lords, I deſire that Mr Conway may give your Lordſhips an account whether he was at this Meeting?

Mr Conway. My Lords, I was preſent at the firſt Meeting at Mr Edwards's Houſe, when Mr Cottingham deliver'd my Lord Chancellor's Command, that we ſhould provide and prepare our Accompts: But nothing more happen'd during the time of my ſtay at that Meeting: I went away immediately. At the ſecond Meeting Mr Cottingham and Mr Dixon were there: Mr Cottingham had a great Cold; and, as I remember, there were two Propoſals made: The firſt was, in relation to our Bonds and Securities; and the 2*d.* was in relation to the Mony and Caſh. After every Maſter had deliver'd his Opinion to theſe Points, Mr Cottingham and Mr Dixon went to wait upon my Lord Chancellor with an account of what the Maſters had ſaid; and before they came back, I was gone.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he may be ask'd, whether at that time, when it was propos'd to the Maſters to produce their Caſh, whether they ſaid they were able to do it?

Mr Conway. Every Maſter deliver'd his Opinion as he thought fit. Mr Lightboun merrily ſaid, If we produced Goldſmiths Notes, and they ſhould be ſecured, the Goldſmiths Shops would be ſhut up, and People would be enquiring what Holiday it was. Mr Kinaſton made ſome Obſervations; every one ſpoke as they thought fit.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether they all declared, they were able and ready to make good their Accompts?

Mr Conway. I think they all did.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Whether to produce their Effects or their Caſh?

Mr Conway. I am not ſure, whether it was mentioned Caſh or Effects; we made no diſtinction at that time between Caſh and Effects.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether he himſelf declared, that he was able and ready to produce his Effects?

Mr Conway. I did declare it at that time, as I afterwards writ, that I would endeavour to produce my Effects.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. Whether there was any, and what Advice or Inſtruction given, relating to their aſſiſting of one another?

Mr Conway. No ſuch thing happened while I ſtaid there.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire it may be asked, whether Mr Conway at any time afterwards borrowed any Money of any of the Maſters, and of whom?

Mr Conway. The firſt time I attended the Judges and the Directors of the Bank, I did bring my Securities, and an Account of my Effects at the ſame time, without borrowing a Farthing from any Perſon: Before the Securities were gone through, and the Account of my Effects taken, it was obſerved, that the ſame was liable to Objection, as conſiſting of Land, Morrgages, Bonds and Notes, and things of that kind. And before I went, I was told, that ſome of the Maſters had taken an Oath; I deſired to know what that Oath was: It was anſwered, that it was a voluntary Oath; and I ſaid, I could only ſwear, that I had Effects to anſwer; and that I would endeavour to turn thoſe Effects into Caſh, and ſo withdrew.

Mr Serjeant Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether he borrowed any Money?

Mr Conway. Some time after this I waited upon Mr Godfrey; and before I came away, he asked me if I had any Bonds? I told him I had; then pray, ſays he, let me have what you can ſpare, and ſend them immediately: Whereupon I went home, and ſent him 5000 l. India-Bonds. Some Days after that I expected Mr Godfrey to return me the Favour; and I carried to him Effects to (as I apprehended) the Value of 6 or 7000 l. or more; and I deſired him to lend me Bonds, and he ſeemed unwilling without the Security, and he kept the Security.

Mr Lutwyche. He hath not anſwered to thoſe Queſtions, whether he borrowed Money, and what Sums.

Mr Conway. Mr Godfrey lent me upon the Bonds, 9000 l. and Mr Bennet, 2000 l.

Mr Lutwyche. Only to purſue this Queſtion; I deſire to know, whether the Securities were turned into Money, or into Notes?

Mr Conway. Yes, my Lords, they were turn'd into Notes.

Mr Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether they were lock'd up, or he did take them back again?

Mr Conway. I took them back again.

Mr Lutwyche. What became of them afterwards?

Mr Conway. Some of them I paid off, others I returned to the Perſon that had advanced me Money on thoſe Bonds.

Mr

Mr. Lutwyche. I take it, he ſays, he had the Effects that produced thoſe Notes from Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet; therefore I deſire to know, what became of thoſe Notes after he carried them back from the Judges?

Mr. Conway. I returned them to the Perſon that had advanced me the Notes on thoſe Bonds.

Mr. Lutwyche. Who was that?

Mr. Conway. The Goldſmith, Mr. Rogers, at Temple-Bar.

Mr. Plummer. I deſire to know when he returned thoſe Bonds again?

Mr. Conway. In a few Days after.

Mr. Lutwyche. My Lords, it may be Neceſſary to Examine how it was that he perſuaded the Goldſmith to let him have thoſe Notes?

Mr. Conway. I gave him Bonds for them.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether were thoſe the Bonds that you had from Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet?

Mr. Conway. They were.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether they were not Delivered to the Goldſmith in the Nature of a Pledge for thoſe Notes?

Mr. Conway. Yes, they were.

Mr. Lutwyche. What became of the Bonds?

Mr. Conway. I return'd them.

Mr. Lutwyche. To whom?

Mr. Conway. To Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. When he carried back the Notes to the Goldſmith, at that time, whether he took up the Bonds?

Mr. Conway. I did.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. As I apprehend, he ſays, he had lent Mr. Godfrey 5000*l.* India Bonds, and in return he expected that Mr. Godfrey ſhould Aſſiſt him; I deſire he may be asked this Queſtion, Whether the 5000*l.* in India Bonds he ſupplied Mr. Godfrey with, was after or before he produced his Caſh to the Committee?

Mr. Conway. After.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was it before Godfrey had done it?

Mr. Conway. After he had produced his Securities.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Was it before or after he had produced his Caſh?

Mr. Conway. It was after he had produced his Securities, and before he had produced his Caſh.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we think it will be very neceſſary to lay before your Lordſhips a General State or Account of the total Deficiency; to ſhew how much, upon the Examination and Enquiry that hath been made, the total of the Deficiencies in the ſeveral Offices amount to; and we apprehend, that we are able likewiſe to give an Account of ſome Additional Deficiencies that have been diſcovered ſince. I apprehend, there was at that time near 100,000*l.* Deficiencies.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether at that time when he wrote the Subſcription, he was able to pay the Ballance of his Accompt?

Mr. Conway. I was, in Effects I had, and I ſaid no otherwiſe.

Mr. Sandys. I deſire he may be asked, if my Lord Macclesfield asked him as to his Ability?

Mr. Conway. No, my Lords, he did not; to my remembrance he did not. I deliver'd my Accompt to Mr. Cottingham.

Mr. Serj Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, what Deficiency there remains upon his Office; whether he can recollect how much it is?

Mr. Conway. My Lords, I believe it is 13,000*l.* my Charge, of which I can take off ſomething in my Poſt-Accompt.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. I deſire he may be asked, whether he is now able to make good the Deficiency in his Office?

Mr. Conway. Yes, my Lords, I am.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Whether he hath made any Conveyance of any Eſtate as a Security for it?

Mr. Conway. I have.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I deſire he may be asked, whether any thing, or how much hath been rais'd out of that Eſtate?

Mr. Conway. It is made ſo very lately, that I don't know that any thing hath been raiſed ſince; it is but a few Days ago that it hath been made.

Lord Lechmere. My Lords, I would be glad to know, as there is a Ballance of 13,000*l.* whether he ſtands indebted to any other Perſons, but to the Suitors of the Court, and to whom?

Mr. Conway. No, my Lords, I don't owe any thing to any body, to my Knowledge.

Mr. Lutwyche. I ſhould be very glad if Mr. Conway could extricate himſelf out of the Difficulties on Account of the Deficiency in his Office. It is very proper to inquire how, and by what Eſtate, that is to be made good.

Mr. Conway. It is to be made good by an Eſtate in Land.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire to know whether that Eſtate is ſettled, whether it was not ſettled upon his Marriage?

Mr. Conway. It was never ſettled on my Marriage. I was Tenant in Tail, and Wife and Son joined with me in levying a Fine.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether it is not ſettled by Will?

Mr. Conway. I was Tenant in Tail by the Will of my Father; I have levied a Fine, and my Wife and Son have joyned with me.

Mr. Onſlow. What Intereſt had your Son in it?

Mr. Conway. No Intereſt, as I apprehend; but I thought it was Neceſſary he ſhould joyn to take off all Difficulties and Objections to the Title.

Mr. Onſlow. Whether there are no Annuities charged upon that Eſtate, and what they are?

Mr. Conway. There are no Annuities charged on that Eſtate.

Mr. Onſlow. No Payment to the Mother?

Mr. Conway. There is out of another Eſtate.

Mr. Onſlow. What are the Rents of the Eſtate you have ſecured for the Payment of this Money?

Mr. Conway. Between 5 and 600*l.* a Year.

Mr. Onſlow. Is that your Computation, or is it let at ſo much now?

Mr. Conway. I can't ſay it is all let ſo; there are ſome Demeſns.

Mr. Onſlow. What are the Rents of that Part of the Eſtate that is let?

Mr. Conway. I take it to be 500*l.* a Year.

Mr. Onſlow. What, let at 500*l.* a Year!

Mr. Conway. Yes, or thereabouts.

Mr. Onſlow. Do you Reckon the whole Eſtate to be worth 500*l.* a Year?

Mr. Conway. No, I don't reckon in the whole Eſtate, but only that which is Conveyed for the Securing of this Money.

Mr. Onſlow. Then I deſire to know, what are the Rents of this Eſtate as it is let?

Mr. Conway. I take it to be 500*l.* a Year, or thereabouts, that is applied for, and as a Security to Anſwer my Deficiency.

Lord Lechmere. This 13,000*l.* Ballance due to the Suitors, which he ſays are ſecured by this Eſtate, I would be glad to know how the Deficiency came, and what is become of this 13,000*l.* that is due to the Suitors?

Mr. Conway. The Occaſion of it was, my coming into the Office coſt me to my Predeceſſor 6000*l.* I paid beſides 1500*l.* upon my Admiſſion, and 500*l.* Contribution towards making good Mr. Dormer's Deficiency.

Mr. Onſlow. How was the reſt of the Debt Contracted? You have mention'd but about 8000 Pounds.

Mr. Conway. I believe I might, upon Account of my Brother, borrow 1500 or 2000*l.* to ſatisfie his Account to the Crown.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Out of what Caſh did you repay it?

Mr. Conway. I believe it might be out of the Office.

Mr. Onſlow. What is become of the reſt; how did you Apply the Remainder?

Mr Conway. The Remainder, I can't tell but I may have ſo much due among my Acquaintance; I believe I may.

Mr. Onſlow. Did you then lend your Acquaintance out of the Suitors Money?

Mr Conway. I believe I might at times lend Friends out of the Caſh that remained dead and uſeleſs, and becauſe I apprehended it was Secure.

Mr. Onſlow. You ſay, you have lent to ſeveral of your Acquaintance out of the Suitors Caſh; I would have you name any one Perſon to whom you have lent any of the Money of the Office?

Mr Conway. I remember a noble Perſon, if it is proper to mention his Name, to whom I lent 2600*l.* he is now dead.

Mr Serj. Probyn. I don't know whether your Lordſhips will not be pleaſed to confine the Managers to examine only to the particular Article they are now on.

Mr.

Mr. Onſlow. We are now upon the Article of the Deficiencies, and the Queſtion hath been asked by the Council for the Noble Lord, whether this Deficiency can be made up by Mr. Conway? therefore it is proper to know, whether this Deficiency is likely to be made up, and to know where the Money is, and therefore I would ask who this ſix and twenty hundred Pounds was lent to?

Mr. Serj. Probyn. My Lords, I ſubmit it, whether that Queſtion be proper, becauſe Mr. Conway hath given Land Security to make good this Deficiency; and therefore it is not material for your Lordſhip's Judgment to enquire how this Deficiency happened.

Mr. Lutwyche. I am very ſorry to lay before your Lordſhips the Reaſons and the Order upon which he was committed. I apprehend it extremely material upon this Point, and ariſeth from what the Councel for the Noble Lord have entred into themſelves; for they have asked, whether he was able to make good his Deficiency: Now is it not proper for us to ask the particular Circumſtances, to find out the Truth, whether he is ſo or not. Therefore I beg leave to ask one Queſtion, not waving the other, Whether he hath aſſigned over all his Debts that he could, to make good his Deficiency?

Mr. Conway. I have aſſigned over all my real Eſtate.

Mr. Lutwyche. Whether he hath aſſigned over this 2600 l. due to him?

Mr. Conway. That is applied.

Mr. Lutwyche. Applied, How?

Mr. Conway. Applied amongſt my Cauſes.

Mr. Lutwyche. Did he lend a Nobleman a Sum of Money, and apply it to a Cauſe?

Mr. Conway. That Sum of Money you are pleaſed to enquire after, I applied to a Cauſe.

Mr. Onſlow. He ſaid he lent a Sum of Money, &c. I deſire he may be asked, who this 2600 l. was lent to?

Mr. Conway. I was applied to by a Nobleman to lend him the Sum of 2600 l.

Mr. Onſlow. By whom was you applied to?

Mr. Conway. By my Lord Bulkeley, and accordingly it was advanced to him, and it is ſince applied in a Cauſe.

Mr. Onſlow. Applied, How?

Mr. Conway. Applied in a Cauſe, with the Approbation of the Parties.

Mr. Onſlow. Hath it been repaid?

Mr. Conway. No, It is applied in a Cauſe of a Suitor, and now it remains as Security.

Earl of Abingdon. I am ſo nearly related to that Noble Lord that is mentioned, that I muſt do that Juſtice, as to put Mr. Conway in mind, as I did Mr. Hiccocks before, That if any Queſtion is ask'd him, which may perſonally ſubject him to any Penalty, or as he hath the Bar Gown may concern his Client, he ought to be left to his Diſcretion, whether he will or will not anſwer.

Lord Lechmere. A Perſon is not obliged to anſwer any thing that may criminally affect him; but where the Enquiry is after a Debt, in Order to explain his Oath as to his Sufficiency, which is the Matter of Debate, ſurely that is material, and ought to be anſwered to; and I deſire to be informed, whether this 2600 l. which he ſaid was lent this Noble Lord out of the Suitors Money, was repaid to him by my Lord Bulkeley, and when?

Mr. Conway. It is not repaid. It is applied in a Cauſe, the Parties have approved of it as a Security.

Lord Lechmere. When was this Money in the Hands of my Lord Bulkeley applied to the Benefit of any Suitor, and by what Order or Authority?

Mr. Conway. It is ſome Time ſince, ſome Months ago, five or ſix Months ago.

Lord Lechmere. Was this by any Order of the Court of Chancery?

Mr. Conway. No, my Lords, by the Approbation of the Parties.

E. of Macclesfield. My Lords, if you pleaſe to give me Leave, I would ſuggeſt ſomething, that poſſibly may help towards the better underſtanding him. If my Gueſs be right, this relates to his Poſt-Accompt. He hath ſaid his Charge is 13,000 l. And he hath ſaid, he could diſcharge 2000 l. or more, of that Ballance by a Poſt-Accompt; Now I apprehend this he is ſpeaking of now, is that Article of the Poſt-Accompt. I don't know, if I gueſs his Meaning right, but I deſire he may inform your Lordſhips, in caſe it be otherwiſe.

Lord Lechmere. It may be for your Information to know who are the Perſons to whom this is applied; that it may be known whether it is in the Poſt Accompt or not?

Mr. Onſlow. My Lords, We deſire firſt to know, what Security my Lord Bulkeley gave?

Mr. Conway. He gave a Bond and Judgment.

Mr. Onſlow. Who is it you have applied the Security to?

Mr. Conway. It is in the Cauſe of Faulconberg contra Faulconberg.

Mr. Onſlow. Do you reckon this Part of the 13,000 l. now deficient?

Mr. Conway. No, I do not reckon it in that Sum.

Mr. Onſlow. Your Lordſhips will pleaſe to recollect, that his Deficiency is 13,000 l. We ask him how that Deficiency came; he hath given Your Lordſhips an Account of 10,000 odd hundred Pounds; and firſt ſaid the Reſidue was in the Hands of his Acquaintance, and named 2600 l. Money of the Suitors to be in the Hands of my Lord Bulkeley; now he ſaith this laſt Sum is not Part of the 13,000 l. Therefore now I would ask, how the Remainder of his Deficient Money was applied, or how the Debt happened?

Mr. Conway. If my Lords will pleaſe to give me Leave to explain it; As to the Remainder of the 13,000 l. you have been pleaſed to reckon 10,000 odd hundred Pounds to be made out; then there is 2100 l. odd Money I have laid out in Land, which I have ſince conveyed, which makes 12,000 odd hundred Pounds; and the reſt I have in Bonds and Notes, which I have to make up the Reſidue.

Mr. Lutwyche. I deſire he may be asked, whether he hath thoſe Notes, and they are ready? I deſire to know, whether they have not been paid into Court to make up his Deficiency?

Mr. Conway. No, I humbly hope to have it allowed me on my Poſt-Accompt, being applied in the foreſaid Cauſe with Approbation of the Parties.

Mr. Onſlow. We have done with him; and leave him to Your Lordſhips Obſervation.

Mr. Thompſon called.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we beg Leave that Mr. Thompſon may give Your Lordſhips an Account, upon the Inſpection and Examination of thoſe Accompts, how much the Deficiency of the ſeveral Maſters amounted to?

Mr. Thompſon. So much as the ſeveral Maſters ſtood charged with by their own Accompts, and did not lock up or produce proper Securities for, I account a Deficiency; and by this Rule, I have collected the Deficiencies of the ſeveral Maſters, from the Reports made to the Committee of Council.

Mr. John Bennet's Deficiency amounts to L. 17,541: 15: 10.

Mr. Conway's Deficiency in his Cash only amounts to L. 10,039: 4: 4 ½, but Mr. Conway, while his Accompts were under Examination, sold 2000 l. South Sea Annuity, and 3500 l. South Sea Stock; and of the Money arising thereby, he paid to the Suitors, to whom such Annuity and Stock did belong, no more than L. 2593: 9: 3. so that his Deficiency is increased by the Sum of L. 3550. somewhat more or less, according to the Price he sold at.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. Was what he sold, part of the Suitors Security?

Mr. Thompson. Yes. — Mr. Kynaston's Deficiency amounts to L. 26908: 11: 3 ¼.

Mr. Thomas Bennett's Deficiency amounts to 9075 l.

The Total of the Deficiency of the present Masters is L. 67,114: 11: 5 ¼.

The Charge that remained upon Mr. Borret's Office, amounted to L. 56,050: 10: 1½. But Mr. Bennet and Mr. Godfrey, the Masters, who had the Care of his Effects, gave it as their Opinion before the Judges and Directors, that the Effects he left, would produce 44,000 l. and upwards; so that I compute the Deficiency of Mr. Borret's Office at L. 12,050: 10: 1 ½.

The Total Charge upon Mr. Dormer's Office, when he resigned to Mr. Edwards, amounted to L. 49,604: 11: 11; but Mr. Edwards has paid in Discharge of that Sum, the Sum of L. 23,725: 15: 9½. so that the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer's Office amounts to L. 25,878: 16: 1½.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. Whether in that is Mr. Wilson's and Mr. Poulter's Security included in Dormer's Accompt?

Mr. Thompson. Mr. Dormer's Deficiency I take to be L. 25,878: 16: 5 ½; and the whole Deficiency I take to be L. 105,043: 17: 8 ¼. And if any Securities or Sums of Money belonging to the Suitors are omitted in the Masters Accompts, such Securities and Sums are not included in this Estimate.

E. of Macclesfield. Have you had before you the Administrator, either of Mr. Borret or Mr. Dormer?

Mr. Thompson. No, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. My Lords, we shall beg Leave to call one Witness to give Your Lordships an Accompt of another Deficiency of 2000 l. upon Mr. Conway, which is not charged in his Accompt. We desire that Mr. Sanderson may be called.

Mr. Sanderson sworn.

Mr. Lutwyche. We desire, that Mr. Sanderson may give Your Lordships an Accompt of any Money in Mr. Conway's Hands, and how much it is, that is not brought to Accompt?

Mr. Sanderson. My Lords, I was concerned as a Solicitor in a Cause in Chancery, between Sir Erasmus Norris and Alexander Norris; soon after the Accompts were brought into the Registers Office, I went to look and see if Mr. Conway had charged himself with a Sum of Money paid in, in that Cause. I found by his Accompt, that it was not charged. I had drawn up the Accompt, and given a Copy of it to Mr. Conway, which he did not deny, but he said, there was not so much by 1 or 200 l. Said I, there is no Entry at all of the Cause, and no mention of any Sum. I told him, it was an Omission not to mention the Cause or Sum. He said, that he believed it was not so much, he did therefore not mention it. I asked him, why he did not insert, how much it was as he thought it? He said, because he would pay in all.

Mr. Serj. Probyn. We desire he may be asked, how much the whole Money in that Cause was?

Mr. Sanderson. L. 2274: 8: 11. besides Interest from Lady Day last was Twelve-month.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, this is the Sum of the Account we had to lay before Your Lordships of the Deficiencies, notwithstanding the Masters represented themselves as able to pay the whole. We would not represent it to Your Lordships, that this will certainly be the Loss, because some of the Masters have given Security for some Part; tho' we apprehend the Security given will not be sufficient for half.

E. of Macclesfield. I desire to ask Mr. Thompson, whether this Charge he makes upon Mr. Borret's Office be a Charge taken from the Office, or only an Account taken from Mr. Meller?

Mr. Thompson. This Charge was taken from the Vouchers, which Mr. Meller produced.

E. of Macclesfield. Are there any Payments allowed, made by Mr. Borret in his Life time?

Mr. Thompson. A great many.

E. of Macclesfield. Who gave You an Account of that?

Mr. Thompson. Mr. Meller, my Lord.

E. of Macclesfield. But I speak of the Money paid by Mr. Borret himself, not what Mr. Meller paid. Have You any Account what Mr. Borret paid out himself?

Mr. Thompson. The Account we had of this, was from one Mr. Parker, as I think his Name was, who was Clerk to Mr. Borret. He produced several Receipts for Sums paid: And the Masters in Chancery, who had the Care of Mr. Borret's Effects, allowed the Books and Papers produced by Mr. Parker, to be the Books and Papers belonging to Mr. Borret's Office.

E. of Macclesfield. As to the Effects belonging to Mr. Borret, who gave you the Account of them?

Mr. Thompson. Mr. Bennett and Mr. Godfrey.

E. of Macclesfield. Do you know who is Administrator to Mr. Borret?

Mr. Thompson. I have heard that Mr. Paxton is.

Mr. Nicholas Paxton. Yes, my Lords, I took out Administration to Mr. Borret, about the middle of April last.

Lord Lechmere. I desire to ask Mr. Thompson, whether the Computation he hath made of the several Deficiencies, amounting to an hundred and five thousand Pounds, whether they are taken from the Voluntary Accompts of the Masters delivered in, or whether any of the Suitors were concerned in those Accompts, or have been Parties to such Computations?

Mr. Thompson. From the Masters Voluntary Accompts only.

Mr. Serj. Pengelly. I beg Leave to ask one Question, which arises from the Question, which the Lord within the Bar hath been pleased to ask, whether Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Bennet were not the Masters that appeared, and were employed under the Earl of Macclesfield at that Time, and had the Custody of the Effects of Mr. Borret?

Mr. Thompson. Mr. Bennet and Mr. Godfrey were the Persons that appeared to us to have the Care and Custody of Mr. Borret's Effects.

Lord Lechmere. As to the Nature of these Deficiencies, I think he says, these Deficiencies arise upon the Cash Ballance. Then I would be glad to know, whether in the Accompts that he hath perused, and in the Computation of those Deficiencies, the several Deficiencies of the Cash Ballance arise upon the whole Ballance, or is appropriated to any particular Suitors concerned in those Ballances?

Mr. Thompson. No Part of the Cash Ballance is appropriated to any particular Suitor.

Mr.

Mr. West. My Lords, the Commons have now produc'd a very long, and as they apprehend, a very full and convincing Evidence, in Maintenance of the Impeachment by them Exhibited againſt Thomas Earl of Macclesfield, for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and I am commanded to acquaint Your Lordſhips, That they do not intend to trouble this Houſe with any further Examination. But, my Lords, the Commons conſidering the Length and Variety of the ſeveral Facts and Circumſtances, that have been offer'd, are of Opi ion, It may be of Service to that Cauſe, in which their Zeal for publick Juſtice has made them to engage, that the whole of what they have inſiſted upon or produc'd, ſhou'd in ſuch Manner, as I am able to obey their Commands, be ſhortly recapitulated and preſented in one View to Your Lordſhips Conſideration.

The Charge in general, and the ſeveral Articles of it, have been fully open'd by thoſe Gentlemen, who preceded me upon this Occaſion. The Witneſſes who have been examined, and the other Evidence that has been read, have been fully conſidered, ſo far as they relate to thoſe Particulars, that were the immediate Occaſion of their being produc'd; I ſhall not therefore waſte Time, by enumerating once more the Articles of the Charge, nor by too minutely repeating the whole Evidence that has been given: But ſhall endeavour to reduce this long and various Examination to ſome general Heads, that may expreſs the Subſtance of the general Articles, and then remind Your Lordſhips of what I can recollect to have been moſt materially offer'd in Support of them. To this End, my Lords, I beg Leave in the firſt Place, to obſerve that ſtrict Union and Connection there is between the Crimes of which this Earl ſtands charged. Your Lordſhips cannot but remark, that the Articles mutually ſupport, and almoſt prove each other; ſo that if any one be admitted to be proved, it is difficult, if at all poſſible, to doubt the Truth of the reſt.

A wicked and corrupt Deſign and View to raiſe and procure to Himſelf exceſſive and exorbitant Gain and Profit, was the fatal Principle, from which all this Miſchief ſprung. It was this that prompted the Earl of Macclesfield to extort thoſe large Sums of Money, which he received from the ſeveral Perſons, whom he admitted to the Office of Maſters of the Court of Chancery. The gratifying this Avarice engaged his Lordſhip to neglect every other Conſideration, to overlook that Care he ow'd to the Suitors of the Court, and to admit Perſons of ſmall Abilities, and every way unqualifyed for the Diſcharge of ſo great a Truſt. —— This, obliged him to connive at, and permit the fraudulent Practice of paying the Exceſſive Price of their Places, out of the Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court. —— That again, forc'd him to ſuffer, or rather to encourage the purchaſing Maſters, to Traffick and Game with the Eſtates of the Suitors. —— There was no other way, by which theſe liberal Purchaſers, cou'd Reimburſe themſelves.— And this Circumſtance, even after it was apparent the Suitors were likely to looſe a great Part of their Effects, reduc'd him to the unhappy Neceſſity of refuſing to take thoſe Meaſures, that were neceſſary to prevent that Practice for the Future. And when the fatal Effects of this unbounded Liberty, which he permitted the Maſters to enjoy, began to appear, then was He compell'd to become a Confederate with the deficient Maſters, to prevent its being known to the World. —— From hence ſprung the unequal Compoſition with Wilſon: The partial Orders for the Payment of Money: The private Contribution, to anſwer the moſt preſſing Demands: And from hence his own Liberality to Lockman. But when all theſe Methods prov'd ineffectual, and he found the Cries of the Widows and Orphans had reach'd His Majeſty, then, my Lords, did the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain combine with theſe Maſters, adviſe and perſuade them to make falſe Repreſentations of their Circumſtances and Accounts, in Order to deceive His Majeſty, to fruſtrate His moſt Gracious Intentions for the Good of His Subjects, and to prevent (what He moſt fear'd) a Parliamentary Inquiry.

Theſe, my Lords, are the malignant Conſequences of that Corruption of which the Earl of Macclesfield is accus'd; and which the Commons apprehend to be perfectly conſiſtent with the whole Tenor of his Actions, during the Time of his being Chancellor.

The Commons began their Evidence with that Oath, which it was prov'd the Earl had taken, in Conſequence of the Statute of the 12 Ric. 2. and which was adminiſtred in the uſual and accuſtomed manner. I ſhould not have reminded Your Lordſhips of this Circumſtance, if it was not for that unaccountable Attempt, to quibble away the Sanctity of an Oath, and to repreſent it as a meer Ceremony and Form, for no other Reaſon, but becauſe it was read to him in French, and when he kiſs'd the Bible, His Lordſhip and the Clerk ſaid nothing to each other. They afterwards gave other Evidence, relating to ſuch Profits as he had made of the Office of Chancellor, which he did not admit in his Anſwer. But I do not apprehend it neceſſary to mention them particularly to Your Lordſhips.

The firſt general Head of Accuſation againſt the Earl, is, That he Corruptly, Illegally, and Extorſively inſiſted upon, and received great Sums of Money, for the Admiſſion of ſeveral Perſons into Offices relating to the Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice.

To lead the Way to this Charge, the Commons began their Evidence with the 9th Article, which relates to his taking 100 Guineas from T. Bennet, for permitting him to reſign his Office of Clerk of the Cuſtodies, and for procuring a new Grant of that Office to Hugh Hamerſly.

The Commons choſe to begin with this Article, not becauſe they thought the Sum taken ſo conſiderable, as to have any great Influence upon the Judgment Your Lordſhips may give upon this Occaſion; but becauſe the Fact diſcovers the Man, and fully explains, what manner of Mind he muſt be endow'd with, who could ſtoop to an Action ſo low and ſordid. This Article does of it ſelf lay a Foundation of Probability for the others, in which he is charg'd with the extorting of much larger Sums. It is true, His Lordſhip in his Anſwer gives himſelf a very different Character, and offers to produce a Catalogue of his own Generoſities. What Argument there would be in this when produc'd, I cannot comprehend. I will therefore endeavour to ſave Your Lordſhips that Trouble. I can admit even more than is deſired. Inſtead of being Generous I will ſuppoſe his Lordſhip (far from the Truth) to have been profuſe. Yet ſtill would it prove nothing. For ſurely, it is not a new Character in Hiſtory, that even Squanderers ſhould be Rapacious.

To prove the Particulars of this Article, the Reſignation of Bennett and the new Grant to Hamerſly, were both prov'd. And as to the Payment of the Money, Mr. Cottingham, who was Secretary to my Lord Macclesfield, and who, thro' the whole Courſe of the Evidence, appears to have been his great Agent and Confident: He owns the Receipt of the hundred Guineas, and ſwears he paid 'em to the Earl, within a Day or two after he received them. He alſo owns the Conſideration, for which this Money was paid, That it was for

for permitting Bennet to surrender his Place. —— Were there no Evidence but Cottingham alone, the Commons think they have sufficiently prov'd this Fact. But the Evidence of T. Bennet puts it beyond Contradiction, and makes it manifest, that the hundred Guineas were in a manner extorted. —— He swears soon after he was admitted a Master, he was desirous to part with his Place of Clerk of the Custodies; and to that End apply'd to Cottingham for my Lord Macclesfield's Favour, and acquaints him with the Person, to whom he desired the new Grant should be made: Cottingham upon this speaks to my Lord, and some short time after tells Mr. Bennet, that neither my Lord nor himself knew Hamersly. Your Lordships may remember that the Earl by his cross Examination, seem'd to endeavour at some small Triumph upon this Circumstance. My Lords, it is not so wonderful, that Cottingham should not speak Truth, there is no giving Evidence to the Tone of the Voice, nor the Air and Manner, in which a Conversation is carry'd on; more especially, if it be considered, that Cottingham was a Man who doubtless upon these Occasions would not have known his Father without the mediation of Gold. Bennet was surpriz'd at this Speech, as well he might, when Hamersly lived next Door to Cottingham. However, Cottingham at last explain'd the Mystery, by letting him know, a Present was expected by the Earl, and Cottingham himself own'd, he did say the Earl insisted upon a Present.

Mr. West was here interrupted by the Earl of Macclesfield, who said that Cottingham's Words were not, That he insisted upon, but that he expected a Present. Upon which Occasion Mr. Onslow represented warmly to the Lords, that the Behaviour of the Earl was Irregular, and that the Managers ought not to be broken in upon while they were speaking. And then Mr. West went on,

My Lords, It is my Duty to represent the Actions of this Earl in the strongest Light; and the strongest Light is the justest Light. Upon Recollection I do not think the Word I us'd to be of Force equal to the Fact. My Lords, The Expectations of a Chancellor, communicated by a Secretary to a new made Master, is more than to insist. But be that as it will; Bennet in Answer to these Expectations, represented the Hardship of being oblig'd to pay Money upon this Occasion, when he had so lately paid a very large Sum to the Chancellor; and by Way of Argument told him, that when he came into the Place himself, he paid nothing; and his Brother told him, that Lord Cowper upon the like Occasion had taken nothing, because as that Noble Earl said, Nothing was due. At last, my Lord Macclesfield and his Secretary, being both inexorable, Bennet agreed to pay the One hundred and five Pounds. After this Agreement was made, Cottingham acquainted his Lord with the Bargain, and then told Bennet, that the Earl agreed to it: But withal, that it was a great Favour he would take so small a Sum; and Cottingham at the same Time made this very remarkable Declaration, That if Mr. Bennet would bring the hundred Guineas, he need take no farther Trouble, for the Chancellor would apply to the King for Leave for him to resign, and would take Care of the other necessary Steps. And accordingly the Bargain was executed in that manner. For Mr. Bennet knew so little of the intermediate Proceedings, that he has told Your Lordships he knows not how, or by whom the Warrant came into the Hands of the Clerk of the Patents.

It is difficult not to feel some Indignation rise at the bare relating this Meanness! mean it would have been in any Man: But for a Peer of Great Britain, an Earl, Lord Chancellor of the Kingdom, and a Chancellor so oblig'd and so dearly bought, to prostitute so many illustrious Characters, in so low a manner as to become a Broker for the Hire of 100 Guineas, is astonishing! But, my Lords, when I consider that this Earl was at the same Time one of the Lords Justices of the Kingdom, in a Commission to execute some of the Functions of Majesty itself, I want Words to express such a Transaction in its proper Colours.

My Lords, I have mentioned the Evidence relating to this Point something the more particularly, because the Proof comes up to the express Words of the Statute of the 12 of Ric. 2. and proves, as I apprehend, beyond Contradiction, that the Earl of Macclesfield dispos'd of this Place for Gift and Brokage.

Before I quit this Article, I beg Leave to observe to Your Lordships, that my Lord Macclesfield in his Answer insists upon it to be the Right of the Chancellors to accept Presents; and therefore owns he did in this Case accept a Present. But then he avoids, as he every where else does, the naming any particular Sum that he accepted. I wou'd willingly ask, why this Precaution, if what he did was lawful and right? I would also observe, that there is something strangely equivocal in that Part of his Answer, where he denies he insisted on 100 Guineas, or any other Sum. This Answer, both explains his extorsive Method of proceeding, and almost demonstrates the Practice of it. For it is very remarkable His Lordship does not deny he insisted upon a Present in General, but only that he did not insist upon any particular Sum.

My Lords, Your Lordships will find by the Course of the Evidence, that this Artifice of not naming a particular Sum was not peculiar to this Instance; but my Lord Macclesfield, whenever a Master's Place, or any other Place was to be sold, carefully avoided fixing the Price by demanding a certain Sum. No. —— It was more gainful to set every Thing up to the best Bidder, and resolve never to dispose of any Office, till the Sanguine Purchasers, by bidding on each other, were artfully screw'd up (voluntarily to offer a Present, as his Lordship gently phrases it, but as the Commons think, they have prov'd the Fact to be) a Corrupt and Exorbitant Price, equal to the avaricious Wishes of the Seller.

The next Instance to which the Commons call'd Evidence, was the illegal Sale of several of the Offices of Masters in Chancery. Now, my Lords (not to be too minute in mentioning the Evidence) it is manifest from the Oath of Office, which they take, from the Commission granted to the Masters in Conjunction with the Judges, and from the Evidence given by Mr. Meller, relating to that subordinate Jurisdiction, which they exercise, That these Offices do relate to the Administration and Execution of Justice.

My Lord Macclesfield, in his Answer to this Part of the Charge, industriously is silent as to the particular Sums which he received, altho' Your Lordships will observe, that Payment of the individual Sums charged in the Articles has been prov'd by the Persons themselves, who paid the Money. Kinaston and Bennet are express as to the Payment of 1500 Guineas each; Mr. Elde is positive as to his carrying to the Earl 5000 Guineas in a Dutch Basket; and Mr. Thurston swears, he left 5000 Guineas with Lady Macclesfield. Now my Lords, as the Earl insists that it was a known Perquisite of the Great Seal to accept of Presents upon the admitting new Masters; why does he not own the Receipt of the several Sums, with which he is charg'd? If it was a known and establish'd Perquisite, doubtless the Sum payable would have been as known and estab-

bliſh'd. And this Conſideration I apprehend to be the Reaſon of his Lordſhip's Caution. He cou'd not but feel the Abſurdity of his own Argument, and yet I will admit as much as his Lordſhip or his Councel can deſire upon this Occaſion. His Predeceſſors poſſibly may have accepted ſmall Gratuities from new Maſters, after their Admiſſion. Therefore He may publickly, and without any other Conſideration, ſell them to the beſt Bidder for the moſt he cou'd get. My Lords, the Argument wou'd have been juſt as good, during the Time that it was uſual for the Gentlemen at the Bar, to give New Years Gifts to the Chancellor, to prove he might have ſold his Favours, and boldly ſuffer'd no one to plead before him, who wou'd not farm his Practice, and pay the full Price of what it might be worth.

To ſupport this Imagination of its being a common Perquiſite of the Great Seal, my Lord Macclesfield does in his Anſwer aver, that every one of the Maſters I have named, did voluntarily and of their own Accord ſend a Preſent to his Lordſhip on Occaſion of their reſpective Admittances. How far it was a Preſent the Evidence I ſhall mention to Your Lordſhips will fully explain. At preſent, I beg Leave to obſerve the Equivocalneſs of theſe laſt Words, On Occaſion of their ſeveral Admittances. This was not accidental, but calculated on Purpoſe to make the whole appear like a common and uſual Perquiſite. As the Words ſtand in the Anſwer, the natural Conſtruction is, that theſe Maſters voluntarily made the uſual Preſent to his Lordſhip, after they were admitted to their Offices: And yet the critical Senſe of the Expreſſion does not exclude the Payment of the Money, even by way of Bargain, before their Admiſſion. For even in that Caſe, the Money may as truly be ſaid to have been paid on Occaſion of their Admittance. I ſhould not have mentioned this Part of the Anſwer, if it was the only Inſtance of his Lordſhips deviating from Truth. I ſhould have imagin'd it to be an Overſight, of either his Lordſhip or his Councel. But by the Obſervations, that have been made by the Gentlemen who opened the ſeveral Articles Contradiction, Equivocation, and (I wiſh I cou'd not ſay) Untruth ſhine in every Part, and appear to be the predominant Qualities of the whole. My Lords, I mention this, not only as an Aggravation, but even as a Proof. For what Cauſe muſt it be that reduces a Man of the Abilities this Earl is known to poſſeſs, and of the Character He did once enjoy, to make uſe of ſuch mean, ſuch contemptible Arts? Arts! Unworthy a great Man; unpractic'd by an innocent Man, and I doubt not, will prove uſeleſs to the Guilty.

The Fact upon the Evidence appears to be thus, Kinaſton, Bennet, Elde and Thurſton, all concur in this Circumſtance, That they paid their Money before they were admitted into their Offices. Mr. Cottingham alſo owns that he received the Money of Mr. Kinaſton and Mr. Bennet, and carry'd up the Basket of Mr. Elde before any of them were ſworn. All theſe Perſons likewiſe agree, and Cottingham confirms their Teſtimony, that they apply'd to him as the proper Perſon to recommend them to my Lord Macclesfield, and to be inform'd of what Sum they muſt offer, in order to render themſelves acceptable to his Lordſhip. The Evidence of Kinaſton proves it to be a direct Bargain, for he ſwears, when he acquainted Cottingham of his having agreed with Rogers for the Purchaſe of his Place, that he offer'd but 1000 l. as a Preſent to the Chancellor: Upon which Cottingham ſaid, he wou'd not mention to my Lord any Sum under 1500 l. and when Kinaſton agreed to give that Sum, Cottingham again repreſented that it muſt be Guineas, upon which the 1500 Guineas were paid.

Mr. Bennet, he ſays, that when he had agreed with Mr. Hiccocks; he alſo applied to Cottingham to know what Sum was neceſſary to be paid the Earl. Cottingham agreed that a Preſent was neceſſary, but he wou'd not name the Sum. Upon this, after Bennet had conſulted with his Brother and Mr. Godfrey, he again went to Cottingham, and offered 1000 Guineas; but Cottingham diſſatisfy'd with this, ſhook his Head, and ſaid, He would not go to the Chancellor with that Sum, a great deal more had been given, and he hoped he would not lower the Price. Bennet however ſtill preſs'd Cottingham to offer the 1000 Guineas, to which Cottingham replied, there was no bagling with the Chancellor; and that if he would not give more, he might be abſolutely refuſed, and loſe the Place. Bennet ſtruck with this Reply, agreed to give the 1500 Guineas, tho' Cottingham graciouſly told him, he need not bring it in Money, for Bank Bills would do as well. I cannot help obſerving, that there was a ſtrange Caution uſed as to the Payment of this Money, altogether inconſiſtent with the Nature of an eſtabliſhed Fee, or regular Perquiſite. Mr. Bennet ſent his Clerk to take out the Bills in a feign'd Name, and for this Reaſon, becauſe otherwiſe they could not ſo eaſily be parted with. Cottingham it ſeems, was ſomething jealous of a Man, who had the Confidence to perſiſt ſo long in offering but 1000 Guineas, and therefore the firſt Word he ſaid to him, when he repair'd to the Chancellor to be ſworn in, Have you brought the Money? Bennet anſwered like a Man, who perfectly well knew the Family, He ſhould not have ventur'd to have come without it. Upon this the Money was paid, the Maſter was ſworn, and the whole Bargain fully executed.

Theſe kind of Bargains were now become ſo much the Subject of common Diſcourſe, that the Earl thought it neceſſary to be ſomething more Cautious, and even Cottingham was not now to be ſo much in the Secret as formerly. Mr. Elde applied to the Chancellor himſelf, and without any Ceremony offers his Lordſhip 5000 Guineas for this judicial Office. The Earl it ſeems, was not at all offended with this Liberty, but anſwered with the engaging Familiarity of a great Man; Theſe and I muſt not make Bargains. I will treat thee in a different Manner from others. My Lord Macclesfield was as good as his Word, for upon this Elde went to the Secretary, and offer'd him 5000 Guineas, and he reported to his Lord what paſſed: ſo that Cottingham was not diſmiſſed this Service at once and the matter was ſo far agreed, that Mr. Elde went in a Chair to the Earl's Houſe, with his Basket, in which he ſwears, he put 5000 Guineas, and delivered it to Cottingham, who carried it up to his Lord. But at the ſame Time he ſwears, he did not know what was in it. Upon this Elde was introduc'd, and ſworn into his Office. Your Lordſhips will obſerve that the BASKET was no Part of the Bargain, and therefore the ſcrupulous Earl return'd it back to him Empty.

The laſt Perſon examined as to this Point, was Mr. Thurſton, and He alſo was treated in a Manner different from all others. He was certainly better recommended than any of them, and in the Strength of that was very well received. Upon which he was Sanguine enough to expect he ſhould have the Place. But, my Lords, before he was recommended, Mr. Thurſton likewiſe apply'd to Cottingham, and offer'd 5000 Guineas. Cottingham ſaid he would report; but he was not truſted to return an Anſwer.—— In the mean Time Care was taken by the artful ſpreading of Rumors, That Mr. Thurſton ſhould hear the Chancellor intended to give the Place away to another Perſon. Alarm'd at this, and ſeeing all other Methods of Recommendation avail'd nothing, he applied to my Lady Macclesfield; and after using several Arguments to no purpose, As that his Name had been printed in the publick News to be the succeeding Master; That Persons applied to him for the Business of the Office; and That his Reputation and Character depended on his Success; He at last told her he did not expect to have the Place for nothing, and therefore he left Bills for five thousand Guineas upon the Table, and so retir'd. These he found were the best Arguments, and the best Recommendation; for within two or three Days after he was sworn into the Office. This new Way of Proceeding, deceiv'd even Cottingham himself so much, that he even scrupled to take his own Fees. I know not whether I ought to mention any other Particulars; but by the Questions put to the Witnesses, when they were cross examined, it seems as if his Lordship would persuade you, that this was entirely a Transaction between Mr. Thurston and my Lady Macclesfield, and in which he was in no wise concern'd. If your Lordships can believe that the Earl intended really to give away this Place for nothing, the Earl will be fortunate: For Mr. Thurston himself own'd, he did not think he should have had the Place, if he had not left the Money.

I have repeated this Part of the Evidence more fully to your Lordships, because, as I apprehend, it clearly explains the Earl's artful Methods of Extortion, and also proves that in this whole Proceeding, The Money, instead of being voluntarily given, was unjustly extorted, and that instead of being a Present or usual Perquisite, it was an illegal and corrupt Bargain and Sale of Offices, relating to the Administration and Execution of Justice.

The last Thing I shall mention to prove this Point is an Evidence to his Lordship, most unexceptionable. I mean the Earl of Macclesfield himself; for my Lords, consider once more his Answer in Relation to this very Point. What Caution! What Equivocation! What Confusion of Mind! That could make him even forget the time of his own Impeachment. What other Circumstances of Guilt! That during the Course of this Tryal have been visible to your Lordships—Bank Bills taken out in feign'd Names, the Secrecy with which the Money was paid, the dead Silence as to the Price agreed: One five thousand Guineas in a Basket; another five thousand Guineas left on a Toilett; and lastly, his own Declaration to the Masters almost in a Body. How much they, how much himself might be affected. I submit to your Lordships what Inference is to be drawn from all these Particulars. The Commons are persuaded all flow'd from this Principle, That his Lordship, the Masters, the Seller, and the Buyer, were all conscious that the whole Transaction was illegal and corrupt.

Before I quit this Head of the Charge, I must take Notice of that part of his Lordship's Answer, wherein he hopes that the receiving Presents on such Occasions is not Criminal in it self, or by the Common Law of this Realm; and that there is not any Act of Parliament whatsoever, by which the same is made Criminal. I hope his Lordship intends that the Words, Or by the Common Law of this Realm should be understood as Explanatory of the Expression, Criminal in it self; otherwise it supposes a very strange Distinction. For surely an Action cannot be conceived to be Criminal in it self, and at the same time not contrary to the Common Law of this Kingdom. Is it possible for any one to imagine, that Corruption in the Officer is not the necessary Consequence of being obliged to purchase his Place? This is in Terminis the Reason of the Statute of Edw. VI. Is it possible for any one to imagine, that Oppression of the Subject must not be added to this Corruption? Or, can the Man, who sells these Places, with no other View than to satisfy his own Avarice, retain his Integrity, and be a severe or competent Check upon the Actions of those Officers, to whom he has sold? And that is the Reason of the Judgment reported by Moor, viz. That the Sale of Offices is Malum in se, and therefore finable. But when to what I have now said, I add the Consideration of the Oath enacted by the Statute 12. Rich. II. (his Lordship will be pleased to add his own Opinion and Apprehensions) I do not conceive it possible to doubt, but that the Sale of Offices relating to the Administration of Justice, is Criminal in it self, Criminal by the Common Law, and Criminal by Act of Parliament.

Moor 781. Stockwith and North.

The next Point to which the Commons gave Evidence, is the necessary Consequence of what I last mentioned: I mean the admitting Persons to the Office of Masters, who were of mean Substance, and every way unqualified for that Trust. The Evidence given of the Deficiency, now in several of those Offices, is so full and uncontestable, that I shall avoid the Repetition of it, and only just name Mr. Thompson, and refer your Lordships to the Report made to the Council, the Orders of the Court of Chancery, and the other Papers now upon the Table. Their being deficient at this time is a violent Presumption, and that in Point of Law is some Degree of Proof, that they were of small Substance at the time of their Admission. How else is it to be conceived! That Masters, who have been so short a time in their Offices, should be so much in Arrear? Kinaston was admitted but in August 1721, and in 1724 there appears a Deficiency of 26,908*l.* T. Bennet is admitted but in June 1723, and in little more than a Year there is a Deficiency of 16,075*l.* And it is remarkable, that both these Masters have sworn, all they were Owners of in the World, was not sufficient to have paid the vast Prices they gave for their Offices. Yet these Men were chosen out to be trusted, one with near 50,000*l.* and the other with near 100,000*l.* of the Money belonging to the helpless and the miserable. By the skill my Lord Macclesfield shew'd the other Day, in endeavouring to prove a Man illegally worth a 1000*l.* or 1500*l.* who had own'd himself to be worth nothing; your Lordships may see it was not want of Knowledge how to make an Inquiry, that made his Lordship neglect it. It was because he never once concern'd himself, whether they had Substance or not. The Sum he himself was to receive, was his only Consideration, and therefore his only Care; for as Mr. Bennet has expressly declared, he never once asked him, either before or after his Admission, any one Question in order to be inform'd of his private Circumstances.

And yet, my Lords, these are the Men, whom his Lordship, as Mr. Waller has particularly sworn, thought fit in open Court, and while he was sitting in the sacred Seat of Truth and Justice, to declare Men of as great Fortune, Abilities and Skill, as had ever sat in that Court. I much more readily concur in the Truth of the other part of his Lordship's Declaration, and proved by the same Witness, That he had great Satisfaction in the having admitted most of the Masters himself. The Reason Mr. Waller gave, in Answer to some quibbling Questions of his Lordship's, for his particularly remembring this remarkable Speech, is clear and convincing to every Man; That the Astonishment he was struck with at the Hearing, made him to remember it. And happy would it be for his Lordship, was it possible ever to be forgotten!

But what could make the Earl of Macclesfield break out into this Panegyrick? A Reason so mean, and at the same time so gross, that I almost wonder even his Lord-

Lordſhip would venture to act upon it in Publick. A Day or two before this happened, a Maſter died, and a new Purchaſer was to be invited.

I have juſt now mention'd the Satisfaction his Lordſhip had in the Sale of theſe Offices. The Effect of which was, that the Earl connived at and permitted the unjuſt Method that was practiſed, for the purchaſing Maſters to pay the Price of their Offices, out of the Money belonging to the Suitors of the Court. This Practice the Commons Charge to have been notorious, and the Evidence produc'd to your Lordſhips prove that it was ſo. Godfrey, Conway, Kinaſton, and Bennet ſwore, that this Circumſtance induc'd them to become Purchaſers; and indeed as to them, the Fact proves it ſelf, even though they had not ſworn it to be ſo. For they have both own'd, they were not able to buy without it; nay, they were ſo low, that even the fifteen hundred Guineas they paid the Earl himſelf, was out of the Suitors Money. And thus far the Earl of Macclesfield himſelf has own'd in his Anſwer. But alas! That would prove nothing, if it was not accompanied with a Fact, that cannot be disbelieved; My Lords, He has repaid the Money!

After this, I think, I need not repeat the Evidence ſo minutely as to explain the particular Method, in which this Fraud was tranſacted. The whole ſeems obviouſly calculated for no other End or Purpoſe, than to induce Perſons of ſmall Abilities to become Purchaſers, by facilitating and making eaſy the Method of Payment. And indeed it was ſo eaſy, that I wonder his Lordſhip did not meet with Perſons, who would agree to give one half of the Money, for an opportunity of running away with the other. And if they had, I do not ſee but his Lordſhip's Defence would have been juſt as good as it is now. Such a Price might with as much Reaſon be called a Perquiſite, as his condeſcending to take but five or ſix thouſand Guineas, when no one would give more. It is true, my Lord Macclesfield does in his Anſwer ſay, that he was ignorant of this Practice. But I apprehend his Lordſhip to be as much miſtaken in this, as he has been in other Particulars. For, my Lords, it appears by Mr. Bennet's Evidence, that he not only knew of this Practice, but endeavoured to conceal it.

It happened that when this Mr. Bennet delivered his Accounts to the Privy Council, he concluded with a very remarkable Article; Item, In the Hands of Perſons of Ability and Honour 9075*l.* My Lord Macclesfield, at ſight of this Particular, asks him the Reaſon of it; Mr. Bennet explains it, That as to 1575*l.* he meant his Lordſhip, and as to the Reſidue, Mr. Hiccocks, of whom he bought, had detained ſo much of the Suitor's Money in his Hands, by way of Payment for his Place, and at the ſame time he complained to his Lordſhip of the Hardſhip with which he had been us'd. The Conſideration that induced him to give ſo large a Price, was his being immediately to receive a very large Caſh; and yet the firſt time he waited on Mr. Hiccocks for that purpoſe, he could get but 1500*l.* and that upon the hard Terms of giving a Receipt for 9000*l.* During this Converſation, Bennet ſwears, the Earl ſaid with ſome Concern, That his Accounts were made up the worſt way in the World, for every Body would now judge, that what he paid for his Office, came out of the Suitor's Money, and that what had been ſo much ſuſpected would be now diſcovered, and what he himſelf had taken ſo much Pains to deny, whenever he was asked the Queſtion. After this his Lordſhip and Bennet enter into a ſerious Conſultation, how to make up this Affair. The Chancellor bids him go to Mr. Hiccocks, to try what he would do. But it ſeems he could not be brought to do more, than to lend 2000*l.* which Bennet abſolutely refuſed, and inſiſted upon its being given him, or not at all. He reported this to the Earl, who diſpleas'd at it, ſaid, Hiccocks ſhould pay 2000*l.* and that he himſelf would repay the 1575*l.* but it ſhould be in ſuch a manner, as that Bennet ſhould not know in what manner it was done. Moſt profound Politicks this! Bennet afterwards told your Lordſhips, that he found the Earl intended to trick him out of this Money; for ſeveral Times and Places were appointed for Payment, without any Effect. And therefore the Accounts were delivered in, and the Story comes out. Your Lordſhips certainly obſerv'd, that my Lord Macclesfield was very much offended with Mr. Bennet's Evidence, and therefore took Care to croſs examine him moſt accurately. But that Fatality which conſtantly attends Guilt, was ſo ſtrong upon him, that the Anſwers given by this and almoſt every other Witneſs, to the Queſtions propos'd by the Earl, and his Councel, evidently, as I apprehend, deſtroy his own Anſwer, and confirm our Accuſation. But, my Lords, it is not only the Anſwers of the Witneſſes, but even his Lordſhip's own Queſtions that afford Evidence againſt him. For to what part of the Charge am I now ſpeaking? Why to that, wherein he is accus'd of knowing and endeavouring to conceal the Practice of paying the Purchaſe out of the Suitor's Money. And what does his Lordſhip ask? Did not you at this Meeting tell me, that if Hiccocks would pay 2000*l. you then would make up the reſt your ſelf?* By his Lordſhip's own Confeſſion therefore, Bennet was with the Earl upon this Occaſion; they did talk upon the Subject Bennet has inform'd your Lordſhips. Hiccocks retaining the Suitor's Money, was part of the Converſation. Elſe why ſhould he pay 2000*l.*? His Lordſhip did concert how to make up this Affair, and conſequently how to conceal the whole. To this Queſtion of the noble Lords Bennet anſwers conſiſtently with what he had ſaid before, That he did not ſay, if Mr. Hiccocks would pay 2000*l. that then he would ſtand the reſt.* And the Reaſon he gives is good, He was not worth the Money. Your Lordſhips remember the other part of the Dialogue. I ſhall only add, That the Earl being angry at this Evidence, asks Mr. Bennet, And how could you, as an honeſt Man, offer to buy a place, when you were not worth the purchaſe Money? I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, whether it was not as honeſt for him to buy without Money, as for his Lordſhip to ſell without Right.

I have now ſtated to your Lordſhips the Fact, as to this ſcandalous Practice. And I think it can never be thought reaſonable to ſuppoſe the Earl of Macclesfield only ignorant of what every one elſe knew: Or that he did not know of what he endeavour'd to conceal. And if it is certainly true, that the Office of Chancellor is an Office of the higheſt Truſt, it is as true, that every wilful Neglect of what is neceſſary to be done, in order to diſcharge that Truſt, is criminal. It cannot be doubted, but that this Practice was unjuſt, and fraudulent upon the Suitors of the Court. It cannot be doubted, but that the Earl of Macclesfield knew of this Practice. It cannot be doubted, but that the Chancellor was the proper Perſon, becauſe in Fact, he was the only Perſon, who could, ex Officio, either remedy or prevent this Abuſe. What ought to be the Conſequence of theſe Premiſes, the World will learn by your Lordſhips Judgment.

Hitherto my Lord's Avarice, uncorrupted Avarice! has been the only Principle of this Earl. In what follows, your Lordſhips will perceive Apprehenſion and Fear begin to mingle in all his Actions; and for this Reaſon the Bankrupcy of Dormer was to be concealed, that the Clamours of the World might be huſhed. It has appeared in Proof to Your Lordſhips, that upon Dormer's abſconding the Deficiency in his Office amounted mounted to upwards of 52,000 l. for the Account upon the Table which reduces the Ballance to 49,000 l. was made up long after the Masters had been obliged to contribute their 500 l. each.—— When Dormer run away, it is natural to imagine, that even this Chancellor should have turned his Thoughts to the Security of the Suitors: Not because it was his Duty so to do, but as Mr. Dormer was a Master whom he had not had the Satisfaction to admit himself, he might with the more Security have given himself the Show at least, of acting vigorously in Relation to his Affairs. By the Evidence that has been given it appears his Lordship's Behaviour was quite the Reverse; my Lord Macclesfield, instead of being Sollicitous for the Good of the Suitors, was apprehensive only of the loss that might happen to himself, by sinking the Price of Places, and thereby defeating that gainful Trade he carried on in the Sale of them. But this Thought was attended with another Consideration, that this open Acknowledgement of the Bankrupcy of one Master might enduce the World to suspect the Abilities of the rest, and as he best knew what Care, what Circumspection he had used upon their Admission, so he was determined to prevent an Incident of that kind. With these Views therefore every Step that was taken was mysterious, and the Deficiency itself with the utmost Caution kept secret; so secret, that at last some of the Masters themselves, his own Masters, for that very Reason, refused to contribute any farther towards it. It is a bottomless Pit, says one; we know not what it is, says another.

The first Step the Earl took was to direct Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hiccocks to carry on a private Negotiation with Dormer, for his Return into England, assuring him in his Lordship's Name, that his Person should not be confin'd, provided he made an Assignement and Discovery of his Estate and Effects. Upon this Dormer returns, and executes an Assignment; but I do not find he was ever examin'd upon Interrogatories, or that any of his Creditors attended, in Order to enquire into the Truth of his Discovery. Your Lordships observe, that the Promise of Liberty was Conditional; but Dormer, and the Earl, tho' for very different Reasons, were equally afraid of this Commitment; and therefore his Lordship took Care not to direct any Proceeding, that might lay him under a Necessity of doing it. If there was nothing else in the Case, this Behaviour was sufficiently Gross. But, my Lords, it was still worse, for Mr. Lightboun has acquainted Your Lordships, that soon after Dormer's Failure, he waited on my Lord Macclesfield, and told him, that he suspected the Account given in by Dormer was not Fair and Just; and that therefore he ought to be committed for Example sake. This Witness added another Circumstance, that justifies what I have before suggested to Your Lordships, as the Reason of the Earl's Conduct. He says, that in this Conversation with his Lordship he intimated and gave broad Hints of his suspecting the Abilities of some of the other Masters; he represented that the Year 1720 had been a very fatal Year, and might affect the Masters as well as other People; that what had been might be, and several other matters of this Nature. Your Lordships remember the manner, in which this Evidence was given, there was an Air of Probability and Truth, that appeared in it; he own'd indeed, when the Noble Earl ask'd the Question, for fear, I suppose, lest Your Lordships should want Proof of there having been such a Discourse, that he did not name any Master in particular whom he suspected. He did not know how far an Action might lye, and if known, it would make him unacceptable to his Brethren, and himself might be made uneasy in his Office, and several other Reasons of that kind; and therefore he chose to express himself in general Terms. Your Lordships will observe that the Earl was very early in this Resolution, some way or other, to patch up this Affair of *Dormer*s, so far at least, as to make it last his Time: For Mr. Kinaston has informed Your Lordships, that when he was in Treaty with Mr. Cottingham, to be admitted Successor to Mr. Borret, he objected this very Deficiency of Dormer's as a Reason why the Chancellor should not insist upon so large a Sum, since the Consequence of it must naturally lessen the Value of the Office. But he made light of it, and said, it would soon be made up. Mr. Edwards also, who succeeded Dormer, said he never would have bought the Office, if he had not been assured the Deficiency would have been made good. Here Your Lordships may also remember, that my Lord Macclesfield by cross examining this Gentleman, laboured to prove, that the Masters had actually agreed, in all Events, to make good Dormer's Effects. Mr. Edwards said, he could not say 'twas actually agreed, he hoped they would, and by Conversation he had had, imagined they were inclined so to do, &c. Upon this the Earl asked, From whom then had you those Assurances that it would be done? His Lordship (ever fortunate in his Questions!) I believe was not well satisfied with the Answer; for says Edwards, I had 'em from Cottingham and Godfrey. Their Names and Qualifications are well known to Your Lordships.

The next Step that was taken, relates to the Composition of a Debt of 24,046 l. due from one Wilson a Banker, to the Estate of Mr. Dormer. This Composition the Commons do aver the Earl did direct and establish, in an unwarrantable and clandestine manner. On the other hand, my Lord Macclesfield does in his Answer say, that it was done in the proper and usual manner: Your Lordships will judge of the Truth between us. The Commons, to prove their Averment, have produced the Original Instrument of Composition, by which it appears that this Debt of 24,000 l. was to be discharged for the Sum of 1463 l. in Money, and an Assignment of 10,000 l. or a proportional Part of what should be recovered of a desperate Debt of 22,600 l. due from one Poulter (who also is a Bankrupt) to Wilson.

The Introduction to this Affair was thus; Mr. Edwards, to whom Dormer assigned his Effects, acquainted the Chancellor that Wilson proposed a Composition, but apprehended he had not Power to conclude any such Agreement. To this the Chancellor agrees, and therefore advised him to apply to the Court by way of Petition for that Purpose. Edwards followed this Advice, and petitioned. Upon which the Earl referred the matter to Mr. Hiccocks, who made his Report, which being annexed to another Petition, the Composition was confirmed. In the Answer which the Earl gave to the second Petition, these Words are inserted, Of which give Notice forthwith: To what Purpose these Words were inserted, I cannot comprehend, unless it was to deceive the poor Master, who trusted him, into Ruin, by craftily laying a Ground Work for throwing the Blame of the whole upon him, unless he could divine to whom this Notice was to be given. For his Lordship took Care not to give any Directions, as to what Persons, or in what manner it should be done.—— During this whole Transaction Wilson was never examined upon Interrogatories: No one Creditor ever summoned to attend; the Character of Poulter perfectly unknown, or by what they did know, they might have reasonably suspected what afterwards happened: No Knowledge of Wilson's Affairs, but what he communicated himself; the first Proposal he made was accepted; no Consultation with any other of Wilson's Creditors; and to show how useful that might have been, it has been proved to Your Lordships, that Wilson has paid several of his Creditors their whole Debt.

This was the Care the Earl thought fit to take of the Suitors of the Court: Doubtleſs he imagin'd, that tho' more vigorous Meaſures might ſecure more Money, yet they might at the ſame Time make the Circumſtances of the Court too publick; for, at the ſame Time his Lordſhip took abundant Caution to prevent any of theſe Particulars coming to the Knowledge of the Suitors, or of the World. For, my Lords, not one of theſe Facts appear upon any Record or Regiſter whatſoever; the Whole was a private and clandeſtine Tranſaction between his Lordſhip, two or three Maſters, and the Bankrupt himſelf. Your Lordſhips have a Certificate from the proper Officers for what I now ſay, That none of theſe Petitions, Reports, or Orders, were ever regularly drawn up, or filed.

My Lords, this Caution, this Secrecy, this Myſtery, is a ſtrange Way of proceeding for Juſtice and Equity; but, if the contrary be ſuppoſed to have been his Intentions, the Whole is of a Piece, natural and conſiſtent.

Permit me, my Lords, once more to obſerve upon his Lordſhip's Croſs-Examinations. And, Firſt, He very nicely examin'd Edwards, as to what he had receiv'd by virtue of this Compoſition; and certainly it receives a wonderful Juſtification from Mr. Edwards's owning that he received in October laſt 1000 l. The next Point he examin'd to, was his Lordſhip's Diligence in ſecuring Dormer's Effects. The Commons brought Evidence to ſhew, that ſome of Dormer's Eſtate had been conceal'd, and, for ought I know, it may be true, that one Goodfellow, by his Lordſhip's Means, did give the Adminiſtrator (appointed ſince his Lordſhip's Diſmiſſion) the firſt Notice of it. The Fact is, that a Parcel of old Hops, 500 l. the worſe for keeping, were not long ſince ſold for the preciſe Sum of 100 Guineas. To which I ſhall only ſay, that I wonder his Lordſhip choſe to recal that Sum into your Lordſhips Memory.

My Lord Macclesfield hitherto might poſſibly meet with the Approbation of thoſe Maſters, on whom he vouchſafed to ſmile: Both he and they ſeem to have conſider'd themſelves as in an Intereſt ſeparate, and quite oppoſite to that of the Suitors. His View was to keep the Circumſtances of the Court ſecret, and to prevent any Thing that might happen to leſſen his Profits in the Sale of Places: Theirs was to retain the Money of the Court in their Hands, and for that Reaſon to huſh any publick Clamour that might occaſion the taking it away. I think I am not miſtaken in this Conjecture, becauſe I find his Lordſhip himſelf was of the ſame Opinion: For this was the great Artifice and Machine, which his Lordſhip employ'd, to terrify them into a Contribution of 500 l. each, towards ſupplying the Deficiency of Dormer's Office. To ſhew how much this Cuſtody of the Money was in the Maſters Thoughts, your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to remember, that all the Maſters own'd, that it made a very conſiderable Article in what they call'd, the Profits of their Places. Mr. Holford (on whom the only Blemiſh I know, is the Misfortune he has had of being a Maſter) acknowledg'd, in anſwer to a Queſtion propos'd by a Noble Lord, That he underſtood it ſo; for he never propos'd to lock the Money up, but to employ it for his own Uſe. In fact, it was what the Maſters bought, and what the Chancellor ſold, or rather, Widows, Orphans, Lunaticks, the Wards and Suitors of the Court were the wretched unhappy Merchandize, in which the Earl of Macclesfield thought fit to deal. When Kinaſton was to buy, he ſwears that Cottingham, or Rogers, or both, recommended it to him as being the Senior Office, and therefore the beſt. And Cottingham himſelf own'd the firſt Day of this Tryal, that he had acknowledg'd to a Committee of the Houſe of Commons, that he ſaid to Mr. Kinaſton, You have purchaſed a very good Office; for there is a great deal of Money in it. But, my Lords, the Thing proves itſelf: Conſider the Nature of the Office, the Attendance and Labour that is required; deduct the unlawful Intereſt made of the Suitors Money; how can the honeſt Fees (even ſuppoſing it lawful to ſell) be worth 6, 7, 8, or 9000 l? I leave this for my Lord Macclesfield to explain, and ſhall at preſent take it for granted, that the Maſters eſteem'd the Cuſtody of the Money to be Part of their Bargain.

That there was, in fact, a Contribution by the Maſters of 500 l. each, is evident from the Receipts now upon your Lordſhips Table; and Mr. Holford fully explains the Method that was taken to draw them into it. He received, ſoon after the Report of Dormer's Bankruptcy, an Order from Mr. Cottingham to prepare and bring in his Accounts to the Chancellor; ſoon after that, it was intimated to him, that a Contribution of 500 l. was neceſſary towards ſupplying the Deficiency of Dormer: Upon which he paid his Money, and his Accounts (tho' ready, as he ſwears expreſly) were never afterwards called for.

Lightboun was another Maſter, who received Orders to prepare his Accounts; but not paying his Money, Cottingham, ſome ſhort Time after Dormer broke, ask'd him if he had not heard of the Propoſal to contribute 500 l. Lightboun own'd he had: Cottingham then ſaid, 'twas neceſſary to raiſe ſome Money to go on, and that, if he contributed, poſſibly the Money might be repaid. Still Lightboun was inflexible, and ſaid it was a dangerous Step, and he wou'd not pay the Money. Upon this Refuſal, he inform'd your Lordſhips, that he was look'd upon as a very troubleſome Fellow among the Maſters, and little Arts were us'd to make him uneaſy in his Office: But when this likewiſe prov'd ineffectual, the Earl himſelf, at laſt, condeſcended to talk with him, and in the beginning of the Year 1722, he was taken into his Lordſhip's Study; and the Earl told him, he was ſorry to hear he did not pay; deſired him to conſider the Conſequences, and how dangerous it was, not to take Care of Dormer's Affair. Upon this, Lightboun ſtill refus'd to pay, ſaying he did not know how far a Contribution of this Kind might be conſtru'd to be an Undertaking of the Maſters to anſwer one for the other: At the ſame Time he boldly and honeſtly repreſented to the Chancellor, how cautious his Lordſhip ought to be; that this Method was no Cure for the Miſchief; and that as to its being propos'd by the Senior Maſters, 'twas no Argument to him, and ought to raiſe ſome Jealouſy in his Lordſhip, ſince they were viſibly endeavouring to withdraw from the Court, and came into a Project of this Kind, only to keep up the Credit of the Court, till they found an Opportunity of ſelling their Places at great Rates, and a great deal more to this Purpoſe; and concluded with a peremptory Refuſal to contribute.

However, as the other Masters paid their Money, the Earl was not discouraged, but depended upon it that some Time or other (as he told Mr. Edwards) he should be able to force Mr. Lightboun to comply, and therefore, as he thought, he had by this Means contriv'd a Fund to answer any Demands upon Mr. Dormer's Office, he went on, just as if there had been no Deficiency at all. By the Orders that have been read to your Lordships, and by the Evidence of Mr. Edwards, who paid the Money, it appears that he made several Orders for the Payment of Money, without any Regard to that due Proportion all the Suitors of the Court were entitled unto. His Lordship in his Answer says, It was not incumbent upon him, ex officio, to declare an Average. If it was not his Duty, my Lords, for God's sake, whose Duty was it? This is too gross to be a Sin of Ignorance. A Barrister of but a Term's standing knows, nay, it is obvious to the lowest Capacity, that where several Persons have Demands out of one Common Fund, and that Fund proves to be defective, all ought to be upon the same Foot, and be paid in an equal Proportion. Mr. Lightboun, Mr. Edwards, both represented to him the Hardship of one Creditor's receiving his whole Demand, and another Creditor, who had equal right, losing his whole Debt. The Reason therefore of this otherwise absurd Proceeding cou'd only be, that the Declaration of an Average wou'd publish that Deficiency to the World, which he had us'd so many Stratagems to conceal.

I cannot conclude this Part of the Evidence, which relates to that Criminal Design the Earl carried on of concealing this Deficiency, and of deceiving the Suitors of the Court, without reminding your Lordships of one other Instance of this Noble Earl's great Regard for Truth and Veracity. Mr. Atwood, who was the Sollicitor in the Cause of Harper and Chase, in which the Deficiency of Dormer being mention'd, the Earl took occasion to declare, That indeed he had heard of the Deficiency, but nothing of it had ever come judicially before him; and that he knew nothing of it but as publick News. This, my Lords, was after he had paid 1000 l. towards it himself. After what I have said, I shall not attempt to aggravate this Prostitution of the Seat of Justice. But this did not satisfy his Lordship: That his Dissimulation might for ever remain upon Record, he thought fit to pronounce an Order, that is now upon your Lordships Table, and dated no longer ago than in December last; in which he directs the Master to enquire, whether there was any Deficiency in Dormer's Office? and whether the Suitors were likely to lose any Part of their Money, or not?

Your Lordships know the Contract that was made between the Chancellor and the Masters: I therefore shall not waste your Time in mentioning Evidence to prove, that they, who gave such vast Prices for the Custody of the Money, did not neglect the Opportunity of employing it for their own Use. The Proof is but too visible: They who are rich, confess it; and they who are poor, dare not deny it: It was the necessary Consequence of his Lordship's Extortion; and that put it out of his Power, to take those Measures that were necessary to prevent that Practice. The Misfortunes of the South-Sea Year were so universal, that surely any Man of even common Sense wou'd have been upon his Guard: My Lord Macclesfield knew, that these Masters gam'd with the Suitors Money themselves, or for an extravagant Interest lent it to those who did: He knew that this was the occasion of Dormer's Deficiency: He knew that the other Masters had it still in their Power to do the same; therefore he permitted it: He took no Measures to prevent it; therefore he encourag'd it.

But what cou'd engage this Earl (whose Understanding is no wise question'd) after so fatal a Year, thus to risque his own Character; and what perhaps he values more, his own Fortunes, not only upon the Understanding, the Integrity, but even the good Fortune of a parcel of Men, whom he had thus pick'd up, without either Enquiry or Care? My Lords, as the Borrower is to the Lender, so a Corrupt Chancellor is the Servant of his Confederate Officers. He durst not put a stop to their Practices (tho' his own Estate was embark'd with theirs) lest Resentment and Revenge shou'd make 'em discover the infamous Secrets, with which they were entrusted. How durst he demand Security from those whom he had admitted, knowing they were able to give none? Surely, my Lords, no Reason, but such as I have now mention'd, cou'd induce his Lordship to neglect (and a long Neglect amounts to a Refusal) the obliging these Masters to give Security, or else to call them to a strict Account, as to their Cash and Securities, after he had been inform'd by Mr. Lightboun, that some even of the Masters were to be suspected. But Mr. Lightboun this Day went farther; he represented the Danger of trusting Men with such vast Sums: That this Credit had been the occasion of all the Losses in the Court, and therefore propos'd a Scheme of Security, to prevent any Losses for the future. The Chancellor did not absolutely reject this Proposal; that was too gross even for himself: He therefore desires Mr. Lightboun to put it in Writing: 'Tis done; and his Lordship most carefully kept it by him for two Years, without taking any notice of it. But, my Lords, there is one Circumstance in this Neglect, that in Equity (and surely a Chancellor will not decline to be try'd by that Rule) makes his Lordship answerable for a very large Sum in one Case only, without entring into any the other Consequences of his Crime. Mr. Kinaston, your Lordships remember, was prov'd to be deficient in the Sum of 26,000 odd hundred Pounds; and yet, my Lords, this very Kinaston did, in the Year 1722, propose to his Lordship, to give Land, or other Security, for the Effects with which he was entrusted. I know his Lordship will object what this Gentleman has before sworn, in relation to his own Circumstances: But what is it to the Suitors, whose Land it is, provided it be pledg'd for their Safety? What Answer, my Lords, must we give to our Fellow-Subjects, those unhappy People, who are undone, I will not say by Kinaston's and the other Masters Deficiency, but his Lordship's own wilful Neglect? I will not take up any more of your Lordships Time upon this Head. In what I have already mention'd, it is proved, notwithstanding what the Earl in his Answer says to the contrary, that he knew the Masters converted the Money of the Suitors to their own Use. And he himself owns, that he did not insist upon any Security from them. In a late Order of his own making, he has recited it not to be usual in the Court of Chancery, Chancery, for the Maſters to give Security; and therefore in his Anſwer covers himſelf under the Practice of his Predeceſſors. My Lords, the Reaſonableneſs and Neceſſity of Security depends upon the Greatneſs of the Truſt committed, and the Qualities of the Perſons intruſted. In Dr. Eddiſbury's Caſe, tho' there was a Stop, yet there was no Loſs, for his Eſtate prov'd ſufficient to anſwer all Demands. And therefore his Lordſhip's Argument, in my Apprehenſion, amounts to this, That becauſe his Predeceſſors did not inſiſt upon Security from Perſons who wanted none, therefore he might juſtly entruſt thoſe who were able to give none.

My Lords, I am come to the laſt Head of our Charge, and your Lordſhips will now ſee the Earl of Macclesfield abandon'd to all his Fears! even Avarice forſakes him! The Dread of a Parliamentary Inquiry ſits heavy on his Mind; and I firmly believe, he now repents his having illegally taken this Money, becauſe he parts with it to prevent, if poſſible, that Puniſhment he moſt juſtly deſerves for having received it. He finds all his Arts in vain to hinder his Practices being known to the World; and therefore his whole Study is now bent how to ward off their coming into Parliament.

The firſt Inſtance of this appears in the Caſe of Mrs. Chitty. The Fact is thus: An Order was made for the Payment of 1000 l. to her, Part of a Sum upwards of 11,000 l. belonging to her, and which had been paid into the Hands of Mr. Dormer. She, it ſeems, aſſigns this Order to a very importunate Sollicitor, one Mr. Lockman, who, as he has told your Lordſhips, diligently purſu'd the Chancellor from London to Kenſington, from Kenſington to Weſtminſter-Hall, and the Court of Chancery it ſelf. He repreſented to his Lordſhip the Circumſtances he was in; that he had compounded ſome South-Sea Contracts, and abſolutely wanted, and inſiſted upon his Money to compleat his Agreement, and ſet himſelf at Liberty. The Chancellor finding himſelf ſo preſs'd, was at laſt forc'd to promiſe him, that he would take care to get the Money paid. Upon this he ſummons a meeting of the Maſters, in order to perſuade them to pay the Money, by a Contribution of fifty Pounds each; and in the mean while it had been given out among them, that ſuch a Contribution was expected. Cottingham himſelf, as Mr. Lightboun ſays, told it to him, and at the ſame time made a freſh Demand of the old Sum of 500 l. and ask'd him what Anſwer he would ſend to the Chancellor? Lightboun prudently replies, he would deliver his Anſwer himſelf; and in the mean while he applies to the other Maſters, tells them the ill Conſequences of what they had done, and works them all up to a Reſolution not to comply with this freſh Demand. He deſires 'em not to give the Chancellor falſe Hopes, but to ſpeak their Mind freely. And thus prepared, they all repair to his Lordſhip's Houſe. I need not upon this Occaſion repeat the Names of the Witneſſes, for all the Maſters preſent concur in giving the ſame Teſtimony. His Lordſhip began the Conference with asking Mr. Lightboun, in a very angry Tone and Manner, why he did not pay his 500 l.? Who reply'd, he had often told his Lordſhip the Reaſon, and that he neither cou'd nor wou'd pay, and was confirm'd in his Reſolution, by his having ſince heard all, or moſt of his Brethren, repent of their Compliance. The Earl, without regarding Lightboun's Reaſon, propos'd the Neceſſities of the Court to the other Maſters, in relation to this 1000 l. The Maſters not ſeeming willing to comply, he us'd many Arguments to perſuade 'em to it: He deſires 'em to conſider the Conſequences; the Occaſion preſſes, and Clamours grow ſtrong; and if this Affair was not taken care of, Dormer's Deficiency muſt break out; and therefore what he propoſed, was the only way to prevent a Parliamentary Inquiry. Upon this Lightboun interpos'd, and ſaid, If it was ſo, he could not help it: That he had rather loſe the keeping of the Money and Securities, than hold it upon thoſe Terms. The Chancellor reply'd, But that is not the worſt: Suppoſe the Houſe of Commons ſhould in a Committee of Juſtice reſolve, that your Offices relate to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice; that the Buying 'em is contrary to the Statute of Edward VI. and therefore forfeited. Conſider (ſays he) tho' it may affect me, as to the Diſpoſal of theſe Places for the future, yet it will affect you much more in the Loſs of your Places; and therefore, upon the whole, deſired them to agree to the Contribution. My Lords, the Maſters were Proof againſt his Lordſhip's Eloquence, and ſeriatim refus'd to comply. Upon which the Earl was ſtruck, and with a vaſt Concern ſaid, Then I will pay it my ſelf. What Guilt, what Fear, muſt this Noble Earl be ſenſible of, thus to part with that Money he had ſo ſacrific'd his Honour to get! In this manner the Earl parted with his Maſters, and Lockman returns again to the Charge; and at laſt, meeting the Chancellor in the Room behind the Chancery Court, he got a Promiſe from him, that Mr. Cottingham ſhou'd pay the 1000 l. But at the ſame Time his Lordſhip (I ſuppoſe, to get rid of ſo troubleſome a Suitor) advis'd him not to engage with the Widow Chitty; for if her Money in the Court of Chancery was all her Fortune, that Sum was all ſhe was like to have. Soon after this, Cottingham paid the Money. But it ſeems he forgot to deſire Lockman to keep the Secret; ſo he told it about ſo much, that Cottingham meeting him rebuk'd him for it, ſaying, Can't you fare well, but you muſt cry Roaſt Meat? Your Lordſhips undoubtedly remember, that the Earl endeavoured to ſhew, by Croſs-examining, that he had generouſly given this 1000 l. to Mr. Lockman, out of meer Charity and Compaſſion to his miſerable Circumſtances. Lockman reply'd very reaſonably, that his Circumſtances were not ſo low as to want his Charity; for he might have diſcounted the Order; and he did not think it a Favour that he was paid his own.

The Evidence I have now laſt mention'd to your Lordſhips, even without the Aſſiſtance of other Proof, almoſt maintains the whole Charge. By the Teſtimony of a Cloud of Witneſſes his Lordſhip here confeſſes the Sale of Offices, and owns that Sale to be illegal: He acknowledges his being acquainted with Dormer's Deficiency; and at the ſame time endeavours to conceal it: He in a manner confeſſes his own Guilt, pronounces Sentence upon himſelf, and therefore propoſes Methods to prevent a Parliamentary Inquiry.

But, my Lords, there is ſtill more behind: There is not only a Connection among the Articles, but the Crimes charg'd in 'em riſe upon each other. Hitherto his Deceit has extended only to the Subject, but now he attempts the Throne it ſelf. His Majeſty graciouſly directed an Inquiry to be made into the Diſorders of the Court of Chancery. His Lordſhip knew that this dutiful Houſe of Commons wou'd not interpoſe in the Affair, till his Majeſty's Commands were obey'd, and therefore he now ſummons all his Arts and Skill to ward the Blow, and deceive his his Majesty into a Belief, that the World had taken a false Alarm; and that the Circumstances of the Masters were much better than they were represented to be: That they were able to answer all Demands; and that consequently the Suitors of the Court were not in any Danger. His Agents are sent among the Masters, to encourage them to stand by each other; that they should make a bold Stand, and defeat the Designs of their Enemies. He himself becomes their Councellor, and advises, and (without Inquiry, or Regard to either Truth or Justice) he persuades them to make such a Subscription to their Accounts, as might mislead the Council in any Report they should make to his Majesty.

All his Thoughts, Counsels, and Measures, are now swift and precipitate. Your Lordships have heard Evidence of the several Discourses of Cottingham and Dixon; the meeting of the Masters at Mr. Edwards's, and the last Conference with the Chancellor himself; all within two or three Days of each other, and all tending to the same End of deceiving the King, and preventing the Parliament. My Lords, all the Masters concur in the meeting at the Chancellor's House; when, it seems, his Lordship, upon considering their several Accounts, declared his Approbation of Mr. Holford's Subscription; and without any the least Inquiry into their Abilities and Circumstances, he advis'd them all to make the same Subscription as Mr. Holford had done.

Your Lordships have likewise heard it prov'd, that the Masters, in order to make a Shew, were advis'd to assist and stand by each other. Bennet and Conway are both Instances of this Counsel's being put in Practice; and —— But why shou'd I abuse your Lordships Patience with particularly recapitulating the Evidence that has been this Day given? I observ'd the Attention with which it was heard, and any Thing I can say, will only weaken that Impression it must naturally have left on your Lordships Mind. I shall therefore conclude the Whole with an Observation from the Parliament-Roll of Henry IV. Complaints and Subsidies belong to the Commons, Judgments belong to the Lords, and Redress is the Glory of the Crown.

My Lords, The Commons have now discharg'd their Duty; they have declar'd their Grievances, explain'd the Crimes, and produc'd the Offender. They are assur'd the King will of his Fatherly Goodness, grant a just Redress, and apply a proper Remedy; and they doubt not but your Lordships will pronounce a righteous Judgment.

Then the House adjourned to Wednesday next, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon.

Wednesday, May 12. The fifth Day.

THE Lords being seated in their House, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence; as also another Proclamation, That all Persons concerned were to take Notice, that Thomas Earl of Macclesfield now stood upon his Tryal, and they might come forth, in order to make good the Charge.

L. C. J. King. Gentlemen, You that are Councel for the Earl of Macclesfield, may now proceed.

Mr. Serjeant Probyn.

May it please your Lordships,

I HAVE the Honour to be Councel for the Noble Lord within your Bar, the Earl of Macclesfield, who stands impeach'd for High Crimes and Misdemeanors in the Name of all the Commons of Great Britain.

My Lords, When I consider the Importance of this Charge, in respect to the Noble Earl impeach'd, the great Experience and wise Conduct of the several Gentlemen of the House of Commons, who are intrusted to manage the Prosecution, and the great Variety of Arguments they have used to enforce and aggravate their Charge, it is with the utmost Concern that I presume to appear before your Lordships in his Defence; not but that I am well assured of the Truth and Justice, the Strength and Fulness of the Defence which may be made in his behalf, but out of real Consciousness of my own Inability to discharge so great a Trust.

Unequal to it I should have been, had the longest Time been allowed me to prepare myself; but I shall now appear much less capable, having so very little, so few Days Notice of your Lordships Pleasure in appointing me for that Service.

If therefore I shall be so unhappy, as to offer any Thing in this Case less proper, or correct, than might otherwise be expected from me, I hope I shall obtain your Lordships greater Indulgence.

The Offences, which are charged to be committed by the Noble Earl impeach'd, are contained in many Articles, no less than twenty one in the Whole; but the Gentlemen of the House of Commons have been pleas'd to wave several of them, and, I hope, when your Lordships have heard us, and our Evidence, you will be pleased to acquit him of all the rest.

These Articles have been conceived with the greatest Caution, and open'd with the greatest Art, heighten'd with every Circumstance that may induce Resentment, and urged against the Noble Earl impeach'd with a particular Zeal, well becoming the great Concern which those Gentlemen always shew for what they apprehend the Publick Service, and the faithful vigorous Discharge of the great Trust repos'd in them by the House of Commons.

The impeach'd Earl is pursued back from his late Resignation of the High Office of Lord Chancellor, through every Stage of Publick Life; and, with inquisitive Eyes, they have also view'd and pry'd into even his most private Transactions, so as not even the least Indiscretion has passed unobserved.

Some Actions, which in themselves are truly innocent, and are declared to be so by the constant uniform Practice of all the Great and Honourable Persons that have gone before him, are here represented as highly culpable.

Others, which we humbly apprehend, are not only innocent, but commendable and meritorious, even his personal Acts of Charity, are imputed to him as Crimes.

But in one Respect I must beg leave to congratulate the impeach'd Earl, and think it is his great Felicity, that in this so publick an Examination, so strict and rigid a Scrutiny into his whole Conduct, at least ever since he was first advanced to the Great Seal, there is not one Objection made, one Instance given of Corruption, Partiality, or Oppression, in his own personal Administration of Justice; and therefore, I hope, I may well conclude (since it is admitted by the Prosecutors themselves) that he has deny'd Justice to no Man, he has delay'd Justice to no Man, he has sold Justice to no Man.

The principal Objection that seems to be rely'd on by the Learned Managers, and the only one which I humbly apprehend can any Way affect the impeach'd Earl in the present Case, is, that possibly he may have been too easily lead into a good Opinion of some Persons, who in the Eye of the World appeared appeared to be Men of good Subſtance, and fair Reputation, Perſons that were recommended to him by others of undoubted Honour and Credit; that he has admitted theſe Perſons into Offices of great Truſt and Profit under him; and they have at length been found not to have deſerved the good Opinion, which he at firſt had been perſuaded to entertain of them.

Some of theſe Officers have been negligent, others unfaithful in the Diſcharge of their Duty; and in their Crimes 'tis now attempted to involve the impeach'd Earl as their Principal and Patron.

And, in regard the principal Complaints againſt the Noble Earl are founded upon the Diſpoſition of the Offices of Maſters in Chancery, therefore it has been thought neceſſary (in the Preamble of the Articles exhibited) to repreſent the Maſters in Chancery as Officers of very great Truſt, ſworn to ſerve the King and his People, and aſſociated to the Lord Chancellor by particular Commiſſions, for his Aſſiſtance in the due Adminiſtration and Execution of Juſtice.

My Lords, what Uſe Maſters in Chancery might formerly be of, and what Aſſiſtance to the Lord Chancellor they might antiently give, I know not, but at preſent they ſeem to be of very little Advantage to him in the Determination of Cauſes in Court.

They ſit indeed in Court, at proper Diſtances, on each ſide the Chancellor, and ſedulouſly attend his Motions, but never pretend to adviſe or interpoſe in Judgment.

They have likewiſe the Honour to be named in Commiſſions of Aſſociation to the Lord Chancellor; but the whole Body are not always named in ſuch Commiſſions, but only ſuch particular Perſons as his Majeſty is pleaſed to think fit: And this appears from one of the oldeſt Commiſſions that has been produced and read before your Lordſhips, I think it was the Commiſſion granted to Robert Southwell and others the 9th of October, 4 Edw. VI. wherein there were not more than four or five of the Maſters named; tho' I believe in the later Commiſſions their Names are uſually all inſerted. But what Power or Authority is given them by this Commiſſion? None at all, that they can execute of themſelves in the Abſence of the Maſter of the Rolls, or ſome of the learned Judges named therein; for the Judges and the Maſter of the Rolls are only included in the Quorum.

But, my Lords, Commiſſions of this Kind are not uncommon: Clerks of Aſſize, and other Officers, are named in the Commiſſions of Aſſociation to the Judges of Aſſize, in their reſpective Circuits, yet act as Miniſterial Officers only under them.

And I humbly apprehend, that in this Caſe it has been ſufficiently proved before your Lordſhips, by a Gentleman (that was once a very good Maſter in Chancery) that they now pretend to exerciſe no judicial Authority whatſoever.

They examine and ſtate ſuch particular Matters and Facts, as the Court is pleaſed to refer to them, for its better Information, and which the Court it ſelf has not Time to look into; they ſettle Accounts depending between the Suitors of the Court; they look into, and take Counſels Opinions upon Titles of Eſtates bought and ſold by Order of the Court; and they tax Coſts.

This ſeems to be their principal Concern; and yet in this they are not abſolute Judges, they determine nothing finally; for when they have made ſuch Enquiry as the Court directs them, they only certify their Opinions of the ſeveral Matters referred to them by way of Report, which Report is not concluſive to the Parties; for either of the Parties that thinks himſelf aggrieved by ſuch Report, may take Exception to it; and the Court, on hearing ſuch Exception, will controul the Maſter's Report, and determine as they think Juſt. And in caſe the Parties themſelves do not controvert the Matter reported, but totally acquieſce and ſubmit to it, yet is not the Maſter's Report a final Judgment, nor will bind the Parties thereto, till it be afterwards confirmed by the Order of the Court: It receives its Authority and Sanction from the Order of the Court, and has none without it.

But it was certainly very rightly judged by the learned Managers, and they have thought it very material for them, to advance the Reputation of theſe Offices, in order to make it more penal to have any Preſent or Compliment made to the Great Seal, upon the Admiſſion or Reſignation of the Maſters.

Another Obſervation was made by one of the learned Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, in relation to their general Charge, which is this; They charge, that the Earl, in or about May, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, by the great Grace and Favour of his Majeſty, was conſtituted Lord Chancellor, and did thereupon take the uſual Oath for the due Execution of that Office, and ſuch other Oaths as have been accuſtomed; in order, as I conceive, to inſinuate, that he had acted contrary to, or in Violation of ſome particular Oath, which had been adminiſter'd to him.

The Earl in his Anſwer admits, That on the fourteenth of May, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, he took the Oath of Office as Chancellor, which is ſet forth in his Anſwer; that at the ſame Time he took the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, but no Oath of Office, except that above ſet forth.

To this Part of the ſaid Earl's Anſwer, the learned Managers are pleaſed to object, That the Oath preſcribed by the Statute of Richard the Second, had been frequently adminiſter'd to the Noble Earl, but that he had forgotten that Oath in his Anſwer, as well as in his Conduct and Practice.

And to prove this Fact, Mr. Eyre (one of the Officers of the Exchequer) was produced, on whoſe Evidence it did appear (as we apprehend the Fact truly is) that when the Honourable Privy Council are annually aſſembled in the Court of Exchequer, to prepare a Liſt of Names of proper Perſons to be preſented to his Majeſty, for his Choice of Sheriffs for the Year enſuing, and the Judges then alſo attending, one of the Officers of the Court reads over the very Words of the Statute of Richard the Second in French, and then the Bible is preſented to the Noble Lords, and others of the Privy Council, and alſo to the Judges preſent, which they kiſs, and then proceed to the Nomination of the Sheriffs for the ſeveral Counties in England.

My Lords, I muſt obſerve that upon this Occaſion no formal Oath is adminiſter'd, in purſuance of this Act of Parliament; nor any Entry or Record made of any Oath taken by all or any of the Perſons preſent.

The Words of the Act of Parliament are, That the Chancellor, Treaſurer, and other great Officers therein named, the Juſtices of the one Bench, and of the other, the Barons of the Exchequer, and others, who ſhall be called to ordain or make Juſtices of Peace, Sheriffs, or other Officers therein named, or any other Officers or Miniſters of the King, ſhall be firmly ſworn that they ſhall not ordain, name, or make ſuch Officers for an Gift or Brokage.

This Act of Parliament doth direct an Oath to be adminiſter'd, tho' the preciſe Form of the Oath is not preſcribed.

But the Act of Parliament it ſelf can't be called that Oath which it ſelf directs; nor the reading or hearing that Act of Parliament read, be called the adminiſtring or taking that Oath: The Oath muſt be ſomething diſtinct from the Act of Parliament which directs it.

Therefore, my Lords, I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that the reading of this Act of Parliament, upon this particular Occaſion, is rather uſed as a particular Exhortation or Admonition to that Auguſt Aſſembly, how they ought to demean themſelves in that ſingle Inſtance of their Duty (the Choice of Sheriffs) than to have an univerſal Obligation in reſpect to the Nomination of all other Officers in general.

If this was intended to be adminiſter'd as an Oath of Office, then being once taken by any Perſon in Office, it need not be taken again, during the ſame Perſon's Continuance in the ſame Office; but this Act of Parliament is annually read over upon the Return of every Election of Sheriffs, and ſeems to be particularly applicable to that Duty.

Sheriffs are indeed very great Officers, have whole Counties under their Influence and Juriſdiction; and therefore very ſingular Care ought to be taken in their Nomination.

The Chief Juſtices and Judges preſent upon that Occaſion, uſe the ſame Ceremony of Kiſſing the Book; and if this ſhould be interpreted an Oath, it would be of great Extent, and the Conſequence of that muſt be, that the beſt Offices ſhould have no Candidates for them; for the latter Part of the Oath, directed by this Act, is, That none, who purſueth by him, or by other, privily or openly, to be in any manner of Office, ſhall be put in the ſame Office, or any other.

So, if this be conſider'd as an Oath, every one of the great Perſons that have taken it, muſt be indiſpenſedly obliged not to give any Office to any Perſon that hath even ask'd, or made Application by himſelf, or any one in his Behalf, for that or any other Office whatſoever.

If this Conſtruction, which is now contended for, was admitted, a great many Perſons might be thought guilty of Perjury, who themſelves never apprehended it; and how far the Guilt of this Perjury may be extended, is not eaſy to determine.

But, my Lords, it is not the Noble Earl's Intention to incur the Cenſure of quibbling himſelf out of the Obligation of an Oath, or the Letter of an Act of Parliament; we beg leave to inſiſt, that in whatever Light this Tranſaction is taken, it can't be conſtru'd to be the taking an Oath within the Intention of the Charge contain'd in the preſent Articles, which is, That he took the Oath of Office, and ſuch other Oaths as have been of Right accuſtom'd.

This Charge, my Lords, muſt be confined to ſome reaſonable Time, wherein theſe other Oaths charged muſt be ſuppoſed to be taken: I apprehend it can relate to ſuch Oaths only, as the Noble Earl took at the ſame Time, when the general Oath of Office was adminiſter'd to him.

And the Earl, by his Anſwer, certainly underſtood it in this Senſe; otherwiſe, to make a compleat Anſwer to ſo general a Charge, he muſt have been under a Neceſſity, to have ſet forth all the Oaths which he hath taken in his whole Life-time, at leaſt, ſince his firſt Oath as Chancellor.

He took the Oath of Office as Chancellor the fourteenth of May, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen; this Proceeding in the Exchequer is proved to be in November following: Who would underſtand that this Charge intended to couple two Tranſactions together, that in themſelves were ſo diſtinct and remote!

Having thus endeavour'd to remove theſe Objections, which ſeem to be no Part of the Charge, but only uſed as introductory to it, I ſhall now proceed to the Charge itſelf.

The firſt and general Charge is, That the ſaid Earl, not regarding the Obligation of his Oath, or the Duty of his Office, but entertaining wicked and corrupt Deſigns and Views to procure himſelf exorbitant Profit, by divers unjuſt and oppreſſive Practices, whilſt he continued in the Office of Chancellor, did illegally, corruptly, and extorſively, take and receive to his own private Uſe great Sums of Money, in Breach of his Oath, and Violation of his Duty as Lord Chancellor.

This is inſiſted on by the Gentleman, who firſt ſpoke, as an Offence of the deepeſt Dye, which ſtrikes at the very Root and Foundation of all Civil Government; and to render it more odious, it is introduced as an Act of the higheſt Ingratitude to his Majeſty, as well as injurious and oppreſſive to his Subjects. To demonſtrate this, it is repreſented, that upon the ſaid Earl's being appointed Lord Chancellor, in May, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, his Majeſty was pleaſed, of his Grace and Bounty, to beſtow upon him the Sum of fourteen thouſand Pounds in Money, and to grant him ſeveral other yearly Penſions and Payments, which another Gentleman (in obſerving the Evidence given on this Head) was pleaſed to ſay, did, together with the uſual Salary, Fees, and Profits, belonging to the Office, amount unto near ten thouſand Pounds per Annum; and this was ſtrongly urged as enough to ſatiate the Appetite of the moſt Avaricious, and prevent any illegal and corrupt Extortions of other Sums from his Majeſty's Subjects.

To this, my Lords, we hope your Lordſhips will think the Noble Earl has put in a very plain and ſatisfactory Anſwer.

That he had for ſeveral Years before his Advancement to the Great Seal the Honour of ſerving his Majeſty in the Office of Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's-Bench; and as a Reward for his good and faithful Services in that high Office, his Majeſty, out of his Royal Grace and Favour, upon the tenth of March, One thouſand ſeven hundred and fifteen, was pleaſed to advance him to the Dignity of a Peer of this Realm; and for the better Support of that Honour, to grant him a Penſion of twelve hundred Pounds per Annum, and to declare his Royal Intentions of giving the ſaid Earl's eldeſt Son an Office of conſiderable Profit, when Opportunity ſhould offer.

That in May, One thouſand ſeven hundred and eighteen, his Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint him Lord Chancellor; on the fourteenth of the ſaid Month of May, he took the uſual Oath of Office, and at the ſame Time the Oath of Supremacy and Allegiance, and no other Oath of Office.

That during the Time he continued in the Office as Lord Chancellor, he enjoy'd the uſual Salary, Fees, and Perquiſites, which Mr. Pincent (who was called as a Witneſs to this Particular) proved to be about eleven or twelve hundred Pounds per Annum.

That his Majeſty alſo granted to him the Salary of four thouſand Pounds per Annum, during his Continuance in that Office; which was not particular in his Caſe, but conſtantly granted to, and enjoyed by all his Predeceſſors.

That to this, his Majeſty was further pleaſed to ſign a Warrant to him for fourteen thouſand Pounds, as mention'd in the Articles; whereof two thouſand Pounds was the uſual Allowance to other Lord Chancellors, or Keepers, towards the Expences in entring upon the Office; and the reſt was his Majeſty's Royal Munificence, and received as ſuch.

The Noble Earl likewiſe admits, that his Majeſty was alſo pleaſed to grant his only Son, then going to travel, an yearly Penſion of twelve hundred Pounds, determinable upon his Majeſty's granting him one of the Offices of Teller of the Exchequer for Life; which was accordingly granted, and he came into the Poſſeſſion of it, in One thouſand ſeven hundred and nineteen, whereby that Penſion determined; ſo that the yearly Payments to his Lordſhip were but ſix thouſand four hundred Pounds per Annum, beſides the Penſion of twelve hundred Pounds to his Son, which ſoon after determined, upon his coming into Poſſeſſion of his preſent Office.

This is all the Revenue which the Noble Earl received during his Continuance in this great Office: And, I humbly preſume, this can't be thought exceſſive, conſidering the great Fatigues, Difficulties, and Expences, that neceſſarily attend the Execution of this high Office: Perhaps other Offices might be found, that are leſs difficult in the Execution, and yet ſuperior in Profit.

But, my Lords, the Objection does not ſeem to turn that Way; but rather, that this Noble Lord, not contented with theſe ſeveral Inſtances of Royal Grace and Bounty, illegally, corruptly, and extorſively took and received other great Sums from other Perſons to his own Uſe.

This the Noble Earl expreſly denies, and ſays, That during his Continuance in the Office of Chancellor, or at any other Time, he never once had a Deſign or View, or even a Wiſh, to raiſe to himſelf any exorbitant Gain or Profit, much leſs to extort Money by any unjuſt or oppreſſive Methods whatſoever.

And indeed, my Lords, this is a Charge that gives the Noble Earl at once the greateſt Trouble and Surprize; he never ſuſpected a Crime of this Sort, ſo contrary to his Nature, and the whole Tenor of his Life, could ever be objected to him: And to ſhew, that this is without any Foundation of Truth, the preſent Circumſtances of his Family and Fortune (when laid before your Lordſhips) will abundantly demonſtrate and convince Mankind, that he is not that rich, that avaricious, and corrupt Man, as he is repreſented.

As he has received large Bounties from his Majeſty, he has been abundantly liberal to Perſons that were proper Objects of Charity; and his Purſe has been always open to ſuccour and relieve the Diſtreſſed.

This, my Lords, brings me on to the material and principal Part of the Charge, which is, That he did illegally, corruptly, and extorſively take and receive to his own private Uſe great Sums of Money, in Breach of his Oath, and Violation of his Duty as Lord Chancellor.

The Inſtances given of this corrupt taking of Money refer to the ſeveral Sums mentioned in the five Articles, which the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons were pleaſed firſt to enter upon, and which relate to the ſeveral Sums of Money received from the four Maſters in Chancery, mentioned in the fifth, ſixth, ſeventh, and eighth Articles, and the Clerk of the Cuſtodies mentioned in the ninth.

If the Charge contained in theſe ſeveral Articles be a Crime, it muſt appear to be ſo in its own Nature, to be an Offence at Common Law, or made ſuch by ſome Act of Parliament. I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that taking a Preſent, or taking Money from Perſons upon their Recommendations or Nominations into Offices, though they do concern the Adminiſtration or Execution of Juſtice, is not a Crime in its own Nature; it is no Act of Immorality; it is no Act of Injuſtice to any Man; for no Perſon has any particular Right to theſe Offices, but his Advancement muſt be owing to the Favour or Friendſhip of him, who has the Right and Power of Nomination: And if the Office it ſelf be valuable, ſo is the Right of Nomination to it, and may be eſteemed as Part of the Eſtate of that Perſon to whom it belongs: And if we conſider it in this Light, I think it can't be denied but that every Man has a natural Right to diſpoſe of his own Eſtate or Intereſt, his own Friendſhip or Favour, upon what Conſideration he pleaſes: It is his own, and therefore he has a Right to make any juſt and legal Advantage of it.

From hence, my Lords, I would beg leave to infer, that the taking a Gratuity or Sum of Money from any Perſon, upon his Nomination to one of theſe Offices, is not criminal in it ſelf, if ſimply conſidered, and diſtinct from the Good or Evil Conſequences that poſſibly may attend it.

And, in the next Place, I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that it is not a neceſſary Conſequence, that every one that buys an Office, muſt and will behave himſelf either unfaithfully or corruptly in it. Inſtances may be given, and thoſe very antient ones, of Offices of Juſtice, Offices of the higheſt Character in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, that have been purchaſed, and purchaſed from the Crown.

In Mr. Madox's Hiſtory of the Exchequer, Page 43. we find that Richard Fitz-Allured, in the Time of King Stephen, fined fifteen Marks of Silver, that he might ſit with Ralph Baſſett to hold the King's Pleas; and in Page 743. of this Book it appears, that Ralph Baſſett was the King's Juſticier. Here we ſee one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench purchaſing his Office for fifteen Marks in Silver.

And

And in the ſame Page of the ſaid Book it appears, that in the ſeventh Year of King John, Walter de Grey gave the King five thouſand Marks pro habenda Cancellaria Domini Regis tota vita ſua, & pro habenda inde Charta Domini Regis.

Theſe, my Lords, are great Inſtances what the antient Uſage was, in purchaſing even the higheſt Offices of Juſtice.

Inferior Offices were doubtleſs diſpoſed of in the ſame manner; and if this had been thought Criminal, we ſhould have had ſome Inſtances in our Law Books, wherein they would have appeared to have been adjudged ſo.

I beg your Lordſhips leave to conſider in the next Place, and that very briefly, whether this can be taken to be criminal within the Words of the Statute of Edward VI. which has been taken Notice of by ſome of the learned Managers.

By the 5th and 6th of Edw. VI. c. 16. it is Enacted, That if any Perſon or Perſons ſhall at any Time thereafter bargain and ſell any Office or Offices, or take any Money, Fee, or Reward, or any other Profit, directly or indirectly, for any Office or Offices, which ſhall in any wiſe touch or concern the Adminiſtration of Publick Juſtice; All and every ſuch Perſon and Perſons that ſhall ſo bargain and ſell, or take any Money, Fee, or Reward, for ſuch Office or Offices, ſhall not only loſe his Right, Intereſt and Eſtate in ſuch Office or Offices, but alſo every Perſon and Perſons that ſhall give or pay any Sum of Money, Reward, or Fee, ſhall be adjudged a diſabled Perſon in the Law, to have, occupy, and enjoy the ſaid Office or Offices.

This is the Purport of this Act of Parliament, ſo far as it relates to the Offence charged in theſe Articles; and I apprehend it cannot be extended to the preſent Caſe.

Here are no prohibitory Words, that Perſons ſhall not bargain and ſell Offices, nor any Words declaratory that they could not do ſo before by Common Law.

And all Penal Laws are to be conſtrued favourably for the Benefit of the Subject, and not extended beyond the Letter.

But on the contrary, by the many Proviſoes after contained in this Act of Parliament, it is plain that all Offices, before the making of this Act, might be bought and ſold without Offence; and many Offices are authorized and intended by the expreſs Proviſoes of this Act, to continue to be bought and ſold for the future.

For by the firſt Proviſo in this Act, it is declared not to extend to any Office of Inheritance, which is an expreſs Declaration that Offices of Inheritance were to be bought and ſold even after the Act ſhould take place.

The ſecond Proviſo I apprehend is ſtronger to our Purpoſe; for by that it is declared, That this Act ſhall not extend to any Contract made or agreed before the firſt of March then next, but all ſuch Bargains and Contracts to be good, as if the Act had never been made.

And, my Lords, there is yet a further Proviſo, That this Act, or any Thing therein contained, ſhall not extend, or be prejudicial, or hurtful to any of the Chief Juſtices of the King's Courts, commonly called the King's Bench and Common Pleas, or to any of the Juſtices of Aſſize, as now be, or hereafter ſhall be, but that they and every of them may do in every behalf, touching and concerning any Office or Offices to be given or granted by them, as they, or any of them, might have done before the making of this Act, any Thing therein contained to the contrary thereof notwithſtanding.

What is that which theſe great Officers of Juſtice might have done before the making this Act? They might have given, granted, bargained, or ſold, the reſpective Offices under them, in ſuch manner as they thought fit; and by this Proviſo they may continue to do ſo ſtill.

What Alteration then is made in the Law by this Act of Parliament? Here is no new Offence created, but a particular Penalty given, to be inflicted on all that ſhall buy or ſell Offices, not contained in any of the ſubſequent Proviſoes; that is, the Contract made between the Buyer and Seller is declared void: The Party ſelling loſes his Eſtate and Intereſt in the Office; and the Party buying is render'd incapable to hold and enjoy it.

In Caſtle's Caſe, Cro. Jac. 644. it was adjudged, That when a Statute appoints a Penalty for the doing a Thing, which was no Offence before, and appoints how it ſhall be recovered, it ſhall be puniſhed by that means, and no other.

Therefore, my Lords, in the preſent Caſe, ſuppoſing that the Preſents proved to be ſometimes made to the impeached Earl, upon the Nomination of Maſters in Chancery, can be interpreted a ſelling of an Office, or taking Money for an Office, within the Intention of this Act of Parliament, it can be liable to no other Puniſhment than what the Act it ſelf directs; and this the Noble Earl has already ſuffered by his Loſs of the Great Seal. The Statute inflicts a Penalty upon the Seller of an Office, only of forfeiting the Nomination to the Office for the future; and no other Penalty or Puniſhment ought to be inflicted by virtue of this Act of Parliament; and conſequently the Offence as now charged againſt the Noble Earl, and the Facts as proved before your Lordſhips, cannot ſubject him to any Puniſhment or Judgment, that can be prayed in this Proſecution, upon the preſent Articles of Impeachment.

But, my Lords, there is another Anſwer, which the Noble Earl has been pleaſed to make to this Part of the Charge againſt him, and which I hope your Lordſhips will have great regard to.

It is the Example of the many great and learned Perſons, who have executed this high Office before him.

The Precedent is too antient, for us to diſcover when it was firſt made; and I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that the immemorial conſtant Uſage and Practice of it in all Ages ſince, will ſufficiently eſtabliſh the Reaſonableneſs and Juſtice of the Precedent.

The ſame Objection, which is now made againſt the Noble Earl impeached, in this particular Inſtance, might undoubtedly have been inſiſted upon againſt every one of his Predeceſſors.

And I doubt not but we ſhall be able to prove, that theſe Officers have made Preſents to the Great Seal, as frequently and conſtantly as the ſeveral Vacancies have been ſupplied.

This Noble Lord has only followed the Example of his Predeceſſors; he has trodden in their Steps: And I muſt beg Leave to ſay, There muſt be ſomething peculiar in his Caſe, if the ſame Paths, which lead them to Honour and Immortality, ſhall betray him to Infamy and Diſgrace.

This Objection, my Lords, ſome of the Learned Managers of the Houſe of Commons were well aware of; and therefore they have endeavour'd to diſtinguiſh the preſent from the preceding Caſes.

They admit it to be true, that ſmall Sums have been formerly given to, and accepted by former Chancellors, upon Admiſſions into theſe Offices, by way of Compliment or Preſent, and this without a Crime: But then they urge, that the Sums now complain'd of are exorbitant; they are bargained, haggled for, and given unwillingly by the Purchaſer; and that there is a great difference between a Preſent given, and a Price bargained for and paid.

My Lords, I can't deny but that this Diſtinction is juſt: A Preſent implies a voluntary Gift of ſomething leſs than the Value of the Thing given, or promiſed, for which that Preſent is to be made; a Price, the full Value of the Thing contracted for.

And I think the preſent Earl's Caſe is exactly within this Diſtinction, and juſtifies the Earl's Anſwer in this reſpect.

The Preſent which Mr. Kinaſton made to the Earl, upon his Admiſſion, was One thouſand five hundred and ſeventy five Pounds. The Price he paid Mr. Rogers for the Purchaſe of his Office, was no leſs than Six thouſand Pounds.

The Preſent which Mr. Thomas Bennet made to the ſaid Earl, upon his Admiſſion, was One thouſand five hundred and ſeventy five Pounds. The Price he paid Mr. Hiccocks for the Purchaſe of his Office, was Seven thouſand five hundred Pounds.

Mr. Elde, upon his Admiſſion into the Office, upon the Death of Mr. Fellowes (the former Maſter) made a Preſent to the late Chancellor, of Five thouſand two hundred Pounds. But when his Lordſhip conſider'd the Greatneſs of the Sum, he returned him all but Eighteen hundred Pounds: When at the ſame time Mr. Lucas offered Six thouſand Pounds for the ſame Office.

Mr. Thurſton has alſo proved, that he left Bank-Notes to the amount of Five thouſand two hundred and fifty Pounds, ſealed up in a Letter at the Earl's Houſe, before his Admiſſion, upon Mr. Borret's Death. But when the Lady, to whom the Letter was directed, diſcovered how great the Sum was, ſhe, without any Application made to her for that Purpoſe, return'd all but Two thouſand Pounds.

And this, my Lords, was done before the Seal before Michaelmas-Term laſt, before the Maſters were ordered by the Privy-Council to give in their Accounts; and when the preſent Proſecution was not in any ſort apprehended: And it is likewiſe proved, That Mr. Lucas, upon this Occaſion, renewed his Offer of Six thouſand Pounds for the Office; and Mr. Thurſton was admitted for a leſs Sum of Money.

Theſe, my Lords, we humbly hope and inſiſt are not Inſtances of a corrupt Mind, an avaricious, rapacious Temper, ſuch as ſome of the Gentlemen Managers have been pleas'd to repreſent them. On the contrary, we humbly hope, that upon the Evidence already given, it plainly appears, that theſe Payments were not Sums of Money extorted and unwillingly paid by the Gentlemen, who were admitted into the ſeveral Offices that have been mentioned, but Preſents voluntarily made, and preſs'd upon the Earl Impeached, with ſuch Application and Earneſtneſs that ſhews, that at the time they were offered, the Perſons offering, thought they were not equal to the Value of the Favour they expected. And their Importunity was ſo great, that Mr. Thomas Bennet one of the preſent Maſters, that has been ſo often Examined, would endure no Delay, but impatiently preſs'd to be Sworn into his Office, at a time when the late Chancellor was ſick, and by his Phyſician thought to be dying. This may rather be ſaid to be extorting a Favour from the Impeached Earl, than Money from Mr. Bennet, ev'n upon his own Evidence.

My Lords, We do humbly inſiſt, That as the Noble Earl within your Bar was not conſcious of any Crime in accepting theſe Preſents, ſo he is juſtified in ſo doing, by the Example of many ſucceſſions of great and learned Men, who have done the ſame in the like Caſe. And ſhould this now be adjudged Criminal, what Numbers of very good and juſt Men muſt be involved in the Imputation of this Guilt? It muſt neceſſarily ſpread an univerſal Cloud of Infamy and Reproach over the Aſhes of many juſt and upright Sages of the Law, whoſe Memories have hitherto been preſerved as venerable and ſacred; Men who deſpiſed Riches, and abhorred the remoteſt appearance of Bribery, and never were, nor were ſuſpected to be Corrupt: yet theſe Men thought it a juſt Duty, owing to themſelves and Succeſſors, to adhere to the known and juſt Rights, the ancient eſtabliſhed Fees and Perquiſites of their Offices; and believ'd it as juſtly due to them, as the Salaries which were annexed to their ſaid Offices.

My Lords, We ſhall beg Leave to ſhew that this has been the ancient Uſage and conſtant Practice of all Ages; and that the ſeveral Great Perſons, who ſucceſſively have preſided in the greateſt Courts of Law and Equity, from the earlieſt Times to the preſent, have diſpoſed of the ſeveral Offices in their Gift, as they became vacant, for Money.

Frequent Inſtances of this kind will be produced before your Lordſhips, in our Evidence.

My Lords, I would not be underſtood to mention this, ſo as to inſiſt that the Actions or Examples of the greateſt Perſons will alter the Nature of Good and Evil, or give a Sanction to any Action that in it ſelf is really Criminal; but only as an Argument (and I apprehend it a very ſtrong one) to prove, that it was the concurrent Opinion of all thoſe Great Perſons that have taken Preſents, upon their Diſpoſition of Offices, that it was not Criminal to do ſo.

The Opinion and Judgment of ſo many Learned Perſons muſt have very great Weight in a Caſe of this Nature: And if in ſtrictneſs it can't be ſaid to Juſtify the Action, it will certainly very much Extenuate the Guilt.

In the next place, the Gentlemen are pleaſed to proceed to ſhew, That Maſters in Chancery, being, as before repreſented, very great Officers in that Court; the Noble Earl within the Bar, for his own corrupt Gain, has admitted Perſons into that Office, that were not duly qualified for it, and forced them to give great Prices, and bartered and haggled for ſuch Prices.

This, my Lords, is urged as the greateſt Inconvenience, That Men who have no Subſtance of their own, ſhould be truſted with ſuch large Sums of other Perſons Money.

It is inſiſted, That Honeſty, Probity, and good Subſtance, are abſolutely neceſſary for the Suitors Security; yet Inferior Perſons have been put in by his Lordſhip, who had little or no Subſtance of their own: That they paid great Sums for their Places, yet paid it out of the Suitors Money; and that this was known, connived at, and encouraged by the Noble Lord that then preſided in the Court of Chancery. This therefore could only be with a view to enhance the Price of thoſe Places: For what would not People hazard, who had Nothing of their own to loſe? If any Profit could be made, it was their own; if any Loſs, the Suitors; for no Security was given to anſwer the Effects in their Hands.

My Lords, It muſt be confeſs'd, that this way of Arguing has a very popular Appearance, and finds an eaſy Acceſs to every Ear.

The Court of Chancery muſt be admitted to be the greateſt Court of Juſtice in the Kingdom: And it muſt be alſo admitted, That the Buſineſs of that Court has of late Years increaſed, in Proportion, more than any other Court; and conſequently, much greater Sums of Money are now depoſited in the Hands of the Maſters of that Court, than formerly.

This may poſſibly make it to be wiſhed, that ſome better Method might be found out for the Suitors Security, than has been formerly uſed.

But in what Manner this Reformation is to be made, is beyond the Power, or at leaſt the Prudence of any one Judge or Chancellor to determine; the ancient Practice of every Court is the Law of that Court; and it would be a dangerous Experiment for any one preſiding Judge to vary it: If any ill Conſequence to the Suitors attended ſuch an Alteration, he that made the Alteration would certainly be anſwerable for the Conſequences of it; for every Suitor will then ſay, Why was the ancient Practice vary'd? he that made the Alteration, ſurely did it for his own Advantage; and then every Argument that in the preſent Caſe is only colourably made uſe of, in that would be obvious and natural, and be apply'd with double Force.

He that acts without a Precedent, acts upon the Peril of his own Judgment: But he that acts againſt Precedents, againſt ancient, concurrent, uniform Precedents and Practices, is without Excuſe, and juſtly to be ſuſpected of ſome particular View, in the Language of the preſent Articles.

The Earl of Macclesfield, when he was firſt intruſted with the Great-Seal, found the Suitors Money in the Cuſtody and Care of the Perſons who were then Maſters of the Court, and without any Security given or demanded for it.

He conſider'd, that his Predeceſſors were a Succeſſion of Great and Honourable Perſons, of equal if not greater Sagacity and Learning, Probity and Experience, than any that ever had ſate in any Court; they found the Maſters in Poſſeſſion of the Suitors Money upon the ſame Eſtabliſhment, and they left them ſo.

Was it proper or prudent for him to oppoſe his ſingle Opinion to the united Judgment of ſo many wiſe and great Men that had gone before him? Surely, no. Inconveniencies had been ſeen before, and Deficiencies had happened, and thoſe Deficiencies had been ſupply'd by a voluntary Contribution of the other Maſters then in Being. Why was not Security then demanded? and why not all the other Maſters then called upon to bring in their Accounts, to prevent the like Deficiency for the future? If that Method had been thought either prudent or practicable, no doubt it would have been then taken: And this being then not done, or ever before or after attempted to be done, is a good Argument, that it was not expedient, or, it may be, poſſible to be done, at leaſt upon the ſingle Authority of one Lord Chancellor. And that therefore is a good Excuſe for the Omiſſion or Neglect in that Particular, in the preſent Caſe.

But, my Lords, It is now objected, That as the Sums of Money in the Maſters Hands are greater than ever, and it may not be proper to alter the ancient Method of the Maſters receiving and keeping it for the Suitors Benefit; yet greater Care ought to be taken of the Perſons to be admitted Maſters, upon Vacancies and Reſignations. And therefore another part of the Charge againſt the Honourable Earl Impeached, is, That he appointed Perſons to be Maſters of the Court, that were not proper or ſufficient either in Subſtance, Knowledge, or Probity.

Theſe are ſaid to be all eſſential Requiſites in the Character of every good Maſter; but groſsly neglected in the preſent Caſe: And a Reaſon is given, or (if I may preſume to ſay it) rather invented, in the preſent Caſe, that it was the Advantage of the Earl Impeached, to put in ſuch Unqualified Perſons; becauſe ſuch Perſons would be drawn in, to give larger Prices for their Places, and conſequently it redounded to the Earl's Advantage.

My Lords, I muſt beg Leave to obſerve, that in the Evidence that has been given, there has not been any one Inſtance proved (or at leaſt, that I can recollect) that any of theſe Maſters were really Inſufficient in any of the Particulars objected to, at the time of their reſpective Admiſſions into their ſeveral Offices; or at leaſt that the Noble Earl Impeached, then knew that they were Inſufficient, or had any reaſon to ſuſpect it: They were all Gentlemen of good Families, well Educated; each of them a Barriſter at Law (which, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, is not the leaſt expenſive Education) and had all viſible Fortunes, and appeared as Perſons in very plentiful Circumſtances.

Ev'n Mr. Conway and Mr. Thomas Bennet (who are the Perſons intimated to be the leaſt qualified in Point of Fortune and Subſtance) had at that time very good Eſtates in their Poſſeſſions; Mr. Bennet had then alſo a very valuable Office, Clerk of the Cuſtodies; had married a Lady of conſiderable Fortune, kept a Coach and decent Equipage in Town; was the Son of Sir John Bennet, tho' a younger Son; and the whole Family then ſeemed to be in a very proſperous Condition. Mr. Thomas Bennet has proved to your Lordſhips, that he was worth Twenty thouſand Pounds, in the Year 1720. And it does not appear, that the late Lord Chancellor was ever inform'd of any Incumbrances upon his Eſtate (tho' now, he ſays, there are great ones) or that his Circumſtances were leſs at the time of his Admiſſion, than in the Year 1720. Surely then the late Lord Chancellor had at that time no reaſon to ſuſpect his being unqualified in Point of Subſtance.

Mr. Conway

Mr. Conway had alſo then a very good viſible Eſtate in Land, an Eſtate of Four or Five hundred Pounds a Year; had been Receiver-General of ſeveral Counties in Wales, had diſcharged his Office punctually, and produc'd his Quietus to the Lord Chancellor, before Admiſſion.

Mr. Kinaſton had, at the time of his Admiſſion, an Eſtate of Four hundred Pounds a Year in Land, Timber of very conſiderable Value, and a Perſonal Eſtate of Two or Three thouſand Pounds; and moreover, was a Gentleman of a very good Family and unblemiſhed in his Character.

Mr. Thurſton, I think, the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons don't object to in any reſpect. None of their Reputations, in reſpect of their Probity, have been called in queſtion, 'till their late Misfortunes: And as to their other Perſonal Endowments, their good Senſe and Judgment, I need only refer to your Lordſhips own Obſervations, upon their ſeveral Examinations in the preſent Tryal.

But, my Lords, great Streſs ſeems to be laid, upon the Maſters paying for their Offices, out of the Suitors Money; or replacing the Money ſo paid, out of the Suitors Money.

Suppoſe that was the Practice amongſt the Maſters; does it appear to your Lordſhips, that the Impeached Earl had any Notice, or the leaſt Information given him of this Practice? Or if he had known it, how could he poſſibly have prevented it? Certainly, no other way, than by ordering all the Money immediately out of their Hands. And then another Difficulty would have occurred, how that Money ſhould have been diſpoſed of. Publick Societies would not ſubmit to be under the immediate Direction of the Court of Chancery; and no private Perſon could be truſted with ſo great a Sum, or give Security for it.

The Maſters of the Court are in nature of Caſhiers; they ſubſiſt upon Truſt and Credit; and no Security can be expected to anſwer the Quantity of Caſh in their Hands, more than in the Caſe of a common Banker. People will truſt Men in Credit with the Cuſtody of a Thouſand Pounds; when if they propoſed to borrow an Hundred Pounds on Security, would ſcruple to let them have it. But the Objection is carry'd yet farther: It is ſaid, If Security could not be expected, why were not their Books inſpected, upon one's transferring to another, and Schedules taken of their Effects?

To this it muſt be anſwered, That the Lord Chancellor has not Leiſure to attend this Duty Perſonally. And what other Perſon can be appointed more fit to be truſted (as an Inſpector of the going-out Maſters Accounts) than his Succeſſor, who is to ſtand charged with all the Money and Securities, and the whole Effects transferred?

Can any Obligation incline a Man more ſtrongly to Care and Exactneſs in Buſineſs, than private Intereſt? And his own private Intereſt will oblige him not to make himſelf accountable for more than he actually receives, and has transferred to him. And when the ſucceeding Maſter has examined the Effects of his Predeceſſor, by proper Schedules approved of by himſelf, they are then transferred to him by a General Order of the Court, and he becomes accountable for what is ſo transferred.

This, my Lords, we humbly ſubmit, has been the ancient Uſage and Practice of the Court in theſe Caſes; and that the ſame Method was uſed by the preſent Earl Impeached, the ſame Care taken, as had been formerly in the like Caſes by any of his Predeceſſors.

But, my Lords, I would beg Leave to ſubmit it, That ſuppoſing it to be poſſible that greater Care might have been taken by the late Lord Chancellor, in inſpecting the Schedules and Transfer of the Effects of Maſters to their Succeſſors; Does it appear that the Suitors of the Court have been any way injured or prejudiced by that pretended Neglect? Or would the greateſt Care, the greateſt Exactneſs in this Particular, have given the Suitors any greater Advantage or Security? Certainly, not at all: For let the Effects of the preceding Maſter be never ſo carefully and juſtly Examined and Scheduled, and and after that transferred, and actually delivered to the ſucceeding Maſter; has not the new Maſter, to whom theſe Effects are thus carefully and juſtly delivered, the ſame Power over them, to manage and diſpoſe at his Pleaſure, as he would have had, in caſe ſuch Transfers had been made with leſs Caution and Exactneſs, as in the preſent Caſe?

If any corrupt Agreement had been made by any new Maſter, upon coming into his Office, and previous to this Transfer, to have repaid or replaced any Sum of Money, before borrowed by him, either for the Purchaſe of his Office, or any other Occaſion; Could not he have complied with this, and paid it out of the Suitors Money or Effects, the very next Moment after they were transferred to him? And would the previous Care and Caution in any degree obſtruct or prevent his ſo doing? I apprehend, not at all; for as ſoon as the Maſter is in Poſſeſſion of the whole Money and Effects, he may return any part that he pleaſes to his Predeceſſor, by virtue of any Agreement before made for that Purpoſe; which would be as much to the Prejudice of the Suitors, as if what was ſo returned to the Predeceſſor, after a Transfer made, had been retained in the firſt Inſtance by the Predeceſſor, and never actually delivered over to his Succeſſor.

Therefore, my Lords, this Security, as projected, is but Imaginary, and gives the Suitor no greater Advantage than he had before; and conſequently this ought to be no Ingredient of Complaint againſt the Impeached Earl.

But, in the next place, it is ſtrongly urged, That tho' the Noble Earl, during his High Offices, might not have Leiſure to attend little Occurrences, or regard ſmall Neglects; yet the Going-off of Mr. Dormer ſhould have awaken'd him; ſome Care ſhould, upon that Accident, have been taken. If what had paſſed before was only Supineneſs, this was a Wilful Neglect; and not enquiring into the State of his Affairs, and ſecuring his Perſon and Effects for the Suitors, was concurring in Defrauding the Suitors.

My Lords, This was indeed a remarkable Occurrence; The Going-off of Mr. Dormer was unforeſeen, and unſuſpected: His Perſon was withdrawn, and out of the Power of the Court; but all imaginable Care was taken to ſecure his Effects.

The two Senior Maſters immediately were directed to enquire into his Effects, ſecure his Chambers, and put a ſtop to all Transfers in his Office. What more poſſibly could be done in this Emergency, his Perſon being out of the Power of the Court?

A Propoſal is made on his Behalf, That if the then Chancellor would engage that his Liberty ſhould be ſecured to him, he would return, and diſcover diſcover and aſſiſt to get in his Effects. This is thought reaſonable, and for the Suitors Benefit, and accordingly complied with; and thereupon the unhappy Man returns, and not only makes the beſt Diſcovery of his Effects, but delivers all in his Power, for the Benefit of the Suitors. Could any thing be more Advantagious to the Suitors, or contribute more to their Intereſt than this?

The Impeached Earl had indeed promiſed his Perſon ſhould not be Impriſon'd; and it would have been the higheſt breach of Faith to have departed from it. Had not that Promiſe been made, Mr. Dormer had not Return'd, nor any Diſcovery been made by him; but by this Means they had the Benefit of the beſt Diſcovery that could be had, and the beſt Aſſiſtance the Noble Earl could give them. He never deny'd or diſcouraged any Application that was made by or for the Intereſt of the Suitors in that reſpect, nor endeavour'd to conceal the true State of his Effects, and the Condition of his Office. And as to the Expreſſions inſiſted on to delude the Suitors, by ſaying, as has been objected, That Mr. Dormer was only gone to take the Air, and would ſoon return; tho' theſe Expreſſions have been much inſiſted on, in the Arguments againſt the Impeached Earl, I do not remember that they have been mentioned in the Evidence.

And, my Lords, to ſhew that the Impeached Earl did all that was in his Power to render what Aſſiſtance he could give the Suitors; when a new Maſter was to be appointed, he left the Diſpoſition of the Office to the Direction of the other Maſters: And Mr. Edwards gave no leſs than Five thouſand Pounds for that Office of Mr. Dormer's, which was wholly apply'd towards the making up his Deficiency. By this Enquiry, Dormer's Real Eſtate was ſecured to the Suitors; and it was expected by the Earl himſelf, and by Mr. Edwards that ſucceeded Mr. Dormer, that the reſt of his Deficiency, which was then uncertain, would have been ſupplied by the other Maſters, provided they could be continued in their Offices upon the old Eſtabliſhment.

It may not be improper to obſerve further in this Caſe, That Mr. Dormer's Deficiency does not appear to have happen'd through any Extravagance of his own, or by his Miſapplication of the Publick Money: He employ'd Mr. Wilſon, then a Perſon in good Credit, as his Banker, and entruſted him with his Caſh. Wilſon had Dealings with Poulter in the fatal Year 1720. Wilſon was reduced, and ſtopped Payment; his Debt to Mr. Dormer was then Twenty four thouſand and forty ſix Pounds; this, Mr. Dormer aſſigns to Mr. Edwards his Succeſſor in the Office, it was all that Mr. Dormer had, all therefore that he could reſtore, and more than could be got in: For Mr. Edwards applying for this Money, found Mr. Wilſon not able to pay the whole Debt, and thereupon a Propoſal is made of a Compoſition.

The Maſters conſidering this, thought proper to Petition the Lord Chancellor, That it might be referred to the Senior Maſter, Mr. Hiccocks, to Examine and Report, Whether it was for the Benefit of the Perſons Entitled, that a Compoſition ſhould be accepted.

The Maſter to whom this Queſtion was referred, Reports it Reaſonable; and an Order is made, upon a ſecond Petition preferred, That the Compoſition ſhould be accepted.

This, my Lords, we apprehend, was an engaging in this Affair with all the Zeal that could be deſired on the Earl's part; no Evidence of any Deſign or Endeavour to conceal the Deficiency: All or moſt of the Maſters conſulted upon this Compoſition, and conſented to it: And as for thoſe that were not Parties to it, they are not bound by it.

But it is objected, That this Tranſaction was Private and Clandeſtine between the Maſters and the then Chancellor; not carried on in the uſual Manner, nor any Notice given to the Suitors in Reality, tho' a Pretence of uncertain Notice mentioned at the Bottom of the Order.

My Lords, we hope this cannot affect the Noble Lord within the Bar; it is the Duty of the Chancellor to pronounce Orders in Court; but it is the Care and Duty of the Solicitors or Clerks in Court to ſee them Drawn up, Entred and Regiſtred in proper Time and Form.

The Subſtance of the Order is pronounced by the Court: The Form is the Act of the Regiſter; and the Chancellor can't have Leiſure to attend the Entries of all his Officers.

Fourteen hundred Pounds was paid in upon this Compoſition; One thouſand Pounds has been brought in ſince out of Poulter's Effects: So much has been ſecured at all Events by this Compoſition, and the Suitors have received the Benefit of it. Have the Gentlemen on the other Side ſhewn, that without this Compoſition any thing could have been ſecured to the Creditors in General, or that any other Creditor has obtained more advantagious Terms? It was ſaid indeed that other Creditors had received their full Demands: But I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, that no Proof has been made thereof, only an uncertain Hear-ſay of ſmall Sums lent, to give him new Credit after his firſt Abſconding. But when the Compoſition was made, a good Debt was ſubſiſting to Wilſon from Poulter, and Judgment obtained againſt him, and he committed to the King's-Bench Priſon in Execution. The Marſhal ſuffers him to Eſcape: Thereupon an Action is brought, and Judgment obtained againſt the Marſhal, for his Eſcape; and at length the Marſhal is run out of the Kingdom, to avoid making a proper Satisfaction.

What a Series of evil Accidents concur to increaſe this Misfortune, and prevent the juſt Deſign of the Earl to do the Suitors all the Juſtice in his Power! But to whom has he been Defective, if all prudential Steps have been taken? It is hard that he ſhould anſwer for the Conſequence, that he could not, it was not in his Power to prevent.

But, my Lords, in the 15th Article, it is objected to the Impeached Earl, That to carry on his unjuſt Purpoſes, in Concealing Dormer's Deficiency, in February One thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty. he ordered the Maſters to bring in their Accounts of their Caſh, Effects, and Securities; not with a real deſign to Examine the Accounts, and Secure their Effects, but to terrify them into a Contribution; and threatned that the Caſh ſhould be taken out of their Hands, if they did not comply; by which means he got nine of the ſaid Maſters to contribute Five hundred Pounds a-piece out of the Suitors Money, and then no farther Proceedings were had upon their Accounts.

My Lords, One would have thought that theſe Proceedings, which ſo plainly tended to the Good of the Suitors, could not by any Artifice have been interpreted to their Prejudice.

In

In February 1720, my late Lord Chancellor (finding Mr. Dormer's Deficiency like to be greater than at firſt it was apprehended) was willing to look into the State of the Accounts of the other Maſters, to guard againſt the like Misfortune; and at the ſame time propoſes to them to advance Money to help to pay Mr. Dormer's Deficiency. Five hundred Pounds a-piece is raiſed by nine of them, and applied accordingly; the laſt of theſe Five hundred Pounds paid in Auguſt 1721. And upon the 7th of November 1721 a ſecond Letter is written to haſten theſe Accounts, and every Argument uſed that could be thought likely to induce them to it: But the Labour proved too difficult, and the Purſuit was forced to be given over 'till a more convenient Time and Opportunity ſhould preſent. What was done in this Inſtance alſo, I beg Leave to ſay likewiſe, was following the Example of another Great Man, in the Method he took in the Caſe of Dr. Eddisbury, and that has ſome Circumſtances leſs favourable than the preſent: Dr. Eddisbury was always in Town, or at leaſt within the Reach or Power of the Court, and yet his Perſon was not ſecured for many Years after his firſt Failure.

Upon the 29th of January, 7 Annæ, there is an Order entred in his Caſe, (the only one we can find on the File) for Dr. Eddisbury to deliver up his Effects to the two Senior Maſters: It recites, That Dr. Eddisbury had ſeveral Sums and Securities for Money in his Hands, and that ſeveral Orders had been made for Money out of his Hands; which were not complied with; and that he declared himſelf not able to pay; and that his Accounts given in were not full: It is therefore Ordered, That in four Days time after Notice, he do Account to the ſeveral Maſters, and deliver in to the ſaid Maſters what he hath in Hand, and the Report to be taken in ten Days.

My Lords, By this Order it appears that Dr. Eddisbury had ſeveral Orders made upon him for Money to be paid, not in Average, for ſome Time, and thoſe Orders not complied with; and that he had not given full Examination, and had Prevaricated with the Court; yet the laſt Extremity, the Committing his Perſon, and ordering Payment in an Average, was not thought of, 'till it was certainly known and he had actually confeſſed that he had not Aſſets to pay the Whole.

In the preſent Caſe, Mr. Dormer was Examin'd; diſcover'd his Eſtate, aſſigned the Whole in Truſt for the Suitors, but died before the Enquiry could be perfected.

In Dr. Eddisbury's Caſe the other Maſters contributed at firſt to ſupply his Deficiency, as they ſince did in the Caſe of Mr. Dormer: And this without doubt was ſo done, in hopes that his Effects, when fully diſcovered, would in time prove ſufficient to anſwer all, or much the greateſt part of the Suitors Demands: And thus far both Caſes are parallel, and Orders made for Payments to the reſpective Suitors in general, as they applied for them. And no Average was directed in the Caſe of Dr. Eddisbury, 'till it appeared ev'n by his own Confeſſion, that his Aſſets were not ſufficient to make good the Suitors whole Demand: And when the quantum of the Deficiency was known, Payments were directed by the Court to be made in Average. So, in all probability, in due time the like Order would have been made in the preſent Caſe: But that could not poſſibly be done 'till the Value of Mr. Dormer's Effects could be known and aſcertained, in order to fix the Proportion to be paid, in Average. And this, my Lords, to this time, through the many Accidents before mentioned, it has not been poſſible to effect: And therefore, the not directing Payments in an Average, can't be reaſonably objected to the preſent Impeached Lord as Criminal: His Intention throughout the Whole appears to be calculated for the alone Service and Benefit of the Suitors of the Court, without any Proſpect or Poſſibility of Advantage to himſelf. His Deſign was, to procure every Suitor full Satisfaction for his Demand: And if nothing had happen'd to interrupt ſo juſt a Deſign, 'tis poſſible that his great Zeal for the Publick Good, and his indefatigable Induſtry, might in due time have had their deſired Effect.

But greater Powers have now interpoſed, and this Difficulty being found to exceed the ſingle Authority of a Chancellor, may be thought to deſerve the greater Power, Care, and Wiſdom of the Legiſlature.

My Lords, What afterwards happened in the Caſe of Mrs. Chitty, is in part anſwered, in what has been obſerv'd upon the laſt Article; and I humbly apprehend, that a plain Narrative of that Fact, will be a ſufficient Anſwer to the Objection that has been made in this reſpect. The Earl of Macclesfield having no certain Account what Caſh of Mr. Dormer's remain'd in his Succeſſor Mr. Edwards's Hands, made Orders for Payment of Sums of Money, from time to time, as Application was made in Court; and particularly to pay Mrs. Chitty One thouſand Pounds, part of Eleven thouſand Pounds of her Money which had been brought into Court in Mr. Dormer's time. Mrs. Chitty aſſigns this to Mr. Lockman. Mr. Lockman applies to Mr. Edwards, the preſent Maſter, for Payment, and is there diſappointed of his Money: Then he applies to the Lord Chancellor, and repreſents the preſſing Neceſſities they laboured under, That the Payment of One thouſand Pounds to him at that Juncture of Time, would be of greater Service to him than the whole Money could be at any future Day: That this Sum of Money, if immediately advanced, would make his Creditors eaſy; and without it, he muſt inevitably be thrown into a Goal.

This, my Lords, we ſhall be able to make out in Proof (tho' Mr. Lockman, upon his Examination, deny'd it,) and the late Chancellor, out of pure Compaſſion and Charity to this Gentleman, and believing his Circumſtances to be as he repreſented them, pays him the Money out of his own Pocket; and at the ſame time, or ſoon after, told him, that he muſt expect no more from him, but muſt wait 'till Mr. Dormer's Effects could be got in, or the Money could be advanced ſome other way.

What Objection can be reaſonably made to this part of the Impeached Earl's Conduct? To deliver a Suitor in Diſtreſs; to extend a Charitable Arm to reſcue him from the very Gates of a Priſon juſt opening to receive him. If this be a Crime, and to be objected to him by the very Perſon who now enjoys his Liberty, as the Gift of this Noble Lord's generous but undeſerved Bounty; I muſt not pretend to ſay that he has many Virtues.

On the contrary, I hope it will abundantly appear to your Lordſhips, ev'n from this Inſtance, and from the whole Series of this Noble Lord's Conduct, that he firmly believ'd that all the Suitors of the Court, would, in due time, be made eaſy, and their whole Demands be made good to them. And had the whole Body of the Maſters as chearfully concurred in this good Deſign, and contributed as generouſly to ſupport the Honour of the Court, and themſelves, 'tis more than probable that the Suitors would not long have had any juſt Occaſion of Complaining, nor your Lordſhips the Trouble of this Proſecution.

It was for this End, that the Maſters were ſo often called upon to make a reaſonable Contribution, and all Arguments made uſe of that would either perſuade or terrify them into a Compliance, in making the Suitors eaſy, 'till a proper Fund or Method could be found out to give them entire Satisfaction. Moſt of the Maſters, I think all but one, were convinced that this was a reaſonable and juſt Propoſal, and expreſs'd a Readineſs to come into it; and 'twas for this Purpoſe, that they were bid to conſider of the Conſequences of forfeiting their Offices, and of a Complaint in Parliament.

And for whoſe Benefit were theſe Arguments thus made and preſſed upon the Maſters? Who could profit by their Compliance, or ſuffer by their Refuſal? Not the Chancellor himſelf: He had no other Intereſt to ſerve, no Inclination to gratify, but a juſt Zeal for the Publick Good, and a generous Concern for the great Loſs that was like to happen to the Suitors of the Court, without his vigorous Interpoſition and Aſſiſtance.

This, my Lords, I humbly hope, appears to be the ſole and juſt Principle upon which this Noble Lord has founded all his Deſigns and Actions, to reſtore the Credit of the Court, which had been greatly injured by other Mens ill Conduct; to procure the Suitors in general the beſt Satisfaction that could be obtain'd; not partially preferring one to another, but endeavouring to do every Suitor full and equal Juſtice, in order as their Complaints were brought before him.

As to the Expreſſions proved to be made uſe of by the Impeached Earl, in the Caſe of Harper; ſurely they can have little weight.

Can it be imagined, that after ſo many Tranſactions had happened in the Court of Chancery, in relation to Mr. Dormer's Misfortunes, and the great Loſſes that were like to happen to the Suitors thereby, the then Chancellor himſelf ſhould be the only Perſon that had never heard of it; and ev'n after ſuch time as he had been endeavouring to find out Means to remedy ſo great an Evil? Could any Man of leſs Sagacity than he muſt be allowed to have, conceive that he could be credited, ev'n in the Court wherein he preſided, in ſaying (as it is now repreſented) That he was a perfect Stranger to the Affair of Mr. Dormer; that he had heard nothing of it, but as idle News, a flying Report, that might be true or falſe? No, my Lords, that certainly could not be his Intention, in ſpeaking the Words that are ſaid to be uttered by him on this Occaſion.

But when a Purchaſer under the Decree of the Court, that had paid his Money into the Maſter, and required his Conveyances to be executed, could not procure the Parties intereſted to execute, without actual Payment of the Purchaſe-Money to them at the time of the Execution, and that Money was ſunk in Mr. Dormer's Hands; this firſt brought the Deficiency of Mr. Dormer in Judgment before his Lordſhip; and it was the firſt time it came regularly before him in Judgment. Upon this he declared, That then it was a proper Time for him to make a ſtrict Enquiry into this Matter: He could not properly enter upon this Enquiry, upon the uncertain Reports of Perſons about the Town, or upon any private Converſation or Information that he might have received, and poſſibly might have the Expreſſion of common Talkers of News; but now that it came Judicially before him, he would throughly Examine into the whole Matter, and endeavour to apply a proper Remedy.

This, my Lords, we ſhall prove to be the Occaſion and Manner of the ſpeaking theſe Words, by Perſons that were then preſent in Court; and this happened but in December laſt was Twelvemonth; and accordingly it was ordered to be put under the immediate Examination of Mr. Edwards, who ſucceeded Mr. Dormer in the Office, and who muſt therefore be admitted to be the moſt proper Perſon to perfect that Enquiry, and alſo becauſe he was the moſt concerned in the Conſequences of it: But Time has been wanting to proceed as far as he intended in that neceſſary Work.

My Lords, Tho' by this time, it can't be pretended but the late Chancellor, as well as every other Perſon belonging to the Law, muſt know of Mr. Dormer's Deficiency; yet I believe, that none had then diſcovered, or ev'n imagined how great it was; and that ev'n his Lordſhip, and moſt other Perſons, were perſuaded, that whatever ſhould appear to be wanting in his own Effects, would be ſupply'd by the other Maſters; or ſome other Method would be found out to prevent any real Loſs to the Suitors; and in Virtue of this Perſuaſion, Orders were made for Payment of Money to the Suitors, as they apply'd for it, without directing an Average.

This is exclaimed againſt, as contrary to all Equity; Some to have all, and others to loſe all, when they were all to be paid out of one Common Fund.

My Lords, Had it been proved to you, that when theſe Orders were made, it had legally appeared to the then Chancellor, that Mr. Dormer's Effects would at all Events prove Deficient, and that no way had been foreſeen, whereby that Deficiency could have been ſupplied; I muſt admit this Objection would have been very ſtrong: And in that Caſe, to have order'd full Payment to thoſe Suitors who firſt applied, and left nothing for thoſe that came after, would have been a manifeſt Partiality.

But this is not the preſent Caſe. When the Court ordered the firſt Payments to be made, it does not appear in Proof (as I humbly apprehend) that there would at laſt be any certain Deficiency in Mr. Dormer's Effects, or at leaſt no pretence of judging how great that Deficiency was like to be. And conſequently, the Payment of the whole Demand to the Suitors that firſt applied, does not neceſſarily infer that there would be any Loſs to thoſe which came after. His Effects, upon further Enquiry, might poſſibly come out to be more than were at firſt diſcovered; they might prove ſufficient to anſwer all Demands: Or in caſe the Deficiency was not very great, a moderate Contribution from the other Maſters, or, it may be, a reaſonable Addition intended to be made to that by the Chancellor himſelf, would have ſupplied that Defect. And that this was really intended, I apprehend that the Evidence already given does abundantly demonstrate.

Another Objection has been made; That very great Sums of Money have been depositted in the Masters Hands, without any Security; and that some Proposals have been made to the Noble Earl, for securing in some measure those great Sums, and preventing the Masters having too great Power over so great a Cash.

Mr. Lightboun, one of the present Masters, first mentioned the Proposals: He had before communicated it to Mr. Holford. The Chancellor received it kindly, desir'd him to reduce it into Writing; took Time to consider of it, and frequently talked with him about it; always shewed an earnest Desire that this might be done, but thought the proposed Scheme not effectual. Many Consultations were had upon this Proposal; at last he summons all the Masters of the Court, the Registers, the Usher, and other Officers of the Court; obtains the Favour of the Master of the Rolls to joyn with him and them in the general Consultation; and every one expected some effectual Resolution would have been made, upon this grand Affair.

But the Master of the Rolls then taking notice that there were other Things in the Court that required a Reformation, as well as this; and taking notice that the Masters in Chancery had lately assumed to themselves a Power of Judicature in the Court, in opposition to him; insisted, That this pretended Power of Judicature in the Masters should be given up by them, before he would enter into the Debate of the other Question.

Mr. Lightboun, upon whose original Proposal this Great Assembly was convened, was the first, if not the only Person that opposed the relinquishing this new-assumed Power, tho' he knew the Consequence would be the Destruction of the other Proposition which himself had made.

He preferred the Affectation of this Power of Judicature in his Office, more than the Interest of all the Suitors; and upon this, the great Expectation of this solemn Meeting was disappointed, and nothing done.

What could a Lord Chancellor do more, that has the Honour of the Court and Interest of the Suitors the most at Heart?

Mr. Lightboun himself tells your Lordships, That after this last Attempt proved unsuccessful, he began to think there was but one single Lord in the World that had sufficient Spirit to undertake it.

But during all this time, nothing had happened to give the late Chancellor any just Jealousy or Suspicion of the Deficiency of any of the other Masters. They are proved to have often declared they were Sufficient; nay, they have themselves sworn, upon the giving in their Accounts, that they were able to make good the Balance. The Noble Earl Impeached, sincerely thought they were so; and therefore when their Accounts were brought to him, in order to be laid before the Council, in Obedience to His Majesty's gracious Commands, he did all that was in his Power or Capacity to forward that good Design, and make it successful: He ordered the Masters to speed their Accounts: And when they were brought before him, he observing that the Senior Master had under-written his Account in a full, and plain, and more direct Manner than the other Masters had done, he told them, He liked the Form which Mr. Holford the Senior Master had used, and thought it a proper Precedent for the rest. They all complied, without Hesitation or Objection; no one pretended they had not Sufficient then in their Hands to make good their Balance; and accordingly subscribed to it, That they were able and willing to Make-good their respective Balances; or to the like Effect.

Can it be imagined, that this so fair and candid a Transaction, intended for the Satisfaction of the Council, and the good Security of the Suitors, can by any means be interpreted an Imposition upon His Majesty, by the late Chancellor? It was for His Majesty's Service that the Accounts should be laid fully and truly before Him in Council; and it must likewise be a great Satisfaction to His Majesty, to find that his Subjects Money in the Masters Hands was secure, by seeing their Acknowledgment, under their Hands, that they were Able.

The late Chancellor knew no more than any of the rest of the Honourable Privy-Council, or His Majesty himself, that this Declaration was false; and therefore it was equally an Imposition upon Him and Them; but no Fraud, no Crime in the Chancellor himself; which is the Objection now made against him. And indeed, many of the Masters which have been now Examined before your Lordships, have, upon their Evidence, Declared, That the Subscription thus made to their Accounts, were true, and that in Fact they have given good and effectual Securities to answer the respective Balances of their Accounts.

How hard a Work this Regulation of this great Abuse in the Court of Chancery was, the late Experience has shewn; and a total Reformation of it hereafter, would have proved more difficult, without the prudent and cautious Preparation, which the Noble Earl within the Bar has made for it, and which in due time he might have been able to effect.

Thus, my Lords, I have endeavoured (but very imperfectly, I am sensible, and confusedly) to offer what occurs to me in the Impeached Earl's Behalf. I ask your Lordships Pardon, and His, for taking up so much of your Time so unprofitably. What Omissions I have made, I doubt not will be supplied by the several Learned Gentlemen that are to speak after me.

I have this very great Satisfaction, that before your Lordships, the Merits of this, or any other Cause, will not suffer through the Incapacity of the Advocate on the one side, nor the Solemnity of the Prosecution on the other. When Facts are proved before your Lordships, no Observations can be equally Instructing as your Own. And upon the Evidence given, your Lordships will undoubtedly form a Just Judgment: A Judgment, I humbly presume to hope, That the Impeached Earl is Not Guilty of any of the Articles exhibited against him.

Dr. Sayer. My Lords, I am likewise a Councel for the Noble Earl Impeached.

I am afraid it may seem somewhat improper, that I should engage in a Proceeding of so much Difficulty, foreign to the Profession in which I am bred: But as the very great Obligations I have to the Earl, prevail on me so far to forget my own Unfitness, I hope they will, on your Lordships, to excuse it.

The Articles exhibited by the Honourable the House of Commons, charge him with Corruption tion and Extortion, in the moſt odious Manner; and the Learned Managers have heighten'd every Circumſtance with the greateſt Art and Eloquence; every Ill-Turn which his Actions, his Words, his very Omiſſions could be imagined capable to receive, hath been given; Suſpicions and Jealouſies have been rais'd; and every Conſideration forgot, which could interpret them in his Favour.

This, my Lords, was their Duty, as Managers; and tho', by ſome, undertaken with Reluctance; yet, I may venture to ſay, it has been perform'd by all with great Succeſs and Reputation.

But however unanſwerable their Eloquence may be, we hope to be able to defend the Earl againſt the Facts they have alledged; and ſhew, That they were either not done, or done with Innocence and Honour. Againſt meer Imaginations, nothing can ſecure him, but your Lordſhips Candour and Juſtice.

The words Orphans, and Widows, and Lunaticks, have been employ'd to raiſe Tenderneſs and Compaſſion, and arm your Lordſhips againſt every Argument which we can offer. Well was it commanded by the Jewiſh Law, Not to reſpect the Perſon of the Poor, in his Cauſe; knowing the Diſpoſition of Human Nature, and the Neceſſity of guarding againſt this generous Weakneſs. This Caution ought particularly to be remembred by Engliſhmen, who are allow'd to be more ſubject to an Exceſs of it, than thoſe of any other Nation.

The Learned Managers have very rightly obſerv'd, how much your Lordſhips Honour is concern'd in this Proſecution. My Lords, It was with the greateſt Satisfaction I heard them ſay it; for I am by it induced to think, that notwithſtanding the Zeal which has been expreſs'd, they will be much pleaſed to find every Member of your Lordſhips Body Innocent.

It appears from the Anſwer, and needs no Proof, That the Noble Earl was once Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench: And his Conduct in that great Station, will, I hope, be ſome Defence.

I may appeal to thoſe Gentlemen who are now Managers againſt him, whether they have not applauded him with Warmth? whether they have not commended his Zeal and Intrepidity in the Cauſe of Liberty and our Country? his ſteady Adherence to the Proteſtant Succeſſion? his uninfluenced Behaviour? My Lords, I would ask, whether then they did not praiſe and love him? whether they did not eſteem his being placed in that High Station (which he executed with Honour) their Comfort, their Security.

My Lords, I beg Pardon for replacing thoſe Times before your Thoughts, or for deſiring any to conſider, how an Accuſation againſt him, ſupported by meer Refinements, would at that time have been regarded. My Lords, his experienc'd Merit would then have ſilenc'd every Objection.

If there wanted any Evidence of the High Character he bore while in that Station, we might appeal to the great Rewards His Majeſty has beſtow'd upon him: Thoſe very Graces which have been exaggerated againſt him, are the nobleſt Teſtimony in his Favour. His Majeſty thought him worthy of the Great-Seal, becauſe he had found him faithful in his other Truſts. His Majeſty approved him, becauſe his Subjects had: It was for their Sakes (the conſtant Motive of his Choice) that He appointed him Lord Chancellor.

This once was the Earl's Character; this once his Merit: Theſe were, nay, are ſtill our Obligations to him. My Lords, experienced Worth has a Right to greater Confidence and Credit: This is a Rule of Evidence, and of common Juſtice; and unleſs the moſt convincing Proofs are offered, your Lordſhips never can believe, that one who has done ſo greatly Well, can do ſo Baſely as is ſuggeſted by the Charge.

But ſuppoſing, upon ſo very ſtrict an Enquiry into the Conduct of any Great Man, ſomething amiſs was found (for the Greateſt are but Men, and muſt have Failings) yet is former Merit not quite to be forgot. Publick Services are thought juſt Reaſons for Remiſſion of the higheſt paſt Offences, though done perhaps meerly with a View of obtaining it: And ſhall thoſe done upon a more generous Principle, ariſing from an honeſt diſintereſted Heart, deſerve a leſs Regard?

But, my Lords, that I may have the better Opportunity of obſerving, on the Evidence brought for the Commons, as well as on the Arguments offered, I ſhall beg Leave to follow the Learned Managers in the Method they took themſelves.

The Foundation of their Charge, is, The diſpoſing of ſeveral Offices for conſiderable Sums of Money. This is the Corruption! This the Extortion! And to aggravate the Guilt of this, and raiſe your Lordſhips Indignation, the Preamble ſets forth, "That in or about May 1718, the "Earl was appointed Lord Chancellor of Great-"Britain, and did thereupon take the uſual Oath "for the due Execution of that High Office, and "ſuch other Oaths as have been accuſtomed." And the ſubſequent Articles proceed to charge his Lordſhip with Breach and Violation of his Oath, as Lord Chancellor. The Learned Gentlemen who had the Conduct of the Evidence, juſtly ſenſible of the Expectation they had raiſed by this Aggravation, did attempt a Proof.

The Earl, in his Anſwer, had ſet forth at large, the Oath he took as Lord Chancellor, when firſt appointed; and had inſiſted, that he took no other Oath of Office. Was this the Oath the Earl had thus broke and violated? No, it was not this; but one, which, by the Articles, he is no-where charged with ever having taken. Upon the Choice of Sheriffs, it ſeems, the 12th of Ric. II. is annually, in Old French, read over by the Clerk; and all preſent at the Council kiſs the Bible. It is this Tranſaction with which they would affect the Earl. But, my Lords, it is notorious, that the Statute is ſo far grown obſolete, that in no other Inſtance beſides this of Sheriffs, is it at preſent taken notice of. And as the Oath upon this Occaſion muſt be abſolutely confin'd to the Choice of them; ſo is it evident, that the Statute it ſelf never did nor was intended to reach Officers of the nature with theſe in queſtion; as I ſhall further obſerve. And indeed, with the Oath directed, the Statute is ſo extremely rigid, that I muſt own, for my part, I do not ſee any Service it can do Society, in its full Extent. It may perhaps afford ſome Protection to a Firſt Miniſter, in laying him under the Obligation of an Oath, to put none into any Office who ſhall purſue or ſolicit by himſelf or by other.

However,

However I can't help thinking that the Learned Manager had but very ſmall pretence for the Reflection he was pleaſed to make, in ſaying, that the Earl ſeemed to have forgot this Oath not only in his anſwers, but in his conduct; when it appears that he himſelf had forgot how he had charged it in his Articles. If he will caſt his eye back upon them, he will find that the Preamble makes mention of no Oaths, but what were taken by the Earl upon his Majeſty's Appointment of him to the Seal, and the Articles charge him only with Violation of his Oath, as Lord Chancellor.

Having juſtifyed the Earl's Memory in this Point, I proceed to juſtify his Conduct in others; and I hope the Defence he has made by his Anſwer will have its Weight with your Lordſhips: the Earl has inſiſted, "That the making Preſents has "been long uſed and practiſed in the Time of his Prede- "ceſſors; That ſuch Preſents have been reckoned amongſt "the antient and known Perquiſites of the Great-Seal; "that the making and accepting them has been Noto- "rious to all the World, and never before looked upon "as Criminal, or complained of as ſuch." My Lords, this (as far as Proof is requiſite) We ſhall make fully appear by great Numbers of Witneſſes, who are able to ſpeak to both the Opinion and Practice of the Earl's PREDECESSORS. To this, it has indeed been ſaid, that the Earl may be Guilty, tho' his Predeceſſors have eſcaped uncenſured or unpuniſhed. My Lords, the Examples we have followed are too Worthy to lead us into Guilt: but, my Lords, if the Earl has only done what they have done, and received what they eſteemed an honeſt Perquiſite; was the Practice in it ſelf not quite ſo regular at firſt, yet, Sunt tolerabilia, quæ conſuetudo comprobat.---Uſage (if antient) has ſo great Authority, that it makes the Common Law of England, and tho' with us it cannot repeal a Statute, or deſtroy its Force, which it does in other Countries, yet, my Lords, there is an Equity to be obſerved; and Reaſon as well as Humanity muſt inform your Lordſhips, that no Man ought to be treated with the utmoſt Severity, which an old Statute may direct; when great Examples may have led him to the Action, and a long Connivance of his Predeceſſors promiſed him Security from Cenſure.

But the Earl's Defence ſtops not here; he ſays, "He humbly hopes that the giving or receiving "Preſents on ſuch Occaſions is not Criminal in it "ſelf, or by the Common Law, and that there is "not any Act of Parliament whatſoever, by which "the ſame is made Criminal, or ſubject to any Puniſh- "ment." To this the Learned Gentlemen have given but very general Anſwers. Some have by Rhetorick, inſtead of Reaſon, endeavoured to perſuade your Lordſhips, that the Act it ſelf is highly Sinful, and that the Corruption in ſelling Offices is greater and far more dangerous to Society, than even ſelling Juſtice it ſelf: Others have talked of Common Law, and Statutes, but have produced none, except thoſe of 12*th* of Rich. 2 and 5 and 6 of Edw. 6*th*, and a few Inferences drawn from them, which I ſhall ſpeak more largely to immediately: And as the Learning and Experience of thoſe Gentlemen are too great for any Law to eſcape their Obſervation, as is their Honor to reſerve any for their Reply, I ſhall take it for granted, that ſince no other has been mentioned, that there is no other.

My Lords, the Writers upon the Law of Nature have properly diſtinguiſhed between ſelling Juſtice and Offices concerning the Adminiſtration of Juſtice: and not as the Learned Managers have done. With them the ſelling Juſtice is abſolutely forbid, is abſolutely Corrupt and Immoral. The ſelling Offices is Matter of meer Policy, varied in different Governments, prohibited in ſome, allowed in others.

Among the Romans the Law in this Particular, fluctuated and changed, and tho' the Sale of Offices was generally forbid, yet it received great Alterations, as the Emperors or the People were diſpoſed: When Elections of the Magiſtrates were Popular, the Suffragia, or Votes of the People were bought and ſold; but as this Practice produced frequent Riots and Diſorders, frequent Laws were made to reſtrain it, which are ſtill extant, and part of the Body of the Civil Law: However, all proving unſucceſsful, the Emperors took occaſion from it to uſurp upon the People, and name the Magiſtrates themſelves: This Tranſlation of Authority carried the Benefit to Courtiers, and other Men of Power, who took a ſort of Brokage for their Intereſt. Theodoſius, the Emperor, ſo far gave Countenance to this Practice, that he even allowed an Action for the Recovery of what was promiſed for Procurement of any Place. In proceſs of Time the Emperors themſelves participated and took a Share of this Advantage, which introduced a diſtinction of Suffragium Dominicum, and privatum. Suffragium privatum, quod Aulicis dabatur; & Dominicum, quod Imperialibus rationibus inferebatur. This Diſtinction, as well as the Practice, is very Evident from the two Novels of Juſtinian, which were intended abſolutely to prevent for the future all Sale of Offices. In Novel 161. it is ſaid, Ejuſmodi Dominica ſuffragia magnum reddebant pecuniarum cumulum; and in Novel 8. that by the Prohibition, Queſtus immodicus imminutur imperio.

It is well known that in France, the Laws have varied in like manner. Sometimes the Sale of Offices were permitted, ſometimes forbid: but at preſent, and for this laſt Century, it has been ſo far incouraged, that Officers retain the Right of Reſignation even in Succeſſion, and tranſmit it to their Heirs, in caſe they have paid the Annual Tax or Duty within the Year.

I mention this to ſhew what the Opinion has been of other Governments, that they have not eſteemed this Practice ſo highly Criminal, or unreaſonable; and as they have not, ſo neither have we: for notwithſtanding what has been urged with ſo much Ingenuity (according to my poor Apprehenſion) that very Statute of Edw. 6*th*, ſo much inſiſted on, is the ſtrongeſt Proof which can be given, not only that in particular inſtances the Sale of Offices is now permitted, but that it was in general before that Statute, by the Common Law of England. This Statute in Sect. 3*d*. Enacts, that "All Bargains, Sales, Promiſes, &c. ſhall be "void." And yet by Sect. 6*th*, it makes Proviſion, that "It ſhall not extend to any Bargain, "Sale, Gift, Grant, &c. concluded and agreed "before the Firſt Day of March next coming, but "that the ſame Bargain and Sale ſo concluded "and agreed, ſhall always remain, continue, and be "in ſuch force, ſtrength, and effect, as if this Act "had never been had or made." If Bargains and Sales, agreed before the Firſt of March, are to continue in ſuch Force, &c. as if this Act had never been made, the Conſequence to me ſeems certain, that thoſe Bargains and Sales had Force, and that they were before Effectual and Legal; for otherwiſe the Proviſion would be abſurd and ridiculous.

The 7th Section of this Statute ſtill goes further, and makes a perpetual Proviſion, that "This "Act, or any thing therein contained, ſhall not in "any wiſe extend, or be prejudicial or hurtful to any "of the Chief Juſtices of the King's Courts, commonly "called the King's Bench, or Common Pleas, or to "any of the Juſtices of the Aſſize that now be, or "hereafter ſhall be; but that they, and every of them, "may do in every Behalf, touching, or concerning "any Office, or Offices to be given or granted by them, "as they, or any of them, might have done before "the making of this Act."

If this Statute be Explanatory of what the Common Law was before, and as ſuch it was inſiſted on, it is certainly impoſſible to doubt, but that by the Common Law the Sale of Offices was allowed: "the Chief Juſtices, &c. may (TOUCH-"ING THEIR OFFICES) do as they might "have done before:" This Act is to prevent the Sale of Offices, and yet not of their Offices: They had been uſed to bargain, and ſell them, and ſtill may do it, for this Act is not to be in any wiſe prejudicial, or hurtful, to any of them. This is the plain Senſe, this the very Language of the Proviſion.

But I humbly conceive that this Proviſion is not only an Evidence of what the Common Law it ſelf was, but that the Act of Richd. 2d. (of which I before made mention) could never be intended to reach Offices of this Nature; for as the Act of Richd. 2d. directs an Oath, which the Chief Juſtices, &c. are expreſly required to take, can it be imagined without the greateſt Extravagance of Fancy, that the Legiſlature ſhould be ſo very forgetful, as to guard and ſecure to them a Privilege, which they could never exerciſe without the higheſt Perjury?

This, my Lords, is the only Statute, which, as I apprehend, any ways concerns the Charge brought againſt the Noble Earl: But does this Statute make the Sale of Office Criminal? Does it direct a Puniſhment, or even by any general Clauſe forbid the Practice of it? 'Tis true the Bargains are hereby made void, the Perſon who ſells, does loſe his Right of Nomination, and he who gives or pays, is to be adjudged diſable in Law to have the Office. My Lords, theſe are the Diſcouragements, which the Legiſlature then thought proper to lay ſuch Bargains under, theſe the only Penalties: If the Earl has by his Conduct done what this Statute diſapproves; if he has bargained and ſold Offices, which your Lordſhips judge within the Statute, and the conſtant Uſage of his Predeceſſors will not give Protection, the Statute points out your Lordſhips Juſtice. But, my Lords, this unfortunate Great Man, we think, has already more than ſatisfyed this Law, he has reſigned the Seals, and yet ſtands Impeached before your Lordſhips.

Offences are to be judged of by the Penalties and Puniſhments the Legiſlature has annexed; for in determining the Penalties, it determined the Senſe it had of the Offence: When Penal Laws are made, it muſt always be ſuppoſed, that a Conſideration was had of the Malignity of the Act forbid, and of its Influence on Society, and that the Puniſhment directed was eſteemed adequate and juſt: By this rate it is eaſy to gueſs what the Legiſlature thought of the Offence of ſelling Offices. And, indeed, it would have been (if I may uſe the Expreſſion) unbecoming the Legiſlature to have inflicted ſeverer Penalties, while by the ſame Law it permitted the firſt Judges in the Nation to do what it ſeemed to condemn in others.

When a Law is once paſt, the Tranſgreſſor of it is ſubject only to what that Law directs; to inflict a greater Puniſhment, would be deſerting Law, and acting arbitrarily. This Obſervation will hold in every Inſtance, in Matters of Common Juſtice, as well as Publick Policy: To forbid to Rob, or Murder, is only to enforce what was always Law; to forbid to ſell Offices, is to lay a Political Reſtraint on Acts indifferent. And yet in the former Caſe, to puniſh the Offender beyond the Law, would be unjuſt and arbitrary. Are Prohibitions meerly Political more Sacred? Or is a Treſpaſs againſt them more ſeverely to be treated, than one againſt the Law of Nature, the Law of God? No, Your Lordſhips (I ſay it with Submiſſion) are the Supreme Judges of the Nation; as ſuch, the Supreme Judges of the Law; for by the Laws your Lordſhips always judge: It is the peculiar Bleſſing of our Nation, to have known certain Laws, to be the Guide of our Actions, and the Meaſure of our Puniſhments; to ſecure to us this Bleſſing has been the Labour and the Glory of our Anceſtors. For the Sake of this, the REVOLUTION is beloved; and for a ſteady Adherence to this Sacred Rule, his MAJESTY is eſteemed the Joy, the Safety, the Liberty of his People.

I beg Pardon for dwelling ſo long upon this Subject; but the Honourable Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons having made the Sale of Offices the Foundation of their whole CHARGE, I thought it of ſome Conſequence to prove to your Lordſhips, that it is no ways Criminal in it ſelf: And, my Lords, if it be not Criminal, Where is the Corruption? Where the Extortion? Is it in the Manner of receiving Preſents? How that was, the Learned Serjeant of Councel with me has already given your Lordſhips an Account: An Account, which we hope does ſufficiently juſtify the Earl againſt the Imputation of Higgling, or of ſcrewing up the Candidates to what they gave. But as theſe ſeveral Articles will be more fully ſpoke to, when we come to produce our Evidence, I ſhall paſs them over with an Obſervation or two. If the Earl had ſo great a Thirſt for Gain, and was ſo reſolutely bent to amaſs ſuch exceſſive Sums of Money, it is to me very ſtrange, that whenever his Opportunity offered, and he had the free and full Diſpoſal of an Office upon a Vacancy by Death, he ſhould always receive a much leſs Sum, than what from the very face of the Articles themſelves appears conſtantly to have been paid by Maſter to Maſter. Had the Earl put the Office up to Auction, or even inſiſted on a Price, Is it probable that he ſhould not be able to obtain one as great?

However, as I paſs, I can't help taking notice of the Circumſtance with which the Article of Mr. Thurſton's admiſſion is introduced, "That Borret "died inſolvent, greatly indebted to the Suitors, and the "ſaid Earl did without ſecuring a juſt Satisfaction admit "him:" Your Lordſhips muſt have obſerved, that the Earl is not ſo much as charged here with a knowledge of this inſolvency; and, my Lords, knowledge only can create the guilt. If the Earl did not know it, can your Lordſhips cenſure him? If it be asked why he did not? Mr. Godfrey, who was produced and Examined by the Managers, has already given a full Answer: Mr. Godfrey was moſt intimate with the Affairs of Borret, and as ſuch was directed by the Earl to inſpect them; he has depoſed, that he told the Earl, he thought there wou'd be no deficiency in his Office, this (your Lordſhips may remember) he ſaid was his own ſincere Opinion, and he gave good Reaſons for it. Mr. Borret had a very good Income, reputed 400 l. per An. beſides his Place, he had lately married a Wife of Fortune, his Family lived with his Father-in-Law, and he himſelf a Man of no Expence; my Lords, Mr. Godfrey told you, he was ſo fully in this Opinion, that when Mr. Green, the deceaſed's Unkle, made a demand of a Debt, he was greatly ſurpriſed, not Imagining that he had owed one ſingle farthing. Whence this Deficiency (if there is any) none can tell: But, my Lords, that fatal Year of 1720 is not ſo long paſt, as to leave us quite without conjecture; a Year, my Lords, when the contagion was ſo virulent, that ſcarce any virtue was left uninfected; and thoſe who ſunk under it, remarkably deſerve our pity, as ſad inſtances of human frailty: To this Year, the Maſters owe their whole diſtreſs, and to them the Earl, tho' innocent, this aggravated Charge: But, my Lords, ſuppoſing a deficiency in this Office, and known too by the Earl himſelf, what Satisfaction to the Suitors was from him expected? What could he poſſibly ſecure? There is but one Method; which, I hope, he will not by the Managers be thought criminal in not taking, ſince it is that, which they themſelves condemn as illegal and corrupt.

It may be expected, that I ſhould ſhew ſome Regard to the 9th Article: But as it is that which the learned Gentlemen made choice of to begin with, I apprehend greater Difficulties than I ſee, and therefore ſhall leave the Conſideration of it to thoſe, who are much more able to ſurmount them than myſelf: But I muſt ask Pardon, that I can't reach a diſtinction on which great ſtreſs has been laid: It has been obſerved by more than one, that in this caſe, the Money was paid for the reſignation, and not for the admiſſion; Is there any real difference, whether the Buyer or the Seller pays the Complement? Muſt it not be ſuppoſed that it was conſidered in the Bargain, and part of it? Or is it imagined that a greater hardſhip was in this caſe done Mr. Thomas Bennet, by a ſeeming obſtruction of his inclination to part with an Office, when in fact the Earl could not hinder his reſigning it? For notwithſtanding the Obſervation made by a learned Gentleman, that the Lord Chancellor was the King's Officer, and therefore a reſignation to the Crown was the ſame as to him; yet am I from his very great Abilities perſuaded to believe, that he is not ſo entirely a ſtranger to the Thought of that high Office, as not to be able to diſtinguiſh the Crown from the Seal, and to know that in many inſtances of Patronage they are different: The Lord Chancellor being the King's Officer, a reſignation to him may in ſome caſes be equivalent in Law to one made to the Crown itſelf, but never è contrario. As to this particular Office, and indeed to many others of the like Nature, we ſhall make it fully appear, that tho' the Officer himſelf is in the Nomination of the Crown, yet has he always been under the recommendation of the Seal, and has as conſtantly paid acknowledgment to the Lord Chancellor.

Upon theſe Charges are built the whole of the following Articles: Every Expreſſion, every Action which could bear an ambiguity, has been collected to form a Crime. The Earl has received Money for his Offices, his aim is therefore gain by Sale of Offices, an eaſy inference; and whatever is after ſaid or done, or vice verſa, is at firſt ſuſpicion, and then an Evidence againſt him.

But, my Lords, before I proceed to try Particulars upon this Head, I muſt beg your Lordſhips patience to compute in general the very ſmall Advantage the Noble Earl could propoſe by the Scheme, the learned Gentlemen have projected for him: The Office of Lord Chancellor is precarious, and only during Pleaſure: The King, for his Subjects Welfare, jealous of every Miniſter, and ready to remove the greateſt Favourite upon the very firſt Offence; and upon this contingency, what would the chance of diſpoſing of a Maſter's Place be worth? A very trifle, I may boldly ſay, not ſo much as what he has refuſed the Opportunity of gaining upon every compleat vacancy he has diſpoſed of. And can your Lordſhips ſuſpect a Character once ſo dear, once allowed ſo worthy, of doing ſuch little Things, I ſhould ſay, ſuch baſe Things, for no Advantage, and yet to promote this illegal and corrupt Gain on which his Heart was eagerly ſet? The noble Earl is further charged "with having admitted ſeveral Perſons to the Offices of Maſters, who were at the time of ſmall Subſtance and Abi-"lity: Againſt this there lay an obvious Objection; Why Perſons of ſmall Subſtance? when the Earl might have, and indeed always had, when of his own Choice, others of ſufficiency. Wherefore, to make their Charge conſiſtent, a fraudulent Method is ſuppoſed to be introduced of paying for their Places out of the Effects of the Court; a Method beſt ſuited to ſuch Perſons: But your Lordſhips Juſtice muſt have led you to obſerve, that they no where ſo much as inſinuate, that the Earl knew them to have been as charged: They were ſenſible of the proper Caution he had taken, and (as it will appear in Evidence) that not only previous Inquiries were always made, and none admitted, who came not well recommended, or perſonally known to the Earl himſelf; but that when ſeveral Candidates have offered, his Lordſhip has been ſo unmindful of the little Views, he is ſuppoſed ever to have acted with, that he has conſtantly preferr'd him he thought the worthieſt, tho' the preſent to the Earl was far leſs than what others gave him Expectation of. This ſurely, my Lords, will be enough to Vindicate his Care; and tho' it ſhould appear, that he was deceived in any ſingle Inſtance; nay, tho' the Man himſelf ſhould be the Evidence of his own Deceit and Fraud, yet I hope, my Lords, ſuch Perſon will have his full Compliment of Credit, if he is believed in the Character he gives of himſelf. But to make ſome excuſe for the Earl's good Opinion of this Mr. Thomas Bennet, and his Circumſtances, I muſt obſerve, that it is Evident from his own Account which lyes upon the Table, that when he was admitted, he had an Eſtate of between 5 and 600 l. per An. he had beſides an Office for Life of 250 l. per An. he kept his Coach, and then lived in Reputation: However, I muſt confeſs, that in further Proof of his great Integrity, this Gentleman has depoſed, that part of his Eſtate was then Mortgaged for more than it was worth. I ſhould upon this this Occaſion put your Lordſhips in mind of what happened upon this Gentleman's Confrontation, becauſe he has been ſingular in his Evidence on more Facts than one; but we ſhall take another Opportunity of diſplaying this Worthy Perſon's Veracity, that your Lordſhips may know how much Regard to pay to him, by ſeeing how little Regard he has for Truth.

As to the Schedules, the neglect of which is made ſo Criminal, it would be enough to ſay, that the taking them could not prevent the Fraud complained of; for what would be the difference in deducting the Sum agreed on for the Purchaſe upon the transfer, or repaying in the minute after? And if the new Maſter is really able and ſufficient, where is the injuſtice done in either caſe? But we ſubmit whether ſuch Schedules muſt not be made between Maſter and Maſter: For without them their Accounts cannot be ſettled; and as it is for the Intereſt of him who ſucceeds, ſo is it for the Security of the other who reſigns. But ſuppoſing the Practice to have been as charged, and their Transfers were not compleat, the only Conſequence I ſee is, that both Maſters are bound, and the Suitors have by it a double Security. It has happened ſo in the Caſes of both Mr. Hiccocks and Mr. Rogers; they imprudently retaining the Effects of the Court, for the Sale of their Offices, have thought it proper to Petition the Lords Commiſſioners to repay the Money: So that ſome good Fortune has attended this Practice, ill as it is, the Suitors have by it got ſo much Money more, than what otherwiſe they would have had.
